Editors Guests Of Lubbock C. of C.

Texas Tech, Lubbock C. of C. and Avalanche-Journal Hosts To West Texas Editors.

Many editors and other newspaper representatives of West Texas were the guests last Saturday of the Texas Technological College, the Avalanche-Journal publications, and the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce.

A luncheon was served at the Lubbock Hotel at 1:00 p. m. by the Chamber of Commerce, with Charles Guy of the Avalanche-Journal acting as toastmaster.

The program was interspersed with music consisting of a vocal solo by Miss Christine Harris and a vocal solo by Mr. Jerome Harkey with Miss Marian Bullock as piano accompanist and a violincello solo by Julian Paul Blitz, head of the Department of Music at the Texas Tech, with Mrs. Blitz at the piano.

After a welcome address by J. D. Hassell, president of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, and a clever little speech by Coach P. W. Cawthon of the Tech Red Raiders, Dr. W. C. Holden, acting head Professor of the History Department of the College, discussed the "Part played by West Texas Editors in securing Texas Technological College." His portrayal of the old-time pioneer editors was most graphic and interesting, and he gave the editors almost sole credit for the procuring of the college for West Texas.

"The Answer to the Pioneer Dreams of West Texas" was the subject discussed by President Bradford A. Knapp. He gave some statistics and other facts about the Tech that were most gratifying. One of the surprising statements was that practically all the graduates of the engineering and textile departments have jobs awaiting them when they leave the college. Another surprise to some of us was his revelation of the large number of students who are taking engineering and technical courses as compared with those who are taking courses in the Liberal Arts.

Visit The College
The visiting newspaper folks were taken in buses from the Hotel to the College campus and were there conducted through several of the buildings.

The first stop was at the Girls' Dormitory, one of the magnificent structures constructed on the campus with PWA funds a little more than two years ago. The rooms are nicely furnished and the girls seemed to take great pride in keeping them tidy. The building is very attractive, inside and outside. (Continued On Back Page)

Sister Of Local Man Dies In Dallas

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Evans were called to Dallas Monday night by the serious condition of Mr. Evans' sister, who was patient in Baylor Hospital. She died Tuesday morning about the time of their arrival. Funeral plans had not been learned here Wednesday afternoon, but since the young woman was reared at Slaton it was believed that her remains would be shipped back to that city for burial.

The parents, who now reside at Justiceburg, were visiting in North Carolina when their daughter became seriously ill but it is known that they had started back to Texas when death came. Mr. Evans is an employee of the Santa Fe Railway and they were traveling by train.

Lawrence Evans, who resides here, is employed at Bouillon's Grocery Store.

ACCIDENT

We were compelled to leave out several important news items last week on account of breaking a little part on our linotype machine which put it out of commission temporarily. After the break we were unable to set another line of type and were compelled to substitute other matter for some live news stories we intended to use. This will explain why you didn't see some things in the paper that you expected to see.

3,956 Bales Ginned This Season

Comparatively little cotton has been ginned the past week on account of weather conditions. Up to Thursday morning, the five gins here had turned out 3,956 bales this season against 3,551 up to Thursday morning of last week.

Rain last week followed by several days of damp, cloudy and cool weather have kept pickers out of the field. The skies cleared Thursday morning, however, and it is hoped that fairer weather will prevail.

Tahoka To Play Lamesa Friday

The entire populace of our little city should turn out today for a mighty conflict between the local Bulldogs and Lamesa's Golden Tornadoes. The Tornadoes won a hard fought game from the Brownfield Cubs last week and really have a good team. Plenty of local support will go a long way in stimulating our lads to give the best they have in attempting to stem the Tornadoes. All know this is a conference game, our second of the season. It should prove to be one of our best games. A dry field is hoped for in that it will be better for both teams and fans.

BULLDOGS DEFEAT EAGLES
The "Eagles" of our neighboring school, O'Donnell, came over last Friday for a test of endurance and skill with our own "Bulldogs". The Bulldogs proved superior in many ways to the Eagles. The final score was, Bulldogs 12, Eagles 6. Coach Walker was very glad that the boys won this game, but he said the score should have been much greater. The boys think that coach is never satisfied. This win, however, evened the grudge the Dogs have held against the Eagles for the past two years.

Some outstanding players for Bulldogs were Hoover, at quarter Red Brown, center, Travis McCord, half, Robert Moddox, guard and Clyde Godsey, tackle. The stellar work of these lads and other members of the squad was responsible for several long gains and for stopping the Eagles at crucial moments. Outstanding men for the visitors were Bert Tune, quarter, Earl Tune, half, and Summerall at tackle. All the boys were very good sports and a clean hard fought game was witnessed by all spectators.

Boys Charged With Theft
Two boys away from home, seventeen or eighteen years of age, were arrested and placed in the county jail here Monday night on charge of theft. They were detected in the act of stealing gasoline from the car of Mr. Wall parked in the street in front of the Bob Finley residence, where he and his wife are occupying a room.

A Tahoka boy happened to see them drawing the gasoline from the gas tank and reported immediately to a neighbor, who telephoned for the sheriff. Within five minutes B. L. Parker was on the scene and had the boys in his car on the way to jail.

One of the boys had five dollars on his person and the other a little more than six. In their car was found some old clothing and quite a quantity of new goods and clothing which had never been used and which was not suitable for their use. The inference is that they had stolen it from a store or a residence somewhere.

They gave their residence as Breckenridge and said they were going to Lubbock to seek cotton-picking jobs.

F. M. Sherrod, who has been sick the past two weeks or more, is showing little improvement.

LUNCHEON CLUB MET LAST TIME

Prizes Awarded To Winners In Lawn Contest, Last Meeting Of Luncheon Club.

The last meeting of the Tahoka Luncheon Club was held at the American Legion Hall Tuesday at noon, when prizes were awarded to ten winners in the yard improvement and lawn beautification contests, which came to a close the first of October. The names of the winners and the prizes were published last week.

All the prize winners had been invited to be present and most of them accepted the invitation.

The prizes were presented by President Wynne Collier to the following for the most beautiful lawns: first, Mrs. Gladys M. Stokes; second Mrs. J. L. Hearne; third, Mrs. Tom Garrard; fourth, Sup't. W. G. Barrett; fifth, L. B. Jones.

For most improvement in lawns: first, Rev. George A. Dale; second, W. S. Anglin; third, Mrs. R. C. Foster; fourth, Mrs. C. L. Hafer; fifth, Mrs. W. D. Smith.

Rev. George A. Dale was out of town, and Mrs. Hearne, L. B. Jones, and Mrs. W. D. Smith were unable to be present, but W. D. Smith was there as a substitute for his wife. The prize winners present expressed their appreciation of the prizes, and Secretary Kenneth Reuben Durham read fake letters of appreciation from all the winners which were very clever and amusing.

The presentation of the prizes, the acceptance speeches, and the reading of the letters of appreciation constituted the program of the day, which was a most enjoyable one.

The sentiment was expressed to the effect that the contests had been well worth while and the hope was voiced that some club in the town might sponsor such a contest for the coming year.

President Wynne Collier announced that the first luncheon of the newly organized Rotary Club would be held on Thursday of next week.

With that the luncheon club adjourned sine die, after having accomplished some really worth-while things for the town.

Local People Heard On Radio Program

A radio program under the direction of Miss Lillith Boyd county home demonstration agent of Lynn county, and V. F. Jones, county agent, was given over station KPYO, Lubbock, Thursday afternoon.

The first number was an accordion solo, "Beautiful Texas", by Mrs. R. L. Richardson, member of the Tahoka Home Demonstration Club.

"A Thumb Nail Sketch of the Agricultural History of Lynn County", was the subject of a very interesting and informative paper by C. A. Lawrence, assistant county agent of Lynn County.

Mrs. Boswell Edwards, kitchen demonstrator of the New Home Demonstration club, read "A Story of My Kitchen." This was published in the News a few weeks ago.

A vocal duet, "Texas, Our Texas", was rendered by Misses Margaret Barton and Zella Mae Gray, 4-H club girls of the New Lynn community, with Mrs. C. C. Coffee as piano accompanist.

