Brewer Raising New Variety Of Maize

L. T. Brewer, who lives in the Joe Bailey community seven miles east of O'Donnell, thinks he has found a variety of maize ideally suited to this section, especially if a farmer plants a large acreage to row crops.

This maize variety, known as Burney Merle, a specie of dwarf maize, is threshing out 1,000 pounds to the acre average on a 200-acre field, Mr. Brewer says. Sixty acres of native maize right beside this new variety is only heading 800 to 1,000 pounds per acre. Some acres of his Burney Merle have threshed out as high as 1700 pounds. This is the second year he has raised this variety.

The stalk of the Burney Merle is very short and straight, the head long and straight and the highest proportion of seed. There is no difference in the feed value of its grain and that of native maize. However, there is little fodder on the stalk.

Mr. Brewer points out that a big advantage in raising this maize on the South Plains is the fact that the stalk will stand all winter without falling down, or the head shattering. In fact, one must wait until after the first freeze to harvest it. This would be an aid to the farmer of this section, he says, since most maize should be harvested right at the time when a farmer is busiest with his cotton. The stalk is a little too short for conveniently harvesting by hand, so it is best to combine the grain. Since this has cost Mr. Brewer only $1.50 per acre, he says it is as cheap or cheaper anyway than heading by hand.

One of its best qualities, he thinks, is that it does better in a drouthy year than any other variety. In 1934 his native maize made nothing, while this maize under the same conditions made a fair crop. He emphasizes the fact that seed must not be planted too early, some others who have tried the feed here not having received the best of results because of too early planting.

We are not authorities on maize, or any other farm product, but are glad to pass along to our farmers whatever worth-while information we get from those who are experimenting with crops adaptable to our section. If the Government continues its reduced cotton acreage program and secures for us no better price for the staple than it has so far, we must be looking for other cash crops.

Mr. and Mrs. Dick Jones of Lamesa, Mr. and Mrs. Darwood McGinty of Plains, and Mr. and Mrs. James Clinton of Lubbock visited in the W. T. Clinton home during the recent holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Stubbs of Alenreid spent New Year's day here with their son, Bill Stubbs, at the W. T. Clinton home.

The Lone Star State's 100 Years; 1836-1936

Sam Houston.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

TEXAS, who is celebrating this year her one hundredth anniversary as an American commonwealth, is unique among her sisters in the Union. In fact, she is the "big sister" of them all. Into her 265,808 square miles could be dropped all of the six New England states together with New York, New Jersey, Delaware and Pennsylvania, and there would still be room for Ohio and Illinois.

As a matter of fact, when she came into the sisterhood of states 90 years ago, she brought with her a much larger territory than that. Altogether there were 380,168 square miles of it. For, as the map above shows, it comprised all of the present Lone Star state, the western half of the present state of Oklahoma, the eastern half of New Mexico, an irregular but sizable chunk of Wyoming and a larger segment of Kansas.

But it is not in the matter of size alone that Texas is unique. She is the only one of the 48 states who was an independent republic before she joined the sisterhood of states. As such she had her own army and navy, she sent envoys to European courts and received ambassadors at her capital in return.

Six flags have flown over her lands. Spain first claimed sovereignty, basing her claims to Texas on the discovery of America by Columbus, the conquest of Mexico by Cortez, and the explorations by Cabeza de Vaca, Coronado and De Soto. France disputed Spain's claim because in 1684 La Salle, searching for the mouth of the Mississippi river, landed on the coast of Texas and planted the French flag there. But La Salle was assassinated by some of his men and France never made good her claim.

