Graduates look to the future

BY MELISSA PERNER THE OZONA STOCKMAN

Diplomas were conferred on 40 students as the Class of 2018 graduated Friday night at Lion Stadium.

In his welcome speech, Gerson Daniel Posadas thanked the parents who have had the challenge and blessing of raising and preparing all the students for adulthood.

"After all the sacrifices our parents made for us to have the tools to succeed in our school years, tonight is their validation," he said.

Posadas also thanked teachers for all their help and guidance and for his friends who made high school fun.

"We appreciate everyone who made an effort to come to our graduation. Everyone in this stadium is here to celebrate our accomplishments. Everyone is also proud to see us leave one stage of our lives and see us move on to another stage," he said.

Denise Guadalupe Rodriguez spoke on the future.

"Get out there and work for your goals. Someone once told me, 'The date you are born on, that's the date that they put on the left side of the tombstone. When you die they put another date on the right side of the tombstone, but that dash in the middle is the most important thing on that tombstone. That is the line that throughout that entire time frame you were able to impact and touch other people's lives. You were able to leave a mark on this earth," she said.

She also spoke on believing the future can be better than "your now or your past."

"My dearest classmates, we have had many great memories in the past, we've shed tears, laughs, friendship bracelets and jokes. We became almost like family," she said. "You get a strange feeling when vou're about to split ways to become someone greater than we were in the past and who we are now. Someone who will make mistakes, find solutions, learn, but, most importantly, someone who won't give up no matter what obstacles are thrown at them."

Texas shooting survivors give lawmakers policy solutions

Last Friday, Santa Fe High School senior Grace Johnson walked into the hallway from the band practice room, where she had been taking a nap, and saw one of her classmates get shot and fall to the ground.

Almost a week after the massacre in her Houston-area school, Johnson stood in the Texas Capitol Thursday and gave Gov. Greg Abbott and Texas lawmakers recommendations about how to prevent future school shootings. Johnson was among dozens of other students, parents and educators impacted by recent shootings at Santa Fe High School, Sutherland Springs' First Baptist Church last November, and Alpine High School in 2016, at the last of three roundtable discussions convened by Abbott to discuss school safety and gun violence.

By the end of a fourhour discussion, the sec-

Developing complementary partnerships can be beneficial

Sometimes a business idea comes along that is a great idea and as a business would be popular, but isn't enough to succeed on its own merits. Here, to succeed means make a meaningful profit. This business may be able to operate at the breakeven point or slightly better but cannot make a significant profit.

Some of the reasons for this could be that the city or area demographics are inadequate to support the business; demand for the product or sersmall. Or, the scope of the business is too narrow like a bakery that only sells loaves of white bread. No wheat bread. No cakes or pies. No dinner rolls. That isn't necessarily bad as long as the bread is really, really good! But even then, it may not be enough to be successful.

Does that mean that the entrepreneur shouldn't start the business? No. But, what the entrepreneur may want to do is to look for another business in which to develop a complementary partnership. These type partnerships have many options available. They typically are not formal partnerships, but may be better described as relationships where each business feeds customers to the other. They can even create package deals for their mutual customers in order to capture a greater share of the market.

For example, a wedding photographer and florist may develop a complementary relationship using the ideas above to improve their market share position. A wedding photographer and a pastry chef specializing in wedding cakes might do the same.

It might even be advantageous to see if co-locating is possible and feasible. A family photographer - or a photographer specializing in infants might locate next to the small infant and toddler clothing store. A massage therapist might locate next to a beauty salon.

There are a lot of great business ideas that work on their own merits in the big cities where there is a greater source of demand. Many times such businesses aren't as successful in the small towns when they try to stand alone. However, when the entrepreneur networks and finds a complementary business with which to build relationships, their chances of success are much improved.

The advisors of the ASU -Small Business Development Center can assist you in finding that complementary business for your business

Cornyn deserves thanks and support on paper tariff

Editor's note: The following was originally published in the Daily News in Galveston County. The Ozona Stockman is currently fighting the tariff issue and has asked U.S. Rep. Will Hurd, R-San Antonio, for support.

Texas Sen. John Cornyn deserves thanks and support for having the courage to stand up against an ill-conceived and narrowly beneficial tariff on Canadian paper and standing up for the best interests of the U.S. paper industry, the U.S. publishing industry and about 600,000 U.S. workers whose jobs are threatened by an unnecessary act of protectionism.

As we reported, Cornyn spoke against the tariff last week during an appearance at the National Rifle Association's annual meeting May 4 in Dallas.