A clever dialogue between Joe Poindexter and Leon Jennings, two Lynn county farmers, gave much valuable information useful to farmers in this section of the state. "What I Did As Clothing Demonstrator" was told by Mary Stewart, 4-H club girl of the Edith community.

The program closed with another accordion solo, "Old Folks At Home", by Mrs. R. L. Richardson.

Without doubt many Lynn county people, especially housewives, heard and greatly enjoyed this program.

For the benefit of our readers who did not hear it, we hope to be able to give the substance of the paper read by Mr. Lawrence and the dialogue given by Messers. Joe Poindexter and Leon Jennings in our issue next week.

Two or three members of Rev. C. C. Armstrong's family have been sick this week.

ROTARY CLUB IS ORGANIZED

Twenty-Eight Charter Members; First Meeting To Be Held Thursday.

Members of the local Rotary Club recently organized here received letters this week from Fred Wemple of Midland, Governor of the 41st district, announcing that the Rotary International Chapter No. 4032 was granted to the Tahoka Rotary Club on October 22, the club having 28 charter members.

The first meeting of the Club will be on Thursday of next week, and Thursday night of the following week has been named as Charter Presentation night. This will be a great occasion. The place for the meeting has not yet been announced, but a rather large auditorium will be requested.

The twenty-eight members of the local club and their wives are all expected to be present. The twenty-nine members of the Post Rotary Club, which sponsored the organization of the Tahoka Club, and their wives are also expected to be present, together with four representatives of all other Rotary Clubs in this territory who find it possible to attend. The district governor, Fred Wemple of Midland, and other representatives of the Midland Rotary Club will be here. Secretary K. R. Durham expresses the belief that at least 150 Rotarians and Rotarian wives, and possibly 200, including those from Tahoka, will be in attendance on this occasion.

"Today another page in Tahoka's history has been written", writes Governor Fred Wemple in announcing the granting of the charter. "I look forward with keen anticipation to meeting with your club. Charter Presentation night will be another epoch making date in Tahoka and in the 41st Rotary District. May it be a glorious occasion."

DISTRICT SINGING CONVENTION TO BE HELD AT WELLS

The District Singing Convention will meet at Wells Sunday November the first, at two thirty p.m. Mr. C. H. Mansell is president.

Billroy's To Show Here This Week

On Saturday October 31, the summer theatrical season in Tahoka will be officially opened here by the appearance in this city of the greatest show in the world of its kind. It is the 12th anniversary Edition of Billroy's Comedians, and so well and favorably is this name known to theatre goers that this simple announcement alone would suffice to fill the brand new, waterproof tent which seats more than 4,000.

But this year, in recognition and celebration of the Anniversary Tour, Manager Wehle has entirely reconstructed his offering and has a production of amazing magnitude and unlimited variety. During the past few months this attraction has played to more than 450,000 people in the winter resort cities of Florida, following which a brief rest was ready for the summer tour. This year a fleet of more than thirty five buses, cars and trucks is required to haul the big troupe which numbers more than eighty people.

Due to having played all the leading cities in Florida the producer was able to handpick a remarkable cast for the summer tour, getting the most talented artists and the most gorgeous girls from the Florida night clubs which are now closed for the summer.

Featured in the billing of the show this year is "Daphne," Queen of the Fan Dancers, an exotic creature whose youth, beauty and grace will charm and thrill you. Then there is the famous Palais Royal Orchestra which has been augmented by a number of artists from the famous Bouche's Villa Venica, at Miami Beach. Dozens of beautiful dazzling girls will appear in the numerous ensembles and seventeen exceptionally remarkable vaudeville acts will be interspersed throughout the program. Then, of course, there will be a three-act comedy farce, one of the latest Broadway successes so that regardless of your preference in theater you will be sure to find something to your taste.

The criminal docket will be called next Monday morning.

Redwine Killer Was Electrocuted Friday

Rains Again Visit Lynn County

Sheriff B. L. Parker Witnesses Electrocution of Negro; Banks Calm Until End.

After conveying four Lynn county prisoners to the state penitentiary at Huntsville last week, Sheriff B. L. Parker remained to witness the electrocution of Elmo Banks at about 12:25 a.m. Friday. He also witnessed the electrocution of a Mexican from one of the border counties immediately preceding Banks' electrocution.

Banks went to the chair apparently without a tremor and without the slightest evidence of nervousness, Mr. Parker says. Calm and self-possessed, Banks no longer made any pretense of insanity. "He showed just as much sense as he ever did", Parker stated. But he made no allusion to the crime of which he was convicted and no allusion to his impending death.

"Are any of my folks down here?", he asked Parker, just a few minutes before he was to march down to the electric chair.

On being informed that none were there, he then wanted to know how all the folks were in Tahoka, and asked for a cigarette, which Parker supplied him. In answer to a question, he stated that he had had plenty of supper, and by that time the warden was about ready for him to take the one-way walk. Arriving at the chair, the warden asked Banks if he had anything to say.

"No", Banks replied.

"Then be seated", requested the warden.

Banks calmly sat down, the straps were fastened, the electrodes placed, and the button pushed. It was all over. In nine minutes, Banks was pronounced a dead man.

Thus he paid with his life for the life of Deputy Sheriff Ed Redwine, the man who had been kind to him and granted him many favors, the man who trusted him and whose over-confidence had given Banks the opportunity to wrest Redwine's pistol from his pocket and deliberately fire several shots into Redwine's body after the latter had pleaded calmly with the negro not to shoot.

Then taking the jail keys from the mortally wounded deputy, Banks unlocked the outer door and made his escape. Two days later he was captured near Wells store in this county and within a week he was tried by a jury and given the death penalty. This was early in March. His attorneys, appointed by the court, appealed the case. It was later affirmed by the court of criminal appeals at Austin, and on the first day of the September term of the district court here Judge Gordon B. McGuire set the day of execution.

Local People At Dallas Convention

County Judge P. W. Goad and Mrs. Goad, and County Commissioners George Small and Waldo McLaurin and Commissioner-elect Sam Holland and their wives attended the state convention of county judges and commissioners in Dallas last week.

Judge Goad says that while this is the first state convention he has attended, others reported that it was the most largely attended convention in the history of the organization. The discussions were fine. Distinguished Texans addressing the body were Vice President John Garner, Senator Tom Connally, and Attorney-General William McCraw.

While in Dallas, the visitors from Lynn county took advantage of the opportunity to visit the Centennial Exposition.

County Court Is Convened On Monday

County court opened here Monday morning, but the docket is light and little has been done further than to call the docket and set a few cases for trial.

The criminal docket will be called next Monday morning.

Córdoba, Texas October 29.—Speaking engagements assigned to Congressman George Mahon by the Democratic National Committee last week including Democratic meetings in New Haven, Connecticut; New Brunswick, New Jersey; Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and a ward rally in New York City. He also spent two days in Democratic Campaign Committee headquarters where he conferred with Congressman Sam Rayburn, Chairman of the Speakers Bureau; Senator Pat Harrison, and other Party leaders.

Mr. Mahon had gone to New York at the request of the Democratic National Committee after filling a week of speaking engagements in New Mexico. Enroute to the East, he stopped over in Chicago for a conference with Congressman Marvin Jones, Chairman of the House Committee on Agriculture, who has managed President Roosevelt's campaign in the farm states of the Middle West.

Lloyd Croskin, his Secretary, who has kept the office open in Colorado during his absence, states that he expects the Congressman to return about November 3rd, the date of the election.

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

24,720 Miles in 18 Days
Some Ladies' Hats
Gen. Butler's Peace Plan
12 Ladies Good and True

Arthur Brisbane
seventy-odd day trip that beat Jules Verne's "Around the World in Eighty Days." Nelly Bly, clever newspaper woman, knew how to make it interesting, going out of her way to travel by elephant, camel, jinrikishas, etc. Flying around the world costs about $5,000.

