SHOWERS HELP CROP OUTLOOK

Half Inch Here; Much Heavier Over Large Portions Of Lynn County

Refreshing showers fell over Lynn county Monday afternoon that were very beneficial to crops in many localities. The rainfall in Tahoka amounted to .45 of an inch.

A few miles west of town, and in portions of the Dixie, New Home, Petty and other communities in the west and north portions of the county, the rainfall was much heavier. An inch to one and a half inches are reported in some places. In the Magnolia community east of Tahoka the precipitation was likewise much heavier than here, some farmers reporting more than an inch. Many other communities received as much as a half inch, but in the major portion of the south-half of the county the precipitation was very light, possibly not more than a quarter inch.

Had did some damage to crops in the New Home and Petty communities.

Cotton as a rule did not need rain but some of the feed was beginning to suffer. While the rain in large portions of the county was not sufficient to be of very much benefit yet in large areas it practically assures good feed crops.

Most farmers have gotten their crops cleaned out and much of the cotton is very promising. Some of it, however, is so late on account of destructive rains and was so stunted by the weeds that sprang up during the wet weather, that only a small yield can be expected.

Seth Ward College Exes Will Meet

Our genial county commissioner, Waldo McLaurin of O'Donnell, is soon to have the chance of a life time to make a reputation as a public speaker and debater.

As a member of the now defunct Alamo Society of the former Seth Ward College of Plainview, Mr. McLaurin will represent that society in a debate with a team from the Philo Society at a reunion of students of Seth Ward College to be held in Plainview on August 27. His team-mate will be Lamar Forrest of Lamesa, who is also well known in Tahoka, while the opposing team will be composed of Lee Rushing of Floydada and Horace Edmondson of Tulla.

This will be the fourth annual reunion of the students of Seth Ward. The affair will be held at the Hilton Hotel in Plainview. There will be a big banquet and other numbers on the program.

Cotton Acreage To Be Measured

The measurement of cotton acres in Lynn county will start next Monday, July 22nd, according to V. F. Jones, County Agent.

Mr. Jones states that there will be at least one supervisor in each community of the county, and it is expected that the work will be completed about the middle of August. The farm operator is expected to be at home when the supervisor visits the farm to assist him in the measurement and to answer a few questions relative to the farm operations for 1935.

The farm operator is expected to stake off and have the rent acres designated before the supervisor arrives. In those cases where the cotton field is irregular in shape the farmer will greatly assist the supervisor if he will draw a rough sketch of the cotton fields and give that to the supervisor when he arrives.

EVIDENTLY!

Harley Wells is in the chicken business on a small scale. Recently he wrote a big poultry concern back east as follows:

Gentlemen: Every morning when I go out to my poultry yard I find a few of my chickens lying with their necks stretched out and their feet in the air, stiff. Please tell me the trouble.

In a few days the following answer came back:

Dear Mr. Wells: Your chickens are dead.

New School Head Arrives In City

W. G. Barrett, the new superintendent of schools here, arrived Monday and is on the job making preparations for the approaching school term.

Thus far he has been unable, however, to procure a residence, and his family is visiting in Waco until he can procure one.

Mr. Barrett was superintendent of the city schools at Comanche for eleven years and the people there send some very strong recommendations of him and his work. The teachers and patrons here are looking forward to a most successful school year.

Farm Lighting System Installed

G. A. Edwards and son Loyd Edwards, who reside in residences on the same premises in the Midway community, have improvised an ingenious and inexpensive electric lighting system for their homes.

From old lumber they built a low tower, constructed and mounted upon it a windmill, procured an old generator and a couple of storage batteries, connected the whole business up, strung wires from the batteries to their residences and attached lamps in the various rooms. The windmill furnishes the power for generating the electricity, and the whole business operates as smoothly as clock works.

The windmill has only four wings or fans, made of light lumber, and parts of a Ford axle, an old cultivator wheel, and other such cast-away material were used in the construction and mounting of the mill. The whole outfit must have cost only a few dollars and the cost of operation is practically negligible. In this case, frugality and a little ingenuity, rather than necessity, proved to be the mother of invention.

Court Returns From Capital

County Judge W. E. Smith and Commissioners G. W. Small, Jim Izard, and Waldo McLaurin returned Wednesday from Austin, where they had gone to interview the state highway commission respecting highway No. 84 and also lateral road work in this county.

So many delegations were there and the amount of funds that will be available yet seems to be so uncertain that Judge Smith was unable to get very definite information. However, it is believed that road building on a larger scale than ever before will soon be under way in Texas.

Outlaw Released From Federal Jail

Post, July 16.—N. C. Outlaw, the young Post attorney found guilty of conspiracy to impede justice by a federal court in Dallas last March, returned to his home Tuesday from a federal prison farm at Tucson, Ariz., after his lawyers had perfected a $10,000 appeal bond.

Outlaw was serving a 15-month sentence, imposed with a $2,500 fine. The sentence was passed by Federal Judge Atwell after Outlaw was convicted of encouraging witnesses to offer false testimony in the grand jury's investigation of the slaying of Spencer Stafford, federal narcotic agent, at Post last Feb. 7. Sheriff W. F. Cato, accused of the slaying, was acquitted.

At the time of sentence, Judge Atwell set a $2,500 supersedeas bond but Outlaw went directly to the Southwestern Reformatory at El Reno, Okla., to begin serving sentence. Walter B. Scott, one of his attorneys, succeeded in having this bond set aside by the Circuit Court of Appeals at New Orleans. Scott came here last week and arranged signatories on the appearance bond. Outlaw's appeal will be argued before the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals in Fort Worth in November.

New City Water Well Is Drilled

The city has just had a new water well drilled on the Park farm about three quarters of a mile north of the city water plant. It is believed this will prove to be the strongest well the city has.

Crickett Baldrige's Husband Is Dead

Ira H. Shankle, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Baldrige, former pioneer residents of Tahoka, died last Thursday at Laguna Beach, California, after an illness of only a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Baldrige of Lamesa, their son H. E. Jr., and Mr. Shankle of Abilene, father of deceased, reached the young man's bedside before his death.

The remains were buried Sunday at Abilene, the home of his parents. Mr. Shankle and his wife, the former Miss Crickett Baldrige, were graduates of Abilene Christian College. At Long Beach Mr. Shankle was business manager of the Long Beach Daily newspaper and had been president of the Lions Club the past two years. Mr. Shankle was not well known here but Mrs. Shankle was practically reared here.

Mrs. W. L. Burleson left Friday to spend a month visiting Mrs. Frank Larkin at Elizabethton, Tennessee.

Mrs. W. M. Harris and niece and nephew spent Monday in Amarillo.

Fourteen women and four girls of Lynn county are planning to attend the Short Course to be given at the A. & M. College soon. It is possible that sixteen women will attend, making a group of twenty from this county, Miss Sylvia Robb, home demonstration agent, will also attend.

Every women's club in the county except one will be represented, Miss Robb states.

The party will leave Saturday of next week by chartered bus and will return about August 4. Miss Robb, however, plans to go in her car and will come back by Austin.

They will return to Tahoka Thursday night or Friday.

New Born Infant Of Spears' Dies

Monty Gall, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Spears, of New Lynn, who was born in the Slaton Hospital at 9:15 Wednesday morning, July 10, died at 9:45 that night, having spent just one short day with his parents.

Funeral services were conducted at New Lynn Thursday afternoon and burial was in the Tahoka Cemetery.

Many friends deeply sympathize with the parents in their deep disappointment and grief.

Mrs. H. M. Snowden and children, Julia, and Rudolph, accompanied by Mrs. Snowden's brother, Ernest Cowan of Plains, Yoakum county, left Wednesday afternoon for San Marcos, to which place they were called by the serious illness of Mrs. Snowden's father, who is said to be suffering from cancer of the liver. It was feared that he could not live but a short time.

New Oil Test Drilling Rapidly

Rapid progress is being made on the test oil well being drilled 134 feet from the original hole which was lost by caving before its completion on the Cass O. Edwards T-Bar ranch ten miles southwest of Tahoka. Wednesday night a depth of 2700 feet had been reached.

The log of the new well is practically the same as that of the first well, necessarily so, according to Mr. Link, one of the drillers. The drill is now in anhydrite with some shale and lime.

The contract calls for a depth of at least 5,000 feet if necessary to go that deep for pay oil.

Visitors Here For Townes Funeral

Among the out-of-town people here at the funeral services of Dr. C. B. Townes last Thursday were J. M. Townes, a brother, his wife and two children of Fort Worth, V. A. Townes, another brother, and his wife of Greenville, R. T. Bucy, brother of Fred Bucy, and his wife of Midland, and Mrs. Bob Gatewood, sister of Mrs. Townes, of Cleburne. There were also many people here from Lubbock and other near-by towns, and the crowd was so large that not all the people were able to get into the spacious Methodist Church, where the funeral services were held.

Arriving too late for the services were a sister of Dr. Townes, Mrs. W. M. Withers of Fort Worth, and her husband, and Mrs. Wardie Bucy, mother of Fred Bucy, and her grandson, also of Fort Worth.

Mrs. Bucy expects to remain here several weeks as a guest in the Fred Bucy home.

Relief Clients Must Register

Austin, July 17.—Relief roll clients in order to receive benefits of work under the Works Progress Administration must be certified as to eligibility for work and be registered with the U. S. Employment Service, according to instructions received by Texas Relief Commission officials from the Federal Emergency Relief Administration in Washington this week. The social service department of the Texas Relief Commission will handle certification of employables to the Works Progress Administration.

The instructions pointed out that priority of workers within families shall be suggested by the social service department, based upon such considerations as health, disabilities, preservation of skills, and morale.

Earl Grider Victim Of Painful Accident

Earl Grider is going around this week with one eye all tied up. Saturday he ran into a clothes line, and when he came in contact with it he found that it was made of barbed wire. One of the bars ripped a gash across one eye and came very near inflicting a serious injury. Four stitches were required to close the wound.

Earl says that he is going to be careful about the next clothes line he fools with.

BOB CHAMBERS IMPROVING

A telegram received by Wiley Curry from Judge J. W. Elliott Tuesday stated that Bob Chambers was decidedly better. He was able to talk some and seemed to be conscious of his condition.

He was said to be suffering from blood clots on the brain.

RECORD CROWD AT LUNCH CLUB

Fifty-Three Present For "Knockout" Program; Discuss Road To Wilson

With a rather hilarious and very entertaining program, with Truett Smith in charge, the luncheon club had about the largest attendance Tuesday it has ever had since its organization. There were fifty-three men and women present, a number of whom were out-of-town guests, however.

There were delegations here from Slaton and Wilson in the interest of the construction of a real highway from Tahoka, through Wilson and Slaton, to a connection with highway No. 24 at Ralls. The Slaton delegation consisted of J. H. Brewer, president of the Slaton Chamber of Commerce, A. J. Payne, the secretary, J. T. Pinkston, county commissioner of Lubbock county, and K. L. Scudder. The Wilson delegation consisted of H. G. Cook, Pat Swann, W. E. Galloway, and Mr. Hill.

