PIONEER LADY DIED TUESDAY

Mrs. L. C. Le Sure, Known Here As Mrs. Petty, Dies Suddenly In California

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Lockwood received a telegram early Tuesday morning from San Diego, California advising them of the death of Mrs. Lockwood's sister, Mrs. L. C. LeSure, better known here as Mrs. W. E. Petty. Mrs. LeSure had been in ill health for several months but her death at this time was entirely unexpected. The news of her demise brought a great shock to many friends here. Mr. and Mrs. Lockwood left about noon Tuesday for San Diego to attend the funeral services.

Mrs. Petty was one of the pioneers of Lynn county. In fact, she was either the first or the second woman resident of the county. She and her husband, W. E. Petty, came to this county away back in the early eighties. For a long time he was the foreman of the T-Bar ranch and later was one of the organizers of Lynn county and served as one of its first commissioners. He died here about fifteen years ago. Mrs. Petty continued to reside here until a few years ago, when she married L. C. LeSure and established her home in San Diego.

A full account of the life of Mrs. LeSure—Mrs. Petty while she resided here—would include almost the entire history of Lynn county from the days of the Indian and the Buffalo up to recent years.

The News joins many friends in deploring her unexpected death.

"Fly-By-Night" Merchants Hit By New Orders

The city council in special session Wednesday adopted two ordinances, with emergency clauses putting them into effect immediately upon publication, regulating "fly-by-night" business concerns that locate here for the fall trade and then fold their tents and silently steal away before the first of January without having paid any taxes.

The first of these ordinances requires any transient person dealing in second-hand automobiles to first make application to the city secretary for a license to engage in such business; and the annual license fee is fixed at $500.00 to be paid before the applicant is allowed to engage in the business. Detailed reports of sales must be made to the city secretary. Violation of the ordinance is punishable by a fine of $100.00 for each offense, each day constituting a separate offense.

The second ordinance undertakes to regulate the sale of goods, wares, and merchandise by transients. Any transient person desiring to engage in the business of selling such merchandise must likewise make application to the city secretary for a license to do so and shall pay a license tax of $25.00 per month. Persons violating the ordinance are to be fined from $50.00 to $100.00, each day to constitute a separate offense.

Tate's Mother Not Expected To Recover

Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Tate returned Tuesday night from Comanche, where they went to visit his sick mother and other relatives.

Mr. Tate reports that his mother, who is 69 years of age, is in a most precarious condition. Physicians hold out no hope for her recovery, and the indications are that she can live only a few weeks at the most, and the end may be expected at any time.

Jim Dye, Mayor, and member of the Clean-up committee recently appointed by the Luncheon Club, asks that we announce that Friday November 22, has been designated as Clean-Up Day in Tahoka. ## LYNN PIONEERS HOLD MEETING

Complete Organization At Meeting Held Last Thursday; Many Present

Many Lynn county pioneers attended the second meeting of this organization, which was held at the American Legion Hall in this city on Thursday of last week, too late for us to report the same in our last issue.

The purpose of the meeting was to complete the organization of the old settlers which was begun at a previous meeting, and this was done. A constitution and by-laws were adopted and a name given, to-wit: The Pioneers of Lynn County. (Contin'd. on last page)

18,000 Bales Cotton Ginned In County

Due to rain and cold weather, only 410 bales of cotton have been ginned in Tahoka since our report last week. A total of 4,326 bales had been ginned here up to 11 o'clock Thursday morning.

According to the best estimates we can make, about 18,000 bales have been ginned in the county; 12,609 bales had been ginned prior to November 1, according to special agent E. W. Holloway.

The price has advanced slightly the past week, the market Thursday morning opening at about 11.48. The local market is about a cent lower. Seed are still selling at $36. per ton.

Farmers report much damage to the crop in places by the severe freeze Sunday and Monday nights. The temperature here dropped down to 25 both nights, and sleet fell throughout Monday morning, accompanied by a little snow. The precipitation amounted to .08 of an inch. All vegetation was killed, and many of the cotton bolls were destroyed or damaged. The damage to some crops is estimated as high as 20 per cent.

Judge Cain New County Attorney

Judge C. H. Cain on last Friday filed his bond and took the oath of office as county attorney, to which position he was recently appointed by the commissioners court to serve out the unexpired term of Truett Smith, resigned.

This term will not expire until January 1, 1937.

Two Weddings Are Held This Week

J. B. King of Tahoka, son of J. H. King, and Miss Eireda Womack of New Lynn were united in marriage Sunday.

Earl Sewell McNeill of New Lynn and Miss Artie Ruth Edwards, daughter of J. F. Edwards residing south of Tahoka, procured a license to marry on Tuesday.

Tom Yandell of O'Donnell, former county commissioner, and Tom Brewer of Joe Bailey near O'Donnell were business visitors here both Tuesday and Wednesday. Mr. Brewer was of the opinion that cotton in his community had been damaged 20 per cent by the freeze of Sunday night and Monday.

Mrs. Roy Green of Hobbs was here last week end visiting friends and looking after some business, and she remained over to attend the funeral of her aunt, Mrs. C. W. Cleveland of Midway, who died after Mrs. Green's arrival here.

Persons setting out fires, however, are warned not to permit the same to spread and to become a hazard to near-by property. Every precaution against damage by fire must be taken.

Sen. Nelson's One-House Legislature Plan Draws Attention Of Texas Press

Senator G. H. Nelson's resolution favoring a one-house legislature, which he introduced in the Senate on Wednesday of last week, drew the fire of some of his colleagues and received scant favor in that body, but it has elicited state-wide interest and comment, most of which seems to be favorable.

"Let's kick it out the back door right now," Senator Holbrook of Galveston is reported to have said, and by a vote of 19 to 6 the Senate proceeded to refer it to a committee where it should die a natural death.

But the idea is not dead. It seems to be very much alive. People are tired of the slow and cumbersome processes of legislation. They are tired of the jumble and confusion that develops every time an important bill is introduced into the legislature.

The Nelson plan would eliminate much of the red tape and the delay and the expense of legislation.

He proposes that instead of having two houses, one consisting of 31 members and the other of 150, the two often working at cross purposes one with the other, our legislature shall consist of one house. His proposal is that this house consist of 42 members, two from each congressional district elected for four-year terms, one from each district to be elected every two years, the salary to be $5,000 per annum, "with the provision that such elector be precluded from taking or receiving any compensation from any individual, firm or corporation during the tenure of such office and that he shall give his full and undivided time to the best interests of the people of his state."

There would be one continuous term of such legislature for each two-year period, but such body might recess or adjourn from time to time at their will and convene without the call of the governor should more than fifty per cent of such body so desire.

Such a plan, Senator Nelson points out, would abolish the necessity for or the possibility of a free conference committee, which is often necessary under the present system and which frequently results in legislation that is not really favored by a majority of either house. It would also render filibustering against any bill of no practical value and would eliminate obstructive and dilatory methods now often resorted to by a small minority for the purpose of defeating legislation desired by the majority.

By thus decreasing the number of legislators, even though their salaries might be placed as high as $5,000, the expense of legislation would be reduced and at the same time the very ablest men in the state would be attracted and called into her service. The provision requiring legislators to devote their entire time to the duties of their offices and prohibiting them from accepting employment from any individual or corporation would make it possible to abolish the evil, now so common, of legislators undertaking to serve two masters at the same time, the state and some corporation or special interest.

Nearly all the daily newspapers coming to this office have commented favorably on the Nelson proposal.

After noting that his colleagues had given Senator Nelson a "19 to 6 spanking" and turned his resolution down, THE LUBBOCK JOURNAL proceeded as follows: "But that's all right, even though he was badly voted down. He has the right idea. One must expect most legisla-

WPA FUNDS FOR LATERAL ROADS

Allotments Totaling $55,000 Announced; Court Doubts Plan's Feasibility

Two separate and distinct allotments for lateral road improvements in Lynn county have been announced by the WPA office in San Antonio, according to press reports. Announcement was made from the San Antonio office on last Saturday, through the public press, that $27,126 had been allotted to Lynn county for this purpose upon a pledge that the county would furnish $15,955.98; and 77 workers from the relief rolls.

Boy Is Injured In Fall From Auto

Randall McGlaun, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank McGlaun, was painfully if not seriously hurt Tuesday afternoon when he fell from the runningboard of a car on the Post highway just east of the railroad tracks.

Randall was returning with other children from school and was riding on the running board. When he fell or was thrown from the car, he landed on his feet but was unable to maintain his balance, and the back of his head struck the ground violently. He was rendered unconscious by the impact and did not fully regain consciousness until about four o'clock Wednesday morning.

A physician was called immediately after the accident, who administered such treatment as could be given. It is not believed that there was any fracture of the skull or any permanent injury.

HIGHWAY WORK IS INDEFINITE

Bids Fall To Meet Approval; No New Work Started Yet; Top North Section

Bid for the construction of call-the base course with asphalt base preservative for 7.8 miles on highway No. 9, beginning at the southern limits of Tahoka and extending toward O'Donnell were received by the state highway commission in Austin on Wednesday, November 6. The lowest bid was by Brown & Root, $66,578.

The contract was not let at the time, however, because the lowest bid was higher than Government estimates, and the State would be compelled to pay the difference, it is explained. P. C. Stanley, local engineer, states that he understands that Division Engineer Garrett of Lubbock has recommended that the contract be let any way and that the work proceed. However, the local office has not yet been advised of the letting of any contract.