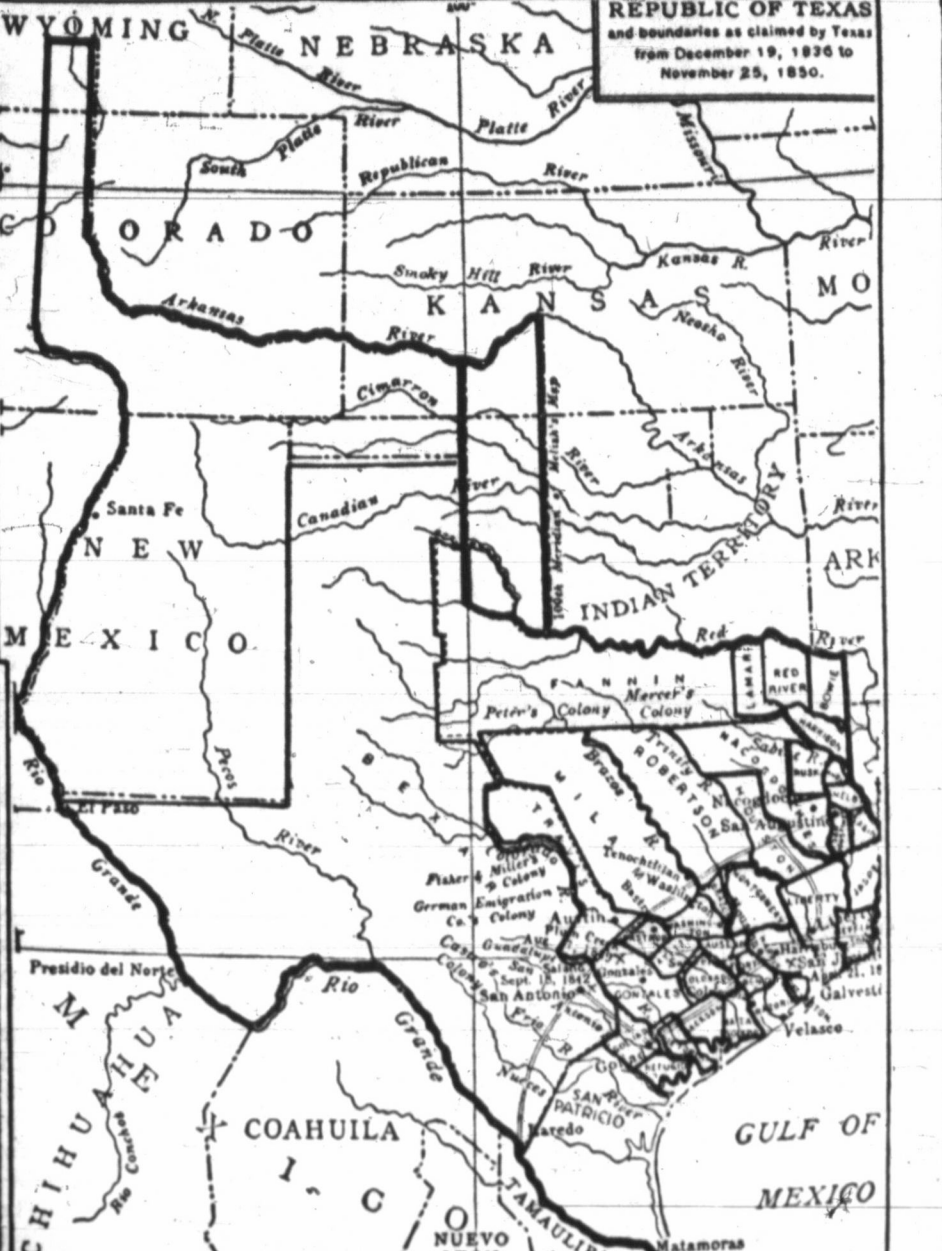

So the flag of Spain waved over Texas until 1821 when the Mexicans gained their independence from the Spaniards and for the next few years Texas was a part of the republic of Mexico.

The year before Mexico threw off the yoke of Spain Stephen F. Austin, the "Father of Texas," left Missouri with a colony and settled in Texas. Other Americans followed and by 1827 Texas had a population of 10,000. Three years later it had grown to 20,000. Mexico began to be alarmed at this influx of settlers. On April 6, 1830, the Mexican congress passed a law forbidding further colonization.

But that did not halt the Americans. Soon there were clashes between the American settlers and the Mexican officials. By 1835 there was a state of open warfare for the Americans who had become Texans were resolved to be free from Mexico as the Mexicans had resolved to be free from Spain. President Santa Anna of Mexico came to Texas with an army of 4,000 to crush the revolt. On February 22, 1836, he besieged San Antonio, which was held by 180 Texans commanded by Col. William B. Travis. On March 6 Santa Anna's hosts swept over the walls of the historic mission, the Alamo, and slaughtered its defenders, thereby making immortal the names of Travis, James Bowie and Davy Crockett, the Tennessee bear-hunter.