Wade W. Cooper, secretary-treasurer and general manager of the Lubbock Production Credit Association, was also a guest of the club.

Brief talks were made by Messrs. Payne, Brewer and Pinkston of Slaton and W. E. Galloway of Wilson. Mr. Pinkston assured the Tahoka people that Lubbock county would meet Lynn county at the line with a good road, such as would be acceptable by the state highway commission, as soon as Lynn county gets ready to build such a road.

Mr. Nelson, who spoke for the highway committee of the luncheon club, the other members being out of town, stated that Judge W. E. Smith, who is chairman of this committee, and members of the commission court are planning a big road improvement campaign in this county and that the building of the Tahoka-Wilson-Slaton road is one of their projects.

All the speakers voiced the opinion that now is the time to make a vigorous effort to get this road built.

The program of entertainment that preceded these discussions was unique. Imitations of the movie stars, Joe Penner, Mae West, Betty Boop, and ZaSu Pitts were given by Fanchon Howell of Longview, who is visiting here, and Myrna Dean Gaignat, with Miss Marjorie Wells at the piano. These imitations were very clever.

Jake Leedy in the guise of a colored preacher, Rev. George A. Dale by name, delivered a sermon that repeatedly brought down the house, though it probably did not create much religious fervor. A number of the members of the club were made victims of the parson's shafts of wit and ridicule, to the great amusement of the "congregation".

The negro spirituals, "Standin' in the Need o' Prayer" and "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" were rendered by a quartet composed of Kary Mathis, G. H. Nelson, Fred Bucy, and Bill Sewell.

The dinner was served by the Tahoka Home Demonstration Club, and it was greatly enjoyed by the diners.

CURRENT EVENTS PASS IN REVIEW

MUSSOLINI CALLS WAR WITH ETHIOPIA UNAVOIDABLE—'REVOLT' IN HOUSE.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

STANDING atop a cannon, Benito Mussolini told 15,000 Black Shirt volunteers and the world as well that in the matter of Ethiopia "We have decided upon a struggle in which we as a government and a people will not turn back. The decision is irrevocable."

W. P. George

Unless Emperor Haile Selassie gets right down on his knees to Il Duce, the war in his dominion will begin in September when the rainy season ends. No one expects the "king of kings" to submit tamely, so other nations are advising their nationals in Ethiopia to get out of the country. William Perry George, the American charge d'affaires at Addis Ababa, was authorized by the State department to advise American citizens to leave, or take whatever other steps he deemed necessary to protect their safety. Nearly all these Americans are connected with Seventh Day Adventist and United Presbyterian missions.

The chances that war might be averted by the arbitrators seemed slight. Those gentlemen met again at Scheveningen and their session was disrupted when a spokesman for Ethiopia set forth the fact that Italian, some of the bloody clash last December, is well within the Ethiopian border. Apparently the British have given up trying to check Mussolini and are now devoting their efforts to plans for getting British and British Indian subjects out of Addis Ababa on short notice. Troop-carrying planes at Cairo and cruisers, sloops and troop ships at various near east ports were being made ready for this service. France evidently intends to let Italy go ahead with the Ethiopian adventure, and, like the United States, is not inclined to participate in an economic blockade of Italy such as was unofficially suggested by England.

REVOLT in congress against alleged dictatorial attempts of the administration reached a climax when the house by the decisive vote of 253 to 148, rejected the "death sentence" in the utility holding companies bill as passed by the senate and demanded by the President. The record vote came on a motion to substitute the house bill placing utility holding companies under regulation of the securities and exchange commission for the senate bill which prescribed the dissolution of the holding companies of more than first degree beginning in 1940.

Rep. Brewster

The adoption of this motion killed the "death sentence." After substituting the house bill for the senate bill, the perfected measure was passed by a vote of 322 to 51. Immediately after this action, the house voted unanimously for an investigation of alleged lobbying by both the supporters and the foes of the utility measure. During the debate on the bill it was frequently charged that the capital was swarming with utility company lobbyists, and then came two serious accusations against the other side. Representative John H. Hoeppel of California, Democrat, asserted an unnamed administration lobbyist had offered to get California's relief allotment increased if Hoeppel would vote for the bill as the President wanted it. "This didn't greatly impress the house, but later Representative Ralph O. Brewster of Maine, Republican, charged that Thomas G. Coocoran, a young brain trustster who is co-author of the administration bill, had threatened cessation of construction of the $37,000,000 Passamaquoddy dam project in the congressman's district if Brewster should vote against the "death sentence."

Mr. Brewster said he did not believe the President was aware that such tactics were being used by his aide or would countenance them, and Rankin of Mississippi and Moran of Maine defended Mr. Roosevelt. But the President's contact man, Charles West, and Postmaster General Farley's lobbyist, Emil Harjo, had been so active among the house members that the resentment of the lawmakers was aroused and they gladly directed that the lobbying charges be investigated.

CRITICS of the President's program have made up their minds that he is deliberately building up a "reserve" which will provide excuse for a demand for constitutional amendments in the campaign of 1936. Their conviction was strengthened by Mr. Roosevelt's letter to Congressman Samuel R. Hill, chairman of the interstate commerce subcommittee, arguing the passage of the Guffey coal bill regardless of doubts as to its constitutionality.

President Roosevelt followed the suggestion of Attorney General Cummings that the legislation should be put through congress because "the situation is so urgent," and that the question of constitutionality should be left up to the courts. The President, admitting that coal mining is in itself an intricate transaction, nevertheless wrote that the final test of the validity of the Guffey bill would depend upon whether production conditions directly affect, promote, or obstruct interstate commerce. The Supreme court, in the Schechter NRA case, quoted a previous opinion that mining, manufacturing, and other forms of production were as local in their character as the production of crops, and hence beyond the reach of congress.

THE secretary of the treasury appeared before the house ways and means committee which was trying to formulate the new tax bill wanted by the administration, and declared that, depending on the rates of taxation adopted, the measure might bring in as much as $1,000,000,000 a year, or as little as $118,000,000 annually. As the representative of the administration, the young secretary declined to advise as to the rates, though the Republican members of the committee tried to pin him down to details. The legislation outlined by the President includes taxation of inheritances and gifts, higher surtaxes on million dollar incomes and graduated income taxes on corporations. It is believed the committee's bill will not go outside these limits. Senator Charles L. McNary of Oregon, Republican leader, predicted that congress either would recess and reconvene in the fall or would put off enactment of the tax bill until the session beginning January 3 next.

IN THE battle between Senator Carter Glass and Marriner S. Eccles, governor of the federal reserve board, the former has, at this writing, scored the most points. The astute Virginian extracted from the Eccles-Curtis banking bill most of the radical provisions that would have led to government or public ownership of the federal reserve system, and, indeed, practically rewrote the measure. Then his subcommittee handed it on to the senate banking and currency committee, which promptly gave the bill its approval, without a record vote, and after making only two minor changes. Governor Eccles and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau expected to be called before the committee and were prepared to tell why the bill would not suit the administration, but the committee didn't give them a chance.

As passed by the house, the banking bill would give automatic powers over the banking system to a politically dominated federal reserve board, and the party in power would have the authority to force the twelve reserve banks to lend unlimited amounts to the national treasury. Under the bill as rewritten by Glass, reserve board members are to be appointed for 14-year terms and are to be discharged only for cause; chief officers of the reserve banks are to be chosen by their directors, subject to reserve board approval, for five-year periods, and the reserve banks need not buy government bonds unless they choose to do so.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, was the scene of a second "grass roots" convention of Republicans, the six states participating being Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee. "To revitalize interest in the party" was declared the purpose of the meeting by George H. Bender of Ohio, permanent chairman. The attendance was large and enthusiastic and the resolutions adopted, like those of the Springfield conference, denounced the New Deal and called the voters to the defense of the country's Constitution and free institutions.

Under the surface there was a good deal of irritation, for the old timers in the party organization feared to lose their influence, perhaps with reason. HUEY LONG'S conquest of Louisiana was completed when the legislative gave final approval to 25 bills designed to destroy local political patronage in the state and otherwise to strengthen the senator's dominance. He now has in hand all the weapons he needs for the elimination of Mayor T. Semmes Wainwright of New Orleans and his followers.

OUR army lost an able and distinguished officer in the death of Maj. Gen. Stuart Heintzelman at the army and navy hospital in Hot Springs, Ark. The grandson and son of army officers, General Heintzelman was graduated from West Point in 1899. After service in the Philippines and China he was sent to France as an observer, and when America entered the war he held high staff assignments. He won the D. S. M. and was decorated by France and Italy. From the inception of the CCC General Heintzelman was in charge of federal reclamation projects in Missouri until last February, when he was given command of the Seventh corps area.

AN AMERICAN COMMONWEALTH "POLITICAL FEDERATION" is the high sounding title taken by the representatives of various radical organizations for the body which they organized at a conference in Chicago. The majority faction in the meeting issued a call for a national convention and until this is done the "A.C.P.F." will function. Its officers are: Congressman Thomas R. Amble of Wisconsin, chairman; John Bosch, Atwater, Minn., of the Farm Holiday association, vice chairman; Alfred Bingham of New York, son of former United States Senator Hiram Bingham, Connecticut Republican, executive secretary; and Prof. Paul H. Douglas, treasurer.

Production for use was the principal plank in the conference platform. Other planks declared for union wages for persons employed on relief projects and other labor objectives, for a "soak the rich" tax program, and against war. The call for creation of a third party was opposed by Congressman Vito Marcantonio of New York city, and he withdrew from the conference together with several of his fellow townsmen. Communists were barred from the meeting, and this, too, caused loud protest. Senator Nye of North Dakota unexpectedly appeared and advised against formation of a new party for the 1936 campaign.

INVESTIGATION of the administration of the Virgin Islands by a senate committee was certain to be lively. The very first witness heard, Charles H. Gibson, was threatened with jail by Secretary of the Interior Ickes for removing official documents from the files. Mr. Gibson, who was government attorney for the islands until Ickes ousted him, had testified rather vaguely against the regime of Gov. Paul M. Pearson. Gibson testified that Governor Pearson had exceeded his authority under the law, was unpopular with a large section of the population of the islands, and was not frank in his administration. To support his testimony Gibson introduced several letters which were the documents to which Ickes alluded.

GEORGE, former king of Greece, returns to his lost throne it will be without Elizabeth of Hohenzollern who was his wife. This Rumanian princess has just been granted a divorce from George in Bucharest on the ground of desertion. There was no contest, for George, now living in London, said in attention to the suit. It was believed in Bucharest that Elizabeth will soon marry her secretary, Alexander Sarnary, a handsome forty-year-old Greek, and that they will run a model farm which Elizabeth bought recently for $2,500,000.

