Hungry for the playoffs

Lions are ready to roar into action

BY MELISSA PERNER
THE OZONA STOCKMAN

It's been four years since the Ozona Lions saw a playoff game.

For this year's seniors, this is the year to try and make a run for postseason play.

Monday morning, that journey began as the Ozona Lions football workouts began under new direction of Athletic Director and Head Coach Ray Brown.

"I am very pleased with the effort. Everyone came ready to go to work," Brown said. "We need to put everything behind us and go forward. The senior leadership can be our most valuable asset."

Behind this team is a 4-6 overall record in 2009, with only one win in district play.

Ahead is a new district this year with new teams to challenge. The Lions return 16 lettermen this year, including 10 offensive and seven defensive starters.

All-District starter, Abey Lara said he is eager to get going. "This is our senior year. The year we have been looking forward to the most in getting to the playoffs. We need to do each week what we can to get there," Lara said.

For this year's seniors, Brown is the third head coach this group has been through.

"Each year has been different. Learning a new system, new plays and new terminology," Lara said. "This year, there has been a lot of enthusiasm."

Brown has playoff experience under his belt. Coming from 4A Hendrickson High School in Pflugerville, Brown helped lead the team to the state quarterfinals.

As head coach at Rice ISD near Houston, Brown led the team to two district championships and was twice chosen Coach of the Year.

"This group of seniors has never had playoff experience. I told them to not leave high school without experiencing that," Brown said. "It's their season. I think they're hungry."

Another All-District standout for the Lions, Russel Komechak said Brown's leadership quickly showed the first day.

"This has been the best first day experience. He's an excellent teacher," Komechak said of Brown. "This is the year. We need to step it up and do our best."

Other notable standouts for the Lions this year include Kyle Dean, Anthony Gonzales, Nathan De Hoyos, Alejandro Mendez, Alex Borrego, Austin Suddreth, Jerrod duBois, Andrew Sanchez and Michael Medina.

A big question on a lot of minds is who will lead the Lions in the quarterback position.

Brown said three players are being considered for the

A Recognized District: Crockett County CCSD steps up

BY MELISSA PERNER

Ozona schools have stepped up.

Crockett County CCSD is a Recognized district, according to the Texas Education Agency's Accountability Ratings.

Along with being Recognized as a district, Ozona Middle School and Ozona Elementary School were both named Recognized campuses. Ozona High School was rated Academically Acceptable. The district received notice of their ratings Friday.

Accountability ratings of individual schools and the district as a whole are based on annual TAKS scores and student dropout rates.

"This is harder than it may sound as performance standards increased this year. We still have plenty of challenges, but congratulations are in order for all staff members and principals on this fine level of performance," said Superintendent Chris duBois.

Since 2004, CCCCSD has been rated in the third tier as Academically Acceptable. With the Recognized rating, the district moves up a step. This rating was also received by 597 districts and 3,153 schools in Texas, according to a TEA press release.

Recognized is only one step below the top rating of Exemplary, which 239 school districts and 2,624 schools received, TEA stated. Texas has 1,237 districts and 8,435 schools.

More rigorous standards were implemented this year to determine the state's Recognized rating.

The new standards require 80 percent of all students and each evaluated student group to pass the TAKS, compared to 75 percent in previous years.

Additionally, the school or district must achieve an 85 percent completion rate and must now have an annual seventh and eighth-grade dropout rate of 1.8 percent or below. The previous seventh and eighth-grade dropout rate requirement was 2 percent, TEA stated.

District-wide, Ozona scored 89 percent in reading and English, 96 percent in writing, 92 percent

Texas still waiting for Latinos to show power at polls

BY MATT STILES
AND ZAHIRA TORRES
TEXAS TRIBUNE AND EL PASO TIMES

This is the second of three stories on the political map of Texas going into the November elections — a collaborative reporting effort between The Texas Tribune and the El Paso Times. The first centered on the race for governor and what would have to change for Democrats to win in the Republican stronghold of Texas; the third, which will be published tomorrow, offers a look at the parts of the state that the politicians pay attention to and how that has more to do with voting patterns than with the size of the populations.