Contract for like work on a little more than six miles from the Dawson county line and extending northward toward Tahoka was let a few weeks ago. We have no information as to when work will begin.

The placing of oil on 3.5 miles of this highway from the Lubbock county line was to be completed Thursday, Mr. Stanley stated, and the asphalt work would begin today. With pretty weather and no hindrance this work should be completed within a week or ten days.

Good Program At Luncheon Club

With County Agent V. F. Jones in charge of the program at the business men's luncheon Tuesday, the program was given a historical coloring.

Quite a long list of catch questions, many of them being of a historical nature, was furnished Rev. Geo. Dale, and he proceeded to propound them to the members. Needless to say, the good preacher and the toastmaster themselves doubtless didn't know the correct answers to many of the questions.

Rev. J. M. Hale, former pastor of the Brownfield Baptist Church and a new arrival in our town, gave a ten minutes talk on Texas history, which was very interesting.

W. S. Anglin made a suggestion that since Tahoka will doubtless have plenty of water next summer steps be taken to place water in our city park, construct a wading pool for kids, and otherwise improve the property.

Homer St. Clair made a report for the committee previously appointed to raise funds for the roadside beautification of highway No. 9. The committee had collected $55.50 for the purpose. Nearly everybody approached had made a contribution, he stated.

Supt. W. G. Barrett stated that some of the high school boys who are taking hand lessons have no instruments and are not able to purchase them. Mr. Jones appointed the following committee to look into the matter and see what can be done about it: L. F. Craft, W. T. Boyell, and Mrs. J. K. Applewhite.

Roy Leslie was appointed as toastmaster for the luncheon next Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Tobe Kennedy are happy over the arrival of a fine little daughter, born Sunday afternoon. We failed to learn the little lady's name. Mrs. Kennedy was the former Miss Vergie Falkner.

School Library Given WPA Fund

Superintendent W. G. Barrett received advice this week that a WPA allowance had been granted the Tahoka Independent School District for the purpose of employing two librarians.

According to newspaper reports, the amount of the allowance is $383.00.

A lady from the WPA office at Big Spring was here Thursday arranging for the work. Two local girls will be used as librarians, but if the two had been selected their names had not been given out Thursday morning.

Application for this project was made by Alvin Hicks, president of the school board, several months ago.

Assembly Of God Holding Meeting

Special revival services are being conducted this week at the Assembly of God Church, according to the pastor, Mrs. Newton, Evangelist C. L. Wiseman of Carlsbad, New Mexico, is doing the preaching. "He is bringing the old-time gospel," Mrs. Newton says, "and the singing is fine."

The services will probably continue throughout next week and a cordial invitation is extended to everybody to attend.

R. F. Barton and Mrs. J. D. Walden, all of Artesia, and Ivy Coor of Weed, New Mexico, were visitors here last week end. They were accompanied by Mrs. N. J. Barton of Wilson, who had been visiting at Artesia a few weeks. Mr. and Mrs. Walden came to remain here or near here through the fall. Mr. Barton farmed in the Dixie community several years but he is now operating a grocery store, service station, and tourist camp at Artesia.

County Agent V. F. Jones and Assistant Agent C. A. Lawrence and about twenty-five Lynn County farmers went to Plainview Wednesday and heard the address of Hon. C. A. Cobb, director of the cotton division of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. They report that he made a very strong and effective address.

Midway Woman Died Tuesday

Mrs. C. W. Cleveland of Midway died at about four o'clock P. M., November the 7th, after an illness of four years or more.

Funeral services were held at the Tahoka cemetery at 10:30, at which Rev. McCarty of the Primitive Baptist Church officiated.

Mrs. Cleveland had a host of friends in this section, having resided here for many years.

About a year ago, her daughter, Mrs. R. L. Littlepage, had a cottage built by her home for her parents, in order to better care for her invalid mother. They resided there until her death last Thursday.

Surviving her are her husband and three children. Her maiden name was Mattie A. Kuykendall, and several of that family are prominent in this section.

Twins Are Born To Dixie Couple

Harley Dee and Charley Lee are the names of twin sons born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schulze of the Dixie community on Monday of last week. The little fellows weighed six pounds each.

This item escaped us until Dr. Ann West reported it this week, and she says that the mother and both babes are doing well.

OPENS FILLING STATION
Paul Brooks has opened the Conoco Service Station on Highway 2, three blocks north of the courthouse, and is offering a complete filling station service.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Harris have gone to East Texas this week to visit relatives and look after business matters. They have relatives at Naples, Morris county, and Marietta, Cass county. They were accompanied by Leonard Harris and his friend Wayland Womack of Marietta, who came out a few weeks ago to spend the fall.

B. C. Aycox of Wilson dropped in Friday and paid his subscription for another year. He can't do without the county paper.

Miss Margaret Wetzel, student in the Tech, spent the week end here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Wetzel.

Weatherford Head Will Rogers Drive

Jim Weatherford received notification Monday of his appointment by Amon G. Carter of Fort Worth as chairman of the Will Rogers Memorial committee for Lynn county.

Mr. Weatherford readily accepted the honor and is already at work on the job. He requests that all who may desire to make a contribution to the Will Rogers Memorial Fund shall either see him personally or pay the money in to The First National Bank of Tahoka. All contributions whether large or small will be greatly appreciated.

Postoffice Closing Wednesday P. M.

Under a new regulation at Washington, the post office here will be allowed to close hereafter each Wednesday at noon. The new order went into effect on Wednesday of this week.

Postal clerks are required to work only 40 hours per week. Postmaster W. C. Wells explained, and this is responsible for the new order going into effect here.

Mr. and Mrs. Jess Gurley and little son spent Sunday and Monday as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Vance Wagon at their farm home near Muleshoe. Jess says that Mr. and Mrs. Wagon have a fine irrigated farm and are prospering. They also have a very fine four-months-old daughter, he says. Mr. Wagon was formerly employed at the Boulhoun Grocery Store and Market here.

Brownfield And Tahoka Game Will Be Played On Local Field This Afternoon

After a two weeks' rest, Tahoka Bulldogs will meet the Brownfield Cubs on the local field this Friday afternoon for what should be one of the best football games of the current season.

When Brownfield and Tahoka meet the fur generally flies, and fans are promised their money's worth. According to previous dope, the two teams are about evenly matched. Both have suffered reverses this season and have lost several games. Tahoka has lost two or three of her best men from injuries, and Brownfield has been the victim of a mumps epidemic, though reports are that the Cubs will be at their full strength today for the first time this year.

Coach Prentice Walker and Capt. James Minor declare the boys are ready to go, and will do their best to win. Tahoka citizens are urged to go out and give them their support. Admission: 35c and 15c.

Something About Billions Earthquakes Marvelous New Cars News From Ethiopia

The world has passed through earthquake week. Earthquakes in Montana, greatest sufferer on this continent. Severe shocks are reported in Slam.

Earthquakes in Buffalo, N. Y.; Ottawa, Toronto, Guayaquil, Ecuador; a busy seismographic week.

And the moon is partly to blame. Its power of gravitation exercises a strong pull on the earth, as it shows in lifting the ocean tides.

Greece is ready to take back her king and many Greeks are growing "spike" mustaches like his. Many Germans grew mustaches, curling up, to imitate their former Kaiser. There is not much in imitating mustaches.

You wonder why the Greeks cannot find a Greek for king. If they must have a king, in days of "the glory that was Greece" it wasn't necessary to go outside among "barbarians" to find a ruler.

You may want to know that in England, where good times have really come back, the Tories have made heavy gains at the present election and the Labor party sustains heavy losses.

"It is a very great rebuff for labor," says MacDonald. "The people are not being taken in by wild and reckless promises which they know cannot be carried out, in municipal or national government."

Ed Howe, an able writer of Kansas, is expected to "put aside his pencil and pen forever," because his doctor warns him that blindness is approaching.

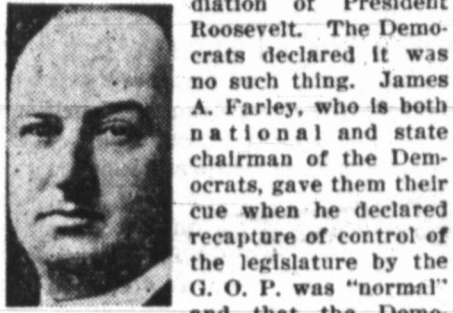

Perhaps Mr. Howe will tell his doctor: "Milton did much of his important writing after he was totally blind, and I can do the same." Mr. Howe can use a dictating machine, whereas Milton dictated to his daughter, who, uneducated, found it difficult to write down his Latin dictation.

Bob Davis Reveals

Twenty-Six Men Adrift at Sea, to Say Nothing of the Dog. S. S. FUSILLER, NORTH SEA. SURFED WITH BUSES, railroads and gasoline buggies and hungry for a whiff of salt water I took passage out of Leith, Scotland, on one of the snug steel passenger boats of the London and Edinburgh Shipping company.

At the pier, whilst the crew was making final preparations to cast off and slip into the Firth of Forth I saw a weather-beaten man in an officer's uniform approach another individual dressed in civilian attire and impress upon him a brotherly caress.

Once out of the harbor, into the sea lanes, and hankering as usual to levy on the skipper for a printable tale of the deep, I invaded the sanctuary of Captain Piper, as cordial a sea dog as ever I met, and made myself known.