"Newspapers are beleaguered already, and I don't think we need to make that any harder than it already is," Cornyn said.

Cornyn told the The Dallas Morning News that the public having access to "well-researched and reported information" is a "foundational element" of democracy.

But while the financial pressure of the tariff on U.S. newspapers is substantial, that's only part of the story.

In fact, it's hard to find anybody other than the hedge-fund managers at New York-based One Rock Capital Partners, who own North Pacific Paper Co., who's informed about the issue and still supports a U.S. Department of Commerce decision to impose a tariff of more than 20 percent on Canadian paper.

The U.S. newsprint industry opposes the tariff because people running that industry understand the tariff will do them a lot of harm and no good. They understand that the domestic paper industry is suffering from declining demand caused by a shift to digital publishing, along with attrition and production cutbacks among publishing companies, not because of imported paper.

They understand the tar-

iff will drive some of their customers out of business and force an even greater share of their market to use less of what they have to sell.

Firms servicing both the newsprint and the publishing industries oppose the tariff for the same reasons.

Laymen supporters of the tariff, many of whom are motivated by an ideologically based disdain for journalism and an undiscerning support for a pro-tariff president, like to argue the duties on Canadian paper will benefit U.S. workers.

That's false. Firms opposing the tariff employ about 600,000 Americans, according to a broad-based coalition working to roll back the Commerce Department's decision. North Pacific, called Norpac, employs less than 300. No one in any of the affected industries believes the tariff will revitalize domestic paper production, while everyone in those industries understands it will have the opposite effect. There's no doubt that we have a deeply vested interest in this issue, but so do you, whether you realize it or not.

Print journalism subsidizes all journalism, either in terms of advertising revenue, content production or both. If you saw something interesting or informative on TV or, especially, on the internet, the chances are about 99 percent that it appeared first in print somewhere.

We believe it's impossible to build good communities without independent sources of good, reliable local information. In the small cities and towns that make up most of this county, that service is provided exclusively by newspapers. Those small operators are the first and hardest hit by the tariff.

If you believe the same, it's time to stand up and say so, as Cornyn and dozens of other members of Congress from both parties have done.

No Weigh

I have been a bona fide breeder of purebred cattle three different times with three different breeds during three different decades, with a grand total of 17 registered cows. So I am aware of the importance of performance data and record keeping. In fact, I am quite proud of the fact that I was once the owner of a bull calf with a weight per day of age of 122 pounds. Of course, the calf was only a day old but still, I think it might be some sort of record.

The very first thing that a breed association does after you buy a registered cow is send you a stack of forms to fill out that includes all sorts of performance information; things like weaning weights, eye pigmentation scores, ribeye area, blah, blah, blah. The big computer that keeps track of such things gets real upset if any of the blanks are not filled in.

What the breed associations don't tell you is how, exactly, you are supposed to get some of these measurements. Take birthweights for example. Whenever I tried to get a birthweight on a newborn calf the mother reacted in one of two ways: she either tried to kill me or she ran away, refusing to reclaim her calf, never to be seen again. I'd just like to ask that darn computer "What good does a birthweight do if the calf has no mother?"

I attempted to get a birthweight on all my registerable calves and each experi-weighing calves at birth is that it requires at least two people, one to tie up the calf's legs and to lift up the scale, and another person to read the scale. Because reading the correct weight is the most critical task I always assigned my wife the job of lifting up the calf and holding it while it dangled in midair while I took an accurate reading. This worked reasonably well until we had a calf born whose weight did not register on the scale. This calf was bigger than most implements pulled behind a tractor. We finally decided to weigh the calf by putting it in the back of the pickup, taking it to town and weighing it on the truck scales. We weighed the truck empty and then weighed the truck with the calf in the back. I knew the calf was big because my wife had such a hard time lifting it up twice to put in the truck, but I really didn't think it weighed 245 pounds!

I learned that timing is everything in weighing calves. If you don't find and weigh the calf immediately after it's born the mother will hide the calf and you won't see it again until it's a month old. at which time the wife has greater difence was unique. The main problem with ficulty catching the calf and lifting it up for me to get an accurate reading.

Another option is to wait and weigh the calf at weaning and then calculate back what you think its birthweight was. I believe this is the most popular method amongst most purebred breeders today and I can certainly understand why. But the computer does not like this method and would prefer you weigh the calf even before it has taken its first drink. I took this approach on only one calf and the calf was so new it was still slimy with afterbirth. As my wife hogtied the calf and lifted it up to be weighed she got so filthy in the process the mother took one whiff of my wife and tried to lick her all over.