ALDERMANIC investigation of re-tilt administration in New York city has brought a report from the committee recommending that relief workers be paid less than the wages in private industry, that "chiselers and parasites" receiving $24,000,000 a year of relief funds be prosecuted, and that "existence perpetrating" by out of town relief executives be halted. The typical weekly allowance to a single person to meet every need was reported as $7.30 a week, ranging upward for families to $19.50 for a family of nine. The number of persons on relief was reported as 1,400,000.

AGITATION in favor of a federal sales-tax and for abolition of the "nuisance" taxes is the purpose of an organization called the Committee of Americans which is being formed by Charles E. Sabia, Jr., one of the organizers of the Crusaders. Mr. Sabia says the committee hopes to present to the President and congress a petition bearing a million names. He admits some of the wealthiest families in the country are represented on the committee but denies that it is to be organized as a "wealth lobby" against the "tax wealth" program of the President.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER reached his ninety-sixth birthday and spent the day quietly on his estate near Lakewood, N. J., with his nearest relatives. There was no celebration of the anniversary, not even a birthday cake. According to his physician, Mr. Rockefeller is in better health than he has been for the past three years.

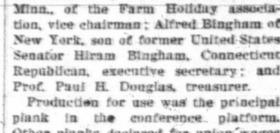

GEN. HUGH JOHNSON assumed his new office of federal works relief administrator for New York city, "Bobbie," his ever present secretary, fended off the reporters for a day, but let them in then, and to them the general walked: "I hate this thing! It isn't helping anybody, anywhere. When the source of money is cut off we'll be right back where we started. It's dishonouring to sit here, knowing that when the funds are gone, the jobs will be gone."

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WALLACE proclaimed the establishment of an AAA adjustment program for the 1935 rye crop which will include benefit payments of amounts not yet disclosed. Representatives from 15 rye growing states met in Washington to discuss the program and outline plans for its operation. Farmers from the principal wheat producing states met with AAA officials and gave their approval to a tentative flexible plan for the payment of benefits to wheat growers.

JAPAN'S beautiful island sea was the scene of a terrible disaster that cost 104 lives. The steamer Midori, packed with holiday passengers, collided with a freighter in the foggy night and sank almost immediately. Rescue boats picked up 91 of the 106 passengers and 56 of the crew. All the victims were Japanese.

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

Big War or Little? LaGuardia's G-Men She Took It Seriously Pretty Bluebirds War is not coming; it is here. It may or may not be a war "setting the world on fire." Italy had an unpleasant experience in Abyssinia in the last century and wishes to repeat that. It also wishes to keep Japan from gathering in Abyssinia's trade and controlling Abyssinia. Britain can understand how Italy feels, since Britain found it really necessary to gather in the Transvaal and other vast areas throughout the world.

Arthur Brisbane

Italy used to send 500,000 immigrants a year to the United States. Now they are shut out. They must go somewhere. They would considerably improve Abyssinia if they went there. Mayors of other cities will watch New York's Mayor LaGuardia fighting racketeering and crime in general. Besides training his own police force to shoot straight and "to kill," Mayor LaGuardia will get some government "G-men," if possible, from Washington, to come and set the example. If Mayor LaGuardia, who has an honest and energetic police commissioner, cleans up crime in New York, he will deserve a statue next to that of Hercules, who cleaned the Augean stables, and a bigger statue.

Women, before and since Heloise, have taken heart affairs more seriously than men. Margaret Jordan, an Irish girl, lonely, fell in love with a Mount Vernon, N. Y., policeman, because he came from her home town. He was married, with eight children, and after he had seen the girl for two years he decided that he must reform and see her no more. He told her about this pious resolution as he sat in his police car, and did not notice that she took his service revolver from the pocket of the car. He learned what had happened next day when told that the girl had killed herself with his revolver. It was embarrassing for a married policeman with eight children.

At Fort George Wright, tiny bluebirds built their nest in the mouth of a big cannon, and mother bluebird laid four pretty blue eggs. Our kind-hearted heroes at the fort are protecting the nest. Sentries do not come too near, cats are discouraged and the orders of the day Maj. George S. Clark added these kind words, "and keep an eye on those birds."

In American churches Sunday, August 18, will be a day of prayer for peace in Africa and safety for little Ethiopia, which confronts war with powerful Italy. That is the right United States interference in foreign affairs. The prayers will reach their destination, and the Supreme Being to whom they are addressed knows what is best, and has power to arrange matters in Ethiopia as he chooses. To send a million young American men, and several thousand million American dollars, to meddle in hot Africa would be wrong. The country will welcome President Roosevelt's statement that the "four thousand million dollar works relief fund" will actually be invested in such a way as to increase the nation's capital assets. Many times four thousand million dollars could be spent advantageously, if it were really invested in wise, permanent improvements.

A financial letter from London remarks, casually, "Credit was plentiful at one-half of one per cent interest." Americans, that cannot borrow anything, on securities once considered good, wonder how the British manage. The American government borrows at three and a half per cent, seven times the current English interest rate, money manufactured by itself, and thus adds one hundred per cent to taxes for interest that need not be paid at all. Queer finance, dearly beloved.

St. Louis reformers say women should not sit on high stools with their feet on a rail and drink at the bar. And reformers rejoice to hear the saloonkeepers say: "Amen." Reformers and saloonkeepers are right. The saloon was bad enough before women moved in to make it worse, hitching up their dresses, climbing high stools, readjusting their dresses, or not readjusting them, calling for fresh drinks to show how foolish they could be.

WASHINGTON DIGEST

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—Back in 1916 before the United States became involved in the World War our government had a national debt which was regarded as large at that time. It was only $1,200,000,000, but that was sufficient in those days to cause concern. On the first of July, 1935, the treasury started a new set of books. This represented the beginning of a new financial year for the government. One of the items it had to enter on those books was a public debt of about $28,800,000,000. We of today think that is a huge debt and when it is compared with the outstanding obligations of the federal government a score of years ago its magnitude seems titanic.

When the treasury closed the fiscal year books on June 30 and counted the cost of the preceding 12 months of government it was found that there had been expended roughly $7,300,000,000. In the same period it had collected through income and other forms of taxes, including duties laid at the customs-houses, a total of approximately $3,800,000,000. This means that in the last 12 months the government operated with a deficit of something over $3,500,000,000. In other words, its operating costs were virtually double the amount of revenue it received. This deficit together with the deficit that was created during the earlier months of the Roosevelt administration added something like $8,000,000,000 to the national debt. President Hoover while in office added about $4,000,000,000 to the national debt through deficits in the last two years of his administration. So there are two outstanding phases in the financial affairs of the federal government as it starts the fiscal year of 1936, which began July 1.

There is bred these questions: How long can the federal government continue to spend money like water and thus increase its public debt, and how long will the American people continue to permit expenditures by their government in excess of the revenues it collects? They are related questions. Neither can happen without the other. But it seems to me that the time has come for taxpayers and voters generally to take note of the condition of the government's finances.

Mr. Roosevelt justifies these heavy outlays under the necessities of an emergency. He contends that when prosperity returns and business is normal, citizens will pay their taxes without complaint and that these taxes will be sufficiently large in their total production to whittle down the gigantic outstanding debt. Hence there is at this moment an urgent need for examination of the whole tax structure. This is necessary to maintain the credit of the United States. If people doubt or lose faith in government bonds, the credit of the government can be said to be impaired. No nation of self-respecting people desires that thing to happen. It has long been a recognized truism that if a United States government bond was not worth its face value, the money we have and the rights we exercise as citizens likewise become impaired in value and benefit.

Careful analysis of government finances in the last 12 months shows that federal revenues were sufficient to cover what Mr. Roosevelt characterizes as ordinary government costs. He means by that the expenses of the regular establishments of government and excludes all of the so-called emergency agencies, of which there are now some sixty odd. This condition reveals that federal taxes are about the only item in governmental affairs or in private business that have completely recovered from depression effects. Recovery has been sufficient to make the total revenues virtually the same as those received under the Hoover administration in the fiscal year of 1929-1930. It shows also that Mr. Roosevelt has not reduced the cost of ordinary running expenses of the government as he had planned when he became President.

I mentioned earlier a comparison of the public debt now and in 1916. Let us take another date, namely, 1919. At that time the outstanding debt was $26,294,000,000. The annual interest charges on that debt was just short of one billion dollars. Today with a much larger outstanding debt, the annual interest charge amounts to only $820,000,000 per year.

This seems almost paradoxical but the answer lies in the interest rate the government is paying. In 1921 the average rate of interest calculated on all different types of government securities outstanding was 4.34 per cent. At the present time it is less than 3 per cent. So credit must be accorded the treasury for its gradual reduction in interest rates. Ten years ago an effort was made to market securities at gradually lower interest rates. It did not succeed fully because private business was demanding capital and private business was paying higher interest rates. In the last five or six years private business has called for very little money. Government securities and the law of supply and demand operated to allow the treasury to sell its bonds and notes at much reduced interest. On the one hand, therefore, the Roosevelt administration has run up the public debt by about $8,000,000,000 but has succeeded in actually reducing the carrying charge of this great debt structure by more than $100,000,000 per year. That is the situation as of today. Restoration of business activity and the resultant demand for capital may change the market for treasury bonds almost overnight but the prospects for such business activity are not immediate.

One of the interesting things that often occurs in government affairs is the explosive effect of a single incident or a single remark by an important official. It is a characteristic of changing conditions and it is a circumstance which causes Washington observers to be on their toes continuously because they never can tell when such an incident will occur. Thus it was the other day that Representative Brewster, Republican of Maine, a former governor of that state, arose in his place in the house of representatives and charged that the Roosevelt administration was threatening individual members of the house who declined to support the administration view on a particular piece of legislation. Mr. Brewster named one Thomas Corycoran as the administration emissary and bearer of the threats. He told of details of the circumstances and informed the house that the legislation which the administration demanded he should support was the so-called "death sentence" provision in the bill to eliminate utility holding companies. Suffice it to say that Mr. Brewster did not yield.

The point of this incident, however, is that immediately there came from many quarters in the house a demand for an investigation of lobbying activities. There had been many charges therefore that the public utility corporations were over-running the house with lobbyists in their effort to defeat the "death sentence" section. The real reason back of this sudden outburst, however, lies in dissatisfaction among many members of congress with tactics employed by the Roosevelt administration. They have taken orders constantly since March 4, 1933, but apparently they are no longer going to obey.

So the investigation of lobbying is to be started by a house committee and it will be broader than just the public utility lobbyist. If the undercurrent of information proves to be correct, administration representatives who have frequented the house chambers during consideration of the holding company bill will be placed on the witness stand to tell their story.

In the meantime and maybe as a result of the excitement over the Brewster charge, Senator Black, an Alabama Democrat, started "look into lobbying" fireworks in the senate. He is prepared to create investigating machinery in that end of the Capitol to determine what influence the utility lobbyists have exerted. That investigation also will go beyond the utility lobbyist phase. It is scheduled to dig up dirt on lobbyists for other legislation. Thus far there has been little mention of administration activities around the senate.

