Lost Property list names 17 Ozonans

An historic Sesquicentennial treasure hunt awaits 150,000 Texans March 9, the date the State Treasury distributes the largest list of "lost" property ever published in the United States.

The list will contain the names of 150,000 persons with abandoned or "lost" accounts worth at least $50, according to State Treasurer Ann Richards. The entire list represents a total of $117 million in lost property.

Seventeen Ozonans are listed. Among these are Jessie C. Baccus, W.R. Baggett, Jr., Wilma W. Carson, Doyle's Welding Service, Duncan's Welding, Rex Fenton, Roy Henderson, Donald P. Hoover, Abel Martinez, Jr., Davy or Mrs. Davy McWilliams, Bertha and Bernice Miller, Marshall Montgomery, Pauline Perner Montgomery, George W. Scurra, Helen H. West, Eloise Whitley and Troy D. Williams.

Persons who believe they have money in the Unclaimed Money Fund should either write the Texas Treasury at P. O. Box 12608 Capitol Station, Austin, Texas, 78711 or call the Texas Treasury's toll-free number, 1-800-321-2274.

About 87,000 of the names on the list come from abandoned savings and checking accounts. Another 43,000 represent abandoned stocks, dividends, royalties, and unpaid wages. About 13,000 are abandoned life insurance policies and about 7,000 are abandoned safe deposit boxes.

Under state law, such accounts become abandoned if they are allowed to remain idle a certain length of time, usually three or five years, depending on the type of account.

The state may use the funds for general state services and for education, but the owners or their heirs may file a claim at any time in the future for the money held by the state. The total amount of money is turned over to the state.

The list this year is about five times larger than the previous list, published in 1984. The reason for this growth is that the Legislature revised the Unclaimed Property Law last year, shortening the dormancy period from seven years and closing loopholes that allowed some businesses not to report unclaimed property.

Security to be rigid during TECAT test

Students in Ozona schools will be enjoying a holiday this coming Monday, March 10, but Ozona teachers will be meeting at the Ozona Civic Center to take the statewide Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers (TECAT) test that was mandated by the 68th Texas Legislature. Texas teachers must successfully pass both the reading and writing sections of the test in order to remain eligible to teach next year.

The reading section of the TECAT will consist of fifty-five multiple-choice questions measuring six specific skills: Detail (10 questions); Main Idea (10 questions); Job-Related Vocabulary (10 questions); Fact and Opinion (10 questions); Reference Usage (10 questions); and Inference (5 questions). In order to successfully pass the reading section, Texas teachers must correctly answer at least 41 of the 55 questions (75% mastery).

The writing section of the TECAT will have two parts. The first part of the test will contain 30 multiple-choice questions, and the second part will consist of a written composition by the examinees.

For the writing section of the TECAT, the examinee's written composition will be scored first. Examinees who receive a score of 1 on their TECAT compositions will pass the writing section of the TECAT while examinees whose compositions receive a score of 3 will fail the writing section of the TECAT. Examinees whose compositions receive a score of 2 will pass the writing section of the TECAT if they correctly answer 23 of the 30 multiple-choice questions (77% mastery) on the second part of that section.

All TECAT scoring will be supervised by National Computer Systems of Iowa City, Iowa. National Computer Systems will score all multiple-choice sections of the test, and all compositions will be scored by Measurement Incorporated of Durham, North Carolina. All compositions will be independently scored by two experienced, trained, and certified scorers using carefully established scoring criteria.

Examinees will be notified of the test results by early May, 1986, and individuals who fail to pass one or both sections of the TECAT will automatically be scheduled to retake the failed portion(s) on June 28, 1986.

Locally, eighty-eight Ozona educators are scheduled to take the TECAT at the Ozona Civic Center next Monday. Approximately one-half of the teachers will take the test at 7:30 a.m., and the other half will take the test at noon. The examinees will need to bring with them their admission ticket, two #2 pencils, and some form of picture identification.