Our very last registered calf born was rather large also, but we never did get a weight on it because of its maneating mother. First, I had my wife try to divert the cow's attention away from me as I grabbed for the calf. I missed but the cow didn't. Next, we tried to weigh the calf while standing in the back of the pick-up out of harm's way. But the possessive mother jumped in the back of the truck with us. Finally we gave up, and as the mother led her calf away to the farthest corner of the ranch, I said to my wife, "Looks like about an 80 pounder to me. What do you think?" "Close enough," she agreed.

Valdez wins race to face Abbott in November gubernatorial election

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS By Ed Sterling | Texas Press Association

AUSTIN — Former Dallas County Sheriff Lupe Valdez defeated Houston businessman Andrew White, the son of the late former governor, Mark White, in the May 22 Texas Democratic Party primary runoff. Valdez, the first Latina to win a gubernatorial primary in Texas, will run against incumbent Republican Governor Greg Abbott, who is seeking a second four-year term, in the November 6 general election.

Valdez garnered 230,467 votes, or 53.32 percent of the total vote, to White's 201,713 votes, which came to 46.67 percent. Historically, this was the lowest recorded turnout for a Texas Democratic Party gubernatorial runoff. Only 2.83 percent of the state's 15,249,541 registered voters cast a ballot.

Notably, two incumbent state legislators were defeated in the runoffs:

— Rep. Rene Oliveira, D-Brownsville, lost to Alex Dominguez, a Cameron County commissioner. House District 27, which Oliveira represents, includes part of Cameron County. First elected in 1981, Oliveira, the dean of Rio Grande Valley legislative delegation, is the fifth-most senior member of the Texas House of Representatives. He currently chairs the House Committee on Business and Industry and is a three-time past chairman of the powerful House Committee on Ways and Means.

- Rep. Scott Cosper, R-Killeen, lost to Dr. Brad Buckley, a Killeen veterinarian. Cosper, a former mayor of Killeen, was elected to represent House District 54 in 2016. He is a member of the budget-writing House Appropriations Committee. House District 54 includes Lampasas County and part of Bell County.

SAFETY TALKS ARE HELD Gov. Abbott on May 22 launched a series of roundtable discussions "to generate solutions that improve safety and security at Texas schools and in our communities."

Abbott's forums at the Capitol were in the aftermath of the May 18 shooting that left 10 dead and 10 injured at Santa Fe High School near Galveston. Invited to participate in the discussions were parents, teachers, students, legislators and interest groups that advocate for and against further gun regulations.

Also invited to participate were victims, educators and family members from Santa Fe, Sutherland Springs, Alpine and Italy, Texas, where other shootings occurred. Other invitees included school administrators who allow the arming of teachers and those who do not, as well as experts on matters of school safety, mental health, law enforcement, bullying and more.

What if salt didn't increase blood pressure?

The recommendation to "eat less salt" to lower hypertension came out of a study performed by Lewis Dahl in the 1950s, a study that is now generally regarded as "flawed." Dahl decided that feeding rats 500 grams of sodium per day (50 to 100 times the average human intake) was worthwhile evidence of an association between sodium intake and hypertension (high blood pressure).

As if this wasn't enough, Dahl "cherry picked" data derived from several correlating studies of populations with a "high" average salt intake and hypertension; mirroring the methodology of the "The Seven-Country-Study" on fat intake performed by Ancel Keys in the 1970s, which was also found to be full of scientific flaws and debunked.

Unfortunately for us, Dahl's study like Keyes was recently found to suggest the exact opposite. Keyes' study actually suggests that a lowfat diet contributes to heart disease; likewise, Dahl's study showed an increase in blood pressure with a reduction in salt intake.

In his article, The Truth About Salt & Hypertension, nutrition and fitness coach, and author, Mike Sheridan says, "the reason there's a lack of association in the first place, is because elevated blood pressure is a symptom not a cause. With salt reduction doing nothing for heart disease because the cause of hypertension (and heart disease) is obesity, insulin resistance, and elevated triglycerides (Syndrome X) - not excess salt!"

In a 1998 paper in the Journal of Applied Physiology, researchers showed that hypertension is the 4th and final step in the progression from 'Syndrome X' to 'The Deadly Quartet': at 2 weeks – insulin resistance (hyperinsulinemia), at 2 months – elevated triglycerides (hyperlipidemia), at 6 months – obesity (high bodyfat), and at 12 months – high blood pressure (hypertension).