Latinos are the "sleeping giant" of Texas politics — a phrase repeated so often that it has become a cliché.

Nearly 37 percent of the state's population of about 24.8 million people is Latino, but almost any political expert will tell you that the group does not fully exercise its strength in elections. Pinpointing if and when Latinos will begin wielding their voting power is a challenge.

"It's the $64,000 question," says Bob Stein, a political science professor at Rice University. "If you're biblical, it's like the [coming of the] messiah."

Politicians often speak of the Latino population as a mystical group that must be captured before it awakens. The prize is a massive number of votes for the person who can figure out how to move the group to the polls. Scores of candidates, political parties and interest groups spend millions of dollars each year trying to determine what would happen if the group decided to exercise its strength in the next election.

In the current gubernatorial race between Republican Gov. Rick Perry and Democrat Bill White, analysts and others wonder what might happen if more of the state's registered Latino voters turned out at the polls.

Latinos in Texas tend to vote for Democrats. Republicans get a smaller share of the Latino vote, yet they continue to win statewide elections. The general consensus is that Democrats in Texas would have an edge over their Republican counterparts if more Latinos voted. But wondering about the possibilities has not proved fruitful for Democrats in past election cycles.

One reason Latinos are not flexing their muscle at the polls is that some may be too young to vote. Steve Murdock, a sociology professor at Rice University who is a former state demographer and a former U.S. Census Bureau director, says nearly 36 percent of the state's 6.7 million Latinos were not of voting age a decade ago.

Latinos will be the largest ethnic group in Texas in five

OZONA SENIOR HAPPENINGS

BY LYNN ENGLISH
SENIOR CENTER DIRECTOR

We all have been warned that hot weather comes for sure in August and it has arrived.

Jimmy Lott passed away last week. Jim was a pharmacist in Ozona many years. After he retired he came out to the Senior Center and he always made us laugh. He was at the local care center for a few years before his passing.

Jeremy Bolf, a State of Texas Security Specialist, spoke to us after lunch on avoiding investment frauds. He will return at another date when we can draw in more people.

The ladies who play bridge have changed from playing on Monday and Thursdays to just playing on Monday afternoon at 1:30 p.m. From now on they will just play on Mondays here at the Senior Center.

We continue to have our regular activities: square dance lesson and dances, exercise class, bridge, bingo, home health, pool, canasta and puzzles.

We also have a collection of books, magazines and three computers that are on the Internet for seniors to use. We have added a projector with stand and a screen.

Also, for your enjoyment, we have a Wii game and five different stimulating games. We are anxious for these games to be used.

Our activities are for those 50 years young and older. We will remain flexible as to age.

THE HUMAN HEART

It is small but so important and estimated to beat over 103 thousand beats in a 24 hour period at 72 beats per minute. In a 72 year lifetime it will beat from 2 1/2 to 3 billion beats. A 92 year old heart may beat almost 3 1/2 billion beats. There are several ways to see the heart. One way is a Angiogram where they take pictures of the blood flow within the arteries. Another way is the Arteriogram which uses a special dyes to see the blood flow within the blood vessels. With these procedures they are able to determine the condition of the heart. The Bible mentions the heart, our spiritual one, many times. God sees and knows our hearts, (1 Samuel 16:7). The heart, our inner being, is very important in our relationship to God. It can be good or bad depending on which direction we want it to go. It can become hardened, calloused or stubborn, (Exodus 4:21, 7:14, 9:34). It can become prideful, (Deuteronomy 8:14). A bad heart can begin when we are very young and lead to total evil, (Genesis 6:5, 8:21). Resistance to and rejection of God leads to eternal destruction, (Deuteronomy 30:17&18). It can be healed and made good, (Leviticus 26:41, 1 Samuel 7:3, 2 Corinthians 7:1). It does not have to be troubled, (John 14:1). It can help us receive salvation, (Romans 10:9). 4-H CAMPERS received a special visit from Stephen and J.T. Lara, both in the U.S. Air Force, and John Tom Tijerina, in the U.S. Navy, during the 4-H Camp last week. The campers made military care boxes as one of their projects. Stephen is home for a visit and will soon leave to for two years in Japan, J.T. stationed in Las Vegas, Nev. and John Tom is stationed on the USS Kentucky in Washington State. All three are graduates of Ozona High School.

position. Even if they are not at the quarterback position, Brown said each of the players have they athletic ability to perform in another position.