"My dear sir," he said, upon catching the drift of my intent, "let me introduce you to Chief Officer Frederick Park, who has bucked the sea with wind and steam for more than 50 years. He can spin you 10 yarns to my one; classical stories of the big water, brave days, the ocean at its roaring best. It is your job to loosen his tongue."

"Suits me perfectly," I said, confident that he would produce what was required, and then went below. At dinner, the moon riding high and not a whitecap visible in any direction, I returned to the bridge. Chief Park was there scanning the sea.

"We do look alike," he remarked casually. "He and I are all that survives of the original Parks. He has had experience of life, too; more than I can ever hope to have. I mean the sort of thing that lies deep. In the year 1887, third mate of a full-rigged ship, the Carpathian, out of Liverpool, Jack—that's his name—had a taste of fire at sea; the worst thing that can happen aboard ship.

"How many men did the two boats contain?" "Perhaps 40, officers and crew. Captain Finley was aboard the gig with my brother and more of the crew than there was actually room for. All hands saw the Carpathian burn like a furnace and go down by the head before they left the scene of the disaster. I must tell you that just prior to the gig putting away from the falls a mongrel dog, property of the whole crew, came yelping out of the hold, raced along the deck and jumped into the captain's arms. He was the last living creature off the ship, and he brought something with him. That he did."

Chief Park, his back to the bridge, his figure silhouetted against the sky, suddenly ignored my presence and told the rest of the story to himself. He seemed like one detached. "Yes sir, that dog brought something with him," echoed the voice. "After the two boats got free from the plunging Carpathian a blow came up. It was well nigh impossible for them to keep company. That night two men were transferred from the gig to the lifeboat and the craft separated. That was the last seen of the lifeboat—ever. For nine days the 26 men in the gig took their water rations at the rate of two table-spoons twice a day for each man. Yes sir, and two for the dog. But that wasn't enough, so they threw out fish-hooks baited with sea biscuit dough, caught sea birds, cut their throats and drank the blood, never forgetting the dog. Every man Jack in the gig did his share to keep the dog alive. Wonderful, wasn't it? Nobody begrudged him either blood or water. Nowadays they talk about treating men like dogs. Well—I don't know; perhaps men are not as they used to be. When you think of that gigload of thirsting sailors 50 years ago off the coast of Chile dividing what they had to keep a dog's life beating, it looks as though times have changed. On the eighth day some of the men drank of a vegetable oil called Colza. But the dog got his ration of water. I guess in a way that he had something to do with the unselfish behavior of those men in the gig. I do believe that."

Mr. Park turning suddenly, acted as though I had just arrived. "Yes," I said, "there is no question about it."

"It would seem so, wouldn't it? On the ninth day the gig with all alive, including the dog, was picked up by a sailing vessel off Africa."

SYNOPSIS

Antoinette Taft, twenty-three, attractive and ambitious but unable to hold a job, lives in a Arab San Francisco flat with her sister Brenda and brother Cliff, who are older, her seventeen-year-old brother Bruce, and their Aunt Meg. In her job hunting rounds she interviews Lawrence Bellamy, editor of the Journal of Commerce, but finds he has no place for a woman writer. She likes him very much, as she tells Brenda later. "He's a stunning young thing, as tall as Cliff, not much more than thirty, I think, and very much the gentleman." As the sisters talk, dimwit Barney Kerr drops in, asking where Cliff is.

CHAPTER II—Continued

Tony, Brenda and Barney sat on lastly, idly, at the wide-opened window in the dim light. Bruce was snoring audibly on the couch.

"We can have a light if there's any purpose in it," Tony observed.

"No, I have to go," Barney said, not stirring. "I wonder why we're all so tired tonight?" he asked, after a space.

"Oh, we sold the Isaac Walton," Brenda remembered to announce suddenly. "Dr. Talbot bought it."

"I wouldn't thank you for all the first editions that ever were!" Tony remarked. "This observation was permitted to die away into silence. Then Barney asked:

"What took Cliff to Sac?"

"They'd punched the switchboard wrong for the Weinstein thing," Tony stated indifferently.

"Who said so?" Barney's words were like bullets.

"Cliff did."

"What'd he say?"

"Well, if you must know, Barney, Cliff was shaving this morning, and Mr. Ridley telephoned. Cliff's first speech was 'The hell!' Then he rushed out like a fire wagon, and the next thing I knew he had telephoned that he was off for Sacramento."

"I'll bet you it was all right when he got there," Barney said, after thought.

"Was that bad, Barney?" Brenda asked anxiously. Darling old Benny, Tony thought; she had had so much anxiety in her twenty-eight years!

"Oh, kinder."

"Was it—was it Cliff's fault?"

"It was all our fault, I guess. We did the drawings."

"It seems," Tony volunteered, "that they wanted this marble slab to stand up vertically, as it were, and it was cut to lie down, sideways, and they said they'd have to take out a piece of wall in the basement."

"Who said so?" Barney asked, in the explosive, incredulous manner he had used before.

"Well, that was it. That was the trouble."

Except for repeating under his breath Clifford's own expletive, Barney made no comment on this. There was silence again. "See Bellamy on the Journal, Tony?" he asked.

"Yes, I did. This morning. Nothing came of it."

"Ha!" Barney ejaculated, and at his tone she felt her cheeks flush in the shadows. It was as if Barney felt himself personally charged with the business of getting Tony Taft, who had lost so many jobs in the past few years, still another.

"What was it that your Aunt Sally had in mind?"

"She wasn't at home when I telephoned, so I don't know," Tony said untruthfully. It was none of his business whether she was working or idle!

"Miss Grace, in our office, is going to marry Jay Klinker," Barney said after a moment. "She's got such a smart girl, but we all feel badly to have her go. For one thing, she's always on time." The voice that he had been trying to keep very casual over his pipe took on a slightly sentimental note. "I think that's darned important," he went on. "Being on time, dependable. And then she's a smartly dressed girl, neat. Men like women in offices to be neat—look nice. Then another thing, you never hear her. Quiet. All the girls like her, but there's none of this giggling and whispering."

"I loathe you, you smug pig," Tony said pleasantly in her heart, as he panned. "Who are you to rub it into me that I don't get to the office on time and that my clothes are shabby? I loathe and despise you, smoking there and feeling so sure of yourself, and if you had forty thousand a week I wouldn't marry you under chloroform!"

Aloud she said nothing, and the rain began to spatter and whisper in the dark again. Barney said for the third time, "Gosh, I've got to go," and this time did go, with a little doorway murmuring to Brenda, and a casual "Night, Tony!" to the younger girl.

After a while Brenda said: "Feel awfully bad about that Journal job, Tony?"

"No," Tony answered readily, but in a tone so low that the other girl knew she was holding it steady. "Not so much about that. But—oh, I don't know, the whole thing! Other persons get into the work they like, and get paid for it, and make good. I seem to have to do everything I hate—book-keeping, jobs in stores, companion to crazy old ladies in love with their chauffeurs, teaching in private schools that go bust owing me a hundred and twenty dollars! It would seem that I can't do what I want to do, and I hate to do what I—"

She laughed, presently resuming on a less impatient note, "I hate to do what I have to do," she said mildly. "I hate office work, Benny. If it were the stage, or a newspaper, or doing anything in the movies, I'd work like a dog. But just to go downtown tomorrow and get a job taking letters from young pip-squeaks who haven't the remotest idea what they're talking about, and hang my coat in a locker, and go to a cafeteria for lunch—and go on with it, Brenda, for three years and five years and ten and twenty— It scares me!"

"You'll never drudge along in an office for twenty years or for five!" Brenda predicted, in a troubled voice.

"You have!" Tony thought. Aloud she said nothing.

"You'll marry," Brenda said. Tony could feel her cheeks flush resentfully. "Maybe Barney—" Brenda went on boldly.

"I don't think it'll be Barney," Tony answered, moderately. "I wish," she went on, her tone warming, "I wish you could have heard the nice little sermon he was just preaching to me! Barney's so outrageously stuck-on himself!" Tony interpolated, resentfully: "about being on-time at the office, and dressing smartly—"

"He didn't!"

"He did."

"There was a silence."

"It only means that he's in love with you."

"He's in love with Barney Kerr—that's who he's in love with!"

"No, honestly, Tony, Barney isn't so conceited! But he likes you so much that he worries about you—honestly, that's it."

"Any man can ask any girl," Tony observed, after thought. "He's never said anything."

"Not on a hundred and fifty a month, with a mother like his."

"He's really in love with the whole family, and I don't blame him, when you look at the family he's got!" Tony said. "He's lonely, and he likes our food, and he can talk about oil circuit-breakers and pole-top whatnots with Cliff, and that's all there is to it."

"Tony," Brenda began, as Tony fell silent, "would you like him to ask you to marry him?"

"Yes," Tony answered without hesitation, "so that I could refuse him!" Brenda laughed.

"He's too smart to risk that," she said. "In some ways he's much wiser than Cliff. But anyone seeing the way he watches you, Tony, and worries about your affairs, and—well, even in this giving advice this evening—anyone can see that he's thinking of you all the time. And I know this," Brenda went on seriously, "I know enough of human nature to know that the minute a man like that marries a woman, she—she becomes sacred. You'd be completely spoiled—every-without quarreling, but, that's neither here nor there! Aunt Sally'd be pleased—and I suppose you would be."

"But why should you want me to get married, Benny?"

"I want you to be happy."

