Local candidates file for March Primary

Filing has started for candidates wanting to run for office in the 2016 March Primary Election.

As of press time Tuesday, Robert Rodriguez has filed for re-election as Crockett County Sheriff. He has already drawn one opponent, Jose Gutierrez, who filed on Monday.

Max Schroeder has filed for Commissioner Precinct 3.

Incumbent Randy Branch said he will not be seeking another term as commissioner.

Karen Webb filed for county treasurer. The treasurer's seat is up for election due to it being an unexpired term.

Also filing on Monday were incumbent Michelle Medley for tax assessor-collector and incumbent Jody Upham for county attorney.

So far all local officials have filed to be on the Democratic ballot.

Other local offices up for election include Commissioner Precinct 1, currently held by Frank Tambunga, and Crockett County Constable, currently held by Raymond P. (Bear) Borrego.

State offices include the 112th District Attorney, which is currently

Rodriguez announces re-election

As sheriff of Crockett County, I would like to announce my intention to continue in this position.

I was born and raised in Ozona and my wife and I have children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren in Ozona and have a personal and professional vested interest in the future of law enforcement effectiveness in Crockett County.

During my last campaign I told the citizens that I would work hard to have better working relationships with other county agencies and agencies of surrounding counties.

We currently have a good relationship with other law enforcement departments and continue to work well with other agencies of all categories and location.

I continue to keep advised of current education opportunities and attend and encourage our deputies to also attend. Since in office I have attended the Texas Sheriff's Association conference yearly to stay current on procedures and also to better relationships with other departments. I

Care Center board, commissioners discuss new health clinic

BY MELISSA PERNER
AND SUSAN WILLIAMS
THE OZONA STOCKMAN

The new health clinic is moving closer to breaking ground.

At a joint meeting Monday night between the Crockett County Commissioners' Court and the Crockett County Care Center, Health and Emergency Services Board, both groups heard details about the project.

The county is looking to build the $3 million clinic across from Lion Stadium. Shannon Medical Center will provide $275,000 worth of new equipment.

The commissioners are looking at issuing a tax note for the clinic, instead of a bond election. A tax note can be issued by the county for projects to be financed for seven years or less. The clinic project has been estimated to be paid back within five years.

The clinic is around 10,000 square-feet.

The new clinic will have 11 exam rooms that will be used by local physicians and specialists from San Angelo.

EMS will have an urgent care entrance on one side of the building, with the driveway going around the back of the building.

The lobby area is larger in both the clinic and urgent care areas.

Architect Rick Burnight, with O'Connell Robertson, said he worked with clinic employees on designing the facility.

Burnight said his firm is 90 percent done with the engineering and architecture on the clinic. If the commissioners approve to advertise for bids

End of the line: Lions fall to Bulldogs

BY MELISSA PERNER
THE OZONA STOCKMAN

SAN ANGELO - The Ozona Lions season came to an end Saturday after falling to the Stamford Bulldogs, 55-6, in the Bi-District Playoff Game.

"Saturday was a very tough day. We had the same issues that occurred throughout the year occur in this one game to keep us from trying to steal a win from a very good Stamford ball club. We had key players go down with injuries and we continued to have trouble holding on to the ball and penalties. Our kids never backed down and played hard, but too many bad things piled up on us early and made it difficult," said Coach Edward Perez.

How to write good employee job descriptions

I can say emphatically that I have never uttered the phrase, "Well, that's not in my job description."

As an owner, you perform all the jobs which your business requires you to do in order to keep the business running and being profitable. As your business grows, you will find yourself considering hiring an employee. Having a job description will help you write your help wanted ad, ensure your applicants and employees understand their roles and serve as a basis for performance expectations.

The Small Business Administration web site offers these tips. Good job descriptions typically begin with a careful analysis of the important facts about a job. Identify the individual tasks and methods used to complete these tasks. Explain the purpose and responsibilities of the job and how it relates to the company's end goal.

BUSINESS TIPS

SBA cautions about being too stringent in the job description wording. A flexible job description encourages employees to grow within their position and contribute over time to your overall business.

The Texas Workforce Commission online resource, especially for Texas Employers, states that a good job description makes it much easier to deal with an unemployment claim should a work separation occur. The job description typically includes the job title, objective and level. Include a description of the function and scope of the position and list the tasks critical for success. Key functional and relational responsibilities should be listed in order of significance.