Some day some woman, let us hope, will balance her fashion budget, decide just what she wants to wear, and then wear it, as men have done, but the day is far away. These are some of the hats from which your wife, daughter, sister will choose this season:

Hats shaped like East Indian war shields; hats heavy in gold embroidery; flat pillbox turbans, gold braided; Russian style hats off the face, with tall tiara fronts; hats of Persian lamb and embroidered felt; small toques, dipped down front and back, covered with soft feathers; the military touch predominating."

Why do you suppose, do women take so much trouble to spoil faces and heads naturally beautiful? It cannot all be the fault of hat-makers.

Gen. Smedley D. Butler, retired fighting major general of the United States marines, asks the Women's Christian Temperance union to start a campaign against drunken automobile drivers, and also help peace by working for a constitutional amendment forbidding the President or congress to send troops out of the country.

You cannot change men by legislation; as was discovered in our prohibition mistake; you must change the men from the inside.

For the first time in history, New Jersey, selecting a jury all women, has surprised some, annoyed others. Why? For ages women have been judged and sentenced by individual men or groups of men. They have been ducked, branded with hot irons, put in the stocks, beheaded, hanged, burned alive.

Is there injustice in turning the thing around for a change; at least no twelve women would burn or duck anybody..

Lloyd's, British insurance concern, will insure you against anything happening, if it "guesses" that it will not happen; it usually guesses correctly. It refuses to insure against war striking England, although until lately the charge for that insurance was only one-fifth of one per cent: 200 pounds for 100,000 pounds insurance.

Somebody in Lloyd's possesses intelligence. That big organization does not like to think of war with airplanes added.

News from the East interests Americans: they might have to pay the bill. Japan and Russia, supposed recently to be on the verge of war, are said to have an understanding about things in the east that would involve depriving the British of profitable locations and rights. This does not please Britain, but that is the business of Japan, Russia and England.

Interesting flying item: Russia orders in Baltimore a passenger "clipper" plane, to cost $1,000,000 and carry forty-four passengers, besides a crew of six.

The plane, very fast, can go 4,000 miles without taking on fuel, a range that would bring it across the Atlantic nicely, if it ever wanted to come back with a load of explosives instead of passengers.

The Irish Catholic hierarchy, sitting at Maynooth College, Cardinal Macrory presiding, denounces communism and persecution of the Catholic church in Spain, "mindful of Spain's kindness to our ancestors." On October 25 all Catholic churches in Ireland will take up collections "for the relief of Spanish Catholics." Mexico, once as "Catholic" as Ireland or any nation, sends, from its Chamber of Deputies, a message of sympathy to the Spanish government at Madrid.

England and France no longer guarantee any protection for Belgium in case of war, so the new King, Leopold, says all alliances are off, with France, England and everybody else.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Dictator Stalin Foresees Another European War—Spanish Rebels Nearing Madrid—Simpson Affair May Lead to King Edward's Abdication.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD © Western Newspaper Union.

EUROPE'S situation, according to seasoned observers, is settling down to a fight to the finish between Communism and Fascism, and the several nations are lining up accordingly. Soon it will seem wonderfully fast now. Such a trip seems slow. Air progress is rapid. Because it was done scientifically, by machinery, the eighteen-day trip seems less romantic than the Nelly Bly seventy-odd day trip that beat Jules Verne's "Around the World in Eighty Days." Nelly Bly, clever newspaper woman, knew how to make it interesting, going out of her way to travel by elephant, camel, jinrikishas, etc. Flying around the world costs about $5,000.

Before the recent primary he announced that, though a candidate for renomination as a Republican, he intended to support Mr. Roosevelt for re-election. This was an act of political suicide, and he was defeated by Wilber M. Brucker.

Senator Couzens was noted for his great contributions to charity. The chief of these was the gift of probably $20,000 for the help of unfortunate children. He established the Children's Fund of Michigan with an endowment of $10,000,000.

PEACE within the ranks of the American Federation of Labor has not yet been achieved, for the executive council of that body adjourned without settling the dispute between the Green and Lewis factions. The council will meet again November 14 in Tampa, and two days later the federation will open its annual convention in that Florida city. If there are developments meanwhile, the council or federation may discuss the quarrel, according to President Green. He said: "The matter is temporarily closed," and added that so far as he knew, no peace overtures had been made by the CIO leaders. Mr. Green declared the ten suspended unions could not be admitted to the convention.

Should Stalin decide to come out openly in aid of the leftist government of Spain, the Nazis and Fascists may be counted on to re-double their already existing campaign against Communism—and many nations would soon be involved in the quarrel, with possibilities that terrify thinking persons the world over.

Klementi Voroshilov, Soviet commissar for defense, didn't allay the alarm any when he said in a formal statement:

"The Soviet Union is prepared to meet the enemy anywhere he chooses to taste the force of our arms."

"We are ready with man-power, equipment, training and resources."

A Russian language paper printed in New York said the Soviet press bureau in London had announced that Stalin would come to America after the November election, for medical treatment; that he would visit President Roosevelt, and later would go to Mexico. All of this was promptly denied officially in Moscow and by the Soviet embassy in Washington.

MERE scandal and gossip have no proper place in this department, but the "affaire Simpson," as the French would term it, has progressed until it assumes world importance. As arrangements are being made for the quiet and uncontested divorce of Mrs. "Wally" Simpson, American friend of King Edward VIII of England, it is rumored in London society circles that the bachelor monarch will abdicate in favor of his brother, the Duke of York, and marry the attractive woman who has shared so much of his time in recent months. In support of this rumor is the reported fact that plans are being made for renting the farms of the Sandringham estate in Norfolk, which is the king's private property. Also, there is a story that this estate may be sold to the Aga Khan, the immensely wealthy spiritual head of the Ismaili sect of Mohammedanism.

Should Edward give up the throne, it would eventually be occupied by Princess Elizabeth, eldest daughter of the Duke of York, and this succession would be decided popular with the people of England. The abdicating king might revert to the dukedom of Cornwall, which provides a net income of about $350,000.

There is nothing in British law to prevent the king from marrying whomsoever he pleases, but no ruler of the country since Henry VIII has wedded a commoner. Court gossip in London says that Prime Minister Baldwin and the archbishop of Canterbury recently appealed to Edward for greater discretion in his relations with Mrs. Simpson, and were hotly rebuffed by the king.

English newspapers imposed on themselves a voluntary censorship in this affair, but it has been broken by the Sunday Referee which prints an article declaring the king "may marry by spring," that this would result in postponement of the coronation, and that tradesmen have been insuring themselves against such a delay.

PERSONAL reports of Presidential and vice presidential candidates, made public by the Senate campaign expenditures committee, show that President Roosevelt gave a $500 contribution to the Democratic county committee of Dutchess county, New York, his home, and had spent $10 for postage. Vice President John N. Garner reported that he had received no contributions and made no expenditures.

The Republican candidates, Gov. Alf M. Landon and Col. Frank Knox, reported they had had no personal receipts nor expenditures since nomination, their campaigns being financed by the Republican national committee.

In getting the nomination Landon received $163,480 and spent $164,572.

Knox reported personally receiving $35,754 and spending $35,557 before nomination, and the Knox for President committee received $133,818 and spent $143,259.

Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate, reported his party had collected $5,614 and spent $6,504 to date.

John Zahn, National Greenback party candidate, reported he had received $1 and spent $2.50 toward his election.

At the same time the American Liberty League, nonpartisan, voluntarily submitted a financial report.

The report showed that the organization had received $419,282 since January 1, and spent $461,851.

GENERAL FRANCO, head of the Spanish insurgents, ordered the immediate taking of Madrid and each day the state of the defenders of the capital became more desperate. The rebels closed in relentlessly, making effective use of bombing planes and armored tanks.

President Manuel Azana and some of his cabinet ministers slipped out of Madrid and appeared in Barcelona. Ostensibly they were making a tour of the loyalist fronts, but the general opinion was that they had fled from the capital to make a "last stand" in Catalonia, which province always is radical.

Anyhow, Azana took over an office in the Catalan parliament building for himself and his secretarial staff. Senora Azana has quit Spain. She appeared in Toulouse, France, and departed for an unannounced destination.