But, as in the case of the house investigation, it appears now that the senate investigation has a double purpose. It will be recalled that Senator Black fostered a bill requiring all lobbyists in Washington to register at the Capitol, to show their connection, to show what salaries or other compensation they receive and to make public certain types of correspondence passing between them and the people whom they represent. The gist is that the senator's bill, although it passed the senate without difficulty, will have hard sledding in the house. Senator Black appears to be proceeding on the theory that the investigation will create additional atmosphere and public demand for passage of the lobbyist registration measure.

Actually, I believe that the investigation will do no more than rattle reputations of some few people. Such an inquiry will not stop lobbying. It will not even curb or reduce lobbying. As long as individuals have property the value of which may be affected one way or the other by federal legislation, just so long will individuals seek to influence their representatives and senators in congress. It seems to me to be a perfectly natural and normal thing, and without defending the silly type of lobbying and the raw or crowd-deal that may come from lobbying, the voters have a right to express their views to their representatives.

The irony of the present situation is that undoubtedly there will be no reference in either investigation to the tremendous activity carried on by the American Federation of Labor lobbyists or the lobbyists for the American Legion or the lobbyists for certain groups such as the pacifists or the radical supporters of Russian types of government. Nor is it likely that the correct picture of administration pressure upon the last two sessions of congress will be disclosed.

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby, "Penelope," in an effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in the divorce court. Ten-year-old Penelope is given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin. At a baseball game a ball strikes Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Gatlin spirits the child to Europe. Gatlin will Penelope all his money, and is about to begin a search for her when a motor accident ends his life. Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, rising young psychiatrist, is presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" is in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a criminal and obtains Burt's testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is also won over. Nance's criminal record outweighs Doctor Burt's explanation of her case and she is sent to San Quentin penitentiary. Lanny visits her and Nance persuades her to smuggle out a letter which is a confederate of Nance's stela. Nance escapes, although shot, and goes to Lanny's apartment. Lanny tells Chief McNamara, who orders her to bring Nance to his apartment. Details of Nance's escape are made public.

"Yeah! A throaty growl. 'Got to Doc. Got to protect society. Stephen looked puzzled, so the chief continued. 'If I let that girl graduate from San Quentin, she'll come out with a broader knowledge of crime and trickery and a greater contempt for society than when she went in. The only kind of criminal I fear is the smart one; I can always catch the boobos promptly, but sometimes it takes a long time to get acquainted with the artistic genius of a real craftsman. They're like writers, Doc. They have a style all their own and you've got to learn their style. And about the time you think you've learned it, you pick up some bird that's gally and he isn't the man you thought he was. He's just stolen his master's stuff. Nance Belden is too brilliant to turn loose on the world, Doc. She's a leader—a leader of men. She'd make the balls, and her crew would fire them and always be covered up.' He ruffled his pompadour. 'Well, Doc, I've gotten her away from her gang. She's lost them and they've lost her. And they must never get her back.' 'Would you like to know who they are?' 'Of course. I'm normally curious.' 'I can find out for you,' said Stephen. 'How?' Dan McNamara looked doubtful. 'Nance will tell me.' 'You're crazy, Doc. You don't know the code. There is honor in their dishonor, and in their weakness there is a strength that amazes me.' 'She wouldn't do it voluntarily, of course, but just now, in her weakened state, I'm sure I could hypnotize her. Get her to look fixedly into a mirror, you know, like this. Once I secure control of her subconscious mind, she'll answer my questions. And after I wake her up she'll have complete amnesia for the experience; she will never know she peached on her pals.

CHAPTER V

The chief smiled. 'Of course I know that hypnotism is being used by advanced psychiatrists and particularly by Merton Prince and William McDougall. I've read their books. The modern chief of police isn't modern, Doc, if he isn't a pretty good lay psychologist and psychiatrist. I don't know what a criminologist is, but I suppose he's a bird that studies the criminal actions and tendencies of criminals and tries to reduce crime to its lowest common divisor. That's the bunk. The thing to do is to know their minds and why they act like they do; if you can cure what makes them go, criminology becomes a dead science.

'Yes, I know all about hypnotism and I know something you've forgotten. Your power of suggestion on a patient in the hypnotic state isn't powerful enough to make him steal or commit murder if he's an honest man. He acquired instincts of morality, which lie in his subconscious mind, are too strong for you. And the most powerful acquired instinct in the mind of a crook is that he mustn't squeal. That's his idea of immortality! You try it on Nance Belden and she'll tell you almost anything, but who her friends are, where they live and how they make a living.

'Well, we shall see—at another time. Meanwhile, what are you going to do with this girl? You can't keep her here, because that's dangerous unless you have her watched. And whom can you trust to watch her?' 'How about Lanny?' 'Lanny is my office nurse and I cannot get along without her. She's under suspicion now and we've got to kill that. She'll be watched, will she not?'

'I suppose so. Even if I pass the word to lay off her, I can never be sure one of my men won't watch her independently. On a case where it would be a big feather in his cap and mean a lot of publicity to capture a celebrated criminal, lots of dicks prefer to work alone and in secret.'

'Then Lanny must not come to your house again. And yet, this girl must be parked somewhere until her wound heals. She's suffering from the shock of this emotional experience now; she's lost considerable blood and suffered some pain, and for five hours she's suffered from exposure. Her garments are soaking wet.'

'If she forgot to tell those men to bring some dry clothing for her to hop into, once she got aboard the boat, my heart will just about break. That would be one flaw in a perfect job—and I can't stand flaws.'

'And Dan McNamara strode into the room where Nance lay with her hand in Lanny's. 'Why didn't you tell your friend to bring you some dry clothes?' he demanded.

Nance smiled up at Lanny. 'He thinks I'm a nut, after all, Lanny. Why, of course I wouldn't overlook that detail. I changed my clothes, but when we crossed the bay it was rough and there was a police boat on our trail. He had to outrun them—and you do forty miles an hour through a mile of tide-rips and you'll all but drown in the spray!'

'Thank God for that,' the chief murmured. 'I'm proud of you and your friends, Nance. I hope neither of them was hit.'

For the barest fraction of a second Nance hesitated, then answered, 'No, they got through all right, but how they did is a mystery. The boat was riddled.'

Dan McNamara came back into the living room and on his heavy face was the faintest, most cryptic of grins.

'I'm going to get one or both of Nance's friends, Doc,' he exulted. 'One of them was hit, and he'll have to have medical attention. Not that I want to land either one of them fer-this job, but because I want to give them the once-over. At that for they might be somebody we're looking for.'

'Did Nance tell you one of them had been hit?'

'No, but she hesitated half a second when she told me neither of them had been hit. She never hesitates ordinarily. Her co-ordination is lightning fast—well, you get so, Doc, that you know when they're lying. Go to the telephone, call up your home and ask if you've had any telephone calls within the past hour.'

Stephen obeyed and was informed that a man, who refused to leave his name, had called up three times and had left word he would call again; that he had seemed very anxious to know when the doctor would return.

'I knew it—I knew it.' Dan McNamara's pride in his own perspicacity was almost juvenile. 'I figured Nance would tell them to go to you. And I'll make another prophecy. They'll admit they are friends of hers and that she sent them there. She's told them you're her friend and that you'll not turn them up to me. A wounded crook is always up against it, Doc, unless he knows a crooked doctor. The hospitals and ninety-nine and nine-tenths of the doctors will report to the police when they receive a call from a patient suffering from knife or gunshot wounds. And in this case the radios have broadcast the warning of two hundred and fifty dollars out for Nance too—standing state reward for recapturing an escaped convict.

'Come on, Doc. I'll go to your home with you and pick these birds up.' 'No, you shall not. I wouldn't turn those two men over to you for ten thousand dollars. They're too—'

'Yes, they have guts. They can be trusted on a particular job I want to put through. Word of honor, Steve, I'll not pinch them. I just want to talk with them.'

A block from Stephen's home Dan McNamara got out of the doctor's car. He had already received from Stephen Burt a description of the ground-floor plan of his house. And Stephen had agreed to leave his latchkey under the mat at the front door.

was shining in the entrance hall, and this light Stephen, in accordance with the chief's instructions, switched off.

In about five minutes the chief saw this light switched on and off twice. That meant the doctor had received another telephone message. Then the light was switched on and off two times. That meant the patient would arrive in about ten minutes, so Dan McNamara hid himself in the deep shadow of a tradesman's entrance at the side of a house across the street, and waited.

It ten minutes almost to the second, a car, with drawn curtains, drove up to the house and two men got out. The chief could see that one of them had to have assistance, so the driver got out and helped the other man half drag, half carry, the wounded man up the steps. Stephen opened the door and the three men entered; immediately McNamara ran across the street and up the front steps behind them, found the latchkey under the mat, opened the door and stepped inside. He could hear voices in Stephen's reception room, so he drew his pistol and stepped silently up to the entrance of it.

'Put 'em up, boys,' he ordered cheerfully. He drew back his left lapel and revealed his blue and gold shield. 'No necessity to argue in the smoke. This isn't a hanging matter.'

He forced the two un wounded men to stand with their backs toward him while he ran his facile hands over their persons and relieved each of a pistol. He "broke" both guns and placed the cartridges in his pocket.

'I beg your pardon, Doctor, for entering your house unannounced, but you left your front door unlatched and I couldn't resist. I had a notion these men might call upon you. Just a hunch because the warder tipped us off to watch the home of your office nurse, Miss Lanning. So, while watching the home of the servant I concluded to watch that of the master, also. Sit down, boys. Never mind us, Doc. The man on the table needs all of your attention. Fix him up nicely and let him lie there until I come back. He can't run away, and if he tries, don't you let him. You'll other men come with me down to the central office till I see if we have anything on you. I don't appear to have the honor of your acquaintance, but we'll look the rogues' gallery over and compare fingerprints. While there's life, there's hope.'

'You're all wet, Chief,' the driver of the car replied perily. 'Perhaps—but not as wet as your friends.' And McNamara chuckled at his little joke. 'You can't do forty an hour through the tide-rips off Alcatraz island without throwing some spray. You got an open fireplace in your house, Doctor?'

Stephen saw that McNamara was pretending they had not previously met. 'Yes, Chief. In the drawing room. It's all set.'

'I want to warn these boys up and dry them out. They did good work this afternoon and they deserve good treatment. Drop that wounded man long enough to dig up a couple of stiff joints of spiriting fragment for my lady, will you, Doc? I always warn a cold man from the outside in and from the inside out.'

'Thank you, Chief,' both men muttered.

The three retired to the drawing room and the chief tossed one of the men a box of matches. 'Fire up,' he commanded. 'Then draw yourself up to the blaze and drink the grog the doctor will give you. Where's your gal hit?'

'Top of the right shoulder, calf of the left leg and biceps of the left arm.'