"I wouldn't be. And once you're married, you can't get out."

"I daresay it's quite different, though, once you're in."

Tony was silent.

"But, why not Barney?" The older sister persisted lightly. "Cliff loves him; we all do. We've known him all our lives."

"In the first place, he isn't in love with me," Tony said. "In the second, I'm not in the least in love with him, and I never could be. And at that," she added honestly, "I think he wants me, has it in his mind, anyway, that we will marry some day, and I believe I could marry him and make him a darned good wife! But there's no—no flame to that, Brenda."

Tony finished, in a low tone. "There's no glory, if I were successful at something—as a head nurse, or a reporter, or a photographer, or a lecturer. It'd be different. I'd marry with—style, then. I'd feel that I'd been a success at one thing and would be at another. But if I married Barney now it'd be a harbor—and he'd know it! It'd be just—just taking care of poor wild Tony, who tried for the stage and the newspapers and was fired and snubbed all round, and who finally realized that a woman's truest role is that of a wife and mother—"

She stopped, her voice thickening.

"It is the happiest life," Brenda offered, in a slow voice with notes of pain in it. "If you love a man, that is," she added.

"Ah, but you see I don't," Tony said. "I know the real thing when I meet it. In that newspaper office to-day—down at the Journal rooms, I mean, I met a man—"

She stopped. Presently she resumed again, a little shamefacedly: "You'd think I'm an absolute fool if I say that something—something flashed between us—between this Mr. Bellamy upon whom I'd never set eyes in my life before, and me—that was nearer—nearer—love, than anything Barney's ever made me feel! He had only to look at me to make me feel silly and cold and shuddery, you know that wonderful feeling that you're going all to pieces and don't care!"

"I don't know," said Brenda, laughing in sudden relief, "and I do think you're silly, idiotic, if you ask me. What do you know of this man?"

"Nothing!" admitted Tony, laughing too. "Except that he's somewhere around thirty, and married—"

"Married?"

"Yes, of course—he would be."

"But that isn't love, Tony."

"Well, maybe it isn't. But it's something—a thing that a girl wants to have before she gives in. Brenda. Just the shape of his mouth—it's quite hard and large, and the look in his eyes—he looks up and smiles at you quite a while after he's finished speaking—"

"Antoinette Taft!"

"I know. I know how it sounds, I admit that it's supremely silly! I only used it as an illustration—What on earth—" She said the last words on an odd note of fright. For the telephone was shrilly ringing.

She ran out in the narrow hall. Brenda's face was a study in varied emotions as she listened to the conversation that was by turns puzzled, awed, excited, rapturous.

"Oh, Benny, Benny," gasped Tony, rubbing back to fall at her sister's knees and clutch at her dramatically. "It's the Call! Some Mr. Greenwood of the Call! Benny, he wanted to see me tonight—I'm to see him at two tomorrow! He wanted me to come down right now. Twenty-five a week—twenty-five a week, and I'm to try the society column! Oh, Benny, you'll help me, won't you? I mean with the people who come into the store—I mean getting engagements and parties and everything! Oh, Benny, he sounded so nice! He said he was out of his senses trying to get someone, and I said I couldn't come down tonight—"

"What is it?" Aunt Meggy here interpolated dazedly, from her doorway.

Cliff, blown and pale and tired, was in the hall doorway. "What's all the shooting about?" he said.

Tony enlightened them ecstatically. "Oh, Cliff, just as I was despairing—"

"—I'd been to the Journal today, and there didn't seem a chance—just as I was despairing, this Mr. Greenwood telephoned from the Call, and he wants me to gather up all the news I can and begin tomorrow—and twenty-five a week, Cliff!"

"That's something like," Cliff said, with his slow smile.

"And, Cliff, you know I can do it," chattered Tony. "You know I can, Benny! Aunt Sally'll help me, and Mrs. Terry!"

"Want to go down now and clinch it?" Clifford asked.

"Oh, Cliff, could we? He really did want to see me, because tomorrow's the day he usually has off, and he said I'd have to 'scout around and dig up a lot of muck for the Sunday page! He sounded so cute!" Tony said, in a rush.

"Get your hat on," said Cliff. "I know a man named Burke who works on the sports section. We'll go down."

"You angel!" Tony called back, flying into her room to change. Brenda smiled at her oldest brother. "She's two girls," Brenda said. "She was down and out five minutes ago, no hope anywhere—she's been telling me what a failure she is—"

"Failure, shush! She's only twenty-three." Cliff was lighting a cigarette.

"How'd it go in Sacramento, darling?"

"Oh, I think I butchered the switchboard, all right. However, we think we can work out of it."

Cliff put on his damp overcoat again, as Tony came out radiant and fresh in her dark blue coat and small hat, and they went away together.

CHAPTER III

"It's so much easier to go in there with you along, Cliff," Tony said, when they had left the street car and made a wet run for the lighted doorway of the big newspaper building.

"Sure," he said. "I hope Burke's there. He may not be, though."

The elevator flashed up past floors that were dark and deserted at eleven o'clock at night. They stepped out at the fourteenth floor; everything was brightly animated and exciting here, and Tony looked about her with avid interest at the glass-top doors that were opening and shutting continually upon seething inner apartments. A quiet girl at a telephone switchboard looked up.

"Mr. Greenwood?" The girl repeated the name cautiously into a black rubber mouthpiece. "There's a Miss Taft to see you here."

Sitting back, she said, "You can go right in. It's room 18."

Tony followed her brother dazedly. Here was room 18, with "City Room" lettered in black on the door, and "Charles Greenwood" set modestly in a corner below it.

Cliff opened the door, and Tony had her first look at the city room. It angled the entire width of the building on two sides. The third side, she was presently to learn, was the Sunday paper department, and the fourth was variously divided by the library, the files, the photographers' lairs. Down below were the business offices, imposing in heavy chairs and eucalyptus paneling; up here everything was confusion, disorder, haste.

The instant her nostrils caught the first scent of it she knew that she belonged here; that this was her world, her battlefield, her first love. Men were everywhere; shouting, smoking. Typewriters were clicking; there was a ripping sound as paper was torn from them; there was a constant eccentric chatter of a telegraph machine from the wide littered desk marked "Associated Press." Tony saw men wearing green eye-shades, eyeglassed men; saw one very handsome big dark fellow scolding away about something to an older man at a corner desk.

Mr. Charles Greenwood was a dark little weasel of a man who occupied a corner desk shut away from the general office only by a nicked and battered fence of dark wood with a gate. He was in his shirt-sleeves and smoking a cigar when Clifford and Tony were ushered into his immediate neighborhood.

The desk before the city editor was heaped high with the society pages of recent Sunday papers. He had evidently been clipping and pasting desperately; he indicated a drawer full of uninviting-looking letters.

"We got to have a page of this stuff, good," he said, "for Madame La Duchesse. That's the swell stuff, see—the Burlingame crowd, the la-di-dahs, see? You know that crowd, don't you?" he broke off to ask suspiciously, looking up at Tony.

"Well," Tony answered firmly, without the flicker of an eyelid.

"Well, now, look here. You'll have 'Ducky's' desk; that's what the boys called our last Madame," Greenwood broke off to say, appealing to their sympathy. "She was a hellion; she just raised hell in here, and she's left everything in a mess! Now, when you came here to leave your name—when was that?"

"Three times since Christmas," Tony reminded him.

"You said that you thought you could handle it?" His eye was suspicious again.

"I can."

"You understand that every Thursday we've got to have a whole page of it with two photos?"

Her heart-failed her for a second.

"Certainly," Tony said, with a reassuring nod.

"You can clip a lot of it for tomorrow, see?" the harassed Greenwood further explained. "Look over the papers; I've got the Oakland papers here too, and pick out whatever looks good to you. I won't be here, but you give it to Mr. Florence—he's that drunk-lookin' crook over there—"

"All right!" the fat man at the desk said significantly. "All right."

"Get it all together and hand it in before ten tomorrow night. And you'll have to get your own column, too—say about sixteen items—get 'em good, because we've been running down lately, and the old man was raising hell about it today. You run round among your friends, and you'll pick 'em up easy. Then, if you run into any good club stuff—women scrapping—bring that in, that's always good. Keep your eyes open—oh, and by the way, you'll do that dance down at the Burlingame club next week, will you?"

"Certainly," Tony agreed, her head spinning.

"All right, then—you take all this stuff along to your desk—MacGrath!" shouted the city editor, "help Miss Taft to take all this stuff to the Duck's desk, will you, and rustle her up a typewriter somewhere, and get her some paper. She's going to do our Sunday page tomorrow, and boy, will it be good! All right, Miss Taft, I'll see you Friday—keep your shirt on, and ask the boys for anything you want. Oh, and by the way, root us out a couple of good pictures tomorrow for Sunday. I didn't get round to it!"

Tony and Clifford and the amiably burdened MacGrath went to a cluttered desk by a black window that was trickling rain. Everyone looked at them; Tony did not dare raise her eyes.

She found her new domain frightfully dirty and the typewriter frame empty.

"I'll have Laren get you a typewriter downstairs," said MacGrath, in embarrassed apology. "There isn't a decent one on the floor. Looky, here's the book they keep the names in—who's in society, and who's married to whose sisters, and all that."

Tony clutched the shabby leather record eagerly.

"Oh, that'll be priceless!"

"He's all right," confided McGrath, with a jerk of his head toward the city editor's desk, "only he cusses a lot."