JAMES COUZENS, independent Republican senator from Michigan, died in a Detroit hospital after a long illness and immediately following an operation to relieve uremic poisoning. He was sixty-four years old.

Mr. Couzens was one of the wealthiest men in Congress, his riches being a result of early association with Henry Ford in the automobile business. He was twice elected mayor of Detroit and was appointed to the Senate in 1922 to fill out the unexpired term of Senator Truman H. Newberry. As a senator he frequently disregarded party lines, and since the election of President Roosevelt he had supported many New Deal measures.

Finish Repairs on White House

Mansion Put Into First Class Shape; Main Attraction for Sightseers

BY EARL GODWIN

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Several months ago President Roosevelt determined that no matter who lived in the White House for the next four years he was going to see to it that the old mansion was put into first class shape, and just about now the painters, electricians and carpenters are leaving a repair job that has taken them all summer and part of the fall. Most of this work has been done under the Works Progress administration—a sort of number one job that should have been attempted long ago. However, most presidents have felt that they should not spend any more of the public money than absolutely necessary on the upkeep and repair of the White House. In taking this attitude, though, they have let the old house run down in several respects and it has required more than a hundred thousand dollars to remove fire hazards and strengthen the construction, and bring it up to date.

SENATOR COUZENS was noted for his great contributions to charity. The chief of these was the gift of probably $20,000 for the help of unfortunate children. He established the Children's Fund of Michigan with an endowment of $10,000,000.

Mr. Green declared the ten suspended unions could not be admitted to the convention.

SHOULD STALIN decide to come out openly in aid of the leftist government of Spain, the Nazis and Fascists may be counted on to re-double their already existing campaign against Communism—and many nations would soon be involved in the quarrel, with possibilities that terrify thinking persons the world over.

THE AFFAIRE SIMPSON, as the French would term it, has progressed until it assumes world importance. As arrangements are being made for the quiet and uncontested divorce of Mrs. "Wally" Simpson, American friend of King Edward VIII of England, it is rumored in London society circles that the bachelor monarch will abdicate in favor of his brother, the Duke of York, and marry the attractive woman who has shared so much of his time in recent months. SHOULD EDWARD give up the throne, it would eventually be occupied by Princess Elizabeth, eldest daughter of the Duke of York, and this succession would be decided popular with the people of England. The abdicating king might revert to the dukedom of Cornwall, which provides a net income of about $350,000.

THE COPIED IRISH MANSION. The White House was designed by an Irishman who took first prize in a contest nearly a century and a half ago, who modeled the building after the Irish mansion of a well-known Irish peer, the Duke of Leinster. The front door of the White House is now on the north side facing Pennsylvania Avenue, but when John Adams moved in during the year 1800, the south front was the main entrance. The south side faced the Potomac River, and Pennsylvania Avenue then ran through the White House backyard. The river, too, then ran within a hundred yards or so of the front door, and President Monroe used to trot down the lawn and take a swim, but in the passing years of a century the course of the Potomac has been changed both naturally and artificially, and the Potomac River is now nearly a mile south. The mound on which the Washington monument stands was once surrounded by water. Now a vast extent of parks and athletic grounds spreads out south of the executive mansion, and on this land some day I believe a fine memorial to Thomas Jefferson will be erected.

IN THE PASSING OF TIME, too, by a peculiar oversight, the corner stone of the White House has been lost sight of. If there ever was a formal dedication of the laying of the White House corner stone the records have been mislaid. Today there is a dispute as to where the stone actually is. Some of the White House historians claim it is the second stone from the bottom on the northeast corner. That's where the architects who did some remodeling thirty years ago believed it was placed, but others claim that the corner stone would have been placed on a front corner—which would place it either on the southeast or southwest corner, as that side was considered the front when the house was built.

THE LINCOLN STUDY. On the second floor of the mansion is the room called "The Lincoln Study." President Hoover took great interest in restoring that room and placing in it furniture believed to have been used in the Lincoln era, arranging it as nearly as possible like it was in the Lincoln days.

And yet, when President Roosevelt moved in his large family, it became necessary to take the old relics out and turn the study back into a bedroom. Various changes have to be made by every President. For instance, there is an old billiard table down in the basement which is a mute relic of the day when Mrs. Lucy Webb Hayes, wife of President Hayes, believed that a billiard table was an adjunct of the saloon—and had it taken away from the library where President Grant had placed it. The billiard table is now among the relics, dishes and silver, tourists see. Near it is a full length portrait of Mrs. Hayes, presented to the White House by the National W. C. T. U., whose president was then the famous Frances Willard. At the time of the presentation it was stated that the portrait would hang in the East Room—but if it ever was hung there no one now recalls it and the only portraits in that famous room are those of George and Martha Washington. Mrs. Hayes was a member of the W. C. T. U. and served no wine or liquor in the White House while President Hayes was in office.

RATS CHASED OUT.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT and former President Hoover together are responsible for bringing the home and the office sections of the executive mansion into full efficiency. Once upon a time the living quarters were so run down that a man known as "the government rat catcher" took a box of weasels into the cellar and chased out several hundred big gray rodents. That was in Theodore Roosevelt's time and Teddy himself went down to the cellar and watched the performance. Electrical appliances began to find their way into the White House in the former Roosevelt era and part of the job that had to be done under Franklin Roosevelt was to tear out all the walls and floors at the insistence of the fire underwriters, and put in new wiring. The present Roosevelt puts in an electric kitchen where you can cook either a fried egg or a banquet for several hundred people. There are now electric elevators in the living quarters and the office.

BEAUTIFUL GROUNDS.

THE WHITE HOUSE grounds cover seventeen acres on which a fine carpet of lawn is kept in shape by a corps of gardeners under a head man named "Bill" Reeve, said to know more about grass than anyone else in the city. There are some fine old trees on that seventeen acres, some of them planted before the house was built. Other trees have been planted by various Presidents, but there is no accurate record of who sponsored most of the trees. One rare acacia tree which stands right in front of the executive offices and whose wonderful blooms attract humming birds all summer long was planted by President Arthur.

DURING THE WILSON ADMINISTRATION a flock of sheep grazed on the south grounds. They were given to "Dick" Probert, then the correspondent of one of the press associations, now vice president of the C. and O. Railroad. The White House dogs used to chase the sheep, so Mr. Probert fell heir to his gift as a humane act. At some time or other in every administration there are a lot of dogs around; and during Franklin Roosevelt's time there have been two splendid Irish setters in the south grounds some of the time. They have no sheep to chase; but they plague the hundred or more gray squirrels which live in luxury in those big trees, largely fed by tourists' peanuts supplemented by peanuts grown on the historic Wakefield estate, birthplace of George Washington, located about fifty miles southeast of the capital city. Most recent acquisition in the White House grounds is a family of quail. A pair of these little brown game birds built a nest close to one corner of the house and hatched out eleven young ones.

HOUSEHOLD STAFF.

Few people realize that the staff of assistants at the White House remains as Presidents come and go. Only the Presidents' immediate secretaries are appointed by him and leave with him. Even were there no President, the White House office machinery would move along silently and perfectly under the direction of the famous Rudolph Forster, whose title is executive clerk—but who is really the first sergeant of the White House clerical staff. His immediate assistant, or possibly the word "colleague" would better, is Maurice Latte, one of whose duties is to carry to Congress whatever messages and documents are required to be laid on the desk of the Senate or House—when the President himself does not take them in person. The smoothness with which the business of the White House is conducted is due to the silent efficiency of these two topnotchers, who have each been there for forty years. "Rudy" Forster as we know him, was a small time clerk in the first days of his career at the White House, and one of his duties then was to inscribe with pen and ink, laboriously and with unceasing care, the President's messages to Congress. Typewriters were common then, too, but Congress said that the Constitution prescribed that the President should send communications "in writing," and that typed documents were not "writing." It was only in Theodore Roosevelt's time Congress finally broke down and permitted the use of typewriting machines.