'So he's the chap that dragged Nance out of the water, eh? He was in the rear cockpit, but you were up front driving the boat. There are forty bullet holes in the rear of that boat.' He sighed. 'These machine guns certainly spray things. You didn't drop your own machine gun overboard, either. They're too valuable and hard to get. A Thompson, I suppose. A Tommy gun and a Tommy man! Visiting brethren—from Chicago, I suppose. That's why we haven't met before. Pardon me a minute while I look for the Tommy gun in your car. And if you want to die in a hurry just try beating it out the back wap while I'm gone.'

He returned in less than a minute with the one-man machine gun in his hands. 'We've got Nance Belden where you dropped her,' he announced, 'so while you're lapping up that whisky, tell me all about it.'

'No Nance told you where to look for us, eh? The man who had handled the motor boat spoke with withering contempt and hatred. Instantly Dan McNamara cuffed him viciously on the side of the head.

'Apologize for that,' he roared. 'You're so d-d crooked you think everybody else is, too.'

The man mumbled an apology. 'No, Nance didn't tell me, you rat.' McNamara went on, 'and I didn't ask her, because I knew she wouldn't tell. But I did think she'd tip you off to call on this doctor. You dropped her at the home of his office nurse; I put two and two together and decided to investigate—all by myself. And here we are. Got any idea why I came alone?'

'No.'

'Because I wanted to save you from the consequences of the job you pulled off this afternoon. I'm in sympathy with that, and as far as I'm concerned Nance Belden isn't going back to San Quentin. And she isn't going back to your gang, either. Now, you play the game with me and I'll play it with you. Double-cross me and I'll hang something hard on you, and you and your friends won't be heard of in this file for a long time.'

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for July 21

DAVID

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 26:1-12; II Samuel 1:23-27.

GOLDEN TEXT—Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others.—Philippians 2:4.

PRIMARY TOPIC—David and the Sleeping King.

JUNIOR TOPIC—David and the Sleeping King.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—David the Great-Hearted.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—A Generous Attitude Toward Others.

David is one of the most prominent of Bible characters. His many-sided life and his close association with Christ give him a place of importance second to none in all the Bible. It is in this light that this great character should be viewed, and not merely as "David (The Great-Hearted)."

I. His Birth and Youth (I Sam. 16: 17-15, 34).

Bethlehem was the place of his birth, as well as that of his greater Son (Matt. 2:40). He was the youngest of Jesse's eight sons. His young manhood was spent as a shepherd. This was the first period of his schooling and preparation for life. From the brief descriptive word we learn that in his personal appearance he had auburn hair, fair eyes and a beautiful countenance (10:12). His life as a shepherd was attended with real hazards (17:34-37).

II. His Anointing (I Sam. 16:6-13).

God had revealed to Samuel that one of Jesse's sons was to be the new king. In determination of the divine choice, Jesse's sons passed before Samuel in order, beginning with Eliab, the oldest. Eliab was rejected in spite of his favorable physical qualifications. His inner condition as seen by God disqualified him. All glorying in the flesh must be set aside in the choice of a man for a place in God's program. David was chosen because of his fidelity as a shepherd boy. When the anointing oil was being applied, the Spirit of the Lord came upon him. David's attractiveness as a young man, and his unusual gifts were all to no avail without the Spirit.

III. David's Life at the Royal Court.

I. As a harpist and armorbearer to Saul (I Sam. 16:19-23). He was brought to play his harp before Saul in order that the evil spirit might be allayed.

2. His triumph over Goliath. For some reason David returned to look after his father's sheep. On being sent on an errand to his brethren in the camp, he saw the Philistine giant, Goliath, defying God and the army of Israel. He volunteered to fight, skillfully slung the stone which felled the giant, and with Goliath's own sword cut off his head.

3. Won the friendship of Jonathan. This friendship has been immortalized in the world's thought. It was unique in that it occurred between two men of rival worldly interest. Jonathan was the crown prince, heir to the throne according to divine purpose. Knowing this, Jonathan waived his rights.

IV. David's Life as an Outlaw (I Sam. 21:10-13:13).

Though God anointed him king, David wandered for years as an outlaw to escape the murderous frenzy of Saul. During this time he did some foolish things, but he also learned many things in this bitter school which better fitted him to be a king, statesman, and poet, leaving to the world a rich heritage.

V. God's Royal Covenant (II Sam. 7:8-16).

On the ground-of-the setting forth of this covenant, he is the legal heir to the kingdom. Jesus Christ shall one day occupy the throne of his father David (Luke 1:31-33).

VI. David's Reign as King.

1. Made king of Judah at Hebron (II Sam. 2:4-5:3). A huge war was waged between the house of David and that of Saul.

2. King over all Israel (II Sam. 5:4).

The elders of Israel at last invited him to be king over all Israel according to the purpose of God as expressed by Samuel when he anointed him king.

VII. David's Sins and Failures.

1. Refuge among the enemies of Israel (I Sam. 21, 30). This was a disgraceful act. Being the chosen and anointed of God, he should have trusted God to defend him against the fury of Saul.

2. Plurality of wives. He established a harem after the order of the heathen monarchs.

3. Crime as to Bath-sheba and Uriah (II Sam. 11, 12). Ammon's sin, the rebellions of Absalom and Sheba, and Absalom's attempt to seize the throne were the inevitable fruits of his polygamous life.

4. Numbering the people (II Sam. 25).

Religion

Religion, like morals and physics, has first truths which are incapable of being derived from anything more certain than themselves—which the human mind, at a particular point of its development, invariably recognizes, and the intuition of which is a direct result of its highest activities.—James Martineau.

Shining Qualities

Many individuals have, like uncut diamonds, shining qualities beneath a rough exterior.—Juvenal.

PRECIOUS CHRISTIAN RELIC

The cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York recently received a gift from Archbishop Chrysostomos, head of the Greek church in Athens—a piece of stone cut from the Aegaeus, the rock on which St. Paul stood to preach to the Athenians.

Danger Signal

Sure sign that should convince a young man that an older one thinks he is foolish is that the older refrains from talking to him.

THOU, TOO, BRUTUS!

Well! Well! What changes are often wrought in a man's attitude and outlook by the hand of Time! Senator T. P. Gore, the blind senator from Oklahoma, is one of the most conservative members of the great U. S. Senate. Forty years ago he was one of the most radical Populists in this country. "Populist? What is a Populist?" a lot of you young squirts ask. The Populist Party, young friend, had its rise in the so-called "Gay Nineties". There was a terrible depression on Cotton sold for four cents per pound. Wheat was low. The farmer was in a terrible fix. Men were out of employment. Coxey led a great army to Washington asking relief. The army proceeded mostly on freight trains. Cleveland was President. But the Republicans had been in power. There was a great outcry against both old parties. The Farmers Alliance, organized a few years before, had swept the nation. It afforded a fruitful field for the germination of radical ideas. A new party sprang up. They first called it the People's Party, but the name Populist gradually became more popular. This party advocated

WEDNESDAY & THURSDAY BANK NIGHTS

"All The King's Horses"

—With—
Edward Everett Horton, Katherine DeMille, and Eugene Pallette

A musical toast to romance, sparkling with beauties fit for a king, spiked with comedy, brimming with intoxicating music.

"flat money", that is, paper money issued by the Government not redeemable in gold or silver. It proposed a sub-treasury system, the details of which most of us have forgotten, but the farmer's cotton and wheat and corn and other commodities were to be the basis for the paper money, which was to be issued in an amount not less than $50.00 per capita. The Populist party favored the Government ownership of the railroads. In fact it stood on half-way ground between individualism and socialism. It grew by leaps and bounds. It became a mighty force in the politics of this country. It sent a host of men to Congress, including the brilliant Tom Watson of Georgia and Sockless Jerry Simpson of Kansas. It sent a number of men to the United States Senate, including Senator Pepper of Kansas. It elected a governor in several of the states. It came very near electing a governor in Texas.

Just as it was in full swing on its upward march, a young man emigrated from Mississippi to Texas. That young man was T. P. Gore. He stumped the state of Texas and other states for Populism. He met the ablest debaters that the Democrats could put up. He was a master of ridicule and sarcasm. He castigated the Gold Standard Democrats, of which Grover Cleveland was the head, until they looked like whipped curs. He castigated the Free Silver Democrats, of which Dick Blaud of Missouri was the most conspicuous leader, until their ears flopped. He was for "greenbacks"—paper money, without any gold or silver backing. He was for all the radical proposals of the Populists.

But the Populist party soon ran its course. Then Gore moved to Oklahoma. Soon he was in politics again—this time as a Democrat. He won a seat in Congress. Then he went to the U. S. Senate. He dropped out for a couple of terms and then went back. He is there now. He fights most of the progressive or radical proposals of the Roosevelt administration. He is distinctly a "stand-patter". Roosevelt and his cabinet are urging Congress to pass a law to bar damage suits against the Government by bondholders who may have suffered loss by reason of the devaluation of the gold dollar.

A lot of senators are objecting on the grounds that this would be bad faith on the part of the Government. They say it would be "Reputation" by the Government of its just obligations. We can understand their viewpoint.

But who could have dreamed, forty years ago that T. P. Gore, the blind Populist leader and fiat-money apostle, would one day sit in the U. S. Senate as a detested "Gold-bug"? Yet such is the case. The other day when Attorney-General Homer Cummings was arguing before the Senate Finance Committee for this measure to outlaw the gold-clause suits, blind Senator Gore arose in righteous indignation and cried "Reputation!"

What changes are wrought by the fateful hand of Time!

A GOOD BROTHER GONE WRONG

"Uncle Bill" Kellis, the brilliant though sometimes erratic editor of the Sterling City News-Record, used more than two columns of his valuable space last week trying to show us the error of our way. He thinks Prohibition is the seat of all our trouble. He contends that conditions are worse now than they were in the old saloon days.

We have neither the space nor the time to do full justice to the subject here, but we have lived in the shadow of the old saloon and we know some things from personal observation.

We lived in Temple when it was a town of about 10,000 population and when there were more than thirty saloons and beer joints in the town. We know what that meant. In connection with a number of the larger saloons were big gambling houses and not far away was the red-light district. Gamblers and harlots and whiskey sots, drunks in the bull-pens, drunks on the streets, drunks on the railway trains, and drunks in buggies and wagons on the public roads.

We were visiting in Temple one night a few years ago, when there was a big celebration. It was estimated that there were 10,000 people on the streets that night. The streets were jammed with automobiles and with humanity. Yet we never saw a single drunk and never heard of a single serious accident. Temple was then a dry city with more than 15,000 population, and it had been dry for years. We wondered just what would have happened if the town had been full of saloons and the saloons had been full of drinking men, as was often the case in the old days.

It may be that Uncle Bill would like to see a half dozen saloons in Sterling City but we certainly would regret to see that many doing business in Tahoka.