"Could I—just to get this stuff in order—could I come down tomorrow early—say about ten?" she asked. "He told me to come in at one. But I'd like to get started—"

"Oh, gosh, come at seven if you want to!" MacGrath said with a stare.

Man Slays Wife by Gun; Court Imposes $10 Fine

Called upon to pronounce on the case of a man who killed his wife because he discovered that she was unfaithful, an Assize court jury sitting at Lille has returned a thorough French verdict. It found him not guilty of murder, but guilty of carrying arms illegally.

Charles Simmoneau, an accountant, was the accused man. Suspecting his conjugal misfortune, he had engaged a detective to follow his wife's movements. Informed one day that she was in a certain hotel, he waited near until she left and then followed and shot her. She died in three months. In court Simmoneau said that he deeply regretted his act, and also expressed his grief at not having been allowed to go to his wife's bedside to beg her forgiveness. Acquitted of the murder charge, he was fined $10.

SOME DEFECTS IN OUR HISTORIES

Last week Billy Sunday, whose power as an evangelist a few years ago shook the continent, passed away. His death was given only scant notice by most of the newspapers. Of course he had not been in the public eye much for the past few years. If he had died when he was at the height of his power and vigor in the ministry, many columns of space in all our great dailies would of course have been devoted to his life and death.

And this brings to our mind another question: Why have not the writers of our histories given proper credit to our ministry and to our churches for the part they have played in the development of this civilization which we enjoy? Our United States histories deal mostly with the activities and accomplishments of statesmen and warriors. In recent years, more attention has also been given to our scientists and our financial and industrial leaders. But little attention has been given to our great religious movements or to our great men in the ministry.

Yet it is a fact that such men as Henry Ward Beecher, Sam Jones, Dwight L. Moody, Billie Sunday and others have probably had more influence upon the lives of our people and upon the life of our nation than have most of our Presidents. And in Texas, who can measure the influence that Major Penn had in shaping the life of our people? Who can estimate the influence of a Dr. Rankin or a George W. Truett? Yet, very little is said about any of our great religious leaders, except a few in Colonial times, in our most comprehensive historical works. The great religious movements in this country have been just as important as the great political movements, and they should be given their rightful place in our school histories.

A FREE PRESS

A few weeks ago a Houston district judge ordered two or three newspapers in that city not to print the evidence adduced on the trial of a certain case on the grounds that the reading of this evidence might disqualify jurors in a companion case to be tried. These newspapers disregarded and disobeyed the judge's order and printed the evidence; relying on the guarantees of a free press contained in our state constitution. The judge sent them to jail for contempt of court and they sued out writs of habeas corpus before the court of Criminal Appeals. Last week this court held that the district judge was wrong and that the newspapers had a right to print the evidence. All of which seems to us to be eminently correct. If the constitutional provision for a free press doesn't mean that the newspapers of the country have a right to publish the evidence adduced upon a public trial then it means nothing. We rejoice that the higher court has been able to see clearly and to protect the rights of the newspapers of the country as guaranteed by the constitution.

This case is far different from those cases which arose a few years ago, however, in which newspaper reporters refused to divulge to grand juries and to courts evidence of crime that had come into their possession from confidential sources, on the grounds that this was privileged matter. In these cases the courts held that the newspaper folks must divulge this information, and we again think that the courts were right. No man has a right to withhold from the courts evidence of crime. In fact, it is the duty of every man to disclose it, when called upon by the proper authorities to do so. It makes no difference whether he is a newspaper man, a preacher, or a bum. Every right-thinking man, who loves his country and has her best interests at heart, will be glad to do so.

We thank God that our courts are still functioning effectively in the protection of men's sacred rights, and that in spite of many handicaps they are still doing their best in most instances to enforce the laws of the land. Our need is that a few laws that shackle the courts be repealed and our judges and prosecuting attorneys be given more liberty and power in the trial of cases.

BAPTIST PROGRESS

When the news was spread through the United States in 1820 that an Anglo-Saxon colony was to be established in Texas, Joseph Bays, a Baptist minister of Missouri, came to the new field with that missionary zeal that has always characterized Baptists. On arrival in Texas he found that worship only according to the forms of the Catholic Church would be permitted, so he did the next best thing for the new colonial area, according to his light, by establishing a mission in the neutral territory east of the Sabine. Thus, while the Baptist Church is not so old as Anglo-Saxon culture in Texas the Baptists can at least call attention to the fact that a Baptist journeyed to Texas simultaneously with Moses Austin.

There were several other early unsuccessful attempts to establish Baptist organization in Texas, notably those by Freeman Smalley in 1824 and T. J. Pilgrim in 1829, and it is known that there were eleven Baptist families among Stephen F. Austin's original settlement of 300 families. It remained for the ingenuity of Daniel Parker to establish the first Baptist Church. Parker must have had some legal along with ministerial training because he investigated the law banning other than Catholic Churches and discovered that it only prohibited the "organization" of such bodies. He asked himself, Why not organize elsewhere and move in? This he did, organizing in Crawford county, Illinois, in 1833, with 7 members and moving to Austin's colony. This church, called "Pilgrim Church," was the first Baptist institution in Texas.

From seven members of the Pilgrim Church to the present-day million or more, the Baptists in Texas have marched steadily forward with the zeal of Bays and Parker. That they are still marching forward is evidenced by statistics showing 100,000 new members in the last three years. They have marched in membership growth and in spiritual, civic and educational progress and accomplishment. Much of the development of higher education in Texas is due to Baptist endeavor. All Texas owes Baptists an incalculable debt of gratitude.—Dallas News.

With the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and the subsequent repeal of the dry amendment in the state constitution, officers in many places even in local option territory have slackened their efforts to enforce the dry laws. As a result much more liquor is now being sold in so-called dry territory than ever before. Last week the Littlefield County-Wide News reported that on the preceding Saturday night 19 drunks were placed in the city jails at Littlefield and Sudan, and the Lubbock Journal last Tuesday stated that thirty drunks were placed in jail in Lubbock on Armistice day, which is doubtless an all-time record for this city. With plenty of whiskey everywhere, our prediction is that conditions are going to grow worse.

The liquor interests and the soaking wets are griping because the legislature has refused to permit the sale of liquor by the drink in cafes, restaurants, and hotels. They are now saying that any law that will not permit this cannot be enforced. In other words they want Texas turned wild loose as to the liquor traffic. If cafes, restaurants, hotels, and clubs should be allowed to sell it by the drink, then why not permit every drug store, grocery store, cold drink stand, and service station to do the same thing? Why not let everybody sell it that wants to? Will not some wet bellyacher please answer?

Senator Tom Connally: "As an American citizen I oppose divesting the Supreme Court of the power to construe and interpret the Constitution at the suit of any citizen of the Republic whenever any right guaranteed to him by that instrument may be invaded by the Congress, the executive, the courts or any state of the Union."

West Texas Can Derive Most Gain From Centennial

(By Ralph H. Shuffer, Editor Odessa News-Times)

West Texas has for some time been rather disgruntled over the treatment accorded it in the general Centennial scheme. A part of this attitude was to my mind thoroughly justified, and a good part of it rather childish. West Texas has had a kick coming in several instances, has made that kick in each instance, and has won in a reasonable percentage of the arguments. Now it would be foolish, puerile, and disastrous for West Texas to continue to nurse a grudge, and to hold back on the most important state-wide movement in years because of petty grudges.

West Texas can have just as important a part in the success of the Centennial and reap just as rich a reward from the Centennial as any other portion of the State—if she will just get down off her high horse and get to work.

The people of the East, who will visit the Texas Centennial, will naturally be drawn here by the most spectacular show, the central exposition at Dallas. This central exposition is the joker in our hand, and if we can just draw the proper cards, we can fit it into our straight to an excellent advantage. Once they are in Dallas, these Eastern tourists will start looking for the things which are in the Eastern mind synonymous with Texas—big hats, boots, spurs, and broad ranges. They will see few of these in Dallas. The romance, ruggedness and picturesque beauty of West Texas can be sold, at Dallas, to the visiting Easterners in such a manner that they will all want to visit this "last frontier" before going home. West Texas is the only section that fits the tourist's picture of the true Texas, and if we take advantage of this fact our reward from the Centennial will be a rich one.

Further, and from an absolute dollar point of view, West Texas is the logical one to gain from the Centennial. We have here a great expanse of undeveloped territory, rich in minerals, waiting only for the necessary capital to develop it. Our future prosperity will be industrial, largely, and the Centennial, which will attract more people

K. R. Durhams Enjoy Visit To New Orleans

Dr. and Mrs. K. R. Durham returned home Tuesday night, after having spent a week in New Orleans and other Louisiana points. The Doctor attended the meetings of the American Dental Association in New Orleans, which was in session most of the week, and he reports that other Dentists from all parts of the United States, several thousand in number, were in attendance.

The Doctor thinks New Orleans a very fine city in many respects but nevertheless a very wicked city. Palatial gambling houses are running wide open and hard liquors and wines are sold everywhere. There seems to be little effort to control the traffic. Immorality also flaunts itself unashamed, especially in the French section of the city. The Doctor thinks that the old Long political machine is going to be successful in the approaching elections.

Dr. Durham says that in large sections of Louisiana where cotton was previously grown ribbon cane is now being raised, a hardy variety imported from Cuba. Much of the work is done by negro laborers, many of whom speak only French. Some of them speak both French and English fluently. Many of the School children in that state are of French extraction and can speak only the French language, the Doctor says.