Mulleens took the corn knife and Shellenberger followed him, climbing around the cliff to the back of the ridge and then plunging again into the woods. Mullens was a different man among the trees. He picked the way through the giant poplars, pine, white oak, chestnut, ash, hickory, easily with the complete surety of long experience. Shellenberger followed. Wild game started up from their approach and slipped deeper into the timber.

Slowly they went on through the forest, examining the stand of the timber, the distribution of the species, the adaptability of the hollows for skidding or driving the logs into Gannon creek, and noting the best method of attack. When, toward late afternoon, they finally came out on the ridge in sight of the Pinnacle, Mullens said to Shellenberger:

"About ten thousand feet of longleaf pine to the acre, and maybe two thousand to three thousand short leaf to that second hollow."

"How much poplar?"

"Maybe average two thousand feet."

"And the other stuff?"

"About the same for white oak, chestnut and ash. Maybe five hundred feet of pignut and shellbark hickory."

"What do you think of it?" Shellenberger asked.

"Never saw a finer lot of stumpage for a loggin' gang in my life. Just made right for cuttin'."

Shellenberger sat down and began to sketch in a drawing on the back of an envelope.

"You'll have to build a camp in the hollow down there below that rock. They call it Dry creek. This man has a steam-mill and he is getting a circular saw, so that will be easy. You can clear out that flat there at the mouth of the creek for a collecting point. You can look at it again tomorrow. We don't think we'll need a dam in Gannon. Maybe one in the smaller creek."

"Have you been all along Gannon Creek?"

"Yes. Clear down to the Big Sandy. It's just about right. You can take forty-foot logs down it in the spring."

"What about men?"

"We'll try the natives. They'll be cheap, and a lot of them can board at home. We'll get Pattern to draw up a list of good men, and I've ordered in tools. We just as well get to work. He says go right ahead, and I'll fit up money matters later on."

They took the path that led down the hill from the Pinnacle to the house as they day began to withdraw from the western slopes.

CHAPTER X

The days were easier at the house when the men carried their lunch with them to the hills. The rush of the breakfast hour passed, and the middle of the day was left in some peace and without hurry to Julia and Cynthia. They could have a simple dinner alone with Jesse. Cynthia brought in the milk cold from the spring-house. Julia made the corn bread and gathered a dishpan of lettuce from her garden to mix in hot bacon grease and flavor with new onions because Jesse liked it that way.

"How is the corn up in Barn Branch?" Julia asked.

"I believe it's about the best on the place this year."

"Will you get it finished up today?"

"It'll be done with it about three o'clock."

"The sweet-potato patch is ruined for the plow," Julia said.

"I plan on getting to them yet today."

Cynthia saw him slip the Cooley's Blackstone into his shirt as he went out. "I guess Jesse likes to be himself to think about the law that he's so wrapped up in. It seems such a long time ago that we set out the sweet-potato plants and he spoke about it. Maybe I can get time to go up to the patch and lay some of the vines up on the ridges for him."

She took time and in the mid-afternoon, when the work that was never done was almost done, she started up to the House Field. Jesse had not come. She waited, looking down upon the matted vines. When he did not come, she went on up to Barn Hollow by the cowpath over the ridge against the line of trees. The corn was plowed, but Jesse was not in sight. She wondered where he could be, thinking she had missed him by going up over the ridge.

Then she heard his voice pitched to the oratorical tones of the Pikeville lawyers and reciting:

"All children born before matrimony are bastards by our law; and so it is of all children born so long after the death of the husband, that, by the usual course of gestation, they cannot be begotten by him. But this being a matter of some uncertainty, the law is not exact as to a few days for which weeks begin the time allowed. . . ."

"Now why in the world is Jesse saying all that for up here in the hollow with nobody around to hear him but the mule and it drowsing like a sleepy old judge on a bench. It must be Jesse's law book."

Jesse went on, stumbling over the unusual words:

"But, if a man dies, and his widow soon after marries again, and a child is born within such a time, as that by the course of nature it might have been the child of either husband; in this case he is said to be more than ordinarily legitimate; for he may, when he arrives to years of discretion, choose which of the fathers he pleases."

She could not see Jesse from where she sat. What would he look like in the role of orator? The impulse to lay eyes upon him overcame her. She went a little farther up the ridge overlooking the hollow and climbed down the rock behind a clump of redbud.

Jesse was standing under a pine tree before a moss-covered rock which had broken away from the cliff. He held the yellow bound Blackstone in his left hand, pointing with his right forefinger at the page, tapping it for emphasis, and making his voice vibrate with his imitation of a mountain lawyer citing a point of law:

". . . restraints upon marriage, especially among the lower classes, are evidently detrimental to the public by hindering the increase of the people; and to religion and morality, by encouraging licentiousness and debauchery among the single of both sexes; and thereby destroying one end of society and government, which is con-cubitus prohibited, vago."

She was fascinated by his zeal and the reality of the performance. It had halted in the passage, stumbling seriously over the Latin words, the illusion was broken and she felt ashamed at the thought of spying on Jesse from behind a bush and listening to something not meant for her ears. She would go down to him at once.

"But then he will see me by my face and the direction I come from that I have been listening. I will go back and come across the field."

She climbed back up the rock, and went down the gully through the cleared space to the plowed field, and came down the young corn rows approaching Jesse directly face to face. He saw her coming, not displeased, and he sat on the rock with the hook open face down over his knee. When she came up, he was composed.

"I looked for you at the sweet-potato patch," she said as a greeting.

"I was just giving the mule a rest and I got to looking at the picture of Blackstone here . . ."

He showed her the yellow-tinged engraving of the enormous-appearing man, solid and legal behind the ample contours of his ermine robe—safer the careful twistings of the curled fleece wig stood out the bushy black eyebrows, the big eyes that had faced with the confidence of knowledge and experience, judges and juries.

"They wear funny clothes in England," Cynthia said.

He still kept his finger in the page where he was reading.

"Have you read clear over there?"

"Well, not exactly. Only I got tired of the chapters on the King's Tithes, and the King's Prerogative, and his Revenue, and of the Clergy. It didn't seem like it meant anything in this country. So I kind of skipped to this part, 'Of Husband and Wife' and it's right interesting. It says a man has to stand good for his wife's debts as long as she buys necessary common supplies, but not for anything besides necessities."

"Is that what law is?" Cynthia asked.

"Well, that's just one little part. There are so many things here. It makes a body wonder if people really do all the things this book says they mustn't do, and how many people had to do an evil before a law was made about it. It takes a lot of study, and a man needs help on some of it."

"You're going to read with Tandy Morgan, Jesse?"

"That's what I aim to do this fall."

"We'll have ready money, too, and I can go to Pikeville, Mother says."

"The book lays down law on that," she says here. "The last duty of parents to their children is that of giving them an education suitable to their station in life; a duty pointed out by reason, for the greatest importance of any. For . . . it is not easy to imagine or allow, that a parent has conferred any considerable benefit upon his child by bringing him into the world; if he afterwards entirely neglects his culture and education, and suffers him to grow up like a mere beast, to lead a life useless to others and shameful to himself. This fellow talks straight words like a lawyer ought."

"Are you actually going to do that down Gannon?" Abral asked.

"We certainly are."

"In rafts?"

"Yea. Small ones."

"Can I take one down?" Abral demanded.

"You certainly can," Shellenberger said.

"But we have to cut the logs first. Do you think we can get good meat along the creeks here?"

"There'll be plenty out of these hollows," Sparrel said. "The country is filling up fast and plenty of them have not land enough to keep them busy."

"We'll have to put up a camp there. If you rig up a saw on your mill we could rip out boards pretty quick."

"The saw ought to be in now by time," Sparrel said.

"I don't see any change in him."

"I like his way of talking about the Ohio river and things," she said.

Then, rousing from the dream in which he was still partly submerged, he said, "I guess you like him a right smart."

"Is he as nice out in the woods as he is about the house?"

"I don't see any change in him."

"I like his way of talking about the Ohio river and things," she said.

Then, rousing from the dream in which he was still partly submerged, he said, "I guess you like him a right smart, don't you?"

The directness of it made her self-conscious and she blushed. She retreated into herself a little way in defense, "I think he's right nice."