Uncle Bill spans us, however, for referring to these future liquor establishments as saloons. He says that with repeal there are to be no saloons. But he doesn't tell us what there are to be. We don't think it makes much difference. There isn't much in a name. If a hotel is permitted to maintain a bar for the accommodation of its customers, probably that will be merely a tavern. Or if a cafe is permitted to sell liquor, perhaps that will be only a cafe. Or if a fellow procures a house and a shirt-tail full of drugs and patent medicines and then loads his shelves down with wines and hard liquors, perhaps that will be only a drug store. Or, if all these are prohibited and the Government undertakes to establish a monopoly of the liquor business, probably its dispensaries will only be liquor stores. But the main purpose and object of all these establishments will be to sell liquor—the stuff that makes Big Injun heap drunk; that makes old drunken sots; that breeds fights and gun-plays and homicides; that makes human wrecks of boys and girls, men and women; that wrecks homes and families, and literally raises hell generally.

"Uncle-Bill", you ought to join us in trying to strengthen the fences that we have rather than to be joining forces with those who would throw all the gates open and tear down all our Prohibition fences. So that somebody may have a chance to make big money out of the liquor business unrestrained and unmolested by law.

We need better law enforcement in Texas but we'll not get it, Uncle Bill, but surrendering to the worst of all law-breakers, the "Legalized Liquor Traffic."

Hal Lattimore of Fort Worth on Monday tendered his resignation as Associate Justice of the Second Court of Civil Appeals on the grounds that the salary is inadequate to provide for his family and his future. The salary is $5,160 and will go up to $5,400 on September 1. For about ten years he served as a district judge in Fort Worth at a salary of $5,500. In tendering his resignation, Judge Lattimore declared: "The judiciary of Texas is among the poorest paid in the Union," and he charged this fact to be a "blot on the name of the greatest state." Judge Lattimore is an able lawyer and a splendid gentleman. He can doubtless earn more as a lawyer than his salary amounted to. Nevertheless we feel that the salary he was paid is sufficiently large, especially in these strenuous times, and that Judge Lattimore showed bad taste and bad sportsmanship in complaining at the salary being paid him when thousands of his constituents are jobless. Some men, by reason of their superior abilities, by reason of good fortune, or by reason of circumstances which they had no hand in creating, have never known the pinch of poverty. They have never known what it is to be compelled to struggle for a livelihood for themselves and families. They have never been in the position of the common man. They can have no adequate appreciation of his position and no deep sympathy for him in his struggles. They do not know his problems. Judge Lattimore had a perfect right to resign because he felt that he might make more money out of office than he could in office—that is, if money is the chief consideration—but we are sorry that he saw fit to complain at the "small" salary being paid. A man on the Government pay roll at a salary of more than $5,000 a year ought to feel grateful to the people and to his God, when thousands of capable men are struggling for a livelihood or walking the streets of our towns and cities without jobs.

Those showers Monday were fine on the crops. If Nature continues to cooperate, it seems we are bound to make a crop this year. A good crop with only a fair price would bring quite a bit of prosperity back to Lynn county. Better times are ahead of us, folks.

Laxative combination folks know is trustworthy

The confidence thousands of parents have in good, old reliable, powdered Theford's Black-Draught has prompted them to get the new Syrup of Black-Draught for their children. The grown folks stick to the powdered Black-Draught; the youngsters probably will prefer it when they outgrow their childish love of sweets. Mrs. C. W. Adams, of Murray, Ky., writes: "I have used Theford's Black-Draught (powder) about thirteen years, taking it for biliousness. Black-Draught acts well and I am always pleased with the results. I wanted a good, reliable laxative for my children. I have found Syrup of Black-Draught to be just that."

BLACK-DRAUGHT

SUDS
Ten cents a bottle and two mugs or schooners for 15c was the price of suds here all day Saturday and Sunday. It was real hot and did they sell it. One dealer, Smokey Taylor, informed us that he sold 135 cases of 24 bottles each.

Just what started the fight, we are not able to say, but understand that one dealer decided to clean up his stock of an unpopular brand by offering it at 10c per bottle. Other dealers seemed to have gotten the word that all brands were going at that figure.

By Monday the fight spirit seemed to have waxed old, and cooler heads got together for better prices. —Brownfield Herald.

They say that Prohibition doesn't prohibit, but we doubt if that much beer has been sold in Tahoka in the past six months. Brownfield legalized the sale of beer something like two years ago. Tahoka has never done so. Legalize the sale of whiskey and the guys who are now drinking beer will tank up on the stronger drink, especially in the winter time and during the cooler months of the year. Better hang on to prohibition, folks.

We have no disposition to try to tell them at Washington how to run things, but if three hundred jobless Lynn county men were busy building good roads throughout the county, giving an honest day's work for a day's pay, and if this were being done in every other county in the United States, these fellows would soon be buying so much clothing and food that there would be little occasion to curtail the cotton acreage and the wheat acreage in this country.

Rev. and Mrs. Geo. A. Dale spent Tuesday night and Wednesday with their children in Lubbock.

McCarver Named Assistant Coach

Brownwood, July 17. — Clarence (Nig) McCarver of Ballinger has been elected assistant football, basketball and track coach at Howard Payne College, succeeding McAdoo Keaton, who has been elected head coach and athletic director, replacing Joe Bailey Cheapey, resigned, to accept a similar position at Southwest Texas State Teachers College.

McCarver starred in football and track for four years at Howard Payne. He was an all-conference halfback for three years and was one of the most brilliant track men ever to perform in Texas Conference circles. McCarver graduated with the class of '31 and the following autumn coached at Tahoka High School. He played football with George Washington University in 1932 and 1933 and in the Spring of 1933 the university conferred upon him the B. S. degree in physical education and the M. A. degree. McCarver was assistant under Frank Bridges at Terrell Military Academy during the 1934 season but resigned during the school year because of the death of his father, former Ballinger mayor.

As assistant to Coach Keaton, McCarver will have charge of backfield men. McCarver was elected by the school board upon Keaton's recommendation.

NOT WAS SHOT?

A duel was once fought in Texas, says Facts and Fancies, between Alexander Shott and John Nott. Nott was shot and Shott was not, according to circumstantial evidence. But, as many remarked, it was bitter to be Shott than Nott. There was a rumor that Nott was not shot, but Shott avowed that he shot Nott, which proves either that the shot Shott shot at Nott was not shot, or that Nott was shot notwithstanding. It was made to appear at the trial that the shot Shott shot Nott or as accidents with firearms are frequent, it might have been possible that the shot Shott shot Shott himself and Shott would be shot and Nott would not. It appeared to some that the shot Shott shot not Shott but Nott and to others that Shott was shot by Nott. Anyway, it is hard to tell who was shot.

"My Bedroom"

(By Mrs. Garland Pennington, Edith H. D. Club, Tie for Second Place in Bedroom Work)

I am a home demonstration club woman of the Edith Home Demonstration club.

I have wanted to be a bedroom demonstrator for the last three years but didn't think I could as the room I wanted to improve was a back room and I thought I needed it for a store room as there was no place outside for the things I had in this room, but my club members encouraged me to go ahead, so I began in January.

When it was first scored it contained a bed, washing machine, two tubs, a very crude table answered for a dressing table, an old trunk, cream separator, pressure cooker, bookcase and various other articles. An old linoleum rug which had been removed from the kitchen covered the floor. All the furnishings and wood work were dark brown. The walls were sheetrocked and had been painted, but had been badly abused and were very ugly.

The first thing I did was remodel the clothes closet which contained no shelves and was neither painted nor papered. I painted the closet with white flat paint, added five shelves, clothes basket, shoe shelf, sox bag, flash light, hat shelf and moved the clothes rod to a more convenient place.

After this was done I started on my room. First, I papered it, added springs, mattress and pillow protectors and six slats to my bed which made it standard. I also have a new mattress which cost only $2.01. The cotton was given me for a demonstration. I bought the tick and thread and it was made by the club members at a demonstration. I made a tufted bedspread. Now I have a bed I am really proud of.

I made a dressing table from an old dresser which was given to me, refinished my bed and bookcase, made a bedside table, fixed a lamp, repaired an old chair for my dressing center. As the wood work was very dark I first painted it with white flat paint, then two coats of ivory enamel. This gives much more light to the room. I removed the old rug and refurnished my floor. First, we scrubbed it with sand and brick, then sandpaper. We put one tablespoon burnt umber to 1/2 gallon linseed oil, brought this to a boil and put it on the floor. This makes a nice finish after it is waxed.

I have enjoyed seeing my room improve little by little. Now it is finished and I really can enjoy it.

The cost of my room was $11.11. Perhaps I have been too personal in this story and should have said "We" more as my husband and neighbors did help me out a lot with my work.

When Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Harris returned last Friday from a trip to Sulphur Springs, where a brother-in-law had died, they were accompanied home by a niece and a nephew, Miss Virginia Morgan of Naples and Leonard Harris of Marletta, who are spending a few weeks here visiting. Mr. Harris spent one school term here two or three years ago, graduating in the Tahoka High School.

WHEN POP EATS CORN

When pop eats corn upon the cob, His manners ain't so hot; It seems as though he just forgets What mom has taught and taught. He gnaws an' chews an' smacks his lips, An' makes a awful din, An' lets the sweet an' juicy juice Meander down his chin. He gets corn in his hair and ears, An' in his eyebrows too— There's more outside of him than in. If what mom says is true, Mom says he makes her feel ashamed— He has no ettiket, But pop just grins. When he eats corn It's really being et!

Transients Not Relief Eligibles

Austin, July 17.—The Texas transient bureau no longer will extend aid to state transients, it has been announced by Mrs. Zuleika B. Hicks, assistant director of social service for the Texas Relief Commission.

The regulation, which became effective July 10, is in accordance with a resolution adopted by the State Board of Control, designed to stop transiency in Texas. Hereafter, Texas transients will be urged to return to their legal residences and settle down in order to become eligible for local work opportunities, either under increasingly improved commercial conditions, or under the Works Progress Administration program.

Farm Home Contest Started Over State

College Station—A Centennial Farm and Home Demonstration contest directed by the Texas Extension Service and sponsored by the Dallas News and the Semi-Weekly Farm News for the purpose of recognizing improvement in agriculture and the improvement and beautification of rural homes has been announced by O. B. Martin, Texas Extension director. Prizes amounting to approximately $2500 will be awarded the winners.

Any Texas farm family living on a farm or ranch, or in a town or a village of a population of not more than 2500, on a designated state or federal highway, may enter the contest by registering with the county farm and home demonstration agents in the county and working under their supervision. The house must be on the contest property.

Registration cards can be obtained from the county agricultural or home demonstration agent. They must be filled out and returned to the agent's office not later than September 1, 1935.

The county judging committees will be composed of three members: one appointed by the county agricultural agent, one by the home demonstration agent and the other appointed jointly. A district agricultural agent and a district home demonstration agent will select the district winners immediately after June 1, 1936.

State winners will be selected by the director of the Extension Service, the vice director and state agent, and the state home demonstration agent, or by a committee appointed by them.

A story of the activity and the farm record and a simple plan of the farmstead must be furnished the judges. Points to be considered in the judging are: the buildings and equipment, the grounds, the soil, the crops, the livestock, the food supply and other resources.