In the meantime a group of Texas patriots had gathered at the town of Washington on the Brazos river. There on March 2 they adopted a document which began with this statement:

"When a government has ceased to protect the lives, liberty and property of the people from whom its legitimate powers are derived, and for the advancement of whose happiness it was instituted; and so far from being a guarantee for their inestimable and inalienable rights, becomes an instrument in the hands of evil rulers for their oppression—when the Federal Republican Constitution of their country, which they have sworn to support, no longer has a substantial existence, and the whole nature of their government has been forcibly changed, without their consent, from a restricted federative republic composed of sovereign states, to a consolidated, central, military despotism, in which every interest is disregarded but that of the army and priesthood, both of which are the eternal enemies of civil liberty, the ever-ready minions of power, and the usual instruments of tyrants—when, long after the spirit of the Constitution has departed, moderation is at length so far lost by those in power that even the semblance of freedom is removed, and the forms even of the Constitution discontinued, and so far from their petitions and remonstrances being regarded, the agents who bear them are thrown into dungeons, and mercenary armies set forth to force a new government upon them at the point of the bayonet—when, in consequence of such acts of maleficence and abduction on the part of the government, anarchy prevails and civil society is dissolved into its original elements—in such a crisis, the first law of nature, the right of preservation, and the inherent and inalienable right of the people to appeal to first principles and take their political affairs into their own hands in extreme cases, enjoins it as a right toward themselves, and a sacred obligation to their posterity, to abolish such a government and create another in its stead calculated to rescue them from impending dangers and to secure their welfare and happiness."

The Alamo

After listing their grievances, 15 in number, they concluded their work with this statement:

"The necessity of self-preservation, therefore, decrees an eternal political separation.

"We, therefore, the delegates with plenary powers of the people of Texas, in solemn convention assembled, appealing to the judgment of a candid world as to the necessities of our condition, DO HEREBY DISSOLVE and declare that our political connection with the Mexican nation has forever ended and that the people of Texas do now constitute a FREE, SOVEREIGN and INDEPENDENT REPUBLIC, and are fully invested with all the rights and attributes which properly belong to independent nations and, conscious of the rectitude of our intentions, we confidently and fearlessly commit the issue to the decision of the supreme arbiter of the destinies of nations."

Thus the Republic of Texas came into existence. But the revolution in Texas did not end on that date any more than any earlier revolution ended on July 4, 1776. It remained for another man to finish the job that these men on the Brazos had started and back up with bullets the words which they had written just as George Washington had backed up the words of the signers in Philadelphia 60 years before. That man was Sam Houston and he did it on the battlefield of San Jacinto on April 21, 1836.

So it was only natural that Houston, like George Washington, should become the first president of the new republic which he had helped to establish. The capital of that new republic was named for Stephen F. Austin, the "Father of Texas," and by act of its congress in December, 1836, a blue flag with a single golden star in the center became its official flag. Houston also became the first governor of Texas when it entered the Union in 1845. In the addition of Texas to the Union by annexation lies another of its claims to being unique among the states. For Texas is the only one which ever had the right to subdivide itself into several states if it chose to do so.

The treaty of annexation provided "for the future formation in the said territories of at least two states, and if more than two, then four states, and if more than four then six states; to be hereafter admitted into the United States of America." The reason for this wording lay in the slavery dispute which was beginning to become acute at that time. If the new state was to be divided, there should be an even number, half slave and half free so that the balance of power would be kept even. Since the War Between the States ended forever the question of slavery it also virtually ended the possibility of Texas being subdivided, although many believe that the Lone Star state still has that right.

Not only did that war put an end to one of the factors which made Texas unique but it also added another to the number of flags which have flown over Texas. For four years the Stars and Bars of the Confederate States of America was the flag to which the Texans swore allegiance, then once more Texas was back in the Union under the Stars and Stripes.

Now, Texas, looking back over her 100 years of history, is proud of them all—the flag of Spain, the lilies of France, the banner of Mexico, her own bright Lone Star emblem, her place on the symbol of the "Lost Cause" and her star in the field of blue along with the 47 others. For they all speak of the glorious history that has been hers.

Congress Short Session Opens

Congress convened on Friday, January 3, and at 9 o'clock Friday night President Roosevelt appeared before a joint session of the two houses and delivered his message to the body.

As a matter of fact, he did not present to the Congress recommendations as to the legislation, as is usually done in Presidential messages to that body, but made a ringing political speech.

The first part of his message, however, dealt with foreign affairs, and it must have met with the almost unanimous favor of the American people. He was really not talking to Congress so much as he was talking to the autocrats, the dictators, and the militarists of Europe and Asia, his pointed, and weighty pronouncements having special application to Italy and Japan. He gave those nations to understand that they could expect only the stern disapproval in this country of their wars of conquest.

The remainder of his speech was largely a denunciation of the real or alleged autocrats in this country who sought to rule and to use the powers of government for their own enrichment, and he defiantly challenged the enemies of the New Deal to say which of the New Deal measures they would repeal. It was really his opening speech in his campaign for reelection.

His message "on the state of the Union" recommending legislative action was delivered in writing a couple of days later.

Leo J. Mollet, assistant agency director of the Southwestern Life Insurance Company, Dallas, is here this week working with Mrs. Gladys M. Stokes, local representative.