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

JIM FISH

"Meaning, sodium reduction can lower blood pressure in the short-term, but does NOTHING for the other 3 problems."

"Even if a low sodium diet could lower

the blood pressure of most people and both the diet and the change in blood pressure could be sustained, this alone would not justify a recommendation to reduce sodium intake."

Sheridan goes on to say, "The disturbing part being, that reducing your salt intake too much appears to elevate your cardiovascular risk; increasing triglycerides and LDL cholesterol particles, elevating your risk of insulin resistance and type 2 diabetes, raising your risk of death from a heart attack or stroke. Also known as, the whole reason you stopped eating salt, and the whole reason you have elevated blood pressure in the first place!"

Your heart pumps blood throughout your body's veins and arteries collecting nutrients, chemicals, and hormones from the organs which the blood conveys to the muscles, tissues and fluids for energy and oxygen, and to facilitate the body's homeostasis. As blood travels through the body, it pushes against the walls of vessels and is called "blood pressure."

As your heart squeezes and pushes your blood through your arteries, your blood pressure goes up. As your heart relaxes, your blood pressure goes down. So, with each heartbeat, your blood pressure will rise to a maximum level, measured as the "systolic", and then falls to a minimum level, called the diastolic. These levels are significant because the high blood pressure indicates (not causes) risks for health problems in the future.

It's when one's blood pressure is allowed to remain high over the long-term, it puts extra strain on the arteries and heart. The strain can cause the arteries to become thicker and less flexible, or to become weaker.

If your arteries become thicker and less flexible, they will narrow and be prone to become clogged up. It's when an artery becomes completely clogged that it can result in a heart attack, a stroke, kidney disease, dementia or other life-threatening conditions... but this has nothing to do directly with one's level of sodium or salt consumption.

You are considered to have normal blood pressure if your systolic is above 90 mmHg and below 120 mmHg and your diastolic is above 60 mmHg and below 80 mmHg. Lower numbers indicate low blood pressure. Between 120 over 80 and 140 over 90, your blood pressure is a little higher than it should be, and you should try to lower it by making healthy changes to your lifestyle.

If it is consistently higher than 140 over 90 or higher for several weeks, it indicates you have high blood pressure, and you should change your lifestyle and seek the advice of a trusted medical practitioner.

Mike Sheridan concludes his report with, "Realistically, there's only one food you need to lower if you have high blood pressure. And aside from reducing hypertension it addresses the Syndrome X (triglycerides, insulin resistance, obesity) that's causing it."

As usual the graduation class was beautiful, smart, and classy. I saw a few tears on parents' faces, but they must realize they did the best they could to carry the ball for theses kiddos this far and it is up to these young adults to pick it up and carry it across the finish line. Of course, it will be with some help from parents but mostly with the help of newfound friends that will help with the future. Choose your friends wisely, and they will lead you down the best paths.

Please use the new exit on the south side of the center. It is a little hard to see, but it is the crossing that is across from Avenue D. It has been paved so it is really smooth. The exit in from of the center is dangerous because of truck traffic. There will be signs put up on this new entrance shortly. We do not want any of you to be in an accident leaving this facility. Please pay closer attention to traffic when leaving from town. Remember there is a curve there that blocks vision until it is too late.

It was good to have Niki back for exercise We have missed that girl. She starts out getting her blood pressure at 10:30 a.m. on Tuesday morning and she records this information then asks if anything has changed in your meds and how you are feeling. Then she starts the tapes and we do our exercises that are recommended by the Wesley Nurse Program to strengthen out muscles and are really good for our age group. You should all come try this plan to make you feel better and stronger.

Our trash table is gathering new stuff. Come check it out.

I got some new games for the center to exercise your hands and minds. Some have been trying them out and have found them to be fun. Come on out and try them. You can play them standing up or sitting down. Remember- If you don't use it, you lose it.

There has been no bingo during May because of the busy schedule. All you parents and families will have to celebrate the graduation of our class of 2018. Bingo will be back on June 11.

We will have afternoon bingo each Thursday. Bring your nickels and play as many cards as you can handle at a nickel a card per game. If you bingo for that game, you get all the nickels. We serve cokes and popcorn and have a good time. Then we have blackout bingo for a little prize for the lucky winner.

The center will open at 8:30 a.m. and close at 4:30 p.m.

Exercise at 9 a.m. on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday.