At Baton Rouge, Dr. and Mrs. Durham had opportunity to see and admire the magnificent new state capitol, though they did not go in to it.

Dr. and Mrs. Durham were guests of his brother while in New Orleans, who is secretary to the collector of internal revenue in that city. They also visited his parents at Junction City, his father being pastor of the Baptist Church there, and her parents at Shreveport.

Mrs. Guy Branson and little daughter Carolyn of Caspar, California, arrived Wednesday afternoon to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Brasfield.

of means than any others, will give us an outstanding opportunity to display our treasurers to the capitalist eye.

I, for one, am ready to drop all past grievances and grudges, and get to work in the short time left us, on the job of making the Centennial a big thing for Texas and a bigger one for West Texas.

This Farmer Not In Love With AAA

We do not know how many there are like him, but D. G. Phipps of the Wells community is one farmer who is not in love with the AAA program. He called Saturday to renew his subscription to the News and told us something of his experience with the Triple A.

On his home place of 360 acres, he has 310 acres in cultivation; yet he was allowed to plant only 65 acres of it in cotton this year and was allowed to sell tax-free only 127 pounds of lint cotton per acre, except by buying additional tags at 4 cent per pound. This would figure about sixteen 500-lb bales on a whole half section of land.

On another tract which he owns, consisting of a section, he has 560 acres in cultivation and was given a little better allowance. Of this 563 acres, he was allowed to plant 195 acres in cotton and was also allowed 127 pounds to the acre on this, which would be about 48 bales; or a total of approximately 65 bales on one and a half sections of land.

One of Mr. Phipps' complaints is that the AAA penalizes the conscientious man who makes a true report of his average acreage and average yield for the past five-year period and places a premium on the dishonesty of the fellow who fudges or cheats in making these estimates.

Furthermore, he thinks the whole program is wrong. It may be, he says, that this program has resulted in better prices for cotton, but who can tell? he asks. "I have seen cotton go from 40 cents to 7 or 8 cents per pound in a year or two's time," he asserted, "and have seen it go up at a rapid rate too." Nobody knows whether the AAA program has helped the price or not, he contends.

News From The O'Donnell Index

O'Donnell has a new city well, 87 feet deep, on the C. H. Doak far near town. A good stratum of water was struck at a depth of 50 feet and the well was pumping 30 gallons per minute. Though it is two miles from the storage tank, it is not believed that the cost of piping it into town will be prohibitive, and it will greatly increase O'Donnell's water supply.

Miss Lorene Beach was seriously injured a few nights ago in a car accident. She had taken some friends home from a show and was returning to her own home. When she turned her car to go upon the driveway to the garage, the wheels of the car locked and it crashed into a couple of trees. She was struck by the steering wheel with such force that she was rendered unconscious for more than an hour and it was believed that several ribs were broken; one knee was severely bruised and crippled and other body injuries sustained.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Bradley and their son Mack, and her brother, Buddy McVicker, were called to Plainview by the sudden death of Mrs. Bradley's father, D. R. McVicker, in that city.

A second moving picture theatre is to be established in O'Donnell in the old C. H. Doak theatre building soon. Jim Saunders has leased the building for the purpose of putting in a picture show.

Dr. O. H. Shepard, O'Donnell physician, was taken to a Lubbock sanitarium Monday of last week, after an illness of several days due to an attack of appendicitis, to undergo a major surgery if such should be deemed necessary.

With more than a thousand wildly cheering fans and ex-students applauding from the sidelines Friday afternoon, the O'Donnell Eagles defeated the Meadow eleven 6-0. An added attraction of the game was the coronation of the Football Queen for 1935, Miss Audine Jordan. This custom was started last year and will become a regular feature of the annual Homecoming program.

E. W. Hester, known far and wide as a breeder of Jersey stock, last week sold nine fine Jersey cows to the Rio Vista Dairy of San Antonio. Eight of them were sold for $125.00 each and the ninth for $140.00.

The big county grader and scraper were put to work on O'Donnell streets last week, with lateral streets receiving much needed attention during the first few days. It is understood that the city council secured the use of the grader free and will be out only the cost of the fuel. All the residential and business streets were to be worked over.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Anglin visited relatives at Locksville ten miles west of Ropesville, Sunday.

Morton, Oct. 29.—Corn put in a trench silo by R. W. R. Schumann, county agricultural agent. Neal estimated that the corn that was put in the silo would have made about five bushels of ear corn to the acre when harvested dry. The corn was cut up by an ensilage cutter.

METHODIST CHURCH SERVICES

There was a very fine Christian fellowship manifested at the church service Sunday.

Brother Smith brought two very fine messages. At the eleven o'clock hour the subject was, Our Elder Brother, and as always Brother Smith said just the right things at the right time.

The subject at the evening hour was, Four Years in Tahoka. This too was very fine.

We are expecting Brother Smith back to our town and church and we will indeed be very much disappointed if he should not be returned to us. But we are not doubting in the least but that we will be honored by his and his good family's return. We are looking forward to another year's work with these good people. Let us all not forget to pray and be ready for our new year's work.—Reporter.

New Home Woman Puts Up 945 Cans

Following a live-at-home program, Mrs. G. M. McWhorter, farm food demonstrator for the New Home H. D. Club, has canned 945 containers for her pantry. She has 294 glass containers, 651 cans of 21 varieties of fruits and vegetables, and seven varieties of stored vegetables. "I have bought only one bushel of pears, as all the other fruit and vegetables were grown at home," said Mrs. McWhorter.

She is a first year pantry demonstrator. Having always kept her cans stored in boxes anywhere she could put them, after looking things over she and Miss Robb decided that she could use a nice closet very nicely for her pantry. With the shelves already in it, she added 24 feet more, giving her plenty of storage space. Her cans and shelves are labeled, making it very attractive.

A cooker, sealer, and recipe file have also been added; and Mrs. McWhorter is still filling her pantry with more quality products.

Any person or dealer who shall violate any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be fined in any sum not less than Fifty Dollars nor more than One Hundred Dollars; and each and every day that such ordinance may be violated shall be considered as a separate offense and punishable as such.

The fact that many Transient persons are engaged in the sale of goods, wares and merchandise sold without the payment of a license tax for such privilege, and the further fact that there is no adequate ordinance with said city providing for the levying of such license tax upon transient persons or dealers for the privilege of pursuing such business within said city, creates an imperative public necessity that this ordinance be passed as an emergency measure and said ordinance is therefore passed in open council as an emergency measure by unanimous consent of all members of the City Council and it is ordered that same shall take effect from and after its passage and publication as required by law.

Passed and approved this 13 day of November, A. D. 1935.

CHURCH OF CHRIST NOTES

Last Lord's day was beautiful until night came on, then it turned cold. It seems to get colder on Sunday than any other day in the week, at least that is the way people act. Why is it a member of the church will stand or sit one hour in rain, sleet or snow to see a football game and complain if the church house is the least bit cold?

I want to commend our worthy editor for his stand on the liquor question and also in regard to our attitude toward the United States Supreme Court's decisions.

We are hoping and trusting that our fine representative G. H. Nelson will stand four-square on the great questions that are before the legislature at this time. Mr. Nelson, we have faith in you.

Thanksgiving day will soon be here again. I am made to wonder if we are as thankful as we should be when I hear so much murmuring and complaining.

Services next Lord's day morning and evening.

Come to the friendly church, where they worship "As it is written."

FRED ASTAIRE WOOS GINGER ROGERS IN "TOP HAT"

Coming To English Theatre, 3 days starting Sunday.

Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers say it with lyrics and dance steps in "Top Hat", their lavishly produced new musical comedy to introduce a most novel way of telling a screen love story. Practically all of their love scenes in the picture are songs and dance numbers, in which the lyrics and the movements of the dances express more than pages of ordinary dialogue could.

For their unique love scenes, the stars have the songs of Irving Berlin, who wrote the first complete screen musical score of his career for the picture. The score comprises six songs, each of which was written to fit a situation of the story.

London, England, and the Lido, Italy, are the locales of the story, with picturesque backgrounds adding to the romantic flavor. The feature dance of the picture the "Piccolino," is done on especially colorful settings where canals, drifting gondolas and graceful bridges add their pictorial appeal to the thrill of music and the poetry of rhythmic motion.

Helen Broderick, stellar New York stage comedienne, Edward Everett Horton, Erik Rhodes and Eric Blore head the cast supporting the co-stars. With the exception of Miss Broderick, who came to the picture direct from a personal triumph in the Broadway musical show "As Thousands Cheer," all of these featured players supported Astaire and Miss Rogers in "The Gay Divorcee." Mark Sandrich, who directed "The Gay Divorcee," also staged "Top Hat."

A mixed chorus of thirty girls and thirty boys do an ensemble arrangement of the "Piccolino," under the direction of Hermes Pan. A chorus of dancing men also appear with Astaire in the "Top Hat" number of the picture. Other bright dance features by Astaire and Miss Rogers are to the music of "Isn't This a Lovely Day" and "Check to Cheek." "Get Thee Behind Me, Satan," and Fred sings and dances to "Top Hat," and "No Strings."