Additionally, include where the work will be performed and expected abilities to handle various types of equipment and/or software programs.

The SBA recommends structuring the sentences verb/object format. "Greets office visitors and personnel in a friendly and sincere manner." Always use the present tense of verbs and construct sentences in a gender neutral format. It is acceptable to use he/she if necessary. Avoid indecisive adverbs such as frequently, occasional or several.

As you work through writing your job descriptions, The University of Delaware has posted online Action Words for Position Descriptions. Some key verbs from that document include articulates, certifies, collaborates, develops, recommends, schedules and (the last one on nine pages), writes.

Locally, the Concho Valley Workforce Development Board is the contact for direct assistance with writing job descriptions. As always, the Angelo State University Small Business Development Center is here to help with any small business needs you might encounter.

Disenfranchise voters

There are many sneaky ways to disenfranchise voters — to rig the electoral system so that one group's voices are not quite as loud as others' — but the 23rd Congressional District of Texas might be one of the most devious of all.

Texas lawmakers have designed a congressional district that is so slippery that neither political party can hang onto it.

You will get an argument about that from the people who have held the seat. Will Hurd, Pete Gallego, Francisco "Quico" Canseco, Ciro Rodriguez and Henry Bonilla will all say, in one way or another, that they have been effective representatives for the people who sent them to Washington, D.C.

Bonilla, a Republican, was there for 14 years. Rodriguez, a Democrat, was there for four but served in Congress for eight more years representing another district — another redistricting tale for another day.

Rodriguez lost in 2010 to Canseco, a Republican. Canseco lost to Gallego, a Democrat, in 2012. Gallego lost to Hurd, a Republican, in 2014.

Next year, Hurd and Gallego will be on the ballot again, in a rematch. They'll be testing to see whether the district is a reliable flipper or not: Its voters have preferred Republicans in non-presidential election years and Democrats in presidential years.

That's a pain in the butt for the politicians. But it's really a pain in the butt for the people in CD-23, which includes Crockett County. While they've been trying their hardest to remember who represents them in Congress, people in other Texas districts have watched their federal representatives pile up the seniority.

Midland Republican Michael Conaway was elected to Congress in 2004, and he's chairman of the House Agriculture Committee. Jeb Hensarling, R-Dallas, went to Washington after the 2002 elections and chairs the Financial Services Committee. Michael McCaul, R-Austin, who was first elected in 2004, chairs the Homeland Security Committee.

Pete Sessions, R-Dallas, who heads the Rules Committee, he joined Congress in 1997.

First thing to notice there is that you have to be a Republican to have a chairmanship in the current Congress. But the second is that nobody from the 23rd congressional district has had a chance to stay long enough to get into the line, even for the top minority positions. And their voters, it follows, have that much less power in Washington than other Texans from more stable districts.

STATE ANALYSIS

Other kinds of disenfranchisement are more common. Those more common forms — unfairly discriminating against particular populations on grounds of race or ethnicity or geography, for instance — are also against the law.

This one is more subtle, almost certainly unintentional and just as insidious.

In any given place in Texas, voters in one political party or another have been written out of their ability to elect someone from their party to Congress. Using the current congressional districts — which, by the way, are still under challenge in the federal courts — it is virtually impossible to elect a Democrat in a Republican district or vice-versa.

Eleven of the 36 districts were drawn to elect Democrats. Twenty-four of the 36 were drawn to elect Republicans. One — the 23rd, which stretches from San Antonio all the way west to El Paso and all the way south to grab more than half of the length of the Texas-Mexico border — is a swing district.

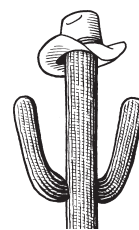

The November elections there are competitive, which is more than can be said for the other 35 districts. But where other Texans might be pinning for new faces in politics, the officeholders in the 23rd change so fast that many voters never learn their names.

If turnover like that was normal in other congressional districts, the politics would probably balance out. But other members of Congress don't have to worry as hard about their next elections, and they can also count on sticking around long enough to get some plum assignments.

And their voters benefit, presumably, from having friends in high places. Voters in the 23rd Congressional district of Texas can only wonder what that's like.