Brown plans to run a wing-T offense and 4-3 defense.

"I see them being on the field," Brown said. "We are keeping everything day to day."

The Lions first game isn't until September when they face the Braves in Iraan. Other nondistrict teams include Stanton, Van Horn, McCamey and Reagan County.

District play begins in October with Coleman. Sonora and San Saba are expected to finish first and second in the district, with Harper and Ozona close at third and fourth.

The Lions defeated the Harper Longhorns last year in overtime play.

The Lions also face Junction, who moved up to 2A after finishing as a 1A state semifinalist and 5-1 in district play.

"There's a whole bunch

I see in contention. It's going to be a good race when it comes right down to it.

I fully expect to one of the members of that pack," Brown said.

Booster club meeting Monday, all are welcome

BY ANNALU GONZALES
BOOSTER CLUB SECRETARY

The Ozona Athletic Booster Club (OABC) met on July 19 at the Crockett County Civic Center.

This was their first meeting for the new school year.

Officers were elected at the meeting and are as follows: President - Frank Tambunga, Treasurer - Patty Villarreal, Secretary - Annalu Gonzales and Parliamentarian - Mikki Moran.

The OABC raises funds and sponsors activities in support of all Ozona High School Athletics.

Funds are raised through the sale of T-shirts and promotional items and the concession stand at all home football games.

We appreciate and would once again like to thank the local businesses and organizations who help us at our home varsity football games.

Last year Ozona National Bank, Crockett National Bank, The OLPH Guadalupanas, The Knights of Columin Ozona.

Last year the OABC purchased audio/visual equipment for the field house and gym, travel shirts for athletes, furniture for the field house, and replaced the "Fighting Heart" and "MVP" plaques awarded at the athletic banquet.

We would like to encourage anyone who wants to support our Ozona Lions and Lady Lions to join us by attending our meetings and/or helping with fundraising activities.

Your participation and input will be greatly appreciated.

Our next meeting will be held Monday, Aug. 9, at 7 p.m. at the Civic Center.

Notices of future meetings will be in The Ozona Stockman. If you would like to know what you can do to join the OABC or just help occasionally, contact any booster club member.

bus and Crockett County employees staffed the concession stand. The support of the community is very important and helps us support our student athletes.

The activities that are sponsored by the Booster Club begin with Meet the Lions in August and end with the Athletic Banquet in May.

AS THE ELECTRIC DELIVERY COMPANY that has been serving south and west Texas for more than 90 years, AEP Texas knows a thing or two about energy conservation. That's why we would like to share some low or no-cost tips with you on how to keep cool during these hot summer months.

One of the best ways to lower higher electric bills is to shop around for a less expensive retail electric provider (REP). Finding different offers can be done quickly and efficiently.