Test administration and security will be very rigid during the examination. Individuals cannot leave the examination room once they have entered, except for individual trips to the restroom. Briefcases, large purses, packages, cameras, books, or other materials cannot be taken into the room; however, small purses or wallets will be allowed.

During the written composition of the test, dictionaries will be furnished upon request; however, dictionaries cannot be used while an examinee is answering the multiple-choice questions.

Although the TECAT is an untimed test, school officials estimate that it will take teachers about 3-4 hours to complete the test.

Conservation award to Pleas Childress

Pleas Childress III, has been chosen as the recipient of the 1985 outstanding conservation rancher award by the Crockett Soil and Water Conservation District. The award was presented to Pleas at the San Angelo Area Awards Banquet held at Angelo State University on February 27.

Pleas operates three separate operating units in Crockett County totaling approximately 21,000 acres and has continued the excellent job of range and ranch management that his father P. L. Childress Jr. started many years ago. He primarily runs sheep and cattle and normally stocks light on all three ranches giving him a built-in drought plan. He is a firm believer in proper grazing use and has found through experience that the range recovers faster after periods of dry conditions by stocking lightly.

All three ranches have been under the Great Plains Conservation Program in the past with some much needed fencing and water development being completed. With the addition of fences and water development, Pleas has been able to utilize various grazing systems. He is currently operating a 4 pasture-3 herd system and a 2 pasture switch-bach grazing system. He is also practicing selective deferral which is working as well as any of his planned grazing systems.

Pleas has been improving the quantity and quality of desirable forage not only through well executed management practices but also through an extensive brush control program. Over the years approximately 14,600 acres of brush have been treated by various control methods. Range seeding has been done on some areas and has provided excellent cover and grazing.

The improvement of desirable forage not only helps his livestock and protects his soil, but has also improved his wildlife habitat which in turn has improved the quality of wildlife. Pleas works with his hunting leasees to educate them on improving the quality of deer, turkey and other wildlife species found on his ranches.

The Crockett Soil and Water Conservation District is proud to present the 1985 outstanding conservation rancher award to Pleas Childress III, for his excellent working understanding of range and ranch management and his wise use of available resources.

Dear Ozona School Patrons:

This is Public School Week in Texas; and, as I reflect on what the public schools mean to our state, I am reminded of what really makes a school a success.

Some contributing factors which are important to a school's success are adequate funding, community support, a responsible school board, and good administration; however, the one essential element necessary to every good school is good teachers.

As I further reflect, I look at our local school and our local faculty, and I am pleased that the Ozona Public School is extremely fortunate to have great teachers. I am pleased each time I observe our teachers at work. They are enthusiastic, caring, and dedicated; they see a value in their product; and, they find enjoyment in their accomplishments. Teachers such as ours deserve our appreciation, our esteem, and our praise.

I encourage you to join me during Public School Week to say, "Teachers, I APPRECIATE YOU!"

Respectfully,
Garland Davis

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—Embattled Gov. Mark White may be the man in the center of the public's eye, but the most innovative man in state government may be Comptroller Bob Bullock.

White moves around the field a lot to get media attention, but not all of it goes as planned—like last week when he ordered a hiring freeze for state agencies, then the next day began advertising for a $25,000-a-year aide for himself.

Bullock, on the other hand, has lots of ideas which no one else seems to think of. After warning that state layoffs may be necessary to balance the budget, he surveyed his own employees to see whether any were willing to cut their hours and salary by one day a week. Beats getting fired into the street.

"He (Bullock) was just flat serious about making budget cuts. We're leaving no stone unturned," his press aide said. Makes you wonder how the Democratic primary might be turning out if Bullock had run for governor against White this year.

"White's New Math"

The prediction of state layoffs came in a report prepared by Bullock's staff entitled "The New Math of the Governor's Budget Plan," a title which some might think indicates a little scorn by Bullock's staff for the amateurism on White's staff.

At the bottom line, the leaked report predicted that White's plan could have as little as $100 million and $557 million at best. The State's looking at a $1.3 billion shortfall unless the estimate is revised, up or down.

To reach $1.3 billion, staff layoffs would be necessary, and the city most impacted, of course, would be Austin.