Don't Pet The Spider

IT'S THE PITTS

LEE PITTS

In 20 million American homes man's best friend isn't a dog, it's a legally owned python, chimp, Madagascar hissing cockroach or other exotic pet.

It occurs to me that we could kill two birds with one stone, so to speak, by turning endangered and threatened species into house pets.

Who wouldn't want a poison dart frog, mountain gorilla, sumatran orangutan, Slevin's skink (a lizard), Oliver Ridley Turtle or Hector's dolphin in their home?

Why should Hector, Slevin or Oliver get to have all the fun? An Ozark hellbender would make a perfect pet, which I admit, sounds more like my college roommate than it does an endangered amphibian.

It's time to think "outside the cage" and adopt an endangered clam, fern, lichen, snail, arachnid or invertebrate as your pet. Here are my top ten prospects.

#1 Black Rhino- Be the first on your block to own this endangered living fossil. Mostly outside pets, after a brief period of socialization you and your rhino will be curled up on the couch watching Dancing With the Stars in no time. Set aside two hours daily for play and dust baths.

#2 Goliath Bird Eating Spider- A member of the tarantula family, they can be as big as a dinner plate. They DO NOT like to be petted. I repeat, DO NOT PET THE SPIDER! Their venom is not lethal but they do flick tiny hairs at people that hurt like heck and can be dangerous if swallowed. It has a reputation for stealing birds out of nests so keep it separated at all times from your endangered Golden cheeked warbler.

#3 Howell's spectacular thelypody- Listen up guys. Since their habitat is being threatened by the mowing of grass, you'll have the perfect excuse not to mow the lawn on Sunday when you're trying to watch the game. Just tell your wife, "I can't because I don't want to mow a thelypody, and not just a good thelypody but a spectacular one."

#4 Rafflesia- This is the biggest flower on the planet, measuring three feet across and weighing up to 24 pounds. Not recommended for small condos. Just like some of my relatives, this strange flower does not have any visible means of support and is parasitic in nature. Again, like some of my kin, it has a disgusting odor that smells like rotting flesh, hence the nickname, "the meat flower". Other than that it can make a friendly, intelligent and semi-portable pet.

#5 Fassett's locoweed- I have no idea who Fassett is but this threatened species has been around for over 10,000 years. Unlike a dog, you'll never have to walk it, pick up its poop, buy it tailored clothes or take it to a beauty parlor. Cattle are said to go crazy over it.

#6 Welwitschia mirabilis- The "onion of the desert" is a cosmetically challenged plant consisting just two leaves that wrap around themselves like two teenagers in love. May pout if not enough attention is paid. It can live for up to 1,500 years so make sure to leave a provision in your will for its caretaking.

#7 New Mexico ridge nosed rattlesnake- The official state reptile of Arizona, leading us to wonder why it's not the Arizona ridge nosed rattlesnake? It probably won't kill you if you're bitten while roughhousing with it.

#8 Frigate island beetle- These critically endangered insects are scared by loud noises and rats find them really tasty, which means you probably shouldn't also have a...

#9 Giant Kangaroo rat- Also known as the "Developer's nightmare" because its presence has stopped more housing tracts than stingy bankers. Get a female because the males of the species are disgusting creatures and they like to sunbathe in the nude, rubbing their sides in the sand which produces a smell that attracts little bikini clad rat babes on the beach.

#10 Agarikon- A very rare fungi that shares half its DNA with humans. It is thought that 650 million years ago these fungi and man shared common ancestors, which explains why some family members at your last reunion sat like bumps on a log while feeding on BS. Can't be taught many tricks but they are less smelly than a ferret, don't shed and have no sharp claws.

5th Circuit rules immigration policy unconstitutional

AUSTIN — A three-judge panel of the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals on Nov. 9 affirmed a Brownsville federal district judge's Feb. 15, 2015, order forbidding the Obama administration's implementation of DAPA, the Deferred Action for Parents of Americans and Lawful Residents Program.

Against the wishes of Congress, the White House sent out a memorandum in November 2014 extending the reach of the policy include to more people.

Gov. Greg Abbott reacted to the Fifth Circuit ruling on Nov. 10, saying: "The court's decision is a vindication for the Rule of Law and the Constitution. The president's job is to enforce the immigration laws, not rewrite them. President Obama should abandon his lawless executive amnesty program and start enforcing the law today."