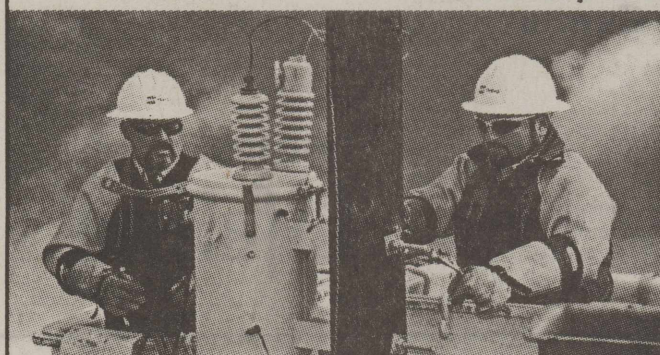

- 1) Visit the Public Utility Commission of Texas (PUCT) electric choice website at www.powertochoose.org. If you don't have access to a computer, you can call the PUCT's Electric Choice hotline at 1-866-PWR-4-TEX (797-4839).
- 2) Use the information you receive to contact different REPs to collect more information on various services and offers. Also contact your current REP at the number listed on your electric bill for other offers that may be available. Ask about contract terms and prices and be sure to look at the REPs' Electricity Facts Labels to make a good comparison.

Need some help?

Customers having trouble paying their electric bills and wishing to avoid disconnection should discuss their concerns with their current retail electric provider. All REPs are required to offer deferred payment plans to eligible customers who express an inability to pay. Many REPs also offer balanced billing plans, which allow eligible customers to pay an average amount each month year-round.

Additionally, many community action agencies may be able to help with electric bills or energy efficiency programs. For more information, contact the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs (TDHCA) at 1-800-525-0657, e-mail at info@tdhca.state.tx.us or visiting one of the following websites.

years. In 2029, they will be a majority of the state's population, but they will not dominate the voting-age population until 2033, Murdock says. In 2015, about 30 percent of the state's expected 11.8 million Latinos will still not be old enough to vote, he says.

But age is not the only issue. Registered Latino voters lagged behind other ethnic groups in voter turnout during the last presidential election. A little more than 40 percent of nearly 2.9 million Latino voters registered in 2008 actually cast ballots. By contrast, about 60 percent of about 10 million registered non-Latino voters turned out at the polls.

Experts say various circumstances contribute to the lower turnout. Latinos, for example, may meet the age qualifications but still be too young to fully engage in politics. A 30-year-old registered voter is more likely to cast a ballot than a 20-year-old. Other factors include higher rates of poverty among Latinos and lower levels of educational attainment.

Activists have cited low Latino voter turnout as one reason why immigration reform is not at the top of the to-do list for lawmakers. A lack of Latino voter participation is often considered a culprit when Democratic candidates in Texas cannot topple their Republican counterparts. Leaders from counties with large Latino populations and low voter turnout also say that if the group turned out in higher numbers, the communities would get more money from the state and neighborhoods would see more investment from city government.

James Aldrete, a Democratic consultant, says it is unfair to place the blame on Latinos. Aldrete says Latino voters face obstacles to voting that include working long hours or multiple jobs to provide for their families. He says it is up to the candidates and communities to drive those voters who feel disenfranchised to the polls.

"The real annoying thing is when they call it a sleeping giant or when they make any insinuation that it's lazy Mexicans," Aldrete says. "What they need to understand is if you want that vote, you have to make it front and center to providing for their families, because that's what people are doing."

WOOLING LATINOS

Since Texas does not require residents to declare their ethnicity when they register to vote, the best way to measure the tally of Latino voters is by surname. An El Paso Times/Texas Tribune study of the 2008 voting rolls shows that about 17 percent, or nearly 1.3 million, of the state's 7.6 million voters had Latino surnames.

Nearly 1.6 million of the state's about 2.9 million registered Latino voters did not cast ballots in 2008, according to an analysis based on the statewide voter file maintained by the Texas secretary of state. The list does not contain some overseas voters or voters who have been removed for various reasons. (No similar list of voters was available for the 2006 gubernatorial election.)

Political analysts warn that 2008 was an anomaly. They say the average turnout for Latinos in the state ranges from 11 to 15 percent. Still, though Latinos are not voting in numbers equal to their population, the group remains too large to ignore.

Perry and White each say they have their eye on Latino voters. Perry says he plans go after 50 percent of the Latino vote this election. The governor has picked up about a third of the Latino vote in past elections, according to his campaign. White will be looking to increase Latino turnout and trying to maintain the larger voting margins typically afforded to Democratic candidates.