Additional information to aid contestants can be secured from the county Extension agents, from the Extension publications, from articles published from time to time in the Dallas News and Semi-Weekly Farm News, and over Radio Station WFAA of Dallas.

JUNE CHEVROLET SALES LARGEST SINCE JUNE, 1929

Detroit, July 16.—Chevrolet sales and production in June were the largest for that month since 1929. W. E. Holler, vice president and general sales manager, reported today. Sales in the United States totaled 97,862 units. Total production, including Canada and export, was 122,300.

"These figures," Mr. Holler announced, "not only surpass the sales and production totals for any other June since 1929, but with a single exception exceed the highest totals for any month in years."

"For the third time this year, June gave us a monthly production in excess of 100,000, the other two months being March and April. In no other year since 1929 has even an entire year had three 100,000-car months such as this year already has at the half way mark."

"As we enter the second half of the year, we have already built more than 60 per cent as many cars as we produced in all twelve months of 1934—a year in which Chevrolet started the industry by registering more cars in the last six months than in the first half."

"Sales of the Master de Luxe models in June greatly exceeded Standard model sales. However, the lower priced Standard models, improved this year with the addition of the Master blue flame engine, is a tremendous success. To date, 1935 Standard sales show an increase of 107,727 units over the same period last year."

Refreshing Relief When You Need a Laxative

Because of the refreshing relief it has brought them, thousands of men and women, who could afford much more expensive laxatives, use Black-Draught when needed. It is very economical, purely vegetable, highly effective. . . Mr. J. Lester Roberson, well known hardware dealer at Martinsville, Va., writes: "I certainly can recommend Black-Draught as a splendid medicine. I have taken it for constipation and the dull feelings that follow, and have found it very satisfactory."

BLACK-DRAUGHT

"My Bedroom"

(By Elsie Bernice Etter, Wells Club, Second Place Winner)

Bedroom Before Improvement

The inconvenience of my bedroom is hard to explain, but I will do my best. The closet could be convenient with only a little change. It had a few shelves, and a small rod on which to hang clothes, but the rod made it difficult to reach the shelves. There was plenty of space above which could be utilized for a quilt shelf or for items not in use.

My dressing table was made several years ago from two orange boxes, but because of lack of interest at that time I had not finished it with drawers. This one little job made it much more useful and convenient. There was a curtain around, not very attractive, and I had no stool.

The bed was an old iron stand, painted a dark color which detracted from the girlish atmosphere. I had no spring nor mattress cover, which are so necessary for this sandy country.

The woodwork in my room had one coat of underpaint, which had become soiled and had never been a very pretty color for a bedroom. The walls were also slightly soiled and very dusty, and were covered with stickers which drew attention to their condition.

The floor had a small linoleum cover over part of it, the rest oiled with linseed oil, which made it very hard to keep. There were many items I needed to make my room really attractive. Among them were a writing desk, a bedside table, washing center, and sitting place. I had plenty of room to add these articles, and they would add much to the appearance and comfort of my room.

Bedroom After Improvement

The inconvenience of my room has vanished—the light shines a different way, and in it I can see my needed articles, there in their places to stay.

The walls are no longer soiled and old looking, but bright and full of color. You can see sunshine in the woodwork, and the floor is like a looking glass. My dressing table and chair look like new, and look! My desk looks like it might belong to Lindbergh or some other great guy like him. And on it is a big red book which spells every word I can't.

The curtains are so fresh and breezy that it seems as though I might be right on the coast. My little rug is right from Japan, the bed looks nice enough for the White House, and it is so soft, right up to standards of 4-H girls.

But now listen folks, I want to say that it took quite a bit of work to make it look so grand. I had to paper the soiled walls, and as this was the first time I had ever filled the place of a paper hanger, I was rather excited and fearful that it wouldn't look nice. I had no trouble in matching the flowers. And the sunny wood work was not that way of its own accord. I had to stretch my bones and bend my back to rub that brush which painted them. I also rubbed the paint on my wash stand and bedside table, both of which were built from old lumber by a friend. He had the pleasure of watching the old lumber burst and split, but finally got both pieces nicely finished.

Drawers from the dressing table caused me trouble on top of trouble, but they were well worth the time and care. The curtain around it was made by a seamstress who gave her time. She also made the cover for the old chair which made my beautiful dressing stool. My closet was made more useful and attractive by adding two shelves and by papering it in the same lovely paper which covers the bedroom walls.

The breezy little curtains caused my fingers many a prick. The dainty bed caused my hands to look like—well, you know what—from the strong eye-water solution with which I removed the old paint before putting on the new. The mirror-like floor was given that appearance by one coat of paint and a coat of the mahogany varnish with which I finished my desk, chair and wooden waste paper basket.

So you see, finishing my room was a real task, not play, and even if it did cause plenty of work, I love it better than anything else that belongs to me and the sister who shares it with me.

Moses Austin was a Spanish subject before he ever had his "dream" of colonizing Texas. He swore allegiance to the flag of Spain when he removed from Virginia to Missouri to go into the lead mine business. What later became the Louisiana Purchase was at that time under Spanish control due to a treaty existent between Spain and France. Spain later ceded the territory back to France and the latter nation sold it to the United States.

MISS CLAUDETTE COLBERT CAPTURES ACADEMY AWARD

"Private Worlds", the new Claudette Colbert picture, comes to the English Theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

The film, the first in which Miss Colbert has appeared since she won the Award of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for the best feminine performance of 1934, is based on the best-selling novel of the same title by Phyllis Bottome. Her supporting cast is headed by Charles Boyer, Joan Bennett, Helen Vinson and Joel McCrea.

"Private Worlds" is the story of a brilliant young woman psychiatrist who is unable to apply to the "private worlds" of her own mind the same skillful understanding that wins her fame in dealing with others. Obsessed with the memory of a sweetheart killed in the war, she is unable to yield to a newer, greater love until a near-catastrophe presents itself.

Boyer, the young French star who is winning laurels in Hollywood, plays opposite her. Closely tied up with the main plot is a three-cornered romance involving McCrea, Miss Bennett and Miss Vinson.

Miss Colbert's role offers her the opportunity to combine the best features of her light-hearted portrayals in "The Gilded Lily" and "It Happened One Night" with the more serious characterizations of some of her previous efforts.

BIDS DEFIANCE TO HOT WEATHER

PATTERN 2319

The hot weather brings us to the problem every woman of generous proportions must cope with—how to keep cool and fresh looking on those wiling days? Well—Looking Cool goes a long way, and pattern 2319, with its loose, easy cape sleeve, soft treated waistline gives you a mighty cool outlook on life. And very flattering, too, are the graceful folds of the cape that does wonders to equalize proportions. The darts over the bust and at the waistline cleverly contrive to avoid a too-fitted look at the strategical points. Pick a summery printed voile or other sheer.

Pattern 2319 is available in sizes 16, 18, 20, 24, 30, 36, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 3 3/4 yards 39 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included. Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE. Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York.

WITHOUT WAX

WE WERE talking of antiques, when the Florentine gentleman of high birth said: "Come, let me show you my marble table in the garden." I followed him through the dark hall, stone paved, out into a beautiful sunlit Florentine inner court garden with great dark cypresses waving their tips in the breeze. Around the roots of these dignified old trees, centuries old, were little flower beds of bright posies confined by stone edges between which, in formal fashion, were inviting little paths.

It was a surprise garden in the rear of an uninviting looking stone residence set uncompromisingly on a none too wide side street in the city of Florence, Italy. It is a surprise city anyhow, with its wealth of history, its tragedies, its bloody climb to light, its sacrifices in the name of power and religion, its wealth, its art and literature. What a panorama of human achievements and failures, Florence presents to a sympathetic heart, as one recalls the de Medici's, Savonarola, Fra Angelico, the Brownings and the host of others too numerous to name. When I am in Florence I never really know in what century I am living, for these old memories press persistently into my heart.

We have wandered far from our sunlit garden into which I had followed my host to see his marble table. "Is it an antique?" I inquired as I noticed great cracks across the beautiful marble slab. "No, it is not," my friend responded. "Listen to this story!"

"The marble cutters of Florence are wily old fellows," he continued, "often when their chisels slipped too far they cracked the marble slabs. Into these cracks they poured soft wax. After the wax had hardened the slabs were polished and the tables sold for solid marble." The Florentines soon realized the deception and began asking when buying tables for those "sine cera"—(without wax).

Interesting it is to note that our word sincerity comes from the little phrase "sine cera," without wax, which is precisely what it means—for to be sincere is to be genuine, whether it be a table or an individual.

"To be without pretext or show Exactly what men think I am."

If this be a good working rule for Florentine tables, to be genuinely sincere tables of solid marble, isn't it also a silver rule for you and me to follow in daily life, to be found always "sine cera"?

THE ABILITY FAMILY

THE best neighbors I ever had were the Ability family. There were eight in the present family, one child died young. The father's name was Reliability, the mother's Responsibility. They were each well named. The father had the respect and confidence of all he met in business—people, even strangers, felt him to be trustworthy. The mother played her part, too; after visiting her household, one could be assured that she carried her part of the home making for her husband and their six children, adding more duties each day to her already full program. Her name was Responsibility and she lived up to it. One would naturally expect a strong family of children from such parents, and such was the case.

Their first child, who grew to be strong and stalwart, they named Respectability. He was an upright chap. He thought well of himself and justly so, for he lived persistently at his best. The second child was named Stability, for at an early age he evidenced decided firmness of character. He was sure footed and steady as a rock. His opinions were always real convictions to him.

After a few years passed another child was born to this interesting family, not as strong in health as the first two children, but patient unto long endurance, with never a word of complaint. This child was calm and often silent with an inner reserve and strength that won from his friends great admiration and love. His parents called him Durability.

The fourth child was a joy to its mother. Nothing ever seemed to go wrong when this little fellow was about. Everyone loved him as he grew up, because he was thinking constantly of others. He would change his plans to accommodate others if need be. Unselfishness was his watchword. His name was Adaptability.

One child died young. Peevish and ill-tempered, he grew quite apart from the family traits. His name was Irritability. He was too unhappy to live long.

After the death of Irritability the Ability family was again augmented by two, when the twins came. Happy, good natured, lovable pair of youngsters they were. They brought sunshine and joy wherever they went. Everybody agreed that they should be called Affability and Compatibility!

So this is the Ability family. How many of them have you met in your circle of friends? Do you wonder the name of this family was ABILITY?

Caballero Submerged Along Toward the Center of the Stream.

Caballero

By James J. Montague

THE first mistake I made was going up that canyon at all. The second was letting the guide persuade me that I couldn't possibly get there afoot, but must ride Caballero. Caballero was regarding me at the time with what appeared to be a friendly expression. Moreover, despite his size, which was diminutive, he looked capable. So I set forth with two mistakes on me.

I was a little disturbed as we started boldly forth to hear the guide call out from behind me: "I forgot to bring the chow along when we left the ranch. You go ahead and I'll fetch up with you. Ole Cab knows the way just as well as I do."