In affirming the lower court's ruling, the Fifth

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Ed Sterling | Texas Press Association

Circuit sided with Texas and 25 other states that sued to prevent the implementation of DAPA on three grounds:

1. That DAPA violated the procedural requirements of the federal Administrative Procedures Act as a substantive rule that did not undergo the requisite notice and comment;
2. That the U.S. Department of Homeland Security lacked the authority to implement the program even if it followed the correct rule-making process; and
3. That DAPA was an abrogation of the president's constitutional duty to "take Care that the Laws be faithfully executed."

The trial court and subsequent appellate court actions stem from the Department of Homeland Security's implementation of DACA, the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals, a 2012 executive order by President Obama.

According to the Fifth Circuit majority opinion, under DACA, at least 1.2 million people who are "lawfully present" in the U.S. may qualify for Social Security retirement, Social Security disability benefits and health insurance under Part A of the Medicare program, but those who are "unlawfully present" are generally not eligible to receive federal public benefits.

White House Press Secretary Josh Earnest on Nov. 10 said the Obama administration would file an appeal of the Fifth Circuit's ruling with the U.S. Supreme Court.

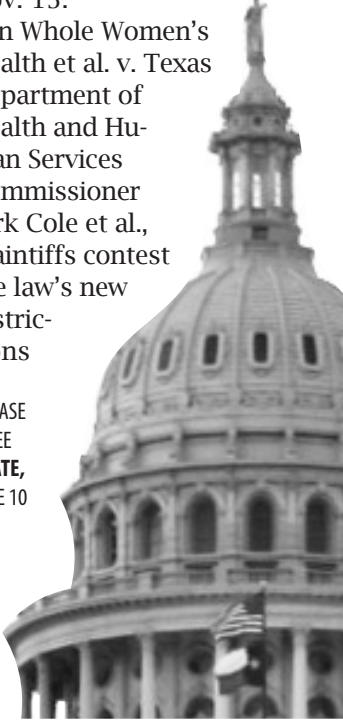

SCOTUS TO HEAR HB 2 SUIT

A lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of Texas' 2013 House Bill 2 that revised the state's abortion law will be reviewed by the U.S. Supreme Court in 2016, the court announced Nov. 13.

AUSTIN — With huntingELDORADO - The Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service will conduct a multi-county Range and Pasture Workshop Dec. 3 in the Eldorado Civic Center.

The center is a mile south of Eldorado on U.S. Highway 277. Registration starts at 8:30 a.m. followed by the program from 9 a.m. until 1:30 p.m.

"So far, this is shaping up to be a great winter from a moisture standpoint," said Tait Cooper, AgriLife Extension agent in Schleicher County. "Many pastures have a lot of standing forage, so prescribed fire may be a viable option for many landowners, and that option will be one we cover during this workshop. We'll also look at herbicides, winter feeding and parasite control."

Individual registration is $15 before Nov. 27, and $25 thereafter. The fee includes lunch.

The workshop is a collaborative effort among the AgriLife Extension offices in Schleicher, Sutton, Edwards, Irion and Crockett counties.

Topics and speakers will include:

- Grain updates and winter feed cost outlook, Dr. David Drake, AgriLife Extension agronomist, San Angelo.

- Brush control and herbicide update, Dr. Bob Lyons, AgriLife Extension range specialist, Uvalde.

- Pesticide laws and regulations, Cory Pence, Texas Department of Agriculture, San Angelo.

- Patch burning applications, Dr. Charles "Butch" Taylor, superintendent of the Texas A&M AgriLife Research Station at Sonora.

- Do-it-yourself fecal parasite sampling, Dr. Reid Redden, state sheep and goat specialist, San Angelo.

Three Texas Department of Agriculture continuing education units, one laws and regulations, one integrated pest management and one general will be offered.