"You're in love with him. You've been different since that night he came and you put flowers and a white cloth on the table."

"Why, Jesse, I . . . Why do you say that?"

"Oh, Reuben is a nice fellow. I don't blame you any."

Cynthia had not meant to speak to Jesse about Reuben. She had merely sat there with her own thoughts but they had moved so quietly and rapidly that the pressure of the undercurrent had suddenly escaped into words.

"What do you do or say about it to another person, anyway? Would even Jesus understand? A body doesn't do or say anything but lets it have its own way." It sparkles in your heart where no one sees, and it lights off the soul and changes the look of the whole world. You hold it there like it was star vapor from another world or the first green mist of leaves sitting between the willow limbs on Wolfpen and it trembles inside of you with wonder. Maybe if you let it alone and believe in it, it . . ."

Cynthia changed the subject skillfully back to Jesse.

"You're sure read a right smart in such a hard book."

"I guess I've been getting along right well."

"I came out to lay some of the potato vines up on the ridges for you."

"You don't need to do that; you got plenty to do. It don't look like we'd have much time for House Field this evening, anyway."

"There's never enough time in the day any more. Can I carry your book back with me if you're not going to use it?"

She took the book, and Jesse roused the mule. It was too late for Cynthia to help in the sweet-potato vines. She went on to the house and got the water and grazed at night; and of the number of wedges and wooden mauls and cross-cut saws and axes and spike poles and adzes and peaveys required; and of blacksmithing and the hazards of logging and the carelessness of men even where their necks are in danger.

Cynthia had finished the dishes and was moving the lamp from the table. It flashed against the polished brass of Reuben's compass. "That was the first time he ever called me anything—Cynthia. He says it so nice. I hope we haven't put you out. Cynthia . . . I don't reckon many a man would say about keeping a supper waiting for them. It was slow going and made us late." You're in love with him. You've been different since that night he came and you put flowers and a white cloth . . . I guess things just happen to a body. They happen deep in you when you don't know it, and then one day, like this, suddenly they come out and there they are."

The coming of Shellenberger had not yet destroyed the singular distinction of mood the Sabbath brought to Wolfpen. Since the days of Saul Pattern it had been set apart by the ceremonial of peace and rest from daily toil and elevated above the other days by a touch of solemnity. Church services were rare. Possibly for that reason the Patterns had been at pains to keep alive in their isolation the sense of its difference. This weekly pause between periods of labor, when the mill was silent and the churn and the loom were still, gave to their life some of the quiet dignity which the religions of quiet self-discipline have always conferred upon pastoral peoples.

Sparrel would read in his books and ponder a passage from the Bible. He would go to the barn to look over his stock, or walk into his fields and lean over the topmost bar looking off into the hills, which seemed to be affected by the city. Sometimes he would ride in the afternoon to another bottom to see a neighbor or visit the sick. Or he would go to his mill and sit by the pond above the wheel.

But today the thought of his new saw, which he had just brought over from the river on a mule's back, filled the place of a more quiet contemplation. He took Reuben and the boys down to the mill to look over the plan for the circular saw.

"You have seen them work?" he asked of Reuben.

"Yes. Many of them," Reuben said.

Sparrel's pride in his improvement was stimulated by the days of absence from it in the woods. He told Reuben of the earlier Pattern mills and of their gradual transformation into this modern power unit. Reuben listened with the attention of one who found in the recreation of earlier modes of life an enthralling realization of the continuity of the generations and the growth of a culture.

The sight of the old water-wheel and of the two small rough stones which Saul had hewn affected him, for his own people had moved about too often to accumulate these intimate reminders of a family tradition.

"There is something about a mill wheel that I like," he said. "But steam is coming in fast."

"Steam is quicker and works in dry weather," Sparrel said.

They examined the new saw and the shaft which turned the millstones.

"Why don't you put in a separate one for the saw?" Reuben said. "It would be simpler. Then you could just shift the belt over to its wheel and be smaller than the one for the mill because the saw should turn faster."

He sketched his idea for the mill, complete from the smaller pulley to the location of the saw and the shuttle for the logs.

"That's it," Sparrel said. "That's it to a T. And I've got just the block of wood in the shop here."

"Although it was the Sabbath, they went to the shop and Sparrel marked with his pencil the dimensions for the new pulley.

They talked it over and over for a long time, adding nothing to it, but savoring it to the full by making and exchanging words about it.

Then the boys proposed that they go on into Dry Creek Hollow where Shellenberger and Mullens had gone, and see where the lumbering operations were to begin. Reuben excused himself with the plea that he wanted to go over his notes on the last lines of the survey and check them against the deeds to see where he was going before the party proceeded on Monday. He went back toward the house, leisurely, thinking of this place into which he had come, of the native refinement of the people who lived here, and of the fair-skinned girl who had weeks ago made him welcome under conditions so embarrassing to herself. He had said little to her, and she had said perhaps even less to him. But her few words were adequate symbols for revealing to him a dream-touched soul who clothed the commonplace with the radiance of poetry. He had seen this in her face, in the bend of her arm, in the play of her eyes and mouth when she looked at him. He had sensed it in the natural ease of manner which she carried in the presence of these men, and in the slight deference with which she greeted him. He thought

ONCE LIABILITIES, LUDWIG'S CASTLES ARE NOW ASSETS

The three great castles which Ludwig II of Bavaria exhausted his country's resources to build are today supplying the state with a tidy income, and hundreds of German and foreign visitors wander through the magnificent buildings, paying a small admission charge for viewing the eccentric king's old properties.

First of the castles Ludwig built is Neuschwanstein, a replica of a medieval stronghold. The king had it decorated with scenes from Wagner's operas, and nearby he constructed a lodge with a large tree in the main room, representing the scene in the first act of "Die Walkure." The castle cost $30,000,000 and took thirteen years to build. Its situation is romantic in the extreme, for it stands on a mountain of rock, above a stream hurrying through a gorge, and its only approach is a road hewn out of the mountainside.

Linderhof, a replica of the Trianon palace at Versailles, is sumptuously carried out in French style. Even if it did not satisfy Ludwig's ambitions, however, so that he next attempted to rival Versailles itself with the Schloss Herrenchiemsee, on an island of the Chiemsee. This has sixteen rooms of state and is splendidly decorated in crystal and gold. Its finest room, the Grand Ballroom, is lighted with over 2,500 candles, but the interior of the palace was never completely finished, because the king's funds at last gave out.

Visit In Tahoka

It's a far cry from here to Boston, Massachusetts. At least it used to be. It is not so far in this day of high-powered automobiles—not so far but that kin folks can visit each other now and then.

So Mr. and Mrs. George Bovell, who lives six miles north of Tahoka, had as their guests over the week end Mr. and Mrs. Ted Walker and little daughter Ann of Boston, Massachusetts; also Mr. and Mrs. Harold Thompson and sons, Harold Jr. and Fred, and little daughter, Carolyn, of Crowley, Tarrant county, Texas.

Mr. Walker is a brother of Mrs. Bovell. He had visited in Texas before, but this was Mrs. Walker's first visit. They were delighted with the county and Mr. Walker declared that he intends to come back every year.

The members of the Tahoka Home Demonstration Club entertained their husbands at a banquet at the American Legion Hall Tuesday night.

A most clever and entertaining program was rendered and it is reported to have been one of the most pleasurable occasions of the kind the H. D. Club women have ever staged.

Fred Mathis of Grassland was in town Tuesday and stated that plans were being made for a party of about twenty-five people of Grassland and other communities to visit the Centennial over the week end. Cheap excursion rates over the railroads were being offered. The party expected to leave from Post.

J. M. Slaughter of New York City visited his sister, Mrs. W. O. Henderson, here this week. He left for his home Wednesday morning.

Rollin McCord, Democratic nominee for county attorney, returned Wednesday night of last week from New York City, whether he had gone on business soon after the first primary election.

After his arrival there, he says that he found that he could profit by remaining there several weeks, and he did so.