Mexican Train at 1:30 p.m. on Wednesday

Prayer Group at 3 p.m. on Wednesday

Quilting at 9:30 a.m. on Thursday.

Balance exercise at 9:30 a.m. on Thursday

Bingo from 2-4 p.m. on Thursday

Come on out, the coffee is on.

the media, many in the room agreed that they wanted more counselors, armed teachers and police officers in their schools. But they disagreed on other solutions, such as whether schools should be required to install metal detectors or whether students should have an app to report unsettling behavior from their peers.

Abbott said he would take the feedback from the roundtables and work on an action plan, but he did not give a timeline on when he would release it. "You are going to see solutions — plural," he told the families.

Johnson told Abbott she and her classmates wrote him after their school was locked down for hours following a shooting scare in February.

"We didn't get anything back. We didn't even get an acknowledgement," she said. "Gun shots went off, and we weren't surprised."

She gave a long list of solutions for school safety: increasing school security, arming teachers, randomly checking students' bags and increasing the number of school counselors.

But she opposed the idea of forcing students to pass through a metal detector every time they wanted to go into the building.

"Do we push back our education because we need to get 1,500 kids through a metal detector?" she said.

Some of the parents and educators in the room suggested creating uniform requirements for outfitting school buildings with updated alarm and safety systems.

With metal detectors, "are ond half of which was open to we treating kids like prisoners?" asked Tyler Morrison, a sophomore at Santa Fe High School.

"We're keeping the bad guys out," a couple of parents and teachers called back.

"This is not a gun thing," said Jay Horn, the parent of a student who is in the hospital after injuries from the shooting. "Evil's going to happen with anything." He got a loud round of applause.

Horn said Santa Fe ISD school officials should be held accountable for the shooting because they chose not to make use of a Texas law that allows schools to train and arm some of its teachers.

After Wednesday's threehour closed-door discussion with advocates on both sides of the gun debate, Abbott told the press he could support a few gun-related regulations, such as improving background checks and "red flag" warnings, which would allow authorities to take guns away from people deemed to be dangerous.

In a Thursday opinion piece in USA Today, Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton argued that "gun control is a waste of time" and would not have saved Santa Fe High School's victims since the shooter also was armed with bombs.

OES Second Grade participates in Walk Across Texas

BY KAILEY SCOTT

CROCKETT COUNTY EXTENSION OFFICE

If you have visited Ozona Elementary School recently, you may have noticed the map of Texas displayed in the library window.

Second grade students and their families participated in Walk Across Texas, completing a total of 3,277 miles between the four classrooms.

Walk Across Texas is a free, eight-week program designed to help Texans establish the habit of regular physical activity.

Second grade students began the program in March with the goal of "walking" the 830 miles from Orange, Texas to El Paso, Texas by May 16, 2018.

WE DO PRINTING! Business cards, envelopes, multi-part invoices, letterheads, posters, flyers & more!

Rather than literally walking across the state, students earn mile equivalents by engaging in physical activity.

Participants are not limited to walking or running, however.

A mile equivalent is also earned for 30 minutes of any physical activity such a riding a bike, playing basketball, or swimming.

Individual students were encouraged to involve their family by sharing a weekly newsletter with information related to nutrition and safe-

Additional miles could also be earned by submitting bonus logs from home. We are so pleased with the rate of participation from students and family members to help far exceed our original goal.

Thank you to the School Health Advisory Committee as well as second grade teachers: Florence Correa, Peggy Logan, Katie Ross, and Vicki White for their encouragement and involvement.

ments her classmates have achieved, as well as memories throughout the years.

"As each of us takes a step into the next chapter of our lives, there will be life lessons we carry with us and things from our hometown that we will always remember," she said. "These memories have molded us into the bright young men and women we are today."

In her Valedictory address Brenna Lanae Hale thanked her parents, family and community for guiding the Class of 2018.

"Some of the best advice about life was offered to me by my grandparents. One of my favorites is the quote by Maya Angelou, 'People will forget what you said, people will forget what you did, but people will never forget how you made them feel.' I will remember that for my whole life," she said.

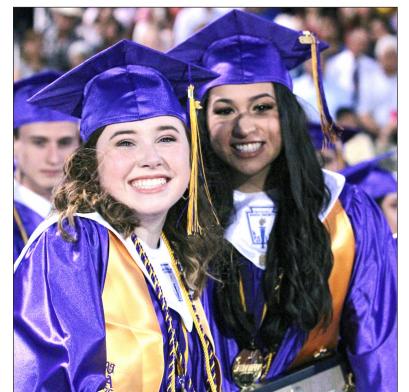

From the first day as freshmen, to their last day as seniors, Hale talked about how her and her classmates have learned many accomplishments including being to state events 16 times and earning seven state medals.