White in Washington

In Washington, where he prepared to take the Texas budget case to the feds, White responded there is "always a chicken little out there who says that something can't be done." If you're beginning to detect some professional competitiveness between White and Bullock camps, perhaps it's there.

White attended a National Governor's Association meeting and took the offensive by seeking a meeting between President Reagan and other oil state governors.

White wants the feds to impose a tariff on imported oil to stabilize the Texas oil market and stop the loss of state revenues.

Bipartisan Plea?

White wants Reagan to back the tariff which has been proposed by U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

He also asked the Republicans in the Texas congressional delegation and the three GOP candidates seeking to unseat him to persuade Reagan to levy the import tax.

When world oil prices slumped below $14 a barrel last week, some Texas producers started shutting down wells rather than compete.

White didn't say, but he might ask Reagan privately to help along a $55 million windfall to Texas this summer by pushing approval of a state-federal pact to divide $2.1 billion in overcharge fines. Texas could use the money right about then.

Wall Street Q & A

Then, White was off to Wall Street next, where he expected to boost investor confidence in Texas.

The state's leadership wants to speed up diversification of the state economy and rely less on unpredictable oil revenues, which contribute to about 13 percent of the state budget.

Bullock says the fastest growing industry in the state is services, which is hardly taxed at all.

The next Legislature will surely restructure the state's tax base to new industries, but some say the overhaul will take four to six years, given the historical pace of pushing new ideas past lawmakers.

Other Highlights

Other highlights of the Capitol week included:

—State Sen. Buster Brown was disqualified from the Texas Attorney General's race by the Texas Supreme Court.

The High Court ruled Brown voted for an increase in the AG's salary last year, and that the Legislature could not override a Constitutional prohibition of a candidate seeking an office which he had just voted a pay raise.

—Hundreds of sign-waving teachers met on the Capitol lawn to protest the HB 72 school reforms pushed by Mark White.

—Kent Hance, GOP candidate for governor, sent out a letter asking for $100,000 in contributions, admitting he needs to buy TV ads to stay alive in the race. Hance said he stands to lose critical time slots on April TV without the funds.

—The U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear a legal challenge to the controversial no-pass, no-play reform, thereby backing up the Texas Supreme Court's earlier ruling. The plaintiffs, Houston-area parents and students, will continue the legal fight in a Houston state court.

UNANIMOUS DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE,

BY THE DELEGATES OF THE PEOPLE OF TEXAS,

IN GENERAL CONVENTION, AT THE TOWN OF WASHINGTON,

OF THE SECOND DAY OF MARCH, 1836.

When a government has ceased to be a government, it ceases to be a government, and the people are bound to take up arms to defend their rights and liberties...

Texas delegates claim independence Mar. 2

By Eric Miller March 2, 1836--The time has come. If Texas is ever to control its destiny, now is the moment to start. That is the feeling of the 51 delegates who assembled yesterday at Washington...

In a frame house with cotton cloth over the windows and across the doors to keep out the cold winds, shivering delegates took the first step toward controlling destiny by approving the first draft of the Texas Declaration of Independence in a businesslike manner.

Aside from Sam Houston's speech praising the document and calling for its unanimous approval, there was no argument or debate over the document.

Today, the delegates will start signing the declaration. It is expected that the late delegates will also sign the document upon arrival.

This is the fourth such meeting of Texans since 1832. As recently as last year, these conventions held out hope of some agreement with the Mexican government. Just last fall, in San Felipe, the delegates declared their faithfulness to the Mexican government in return for the establishment of Texas as a separate state within Mexico and the repeal of the Bustamante provision prohibiting U.S. immigration to Texas.

But that was several months ago. In the meantime, the likelihood of conflict has increased. In fact, while the delegates work on a declaration of independence, Santa Anna and his army have crossed the Rio Grande and are laying siege to the Alamo and Bexar, only 140 miles to the southwest.

It is in this atmosphere that the delegates worked today, knowing that from here, most would return to their homes and enter the conflict for Texas' independence.