Mr. McCord says that the Republicans in the North and East are spending a lot of money in an effort to defeat Roosevelt. They are using every means of publicity available to get their propaganda before the people. Nevertheless, Roosevelt seems to be very popular among the common people. Every time his picture is thrown on the screen in a theatre, there is a great demonstration, McCord says.

LOYALTY

It is during the foot-ball season that we have many opportunities to express our loyalty to our school and our team. We speak of being loyal to our school, but perhaps many of us never stopped to think what loyalty really means. Loyalty is a feeling of enthusiastic allegiance to an institution or to our superiors. If loyalty is thus defined, we may easily perceive that it is the feeling that every student owes to his school and its organizations.

Loyalty is shown to the team by the cheering section. Many times it is the consciousness of the loyalty of their friends that gives the team the confidence that it needs. In being loyal to our own team we must remember to be very courteous to our visitors. We must remember that the loyal person will protect the reputation of his school by avoiding any disorderly conduct. No really loyal student wants his school to have a reputation other than that of courtesy and fair dealing in all things.

Besides the loyalty expressed so enthusiastically in the support of the team, there is a form of loyalty that is just as true and that is much more quietly expressed. A person may not be a foot-ball player, but he may express his loyalty by representing his school in some other contest in which he does excel. He may not represent his school in any

CHAPEL PROGRAM

The Chapel period on last Wednesday was spent in singing. The entire student body joined in singing several members under the leadership of Miss Dockray and Mr. Penn. The students were favored with a selection by the Seventh Grade pupils. The crowning event of the program was a series of songs rendered by a double quartet consisting of Hiram Snowden, Harold Snowdon, Delton Pemberton, Wells Edwards, Joy Edwin Brown, Robert Maddox, Nathan Woosley, and Noel Alphin. These boys are being trained by Mr. Pratt.

SPANISH DEPARTMENT

The students of the Spanish classes have been spending a part of their class time in learning the Spanish songs, Alla en el Rancho Grande and Ramona. This cultural work adds interest to this already interesting course. The students of the second year class greatly enjoy the contest and yet be so loyal that he will urge his friends on to great successes. Loyalty may be coupled with courtesy, that mark of a lady or gentleman that shines forth from a kind heart.

PEP RALLY
At 12:45 o'clock on last Thursday October 22 the entire student body and faculty gathered in the auditorium to engage in a pep rally. After several peppy yells were led by Erma Faye Edwards, Doris LaVerne Lawler, and Eloise Roberts, the students heard short talks by several members of the faculty, the foot-ball captain Delton Pemberton, and Pep Leader Erma Faye Edwards. The students were delighted by a short concert rendered by Tahoka High school Band under the leadership of Mr. Pratt.

VICTORY!

Under somewhat adverse conditions, our Bulldogs humbled the Eagles of O'Donnell (the so-called "Puffitite") last Friday afternoon to the tune of 12 to 6. The ground was muddy; the atmosphere was cold and damp, but this seemed to make the Dogs hustle none the less.

The boys put forth a strong goalward drive in the first quarter which could not be stopped by the visitors. This evidence of ability seemed to tell them they could not be defeated, so they kept charging. Outstanding were the defensive play of Joy Edwin Brown and the advancing runs of Herbert Hoover. The return of Captain Pemberton was encouraging to the entire student body. This event marks the supremacy of Tahoka over O'Donnell.

On Next Friday, the Bulldogs will meet the Golden Tornadoes of Lamesa. Should they show the same improvement they have for the last two weeks they will also defeat Lamesa.

FRESHMAN REPORT

The Freshman Class has increased its enrollment since the beginning of school, it has also lost some of its members since that time. The two students who have checked out are Loretta Claxton and Wendall Lamb. The class regrets to lose these members for they were among the best.

The Freshman class got their reports on what they had done during the first six weeks. Some were disappointed and some were pleased with their grades. The class is trying to improve its work during this coming six weeks.

SEVENTH GRADE REPORT

The Seventh Grade has made further plans concerning their class Halloween party. A decoration committee was selected as follows: Billy Edwards, Edwin Rogers and Gloyd Cloe.

The Seventh Grade has charge of the Chapel program next Wednesday.

Lady's Painful Trouble Helped By Cardui

Why do so many women take Cardui for the relief of functional pains at monthly times? The answer is that they want results such as Mrs. Herbert W. Hunt of Halleville, Texas, describes. She writes: "My health wasn't good. I suffered from cramping. My pain would be so intense it would nauseate me. I would just drag around, so sluggish and 'do-less.' My mother decided to give me Cardui. I began to mend. That tired, sluggish feeling was gone and the pains disappeared. I can't praise Cardui too highly because I know it helped me." If Cardui does not help YOU, consult a physician.

Goodbye, Mr. Gloom!

...We're a jolly bunch of renegades... our sole purpose in life is to give Old Man Gloom the gate and usher in Mr. Sunshine by way of a million laughs. Turn to the Funny Page in every issue and let us help dispel those troubles!

• No man can really live by bread alone. Yes, we admit he'll EXIST, but there will be heavy lines of care running down his face, he'll forget how to smile.

• Verily, we humans need a few hearty guffaws now and then to chase away those wrinkles of care and give our spirits a lift. That's why this newspaper runs a collection of laugh-provoking comic strips on the Funny Page. Amid the depressing news of floods and earthquakes, crime and war, economic troubles and a host of other maladjustments on the face of Mr. World, it's a pleasant relaxation to shut your eyes on the day's bad tidings.

• You can get a joyful lift in spirits from the comics. We invite our readers to take a big swallow of this bottled sunshine. Turn to the Funny Page right now and forget your troubles!

• Our comic characters are a versatile lot, as you'll notice by glancing down the accompanying panel. If you want to chuckle over real troubles, turn to C. M. Payne's strip "S'Matter Pop," and see what a whale of an order he has to keep these boys of his under control... Or glance at the adventures of the intellectual Adamson, as drawn by O. Jacobsson.

• Something that will truly draw tears—of laughter—are Gluyas Williams' mischievous but lovable youngsters, Junior and the Baby... Then there's "Finney of the Force," by Ted O'Loughlin, as comical and as true-to-life an Irisher as ever flipped a night stick... Life out in Cactus Center, as described in S. L. Huntley's "Mescal Ike," has its exciting moments when its rip-roaring citizens are on the loose... And when it comes to "The Featherheads," by Osborne, they speak for themselves. In fact, that's the best thing they do!

• Let these bearers of fun whittle your blues down to size. Toss trouble right out the window and get a new lease on life through the comic page—turn to it right now!

Any erroneous reflection upon the reputation or standing of any individual firm or corporation, that may appear in the columns of The News will be gladly corrected when called to our attention.

THE BIG CITY BUGABOO.

Representative George Moffett of Chillicothe is author of the constitutional amendment which would limit the representation of any county in the legislature to seven members until it reaches a population of 700,000, after which it would be allowed one additional representative for each additional 100,000 population.

As an argument in favor of the amendment, Mr. Moffett says: "The trend of population is unquestionably from the farm to the city and unless Amendment No. 6 is adopted five large counties in Texas may soon control the destinies of the largest agricultural state in the union."

This is an appeal, of course, for the farmer's vote for the amendment. The greatest trouble with the statement is that it isn't true. Before five counties in this state could control the destinies of this state under the present system of representation they would have to have a larger population than all the other counties combined. Harris, Dallas, Bexar, Tarrant, and El Paso are presumably the five counties which Mr. Moffett refers to. The combined population of these counties according to the United States census of 1930 was 1,306,702, while the combined population of the other 249 counties was 4,581,013. These five counties would have to increase their population more than three fold therefore before it would equal that of the other counties even if the other counties showed no increase whatsoever. Nobody can foretell the future, of course, but in all probability it will be at least fifty to a hundred years before any five counties in Texas have a population equal to that of all the other counties, and the probabilities are that no group of five counties will ever have as much population as all the others. Furthermore, when that time does come, Texas will be predominantly an industrial state rather than an agricultural state.