By this time Caballero was forth on his way with an air of assurance that gained my confidence. The trail was easy for the first mile, and then descended at an alarming angle toward the bottom of a canyon. Through this canyon a mountain torrent was pouring, but I supposed, of course, that we would travel along beside it. I love mountain streams and I was quite happy over the prospect of seeing one so close at hand.

But when my mount, instead of skirting this wild water course, walked deliberately into it, I thought it was time to assert myself. "If you want a drink, Mr. Burro," I said politely, "I will find one for you later on, but just now I think it would be better not to tempt these wild waters. The first thing you know, we'll be—"

I didn't finish the sentence because I was surrounded by engulfing rapids. My first impulse was to get off and walk back to shore, but when I observed how far we were away from the refuge, and how high were the waves between us and it, I desisted. I seized the pommel of the Spanish saddle as I would seize a life preserver and hung on. "The torrent roared and we did buffet it," to quote Mr. Cassius, but I did most of the buffeting, for Caballero submerged along toward the center of the stream. I knew he was not drowned, for I could feel the throb of his four propellers, but fording a rapid running river on a mount that you can't see, and which you fear every minute will be bowled from under you by a particularly heavy mass of water is not my idea of enjoying myself in the man deserted wilds.

I don't know how long that crossing took, but it was not the six months I estimated at the time. I am informed now that it was not more than six minutes, but in those six minutes, as I lived them, Columbus might have crossed the alien ocean.

Caballero soon began to become slightly more visible, and at length hooked his fore knee over a boulder and paused a space to catch his breath while the waters swirled around my thighs. When he felt sufficiently restored, he rose almost upright, grasped a rock with his other knee, and we were ashore once more.

I made a feeble attempt to dismount. I didn't know where I was, or how I could get back to where I came from unless the guide came along before I died from a chill, but I had lost confidence in the little animal's knowledge of the topography of the country, and felt I would be more able to collect my thoughts if I sat down on a rock and reflected for a little while. But the burro had other plans. Waiting only to shake the water from his flanks—he almost shook me off in the process—he laid a leg over another rock and drew himself up into the mouth of one of those dry canyons which, I think, are called arroyos.

Suddenly he rose forward and sank aft, and I perceived we had begun a long ascent. It was a short climb, but not a merry one. Scrub trees grew horizontally out of the walls of the mountain, and shredded my apparel when they snapped back at me after they had been bent by our passage.

Looking up—for I was afraid to look down, I could see mountain tops gleaming white in the sunshine, and thanked my stars that I was at least not up there. But my gratitude came too soon. A little later it became evident that that was just where Caballero intended to go. He did not go in haste—though I would rather have had it all over. He walked, step by step, making sure of every small rock on which he placed his hoof. The movement was much like that of a small boat on a stormy ocean, and I found myself growing sea sick.

Again and again I yanked at the reins, but the creature only looked around reprovingly at me and proceeded on his way. Just ahead I heard a loud roaring noise, and, looking up, I observed that a cataract was pouring its waters into the V-shaped bottom of the canyon about a city block ahead. I endeavored once more to arrest our progress, but what was the use?

We went right into that fall, and soon there was nothing that I was conscious of but the roaring of many waters. I seized the saddle and hung on. Around and over me was a titanic drumming. Now and then an especially dense mass of water descended on me and rendered me temporarily— I thought—unconscious. But we still bore on, and by and by we went forth into clear sunshine.

It was a happy release, but it was not to last long. The trail wound around a corner, and directly above me loomed a giant glacier. It was probably very beautiful, but I would have been just as eager to enjoy the sight of the angel of doom. I had learned by this time that yanking on the bridle would convey no message to Caballero that he would heed, so I thrust my legs as far apart as possible, and brought them banging into his stomach. He only looked around at me reprovingly and turned up toward the ice and snow.

We climbed that glacier with a steady, but not a sure tread. A number of times my ship of the mountains mistook soft snow for hard, and rolled over on his side. Each time I tried to get off before he regained his equilibrium, but it was hopeless. Always he was up and forth before I could extricate my feet from the stirrups.

At last we stood on what up to that time I had regarded as the summit of the range. Now, I thought, I shall get off. To go down this canyon on that imbecile animal is not to tempt Providence, it is to defy it. But we were going up, not down. On, on, on and on, we plodded, till at last we could look about and see range after range of snow-capped mountains. It was probably a sublime sight, but it didn't strike me that way at the time. I was fishing for my hunting knife with the idea that I would have to thrust it between Caballero's ribs and stop him the best I could when I heard a hail from below, and looking down, observed the guide approaching on a replica of my burro.

I was glad to see him. In fact, there was at that time no human being on this earth, not excepting my wife and children, that I would have been so glad to see.

"He got ye here all right, I see," said my rescuer, grinning. "I knowed he would. He's a smart brute, Caballero." "When do we start home?" I asked with simple directness.

"Home, why we ain't got a quarter of the way, yet."

"Oh, yes, we have," I replied. "We've got all the way and I'm going to walk back."

I didn't, for he overpersuaded me, but there were a number of times on that ride when I would have traded my life for a song, and not a very good song at that.

Measuring Rainfall

An inch of rain as defined by the United States weather bureau is measured in a rain gauge devised so that the actual rainfall is magnified 10 times for ease of measurement. In its commonest form, a rain gauge consists of a cylindrical vessel closed at the top by a funnel-shaped lid, having a hole in the center through which the rain falls. A narrow glass tube, rising outside the vessel from near the bottom, shows by the height of the water in it the height of the water in the vessel. A simple rain gauge may be made of a copper funnel, the area of whose opening is exactly 10 square inches. This funnel allows the rain to pass into a bottle and the quantity of rain caught is ascertained by multiplying the weight in ounces by 0.173 which gives the depth in inches.

Sherry Improves With Age

CLIFF DWELLERS OF PAST AGES

Apartment Living Traced Back to 85 B. C.

How many of us have the impression that apartment dwelling is comparatively modern?

No doubt a good many of us. However, surprising as it may seem, apartment dwelling dates back to about 85 B. C., according to official records.

How much further no one can answer, but an exhaustive research by the writer reveals that in 85 B. C. an entire apartment city was built high up in the Andes, a place called Machu Picchu, Peru.

The entire city was built about 7,000 feet above sea level, on a precipice leading up from the Grand canyon of the Urubama. It was supposed to have been constructed to promote safety. These apartments were built of white granite and divided into one and two rooms per family, with one window and door in each building. This was quite the mode of living in that day.

We also find a troglodyte village in southern Tunisia, with apartment houses built of mud dauber, each apartment being separate from the others and consisting of one room, one door and no windows.

Crude, treacherous stairs, worn by much use, led to the doors from the outside. The life of these inhabitants was much like that of the Pueblo Indians of America and was another instance of apartment dwelling of that period.

We find in the Twelfth century in Kandy, Ceylon, a type of apartment better known today as the homes of the original cliff dwellers. These cliffs were built in the form of individual apartments, one above the other and served as a refuge for the Ceylonese against the invading Malays.

The Ceylonese monarch of that age was so much impressed by the apartment, or cliff dwellers, that he appointed priests to take charge of them, and dedicated lands for their support. That was probably the origin of our present superintendent or resident manager of apartment houses.

Coming to the North American continent, we find at Mena Verda, Colo., a large community apartment, known as "The Cliff Palace," tucked away under an overhanging rock, which afforded protection in the form of a roof.

Entrance was made from the top of the apartment, by a crude ladder, and the individual apartments were built in tiers, rising a few feet per apartment. This is still a famous relic of ancient Indian civilization in southwest Colorado.

What was probably the first example of set-back architecture was discovered at Taos Pueblo, New Mexico, where a large Indian communal house was discovered and housed about 200 Indian families. This house was inhabited by Pueblo Indians and was built of stone and sometimes mud. This communal house was often the subject for artists.—Raymond R. Keane, in the Philadelphia Record.

Wihur C. Hawk, president of the fair association, said today community and county fairs throughout the tri-state territory probably would be held here during the week just preceding the exposition here.

"These will provide elimination contests so only the best of exhibits will be concentrated for the Tri-State Fair," he said.

T. W. HALE TALKS TO ALLRED AND ROGERS AT REUNION

T. W. Hale, 13, son of Tom Hale, got the thrill of a lifetime down at the Cowboy Reunion at Stamford on July 3, when he had the pleasure of meeting both Will Rogers and Governor Allred. T. W. not only met them but had a brief conversation with each of them.

T. W. is some cowboy himself, though not the Wild West variety. All his life he has lived on a farm and ranch and he knows a lot about cows. He greatly enjoyed the rodeo and the other glamorous events at the big Reunion.

Others going down with him were his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hale, and other members of the family, and his grand-parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Yates.

In listing those from Tahoka, in last week's News, who attended the Cowboy Reunion at Stamford we unintentionally omitted the names of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Hatchell and Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Fenton Jr. There were possibly many others who went.

Cutting Remembers Former Tahokaite

Ben Moore of O'Donnell is yet a young man but he has been in this county a long time. He was a pioneer citizen of Tahoka, and when he was here Tuesday he gave us this bit of interesting information.

When the will of the late Senator Bronson Cutting of New Mexico was probated, it was found that he had bequeathed $25,000 to his private secretary, Edgar F. Puryear. Cutting was recently killed in an airplane accident, you will remember.

Puryear, Mr. Moore says, was a former resident of Tahoka. He was a teacher in the public schools here about the years 1914 or 1915. He came down here from Missouri as a tenderfoot. On arrival into this cow country, he donned a big pair of boots but continued to wear loud ties. He was an affable fellow and made many friends as well as few enemies. All the old-timers will remember him, Mr. Moore says. He located in New Mexico later and some years ago served as state senator in that state. Then Senator Cutting appointed him as his private secretary.

Other beneficiaries in Cutting's will were the two LaFollette brothers, sons of the famous late Bob LaFollette, one of whom is now U. S. Senator from Wisconsin and the other of whom is governor of that state. The Senator received a bequest of $50,000 and the Governor $25,000.

Mr. Moore himself had a friendly letter from Senator Cutting shortly before his death.

New Lynn Man Is Onion Raiser

J. R. Butler, who lives six miles east of Tahoka, dropped into the News office Tuesday with a sample of the onions he is raising this year. He has only a small patch but they are producing bountifully. Mr. Butler says they were raised in beds of mesquite weeds too. When it comes to gardening, Mr. Butler evidently knows his onions.

A few days before that our good friend A. L. Dynagan also brought to the News office specimens of the onions he had raised this year. They too were big fine fellows and were certainly good—as onions go.

But personally we can't eat over a gallon of onions a week. When we do our breath is so loud that you can smell it a city block against the wind. Onions are a fine crop to sell.

Wash Hickerson and family of Three Lakes returned Tuesday from Waco, where they attended a family reunion. Wash says all his brothers and sisters were present and many other relatives. They had a wonderfully good time.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Turner returned Tuesday night from a visit with relatives in Montana near the line of Canada. While there they made a trip into Canada.