AAA IS RULED OUT BY THE SUPREME COURT

1. A domestic allotment program (the quota system).
2. Creation of 48 "little AAA's" financed by federal grants.
3. Payment of grants to farmers for proper land use.

Senator McNary of Oregon, Republican, co-sponsor of the old McNary-Haugen farm plan, has announced that he would introduce a three-way form bill promptly. He said that his bill would allow optional use of the domestic allotment, the export debenture, or the equalization fee plans. They are designed to care for surpluses, make the tariff effective, and raise prices. McNary says, but each of these plans has been publicly opposed by Secretary Wallace. McNary claims that none of these plans has the unconstitutional features of the AAA.

It is probable that some plan will eventually be devised that will square with the constitution and that will in part accomplish the purpose of the AAA, but it is very doubtful if any such plan can be adopted and put into operation in time to affect this year's crops.

All AAA officials and county farm agents throughout the country have been instructed by the Washington authorities to suspend all activities until further instructions can be given. County agents are permitted, however, to deliver to farmers all checks which have been received by the agent but not yet delivered to the farmers. There is to be no more collection of process taxes, no further use for "tags," no further restrictions on the sale of cotton.

The first effect of the ruling on the price of cotton was to send it down but it almost regained its position the next day. The market, however, is left in a state of uncertainty and confusion for the time being.

Unless some effective plan is devised speedily, which seems highly improbable, there will doubtless be a marked increase in the cotton acreage in this county, in the state, and throughout the entire cotton belt this year.

Many farmers fear that the acreage and the yield will be so large as to drive the price down to a disastrously low level next Fall. There is one redeeming feature about the situation though. Since more land will now be planted in cotton, many tenants who have found it impossible to rent land the past two years may now be able to find places back on the farm. A large cotton acreage and an average yield per acre will call for much more labor in cultivating and harvesting the crop than has been needed under the AAA regime.

In this county for instance, a number of men were leasing vast amounts of land, expecting to draw rentals of approximately $8.00 per acre this year on the acreage reductions. They were planning to cultivate the land with tractors and cheap hired labor, thus forcing other tenants off the farms and sending them to the relief rolls. This was becoming one of the crying evils of the AAA program, and it too has been smashed by the supreme court decision.

Mrs. D. D. Johnson of Abilene is here this week visiting her daughter, Mrs. C. N. Woods. She and Brother Johnson are engaged in both the grocery business and the laundry business in Abilene. She reports that her health has greatly improved since they left here two years ago.

O'DONNELL CITIZEN IS VICTIM OF ACCIDENT

other fatal injuries. An inquest was held by Justice of the Peace W. S. Swan and County Attorney C. H. Cain, who made a thorough investigation of the affair. Morris, the driver of the car, was absolved from all blame.

It seems that Burnett had been wandering about up and down the highway for some time. Other persons had seen him trudging along the highway an hour or more before the fatal accident. His car was found on or beside the highway a half mile north of the scene of his tragic death. Some whisky, it is said, was found in the car.

Funeral services for deceased were conducted in the Methodist Church in O'Donnell at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Rev. M. R. Pike, the pastor, officiating.

Deceased left a wife and four children, who have the sincere sympathy of numerous friends and of all our people in their sad bereavement.

Mahon Back For Session Of Congress

Washington, D. C., Jan. 9—Congressman George Mahon arrived in Washington Friday morning for the beginning of the second session of the 74th Congress. He had returned to his home in Colorado City on December 20 from the Philippine Islands where he had attended the celebration sponsored by their Government to commemorate the opening of independence for the Islands. The trip was made at the request of the President and upon the invitation of the Philippine Government because of his membership on the Insular Affairs Committee of the House.

Mr. Mahon expressed enthusiasm over the value of the trip which had also taken him to both Japan and China. The trip had afforded an opportunity to study from first hand sources economic conditions in the Far East, particularly regarding the textile industry and its relation to foreign markets for American cotton.

Townsend Pension Club Active Body

Much interest is being manifested locally in the Townsend Pension Plan movement. At the meeting of the club, here last Saturday was a crowd that over-taxed the seating capacity of the county court room, in which the membership readily passed its goal of fifty, going well up toward the one hundred mark. The expected out-of-town speaker was not present, but the promised literature was handed out, as far as it would go, among the anxious crowd; and Chairman Walker gave an explanatory address that was well received.

Application was filed Monday for a charter which is expected by this week end, also additional literature is expected by that time for free distribution. The secretary advises that at the next meeting—Saturday at 2 p. m.—a state organizer will be here to discuss fully the plans and objectives of the National club, and that the public is urgently requested to attend the meeting.