For more information, and to RSVP, call the AgriLife Extension office in Schleicher County at (325) 853-2132.

have also attended two classes drug interdiction, one for highway, one for the more local confrontations. I have had two separate series of classes on Interview and Interrogation techniques, (48 hours), and also participated in a class on writing effective search warrants. Every effort is being made to ensure that our procedures are current and that we stay current on the constantly changing law and court opinions. Crockett County Sheriff's Department, in conjunction with the United States Border Patrol, has been participating in a program the Border Patrol calls Stonegarden. Our deputies work on Border Patrol initiatives on their off-duty time. This has been a real asset to their department and ours. We are honored to be counted an asset to a federal agency and will continue to work to be valuable whenever we can. As you know, struggling with the lack of space for local offenders has been a major problem in our county since before I took office. We continue to search for out of county agencies that will house our prisoners as our jail is limited to an occupancy of 48 hours per offender. We are currently in the planning stage of a new jail to be constructed south of town. We have had diagrams of more than one jail facility from more than one architect and the one selected to most accommodate our needs was available at the town hall meeting. Those plans are complete and ready for construction. I am returning to ask for your support as sheriff. I stated some goals when I initially ran for office and feel I have accomplished those goals. As I stated, my door is open at my office and at my house, and I have made every effort to be approachable and fair. My family and I appreciate your support. I feel like we have made some significant improvement as a county agency. There is much left to be done and I request your support so I can continue to make a positive impact for our community.

next month, and bids are approved by the end of the year, construction could start first of next year. Vince Viaille, managing director of Specialized Public Finance Inc., said a tax note can be issued by the county for projects to be financed for seven years or less. Tax notes don't run the risk to have to pay for an election, like a bond, Viaille said. They also don't have the risk of the public petitioning for a bond election. The tax note can also be financed through local or commercial banks, Viaille said. That will give the county the option to pay off the note early without penalty. County Judge Fred Deaton said the county has around $1.1 million in their budget for the clinic, which means the county would borrow $2 million. Dr. Marcus Sims asked if the bids come in high then wouldn't it be better to borrow $2.5 million. Care Center Board President John L. Henderson said they were not going over $3 million. The commissioners will have a meeting at noon Monday, Nov. 23, at the courthouse annex to look at advertising for bids for the clinic. The meeting is open to the public.

ton said. The new roof is guaranteed for 20 years. Henderson said the leaks at the care center have been taken care of with the new air conditioning units, except for the kitchen. He also said the care center roof is no longer an emergency. Deaton said the county has money set aside for the project. Clinton said his best guess at an estimated cost would be $500,000. Last month, the commissioners approved a $90,000 bid for a new roof on the courthouse annex.

The county has $622,000 budgeted for both projects. Commissioner Randy Branch said the type of roof proposed would be good. The rest of the commissioners also agreed that the roof needs to be done. OTHER ITEMS: The commissioners also approved a bid from Betty Castro at $11.42 a plate for 350 people for the County Employee Appreciation Banquet. On Nov. 12 the commissioners met and canvassed the Nov. 3 election results.

Murr appointed to mental health committee

BY REGAN ELLMER
STATE REP. ANDREW MURR'S OFFICE

to bridge gaps across a variety of agencies and expertise areas - from individual training to insurance

Last week, the Speaker of the Texas House formed the House Select Committee on Mental Health in order to take a comprehensive view of how to improve the state's behavioral health system for children and adults.

Among those members appointed to the select committee was State Rep. Andrew Murr, R-Junction, whose district includes Kerr County, home to one of the state's twelve mental health hospitals and the Hill Country Mental Health and Developmental Disabilities (MHDD) Centers Administrative Headquarters, which serves a 19-county area.

One of the Speaker's key charges to the committee is to recommend ways to improve early identification of mental illness and increase collaboration among entities that deliver care.

Additionally, the committee will address better processes to measure and improve outcomes, how to better serve rural areas of the state, and how to provide better care to veterans.

"Mental illness is a significant problem in our state, and when left unchecked, it can have challenging consequences for families and communities. At the same time, we have finite resources available to address adult and juvenile mental health needs, so it's vital that we come together to chart the path forward that will create the most efficient and effective system to treat the mentally ill. Importantly, we have

The Kerrville State Hospital, which was founded in 1951, provides long-term treatment for adults who have been committed by a court. Roughly half of those admitted were deemed incompetent to stand trial, while the other half were adjudicated as guilty by reason of insanity. The Hill Country MHDD Centers provide mental health, individual developmental disability, substance abuse, and early childhood intervention services throughout the greater Texas Hill Country.