Sources in the convention, including E.M. Pease, assistant secretary of the convention, suggest that the declaration may have been written long before this meeting. George Childress, chairman of the declaration committee and a lawyer recently arrived in Texas, actually may have written and brought the document with him. Mr. Childress wouldn't comment on that rumor, but he and his committee of James Gaines, Edward Conrad, Colin McKinney and Bailey Hardeman made short work of their task and returned overnight with the large document.

The document cites many differences between the Texans and their Mexican rulers, but the entire argument can be boiled down to the preamble. There, the Texans state that the Mexican government "...has ceased to protect the lives, liberty and property of the people from where its legislative powers are derived..."

Six copies of the document will be prepared, with the original being sent to Washington, D.C. and the five copies going to Bexar, Goliad, Brazoria, Nacogdoches and San Felipe. Some 1,000 handbills of the Declaration will be distributed across Texas.

This "Journey Through Texas" is a Sesquicentennial project of the University of Houston-University Park Office of Media Relations. This piece is based on material housed in the Special Collections Dept. of the university's M.D. Anderson Library.

Headaches and backaches difficult medical problems

Searing headaches and throbbing backaches are common medical problems, but are often the most difficult to treat.

Understanding how the body reacts to such pain is a good first step toward effective relief, reports a chronic pain specialist at Baylor College of Medicine.

H. Martin Blacker, M.D., a neurosurgeon and director of Baylor's Pain Control and Biofeedback Clinic, said that new devices and psychological techniques for treating chronic pain have resulted from knowledge about how the brain becomes aware of pain.

"We once thought the message of pain was transmitted from somewhere out in the body's periphery," Blacker said. "You prick your finger and this excites nerve endings, which pass that information up the spinal cord to the brain. The brain then knows that a needle was being put into your finger."

"But now we know that whether or not that message about the needle gets to the brain depends on several aspects of the pain perception system."

One of those aspects is that various pain signals can reach the nervous system at the same time and compete with one another, Blacker said.

"For example, a vigorous pinch where the needle was put in might extinguish your perception of the needle," he said.

One of the successful methods of pain control, called transcutaneous nerve stimulation, is based on this theory.

Transcutaneous nerve stimulation (TENS) involves placing electrically conducting pads on the skin and usually near the site of pain, such as the lower back. Wires coming from the pads are connected to a unit the size of a small calculator, which can be attached to a belt. The unit sends electrical signals through the wires to the skin. The signals cause a tingling sensation that sends messages to the brain that compete with and tend to override pain messages.

Modern TENS units have wires that can be placed on several body sites. The power of signals can be adjusted depending on how much pain the patient is feeling.

Another aspect of pain perception is the attention a person pays to painful event.

"You may be taking off your clothes at night and notice a significant bruise, but you were totally unaware of it," Blacker said. "Your attention at the time the bruise occurred was so powerfully directed elsewhere, that you ignored receiving the injury."

He said the increasing use of hypnosis during dental operations, for example, shows that extreme pain can be suppressed when attention is elsewhere.

Another way of modifying the pain signal is biofeedback, a technique of concentrating on controlling body functions, such as blood pressure or skin temperature. As a patient reaches certain levels of biological control, monitoring equipment "feeds back" the results. The patient controls pain by raising his skin temperature and lowering sweat gland activity.

"Pain is a consequence of very complicated set of interactions among nerve cells," Blacker said. "The fact that it is interactions gives us the opportunity to intervene with pain by going to work at every level."

Most all self-employed covered by SS

Almost all self-employment is covered by Social Security, Franklin H. Upp, Social Security manager in San Angelo, said recently.

A self-employed person pays Social Security taxes if his or her net earnings amount to at least $400 a year, Upp said. Even a person with annual earnings of less than $400 may report earnings by using an optional reporting method. Net earnings for Social Security purposes are the gross earnings less allowable business deductions.