Washington Digest
National Topics Interpreted By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—About this time every fall, the President calls the director of the budget to the White House and they go into a huddle about the finances of the government, about the needs for money of the various governmental agencies who must pay their employees and the other expenses to which they are put and in addition they discuss general questions of policy. It is, as I said, an annual affair that presages a new tempo in the movement of activities in Washington because it occurs some weeks in advance of the reconvening of congress. Congress, under the Constitution, must appropriate the money which is spent by all branches of government.
Well, the annual huddle has just been held by President Roosevelt and Daniel W. Bell, acting director of the bureau of the budget, and Mr. Bell has gone back to his office in the treasury with instructions to begin formulation of budget estimates for submission to congress.
Of course, budget making goes on throughout the year. The huge staff of experts and accountants who work under Mr. Bell's direction are busy the year 'round examining the proposed requirements of the various agencies and arriving at conclusions as to what their needs reasonably should be. The White House conference, therefore, represents the second step because those were the figures that formed the basis of the discussion between the President and his budget director.

In drafting the budget for submission to the next session of congress, the administration is confronted with a variety of problems, not the least of which is the political phase. It is to be remembered that the budget now under consideration covers money that will be appropriated for use after July 1, 1936, and the succeeding 12 month period. Therefore, half of the Presidential campaign next year, indeed, the heated part of that campaign, will take place after governmental agencies have begun to use the new appropriations. It is easy to see, therefore, that politics can hardly be kept out of the forthcoming budget in some form or other even though every President says politics does not influence budget making. Nevertheless, New Deal spending and future taxation constitute questions which the President cannot overlook and is not overlooking because those things are vital to every man, woman and child in the nation.
It seems to be pretty well settled now that the Republicans are going to make spending and taxation their major ammunition against Mr. Roosevelt and his New Deal. In fact, it seems reasonably sure that the Republican slogan will be "Throw the Spendthrifts Out." That being the case, Mr. Roosevelt obviously must have in the back of his head considerable concern over the current budget making.
Knowing "Danny" Bell as I have known him for nearly 20 years, during which time he has grown up in the treasury service, I think it ought to be said in his favor that politics is farthest from his thoughts. He is as nearly a human figuring machine as any man I have known in my Washington career except possibly the man under whom he was trained, namely, the late Robert Hand. His chief concern is and always has been a determination to have accurate statistics, accurate conclusions and recommendations based as nearly as may be upon sound judgment.
But in saying these things about Mr. Bell I am not saying that budgetary plans are not subject to manipulation. It has been true in previous administrations and it is true in this one. The vast totals of figures with their minima of explanations are never easy to understand. This is one way of saying that they can be made to conceal a great deal more than they reveal.

I mentioned the issues of spending and taxation. The American Liberty League which has consistently warned about the possibility of future heavy taxation has not been silent since the President some weeks ago made public a pre-budgetary summation. The League insists that while present tax rates soon will provide enough money to meet what the President terms as "ordinary" expenditures of the government, the rates are insufficient to meet the spending which Mr. Roosevelt calls extraordinary in that it covers relief. Further, the League, in a statement the other day, asserted its belief that the present tax level was high enough to meet "legitimate" relief if present sound spending policies are abandoned. But it is emphasized by the league that even "if unsound spending policies are abandoned," the present tax levels are insufficient to make possible any appreciable retirement of the gigantic debt that has been built up through the New Deal relief program.
So it is easy to see that a head-on collision between two schools of thought is inevitable. Mr. Roosevelt and his brain trusters have contended and will continue to contend that federal spending in the volume that has taken place was the only means by which the nation could be carried over this period of depression. On the other hand there will be the vicious attacks of Republican campaigners, the shots by such men as Lewis Douglas, former director of the bureau of the budget, who broke with Mr. Roosevelt over "reckless spending," and all of those groups of which the Liberty League is typical. These have plenty of campaign material, and you can make sure that they will use it.

My experience as an observer of politics and government prompts me to say that there is nothing that strikes the heart of the average taxpayer quite so fundamentally as displays of waste with the accompaniment of forecasts of greater taxation. Thus, if the New Deal opposition goes ahead on the course that appears to be charted for them—actually it is made to order for them—they can cause the administration many anxious moments. I say this, knowing full well, that the administration has much argument on its side and that it is equipped with the finest layout of machinery for influencing public opinion that any administration ever has had. It has at its command all of the machinery used in crop production control, the thousands of persons on the federal pay roll and the millions who believe Mr. Roosevelt is earnestly seeking to make this a better country in which to live. It is, therefore, no small task for the New Deal opposition if it is to succeed even in turning the New Deal strength in the house of representatives to anything near an even distribution of the seats.

Apparently, New Deal opposition will be concentrated as much in the congressional districts as against the President himself.
The reasons are simple. First, the senate is going to remain Democratic whether Mr. Roosevelt is re-elected or defeated. Only one-third of the 96 senators come up for re-election next year and the bulk of these are from normally Democratic states. Unless a cataclysm follows the Democratic party, the senate majority for the Democrats will continue to be ample.
Such is not the case in the house of representatives where the entire membership must seek election every two years. There are in the house membership probably as many as 75 Democrats who can be called pure political accidents. That is, they were elected from districts which are normally Republican but Roosevelt into office. A considerable number of these naturally will be retired by the voters just as a considerable number of Republicans were retired after they had held house seats in the early 1920's by virtue of election in the Harding landslide. Consequently, changes may be expected in the house New Deal strength. In concentrating the fight in congressional districts, the New Deal opposition is battling for position. If the New Deal majority in the house can be whittled down, it will then become impossible for the President to drive through his program of legislation as he has done in the last three sessions. From the Republican standpoint, this would be important since it would place Mr. Roosevelt in much the same position that President Hoover found himself in the last half of his administration when he had an adverse congress on his hands. No political leader likes that situation.
When the New Deal opposition jumps onto the questions of spending and taxation, therefore, and when it goes back to the grass roots of congressional districts, it takes no stretch of the imagination to see that a real political fight lies ahead. Developments between now and the nominating conventions next June may change the general perspective.

While several of the federal courts, including the Supreme court, of the United States, are considering questions revolving around Washington on Rights President Roosevelt's program for development of Muscle Shoals in the Tennessee river as an electrical power project, government owned, a newly discovered letter written by President George Washington takes on unusual interest. It seems that even in 1791, there was argument about the development of Muscle Shoals. The letter, which was addressed to the attorney general of the United States at that time, called attention to the efforts being made by individuals to effect trades with Indians and suggested the necessity for federal laws that would afford some protection for the Indians in their dealings with the white men. It will be remembered, of course, that the Tennessee river valley in those days was populated by Indians but the problem that existed then exists today, namely, protection of the rights of the individual.

Lesson for November 17
THE RETURN FROM CAPTIVITY

LESSON TEXT—Ezra 1:1-6; Psalm 124:1-4.
GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad. Psalm 124:1.
PRIMARY TOPIC—A New Song.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Coming Home Rejoicing.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Making a Fresh Start.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Thanksgiving for God's Care.

1. The Return Predicted (Jer. 29:1-14).
It seems that false prophets were flourishing in Babylon telling the people that they would speedily be restored to their own land. To counteract this the Lord moved Jeremiah to send this letter to the captives in Babylon (vv. 8, 9). In this letter he advised them to settle down and quietly pursue their regular callings of life and not to be led astray by the false prophets (vv. 6, 7).
1. The length of the captivity (v. 10). Their coming back was to be "after seventy years." From Daniel 9:2 it is clear that seventy years means a definite time. It dates from the time when the first company was taken captive, among which Daniel was found.
2. Recovered by God (vv. 10-14). God's purpose in the captivity was to cure them of their idolatrous practices. He assured them that when his purpose was accomplished he would visit them and convince them of his good purpose toward them. Their captivity he would turn away, gather them from all the nations, and bring them into their own land.

11. The Predicted Captivity Fulfilled (Ezra 1:1-6).
1. The proclamation of Cyrus (vv. 1-4).
a. This was not by accident, but that the word of the Lord might be fulfilled (v. 1). What God has promised he will do; he never forgets.
b. By divine initiation (v. 1). "The Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus." How this was done we do not know. Possibly Daniel brought to his attention the prophecy of Isaiah and Jeremiah (Isa. 44:28; Jer. 25:12).
Cyrus only saw his own action as a piece of statecraft—the creation of a buffer nation between his kingdom and that of Egypt.
c. The content of his proclamation (v. 2-4).
(1) "The Lord God of heaven hath charged me to build him a house in Jerusalem" (v. 2). This makes clear that he had some impression of God's hand upon him.
(2) Appeal to Jewish patriotism (v. 3). He invokes upon such as possess the national religious feeling, the blessing of God, and commands them to go and build the house of the Lord God.
(3) Lend assistance (v. 4). Many of the Jews were established in business and therefore were not free to go. Many, no doubt, had lost their national spirit and therefore did not desire to go. All such were to lend friendly assistance in silver, gold, and beasts.

2. The response to Cyrus' proclamation (vv. 5, 6). The chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin and the priests and Levites presented themselves as willing and ready to go. The company which returned was largely made up of representatives of Judah and Benjamin.
3. The royal favor (v. 7-11). Cyrus brought forth the vessels of the house of the Lord which Nebuchadnezzar had carried away from Jerusalem and put into the house of his gods. Now to have 5,400 of these vessels returned to their owners and sent back to Jerusalem to be put to their original use, met a hearty response by the Jews.
111. The Gladness and Rejoicing of the Returning Exiles (Ezra 1:12-6).
1. The proclamation of Cyrus as a dream (v. 1). They recognized that their going back was through the favor of the Lord.
2. Their laughter and singing (vv. 2, 3). They not only recognized this as the favor of the Lord upon them, but testified thereof in the hearing of the heathen round about them.
3. Their prayer for prosperity in the land (v. 4). They were not only going back with the consciousness of the good hand of the Lord upon them, but were trusting him for fruitfulness of the land.
4. Sowing in tears (vv. 5, 6). The seed which they were to sow in the land was so precious that they seemed to have hesitated as to sowing, and yet they recognized that joy would follow their sorrow as they brought with them the sheaves of the harvest.