This organization works with local governments and includes a crisis stabilization unit, youth crisis respite center, and intellectual and developmental disability (IDD) behavioral supports and crisis center.

Legislators increased mental health funding by more than $200 million when they met earlier this year, with the current two-year budget appropriating $1.8 billion per year to mental health services across the state.

Game Warden Field Notes

COMPILED FROM TEXAS PARKS AND WILDLIFE DEPARTMENT LAW ENFORCEMENT REPORTS.

SCIENTISTS OVERBOARD

Two Terrell County game wardens and some deputy sheriffs responded to a 911 call about a boating accident with injuries on the Rio Grande River. A university research group with several boats was coming down the river when one boat hit a submerged rock. The collision, which threw four of the boat's five occupants overboard, resulted in two injuries. One injured researcher was airlifted to a nearby medical facility while the other injured person was driven to an ambulance waiting nearby. Together with the agency's Forensics Reconstruction and Mapping Team, the wardens are investigating the accident.

gift, he said, but he wanted to see what flavor the wine was, so he took a drink. The wardens filed a case for having an open container of alcohol.

STRANDED BUT NOT ABANDONED

A Grayson County game warden received a call from the Grayson County Sheriff's Office about a possible stranded boat on the Oklahoma side of Lake Texoma. The caller said a young man flagged her down as she drove by the Denison Dam boat ramp. The young man told the woman his boat had broken down, so he swam for two hours back to the shore to find help. The warden went to the boat ramp and talked to the young man, who said when his boat broke down a few hours earlier, he'd put on a life jacket and tried to swim his small boat to shore. After about 30 minutes, however, the young man said he had to let go of the boat, on which three passengers were still waiting for rescue. The Grayson County Sheriff's Office had advised the warden that the Oklahoma Highway Patrol would not be able to immediately respond to search for the stranded boaters, so the warden launched his patrol boat and quickly located the stranded boaters, about three miles into the Oklahoma side of the lake. The warden towed the boat back to the nearest boat ramp. The passengers were cold but otherwise all right.

White goat causes stir at state park

EL PASO - Over the past two months Texas Parks and Wildlife Department staff have received numerous calls about a white goat seen roaming the side slopes of Trans Mountain Road in the area known as Smugglers Pass.

that the animal in questions is in fact a domestic (now feral) goat, which could have escaped from a nearby farm or may have been intentionally released on the side of the road.

TPWD officials are aware of the situation and through multiple observations and photographs, have confirmed TPWD would like to ensure everyone that neither the goat, the public nor the state park are in any imminent harm or danger. The goat can survive in this area for quite a while and, if necessary, it will relocate on its own. Due to the feral state of the goat and the rugged conditions of the terrain, removing the goat from the area would be difficult and dangerous for both the animal and wildlife officials conducting the relocation.

Based on these considerations, TPWD will not be taking any action to actively capture, remove, or relocate the goat.

NOT THE BEST TIME TO TAKE A DRINK

Two Val Verde County game wardens were on patrol checking dove hunters east of Del Rio. As they sat at an intersection, they saw the driver of a passing vehicle take a drink from a bottle of wine. The wardens initiated a traffic stop and asked the driver about the open bottle of wine they saw in the passenger seat. The man said he was on his way to meet with his priest because he was going to be an altar server that morning. He planned to provide the bottle of wine as a

ABBOTT COMMENTS ON PARIS

French officials confirmed the deaths of 127 people and the hospitalization of an estimated 300 hundred others in Nov. 13 terrorist attacks at six sites in a small section of Paris.

Straus on Nov. 9 formed the House Select Committee on Mental Health to study the state's behavioral health system for children and adults.

Gov. Abbott issued the following statement: "Today's despicable attacks in France are an assault to all of humanity, and the world must unite to condemn acts of terrorism on every front. My office has been in contact with DPS and federal authorities who will continue to monitor the situation in Texas. Additionally, I have spoken with the Consulate General of France in Houston to offer any and all assistance on behalf of the State of Texas. Our thoughts and prayers remain with the victims and all those affected in France tonight."

Straus instructed the panel to study substance abuse treatment and recommend ways to improve early identification of mental illness, increase collaboration among entities that deliver care, methods to measure and improve outcomes, and ways to improve care in underserved and rural areas, and for veterans and the homeless.