Earnings from self-employment are reported on Form 1040 (U.S. Individual Income Tax Return) and Schedule C (or Schedule F) (Profit or Loss from Business or Profession.) The amount of Social Security tax payable is shown on Schedule SE (Computation of Social Security Self-Employment Tax). These forms and any payment due must be forwarded to the Internal Revenue Service by April 15th of the following year for calendar year taxpayers.

More information about self-employment income can be obtained at the San Angelo Social Security Office

TEXAS TRIVIA
Did you know-Texas' great store, Neiman-Marcus, may have been founded on poor business judgement? Before the famous Dallas-based retail store was opened in 1905, Herbert Marcus, Sr., his sister, Carrie Marcus Neiman, and her husband, Al Neiman, had operated a successful sales promotion business in Atlanta. They decided to put it up for sale.

They had two offers-one for $25,000 in cash and the other an exclusive franchise to market a new soft drink in the state of Missouri. They had some doubts about the success of the new drink, so they took the cash and used it to open the Dallas store.

The drink was Coca-Cola!

Tips For Gardeners

From the Ozona Garden Club
by Mrs. Bailey Post

Now that the days are getting longer, gardening activities increase. Do take caution though, if you have planted new shrubs, trees, roses or tender perennials and annuals, and protect them if a severe frost or freeze is in the forecast. March 15th is usually the final frost date, but many times we have had frost later.

Wisterias will be starting to bloom soon and are one of the early favorites. This graceful vine has only a few cultural requirements if you are planting new ones. They need sunny or partially shaded locations, a very light feeding each spring with a complete fertilizer. Too much nitrogen may spur vegetable growth but few flowers, and cutting back immediately after flowering will keep it in bounds. Since wisteria needs strong support, it does best trained on an arbor where it can spread out without endangering other plants. Or you might have an old tree trunk to climb.

One evergreen that grows well in our area and adapts to a wide variety of usage is the podocarpus. The species most commonly found in the south are yew podocarpus. These evergreens can be started in the garden anytime of the year and in just about any soil, but do better in a good loose soil mixture. They require either sun or partial shade. I found they do best on the north or east side of the house or partial shade. To hold the desired shape, you can prune in the winter when growth is slow, or during the growing season of spring and summer. Depending on the way it is pruned, it may be used as a hedge, a foundation plant, a single or multi-trunked tree, a specimen shrub in a border or in a container, or it can be espaliered on walls and fences. The long, narrow, dense foliage of the podocarpus has an attractive green color. The small flowers produced in the spring turn into dark, succulent, purple fruit that looks almost candy-like. These plants will be available now as balled and burlapped plants or in cans.

Operating Better

It happened back in the days of the old T-Model. A young man was stranded on a dirt highway. His old T-Model Ford wouldn't budge an inch. He had raised the hood, made every adjustment possible, but the engine still would not start. Just as he kicked the tire and thought of rolling the car over into a ditch and forgetting about it, an elderly man, dressed in a business suit, stepped out of a new Ford and asked about the problem. "Oh, this cotton-picking-thing won't run" he said, gushing out his futility and frustration. "Well," said the older man calmly, "let's take a look at it." He looked intently at the engine, made a minor adjustment, then told the young man to lift-up on the old-time crank and see what might happen. With skepticism the young man made one turn of the crank and the engine started purring like a kitten. The older man started to leave. "Hold on a minute! How did you know exactly what to do to that car?" asked the puzzled owner. Smiling, the elderly gentleman said, "Son, I'm Henry Ford. I made that car and I know how she operates." "So, God created man in his own image... male and female he created them. And God blessed them..." The closer we stay to His Image, the better we operate, because He made us and He alone knows exactly how we operate.

Letters to the Editor

February 28, 1986

To the Editor:

I was saddened to read in your last week's edition, the letter 'To the Editor' from one who signed himself Robert Longoria. Such uncontrolled racism! Such irresponsible spewing of venom!

For shame! And all unloosed at an innocent person and in connection with a totally unrelated subject.