Monotony
Whether we are rich or poor, we all have to fight against monotony—doing the same thing over and over until it loses interest.
We can fight monotony with variety, and one way to do this is by making a wise use of leisure. If we wish to avoid the feeling that we are merely machines, we must become interested in many things.
Patience
Patience is bitter, but its fruit sweet.—Rousseau.

HONOR DEAD BY BURNING MONEY

Village in Indo-China Does Thriving Business Supplying Funerals.

The world depression has not dimmed in the slightest degree the prosperity of the little village of Langbuol, in French Indo-China, the inhabitants of which continue to turn out paper money by the ton to be burned at funerals so the deceased will have plenty of money in the next world.
Dard Hunter, one of the leading authorities in this country on the art of papermaking, would not however, recommend the same panacea for the United States prosperity, he said on his return after a four months' journey to the Far East.
Mr. Hunter, whose contributions to the art of papermaking have won him the title of "the modern Gutenberg" and the gold medal of the American Institute of Graphic Arts, went to Langbuol because he had heard that its inhabitants were operating the oldest paper mill in the world. He reported that the Langbuol villagers were carrying on the craft of papermaking which their ancestors first began on the same site about 700 years ago.
"Their papermaking methods are very primitive and crude," Mr. Hunter explained. "Apparently, they have not changed in any marked degree since the invention of paper away back in 150 A. D. The product turned out by the villagers of Langbuol is pretty terrible stuff. However, they are satisfied with it and don't seem to be able to turn out enough of the spirit money, for which there is a great demand all through Indo-China."

About 400 men, women and children live in Langbuol, which is a thatched-roof settlement along a mud trail on the edge of the jungle fifteen miles north of Hanoi. All the inhabitants work on some phase of papermaking. But the best craftsmanship and the chief energies of the villagers are devoted to the production of spirit money.
There are two principal varieties of this money. One kind consists of ordinary perforated paper; this is used at the funerals of ordinary citizens, who, it is believed, will have no great need of large funds in heaven. A special brand of spirit money, artfully decorated with lavish illustrations of gods, is burned at the funeral of the "aristocrats" of Indo-China. The "aristocratic" brand of spirit money is in high demand. It burns with a heavy, scalding smoke, which floats easily toward the blue skies, but eventually manages to reach the departed aristocrat in heaven, according to the firm belief of the Indo-Chinese priests.
The paper mills of Langbuol are probably the most remote and inaccessible in the world, Mr. Hunter said. In spite of this, Langbuol is the chief source of paper for all Indo-China. The daily output averages about 100 reams of 500 sheets each—almost all of which consists of spirit money.
Bamboo fibers, plentiful in the near-by jungles, are the source of Langbuol's paper. The bamboo is cut and then boiled in lime. Then it is washed in a stream meandering through the village and beaten by hand until it becomes pulp. The pulp is placed next in a wooden vat containing water. When a screen of bamboo reeds is dipped in this vat the bamboo fibers cling to the screen. These fibers are removed and made into the famous Langbuol paper.
Two cases filled with Langbuol spirit money were among Mr. Hunter's luggage. Some of this money will be used to illustrate a book—his fifteenth—which Mr. Hunter will write on the origin and history of papermaking. The rest will go to the Smithsonian Institution and other museums.

Eavesdropping on the "Monticello Party Line"
The Monticello Party Line is an unusual new radio program, recently begun on a series of middle-western and southern stations. It is unique in that all of the action takes place over the party line—and the listener is simply "eavesdropping" on the fun, the daily activities, the occasional troubles that keep the people of Monticello busy on the line.
The setting of the program is a real community, Monticello, Illinois—the home town of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, sponsor of the show.—Adv.

Hippo Charges Auto
Giving a savage snort a Hippopotamus charged an automobile from a roadside wood between Victoria Falls and Livingstone, Rhodesia, recently. The beast badly damaged the car. The woman passenger suffered a broken kneecap and her husband and daughter were bruised. The hippo's shoulder was badly injured and the animal limped back to the woods.

It always works

Just do what hospitals do, and the doctors insist on. Use a good liquid laxative, and aid Nature to regulate clocklike regularity without strain or ill effect.
A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the real secret of relief from constipation.
Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has become. It gives the right kind of help, and right amount of help. Taking a little less each time, gives the bowels a chance to act of their own accord, until they are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.
Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin contains senna and cascara—both natural laxatives that form no habit. The action is gentle, but sure. It will relieve any sluggishness or bilious condition due to constipation without upset.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed. How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs is one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins. Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the system. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds. Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

NELSON'S ONE-HOUSE PLAN

ors to frown on the one-house plan because its substitution would mean that a lot of them would lose their jobs. The mere fact that crusty old Senator Tom Holbrook, of Galveston, urged his colleagues to "kick the resolution out the back door" pretty well shows how the wind is blowing. Texas some day will change to the unicameral legislature. But it will take a long time, because it is going to be a battle between the taxpayers and the politicians for a cheaper, more efficient form of government.

The Texas senate," says the ABILENE REPORTER NEWS, "received with open hostility the other day a resolution drawn by Senator G. H. Nelson of Tahoka, a new member, calling for submission of a constitutional amendment providing for a unicameral legislature. One report said that there were boos and suggestions that the measure be kicked out the back door. This demonstration was a pretty fair example of the closed minds affected by men in public life. A new idea—and the unicameral system is not new—is a signal to take to the stormcellar. There are many arguments on the side of Senator Nelson's bill. It should result in greater efficiency, in a better grade of laws and lawmakers, and in economy."

"Senator Nelson of Tahoka . . . already has pre-empted rights of authorship of the proposal for a single-house Legislature in Texas," says THE PORT WORTH STAR-TELEGRAM. "It is a matter which may become an issue not only in Texas but in most Western States, should favorable results come from the experiment in Nebraska which last year adopted a constitutional amendment for this purpose. Senator Nelson takes the stage as the original unicameral-legislature man in Texas—not a bad achievement for a Senator in the first few weeks of his first term. Of course, Mr. Nelson's resolution . . . was voted down when it was offered Wednesday. Any Legislature might be expected to look with a jaundiced eye upon a subject which would greatly reduce the number of legislators. . . . The Tahoka Senator's determination to 'take the matter to the people' in next Summer's campaign, announced after the defeat of his resolution Wednesday, is more interesting than is indicated by the small space given to it in the day's report of legislative proceedings. The probability is that the majority of the public will favor a unicameral Legislature after the subject has been thoroughly threshed out."

"Senator G. H. Nelson from Lynn County," says THE DALLAS MORNING NEWS, "made himself unpopular in the Legislature by proposing a constitutional amendment that would substitute a single house Legislature for the present bicameral body. The Senator is slightly ahead of his time; if he lives a few years longer he will almost surely see his suggestion in practice in many of the forty-eight states. . . . Senator Nelson doubtless did not expect his resolution to pass. All experience shows that political bodies seldom reform themselves or deprive themselves of power. Changes of that sort in the United States are made through constitutional conventions, the most democratic device ever thought out in a democracy. . . . But Legislatures, especially bicameral bodies, hardly ever favor constitutional conventions. They fear that 'Othello's Occupation' may go, if state government is modernized."

Surely there are some newspapers in the state, perhaps many, that will oppose the Nelson proposal, but thus far we have not seen a single hostile expression from any newspaper.

WPA FUNDS ARE GRANTED

FOR LATERAL ROADS

News interviewed County Judge W. E. Smith and Commissioners Waldo McLaurin and Jim Izard Tuesday morning, they had received no official notification or information about the allotment, but their impression was that this allotment was for the improvement of the public road from Wells to Newmoore. Commissioner Waldo McLaurin, in whose precinct this stretch of public road lies, expressed the opinion that the project was not feasible for the reason that the county did not have the money and had no way of raising the money to furnish the county's quota of $15,955.98. However, Mr. Boston of the Big Spring WPA office came up that afternoon and we were told that the court decided that work on the project might be started as an experiment. Just when the work would begin, nobody at the courthouse seemed to know.

Then the daily papers on Wednesday morning brought the information that another allotment of $28,000.00 had been made by the WPA for lateral road improvement in Lynn county. The county's contribution was to be $14,454.86, according to this announcement and 86 men were to be furnished from the relief rolls.

When a representative of this paper interviewed Judge Smith on the same morning he had received no advice as to this allotment, and did not know whether it was for some particular road project or was for the purpose of building roads across various lakes in the county. Whether or not the county can put up or will put up the required $14,454.00 so as to make the $28,200.00 of WPA funds available for road improvement in the county, is clouded in much doubt and uncertainty.

In fact there seems to be much confusion and uncertainty concerning this whole Works Progress Administration (WPA) program. We do not yet know whether a cent of WPA money will ever be spent in Lynn county or not, because of the fact that the county does not have the money in the treasury to meet WPA requirements.