"If Bill White loses the Hispanic vote to Rick Perry, then it's all over," Stein says. "He needs to get 65 to 70 percent of a good turnout of the Hispanic vote. If he doesn't hold his margins, it won't matter what the turnout is."

Perry says outreach will focus mostly on translating his message into Spanish through social media like Facebook, YouTube and Twitter. He says that could mean a few commercials that feature him speaking Spanish, a language he still struggles with. Perry says his record speaks to Latinos, who like all other Texans care about the state's economic stability, education and feeling safe in their communities.

"The Democrats were in control of the state for 150 years," Perry says. "It was a Republican who put the first African-American on the Supreme Court. It was a Republican who named the first Latina secretary of state. It was a Republican who put the first Latina on the Supreme Court. What's not to like about these Republicans, or this Rick Perry Republican?" White, who has already run his own commercials in Spanish, says he is focused on working with Latinos who may feel ignored by the state's leadership. He plans to touch on many of the same issues as Perry but will try to persuade voters that the governor has been ineffective.

"Latino voters, like all voters in our state, should have their support earned by performance and a lifetime commitment to progress, not simply by a slick television ad," White says. "You don't start nine and a half years into office deciding you are going to appeal to a group."

With that message, White hopes to increase Latino turnout in Democratic counties like El Paso and Hidalgo. Only about 46 percent of the nearly 262,000 El Paso Latinos who were registered to vote in 2008 made it to the polls. About 40 percent of the more than 242,500 registered Latino voters in Hidalgo County cast ballots.

Democrats believe that Latino candidates like Linda Chavez-Thompson, who is running for lieutenant governor, and Hector Uribe, who is running for land commissioner, will help draw Latino voters to the polls.

Republicans, on the other hand, are still battling an image of a party that is hostile to minorities — a point revisited this year in public comments made by Railroad Commissioner Victor Carrillo after he lost to political newcomer David Porter in the March GOP primary. Carrillo made headlines when he told supporters that he lost the race because of a party bias against Latinos.

Former Republican gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams, who lost to Ann Richards in 1990, says Carrillo's defeat in the primary could be a blow for the party. "If we cannot have more Hispanics become a part of our conservative effort, then we don't have a future," Williams says. "That's a setback, and we've got to work on that."

Latinos in Texas often choose the Democratic Party at the ballot box, but that is not always the case at the national level. Mark Lopez, associate director for the Pew Hispanic Center, says that until 2008, a majority of Latinos nationally did not believe either party had more concern for them. That year, a majority identified with the Democratic Party, and only 6 percent chose the Republican Party.

"For the most part, the majority of Hispanics prior to 2008 were saying there was no difference between the parties," Lopez said.

UNDERSTANDING LATINO ISSUES

Democrats have normally enjoyed an edge with Latino voters in Texas, but experts say they have done little to engage and excite that base. Republicans often point out that they share conservative and religious values with many Latinos, but the party's platform is sometimes at odds with them. For instance, Republicans generally push against reform efforts that would provide a legal path to citizenship for undocumented immigrants.

"It's not that Hispanics aren't probably pro-life. It's not that they aren't pro-choice," Stein says. "But those are not things that will motivate them to vote Republican when they are unemployed, don't have health insurance and their schools are terrible."

Pia Orrenius, a research officer and senior economist at the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, says education will be the key for Latino progress over the next decade. "In Texas, it just so happens that we have some of the most segregated high schools in the nation, so over half of Latino students tend to go to high schools that are 90 percent Latino or minority," Orrenius says, explaining that more needs to be done to level the playing field.

But analysts say that until Latinos show politicians that they cannot be appeased at a superficial level, candidates will continue to do just enough to get the vote each election year.

Lydia Camarillo, vice president of the Southwest Voter Registration Education Project, says that day is coming. In the meantime, she says, Latinos must be reminded what is at stake in each election. "Go to our neighborhoods. We are not seeing any progress," she says.