I was saddened to discover such an attitude exists in Ozona. I thought we had a very well adjusted and harmonious community, with friendly relations one with another, and that we had long since lived down racial frictions. For my part I feel I have some very good friends among our Mexican-American citizens. In spite of over forty years in the newspaper business here, I hope nobody hates me. I find it hard to believe that the letter writer chose such a fair minded, community oriented, able editor of this newspaper. I feel capable of judging and I will say that Mrs. Montgomery has produced an outstanding newspaper in her fifteen years at the helm of this publication and is presently producing one that commands respect among publications throughout West Texas. Since a well rounded and capably edited newspaper is the badge of a community with outsiders, Mrs. Montgomery deserves the support of the entire community and certainly should be free from such vituperative onslaughts as that levelled at her recently.

If there are others who are supportive of Mr. Longoria's attitude, and I hope they are few, I urge that you get a copy of The Stockman containing Mrs. Montgomery's editorial comments, read it carefully and then decide if the wild accusations leveled by Mr. Longoria are justified. I think you will agree they are not.

Sincerely,
W. Ewart White

Dear Kitty,

As always, we enjoy reading the Stockman. However, your column on the 19th asks questions concerning the teacher's tests. Perhaps I can give you some answers.

The reason all teachers are taking the same test is because our State Board of Education decided that the cost and effort to establish tests for each discipline would be too great. The chairman of that board was quoted earlier in the Dallas Morning News as saying that "a simple literacy test should be sufficient to catch 90% of the illiterate teachers." The Board voted unanimously in supporting the simple test. What we will do with the 10% not caught by this test remains to be seen.

You are quite correct in asking that the administrator remove teachers who can't read or write. However, it isn't that easy. In Dallas, you would have to prove it, in spite of the fact that the teacher has a certificate from the state and four year college program saying they are qualified. Are you beginning to see the problem? The colleges are turning out teachers who can't read or write, the state certifies them, their union protects their "right" to a job, and no politician, or even an appointed board is willing to confront this problem. So, we are stuck with a simple literacy test. It is an insult to the thousands of good teachers and a godsend to the incompetent who certainly couldn't pass a rigorous exam in their subject.

I, for one, don't think it is too much to ask of a graduate of college to be able to pass an exam showing a strong knowledge of the fundamentals of that major. It isn't enough for a teacher to be able to just communicate. They must have something to say. A physics teacher who doesn't know physics, can't teach it, no matter that they can read and write. No one can devise a test that measures how effective a teacher will be with a given student, but I guarantee you, that if that teacher doesn't know the material, no student has a chance. To those who claim it isn't so, I know of math and science teachers working today who can't work the example problems in the books, much less the students' problems. Did you also know, that until recently, it was possible to get a degree in education without having a major in a real subject--like math? I know of one graduate of WT- with a masters degree in Science Education- who wasn't required to ever take a single chemistry course!

As to the test, it will be a farce, of course. One of my teachers in Dallas, who began her career in Ozona, has shown me the review course. There are enough mistakes in grammar, logic and spelling in the review material to make you wonder who should be tested!

If you, and others, will keep pressing on this issue, maybe we can get some straight answers from Gov. White and his board. If we don't get control of this mess now, we never will.

Keep up the good work - and thanks for letting me express my opinion on this!

Sincerely,
Scott I. Harmon

Cutting Calories From Red Meat Dishes

Red meats are not high-calorie foods. For example, a three ounce serving of lean roast beef contains 169 calories, while a similar serving of baked chicken, without skin, contains 174 calories.

But if you are on a low-calorie diet, you will want to make sure that you prepare meat dishes so they contain as few calories as possible.

Here are some suggestions from the American Meat Board and the Beef Industry Council for cutting calories in red meat dishes:

Select lean beef cuts, such as top round, top loin strip steak, top sirloin, eye of the round, flank, tip and extra lean ground beef.

Choose lean pork cuts, including tenderloin, fresh ham and loin chops. Select lean ham and reduced fat luncheon and processed meats.

Trim the outside fat from meats before cooking and trim any separable fat before eating.

Bake, broil, or roast meats on a rack so they will remain above the drippings.

Remove the drippings after browning meats for stews, pot roast or