"I hope you take your gifts, whether they be creativity or humor or an incredible work ethic, and find a passion that enriches the lives of the people you love. I hope that you don't stop until you're proud. I hope that even though honesty and kindness will make you vulnerable, that you are honest and kind anyway. I hope that you become the person you needed when you were younger. I hope that when you see something beautiful in someone that you speak it. I hope that you laugh and cry and raise kind children. I hope that you leave a fat dent for the glory of God. I hope and pray that you love Jesus and seek His will. I hope you are never too scared to chase after the dream God has for your life, a dream that will actually satisfy your hearts," she said.

Giving the invocation was Christian Albino Yruegas, and the benediction was given by Kassidy Jay Gonzalez.

Hale was also recognized as the President's Academic Excellence Award winner. Hale, Torralba, Rodriguez and Posadas were also recognized as recipients of the UIL Scholar Award.

DPS warns of dangers of leaving children in vehicles

AUSTIN - The Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) is warning residents that warmer weather places children at greater risk of injury or death if left unattended in a vehicle. Every year children die from heatstroke after being left in a vehicle or entering a vehicle unnoticed. Such negligence could lead to criminal charges. A child should never be left unattended in a vehicle.

'Children are needlessly dying every year because they are left unattended in vehicles," said DPS Director Steven McCraw. "The public can do their part by notifying emergency personnel if they witness a child alone or in distress inside a vehicle - regardless of the weather conditions.'

According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, heatstroke is one of the leading causes of non-crash-related fatalities among children. Temperatures inside a car can rise more than 20 degrees in only 10 minutes; and even with an outside temperature of 60 degrees, the temperature inside a car can reach 110 degrees. Leaving windows partially rolled down does not help. In addition, voung children are particularly at risk since their bodies heat up faster than an adult.

DPS offers the following tips for preventing vehicular heatstroke deaths and inju-· Never leave your child unattended in the vehicle.

· Call 9-1-1 if you see a child alone in a car, and emergency personnel will provide guidance.

· Teach children not to play in vehicles, and make sure to place the keys out of reach when not being used.

· Always check the back seats or cargo areas of your vehicle before walking away. · Establish reminders that help ensure you remove children from the vehicle. For example: leave your bag, lunch or cell phone in the back seat with the child's car seat.

· If a child goes missing, open the doors and trunks to every vehicle in the area. Many heatstroke deaths occur when a child accesses a parked car unnoticed.

Please click here for additional information on preventing child heatstroke in cars. (The Texas Department of Family and Protective Services also provides related information.)

Additionally, animals are also susceptible to heat-related injury or death - don't put your pets in these lifethreatening conditions.

on these issues. Working together, we can ensure a safe learning environment for students and safer communities for all Texans," Abbott said before the hearings.

In other news, on May 20, Abbott issued a statewide call for Texans to take part in a moment of silence at 10 a.m. on May 21 to honor the memory of the victims of the Santa Fe shooting.

PLAIN LANGUAGE IS GOAL

Texas Insurance Commissioner Kent Sullivan on May 23 partment of Insurance is redesigning its website to help customers solve problems.

Sullivan, who refers to himself as a "plain language champion" admits it's unlikely that the agency can get rid of terms like "contingent nonforfeiture benefit" overnight, but progress is being made.

The agency is calling for volunteers to help make sure consumer information is easy to understand.

Sullivan said he issued guidance to long-term care insurers about writing rate notices in plain language and that letters and forms are being rewritten with an eye toward shorter words and formats that are easier to read.

Sullivan said the goal is to use plain language in everything the agency does — on the website, in writing and on the phone.

"It's not enough to be technically accurate if no one understands your message. It's win-win when consumers understand insurance and how it works," he said. "We invite you to hold us accountable. Insurance can be complex. That makes it even more important to keep the language simple."

ZIKA CASES ARE REPORTED

The Texas Department of State Health Services on May 22 said the agency has received reports of the first Texas Zika cases of 2018.

The two reported cases are travel-related, involving residents of Williamson County who got sick while abroad.

Some 55 cases of Zika were reported in calendar year 2017. More data for previous years is available at TexasZika.org.

The health department is urging people to protect themselves from mosquito bites this spring as they travel, particularly to warmer climates where Zika is more prevalent, namely Central America, South America and the Caribbean.