Many candidates still have a hard time pushing issues that drive the group to the polls. Eight years ago, Democratic gubernatorial candidate Tony Sanchez relied too heavily on the idea that he could increase Latino turnout and that the group would vote for him because of his surname, political analysts say. Sanchez lost to Perry by more than 800,000 votes.

Those analysts say current candidates who travel to the border to discuss security or complain that Latinos are not represented in history books are also not doing enough to engage the population in a meaningful way.

Camarillo says underestimating Latino voting power is a mistake. She says candidates have missed the mark when tackling important concerns for Latinos. "The questions should be, what are we going to do to make sure that the Latino community has better resources, better jobs and better opportunities?" she says. But, Camarillo says, Latinos also continue to pay attention to how candidates respond to immigration issues. "Even though it is a federal issue, the immigration issue has become increasingly a litmus test for how we will be treated," she says.

Both White and Perry are playing it safe on immigration and border security. White, who is trying to appeal to moderate Republican voters and keep his base Democratic voters, has leaned more conservative toward those issues. He treads lightly when discussing national immigration reform efforts and has joined Perry in criticizing the federal government's response to border security needs.

Perry, on the other hand, is also trying to play both sides. Aldrete says the governor doles out money to sheriffs and provides grants along the border, while presiding over a Republican Party convention that talked about eliminating federally sponsored pre-kindergarten and passing an Arizona-like bill in Texas.

Perry has said publicly that he disagrees with portions of the Arizona law, which would not be right for Texas. Meanwhile, some of his fellow Republicans in the Legislature have promised to pass similar bills in the state.

White says he would veto legislation that resembles the controversial law. Perry would not commit to a veto without a review of such legislation.

Analysts say both parties have to step up efforts to reach Latino voters by talking about issues like closing the wage gap with Anglos, reducing the dropout rate for Hispanic children and raising the college graduation statistics for the minority group.

"For the majority of Hispanics, the Republican Party is just not a choice," Aldrete says. "The choice is, 'Is it worth my time to get involved?'"

Don't let a fall at home change everything

Studies show that more than half (55%) of all falls by seniors take place in the home. Who will be there to help should a fall or other medical emergency occur?

Philips Lifeline is the leading medical alert service, recommended by thousands of healthcare professionals and organizations across the country.

How Lifeline works

Lifeline is a simple, wireless device worn as a pendant or wristband that allows the wearer to summon help with the push of a button. Lifeline with AutoAlert* can offer an added layer of protection, because it can call for help if a fall is detected and your loved one can't push their button.

Call today for access to help, 24 hours a day, for falls and other emergencies.

in social studies, 78 percent in math and 75 percent in science on the TAKS test.

While OHS stayed at Academically Acceptable, the campus scored 92 percent in English, 89 percent in social studies, 64 percent in math and jumped from 62 percent to 77 percent in science.

"We are not quite where we need to be as a high school campus, but we will get there. Our students and teachers have worked very hard. Sometimes change is needed to make progress and that is what we have done in an attempt to improve," said OHS Principal Benny Granger.

At OMS, scores in social studies leaped from 80 percent last year to 98 percent in 2010, as well as 81 percent in math which is up from 65 percent. Science also improved increasing from 48 percent to 59 percent.

"The entire OMS staff challenged our students in raising the bar of successful learning and our students met that challenge," said OMS Principal Houston Hendryx.

At Ozona Elementary, improvement was found in multiple areas as well with the biggest increase being in science. Scores improved to 84 percent this year compared to last year's 67 percent.

"The OES staff is very proud of their students and the great gains they made this year. Our motto this year was 'Build It Up.' That meant staying committed to our students and supporting each other. As a principal, I am thankful to our staff and our community for providing that support.

For the second consecutive year, more schools statewide earned the state's top accountability Exemplary rating, TEA stated. "Many schools and districts earned one of the top ratings by meeting the absolute rating criteria and did not use a progress measure or an exception. That is because the TAKS passing rates and completion rates went up across the state in 2010, while dropout rates for grades 7-12 declined compared to the previous year.

For 2011 state accountability, Scott said in his statement that he is considering several options to ensure that student performance is acknowledged and that the state accountability system remains transparent.

TEA Accountability Rating Definitions:

EXEMPLARY

At least 90 percent of a district's or school's students passed the Texas Assessment of Knowledge and Skills (TAKS), 95 percent of high school students either graduated on time or continued high school for a fifth year, and the district had an annual middle school dropout rate of 1.8 percent or less. A district or campus could earn this rating by meeting the absolute standards or by using the Texas Projection Measure (TPM) or exceptions. Special measures can only be used to move up one rating category.

RECOGNIZED

More rigorous standards were implemented this year to determine the state's Recognized rating. The new standards require 80 percent of all students and each evaluated student group to pass the TAKS, compared to 75 percent in previous years. Additionally, the school or district must achieve an 85 percent completion rate and must now have an annual seventh and eighth-grade dropout rate of 1.8 percent or below. The previous seventh and eighth-grade dropout rate requirement was 2 percent.

ACADEMICALLY ACCEPTABLE

Most districts and schools earned the rating this year by meeting the absolute standards, which increased by 5 percentage points for science and math.

ACADEMICALLY UNACCEPTABLE

Schools and districts received this rating under standard accountability procedures if they had TAKS passing rates for any student group or their total student population below 70 percent for reading/English language arts, writing or social studies or below 60 percent for mathematics or 55 percent for science. A completion rate lower than 75 percent or an annual seventh and eighth-grade dropout rate higher than 1.8 percent would also result in an Academically Unacceptable rating.

- Source: Texas Education Agency

Scott has said he may retool or eliminate the Texas Projection Measure, which counts as passing students who fail state-mandated tests but who are expected to pass in future years.

These options include suspension of the use of TPM for accountability ratings, or continued use of TPM in state accountability, but only for districts that elect to use it.

Overall, 298 districts and 1,456 schools received an Academically Acceptable rating. Forty-five districts and 125 schools received the lowest rating called Academically Unacceptable. They received this rating under standard accountability procedures if they had TAKS passing rates for any student group or their total student population below 70 percent for reading/English language arts, writing or social studies or below 60 percent for mathematics or 55 percent for science.

A completion rate lower than 75 percent or an annual seventh and eighth-grade dropout rate higher than 1.8 percent would also result in an Academically Unacceptable rating.

accountability ratings, or continued use of TPM in state accountability, but only for districts that elect to use it.

The commissioner is expected to make a decision about the future use of TPM this spring.

"We understand that some people have concerns with these measures, particularly with the Texas Projection Measure. TPM is a complex regression analysis but I believe it to be reliable. Nonetheless, I am willing to re-examine its use because we want the public to have complete faith in the school ratings," the commissioner said.

New elementary school will host classes after Labor Day

BY MELISSA PERNER THE OZONA STOCKMAN

Students will have to wait until after Labor Day before they are able to attend class in the new elementary school.

Crockett County CCSD Superintendent Chris duBois said last week that after very thorough consideration to where the district stands in terms of readiness, a decision was made to postpone the first class day in the new facility until Sept. 7, which is the Tuesday after Labor Day.

"Although I am convinced that the building will be substantially completed and punched by the third week of August, there are just so many contingent issues remaining that could still present hang ups," duBois said.

The decision was made after a meeting with school administrators.

"Obviously this news has a lot of implications - so principals are prepared to answer specific questions," duBois said.

Principals will also be contacting many of the teachers and staff personally to discuss specifics, duBois said.

Essentially, school will start just like last fall with third, fourth and fifth grades in the intermediate building, pre-k and kindergarten in the portable buildings next to the middle school and first and second grades in the portable buildings behind the Administration Building.

"More details will be forthcoming. We will be just fine and have the absolute best planned transition any new school ever had," duBois said.

Property Tax Rates in Crockett County

This notice concerns 2010 property tax rates for Crockett County. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.