Another fallacy of this argument is that representatives of any five counties in this state would or could ever be lined up in a solid block to dominate or control the destinies of the state. There is as much antagonism between the representatives of any two of the counties containing large cities as there is between either one of these counties and the representatives from the strictly rural districts. We go further. We dare say there is ordinarily as much lack of harmony among the representatives from any one of the larger counties as there is between the representatives of such counties and the representatives from the rural districts.

Mr. Moffett has erected a great bugaboo and is seeking to frighten the people of Texas into tearing it down, when absolutely no danger whatever exists.

Again we repeat, what we need in this state is a redistricting of the state according to population, as the constitution demands shall be done every ten years or better still, the establishment of a unicameral legislature.

LAWYERS AND LAWMAKING

The average citizen is to be excused for not understanding the laws of the nation when the nine members of the United States Supreme Court seldom agree as to the meaning of our laws. A majority of all legislators are lawyers; a majority of the congressmen are lawyers, yet these bodies cannot write laws which may be interpreted by the various courts, and especially by the Supreme Court. Incidentally, what has become of all the furor which was heard about the decisions of the court only a few months ago?—Canyon News.

The sharp practice of many lawyers in our courts and the ingenuity and even trickery of some lawyer members of the legislature have created considerable prejudice against the whole tribe. Many bills written even by lawyers are loosely drawn to start with and are often made more ambiguous by numerous amendments, so that when they go into operation their exact meaning or their constitutionality are brought into question in the courts by keen lawyers who have studied them with a view to finding flaws.

But we are wondering if our laws would be better written if there were no lawyers in the legislature or in congress. Our honest opinion is that in such case there would be ten times as many flaws in our laws. We need good lawyers in our legislative bodies as we need college graduates in our school rooms and trained writers like Mr. Warwick as editors of our papers.

The proposed amendment to the state constitution to provide for workmen's compensation insurance for State employees is probably a good thing. It seems to be a just measure and we expect to vote for it.

Old age assistance in Texas will be a great political racket in the election of 1938. It came near approaching that state in 1936, but the momentum of the movements will be full steam ahead in two years. You will see hundreds of candidates running for office demanding that all persons over 60 or 65 years of age be given pensions, perhaps not so high as Townsend advocates, but will make any sort of offer to fool the voters. It is ridiculous how candidates attempt to fool the voters. In the case of old age assistance, it is criminal for candidates to use the aged people of this state, especially those in dire circumstances, as a political football. Any candidate with a thimbleful of sense should know that Texas will never be able to pay every old person $15 per month, regardless of their circumstances. Such a statement is as ridiculous as the Townsend plan.—Canyon News.

We have had some rather disagreeable weather during the past week or more, but preceding that we had two or three weeks of the most delightful weather. Some of the newspaper boys have been saying that we should speak a good word for it. Let a terrific sandstorm come, and it gets into all the newspapers, fair and wide. But let a series of perfect days come, and we don't even mention it. Possibly that is due to the fact that we have so many days of ideal weather here during the year. Our good friend A. W. White of Los Angeles, who has been here several weeks, remarked to the editor a couple of weeks ago that California has nothing on her weather schedule that can beat West Texas. He declared that he had never experienced as delightful weather in California as he had been enjoying since his arrival in Tahoka. And so say they all. Truly we should cash in on our fine climate.

There seems to be little chance for the proposed liquor monopoly amendment to our state constitution to be adopted. Both wets and drys are opposed to it. The liquor interests are fighting it, and the leading drys do not want it because they do not want the State to go into the liquor business. Many others, wets and drys, believe that it would result in much political corruption and scandal and would encourage bootlegging. Not much chance for this amendment to pass.

So much liquor was consumed at the Texas-Oklahoma football game President W. B. Bissell of Oklahoma U. has asked that football games in the future be either played at Austin or Norman. Students away from home threw restraint and self-restraint to the wind and indulged too freely in liquor. Having seen the disgraceful sight at Dallas, we do not blame Dr. Bissell for being alarmed.—Canyon News.

The school teachers of Texas earn all they get and then some. Therefore we believe in the State going 50-50 with the teachers on a Teachers Retirement System that will take care of them in old age. This proposed amendment to our Constitution should be adopted.

OIL-PLATING DONE HERE

(BUT BE SURE YOU READ ALL THE OTHER WINTER OIL ADS, TOO)

You will find most of the emphasis these days, on oil that flows freely.

Well and good. You SHOULD use your correct Winter grade, but... You can see that the more freely any oil flows, the more freely it FLOWS DOWN OFF the pistons, cylinders, and other parts when you stop.

Then in starting up cold, where is mere free-flowing oil?

It is waiting to be pumped up on the job. And even in much warmer weather than this—according to engineering opinion—those oil-starved waits can cost you more engine wear than all the rest of your driving!

But this Winter with free-flowing Germ Processed oil, you can have your engine Oil-Plated! ... much more than a change to OUR Conoco Germ Processed oil... really a change to unbroken Winter lubrication for YOUR engine. It may stand cold for hours—days—weeks. Yet the slippery Oil-Plating formed only by patented Germ Processed oil, will always be UP IN ADVANCE. Pistons slip easy. Starter spins. Oil-Plated engine obliges—and lives the good life, on a stingy diet of Conoco Germ Processed oil. Continental Oil Company

ORDERS ARE BEING PLACED FOR TREES

About fifty farmers of the county and a few townpeople of Post have placed orders with vocational teachers and the county agent for trees to be set out this winter. Orders for approximately 3000 trees have been taken according to information furnished by County Agent W. C. Taylor.

The trees to be used are supplied by the Cooperative Forest Nursery Project in operation at the Lubbock Experiment Station. Chinese Elm, Honey Locust and Osage Orange trees are being offered at a price of $1.50 per hundred, and are about three feet in height. Others who need trees should contact the county agent or vocational agriculture teacher. Most of the orders taken so far have been for Chinese elm.

Those in charge of the production of these trees say they do not intend to put out any of the trees before the first of February as their tests have shown that February and March are the best months for planting trees. They ask, however, that orders be placed for trees wanted so they will know how many to reserve for each county.—Post Dispatch.

HALLOWEEN CARNIVAL TO BE STAGED AT WELLS

Have you heard the news? The witches, ghosts, and goblins are planning a meeting at Wells on Friday night, October 30.

Inside information has it that the evening's performance will begin with free entertainment—music, songs, readings, and a one-act play, "At the Stroke of Twelve".

Immediately following the play, two quilts will be given away.

The entire evening will be filled with thrills, laughs, fun, scares. No one will miss the Baby Show. Every one will play Bingo. Booths of various kinds and the lunch counter will accommodate all.

Plan now to be there—or beware!

Keep a Good Laxative always in your home

Among the necessities of home is a good, reliable laxative. Don't be without one! Do your best to prevent constipation. Don't neglect it when you feel any of its disagreeable symptoms coming on. . . We have used Theodford's Black-Draught for 21 years and have found it a very useful medicine that every family ought to have in their home," writes Mrs. Perry Hicks, of Belton, Texas. "I take Black-Draught for biliousness, constipation and other ills where a good laxative or purgative is needed. I have always found Black-Draught gives good results." Sold in 25-cent packages.

BLACK-DRAUGHT*When Yard Was Decreed First, It Was From "Here to There"*How Measurements Came Into Being

By means of colored pictures, legends and actual instruments, hundreds of persons each day learn that linear standards originated naturally from parts of the human body. These persons stand amazed before a display of small rectangular pieces of hardened steel, their faces polished to the brilliancy of burnished silver.

The first known measurement was the length of a man's forearm from the point of the elbow to the end of the middle finger. This is the beginning of the thrilling story told in the display presented by the Johansson division of the Ford Motor Company in the Ford building at the Texas Centennial Exposition in Dallas. The display includes measuring instruments employed from 1740 to 1800.

With the small gauge blocks invented by C. E. Johansson, it is possible to measure in terms 15,000 times finer than a human hair. This is the startling information that interests visitors to the Ford building. With Johansson blocks it is possible for man to measure accurately "within two millionths of an inch." Two millionths of an inch, for example, is about 1400 times "thinner" than the average newspaper sheet.

Here's Practical Value

The nontechnical persons who try to get a mental picture of a millionth of an inch ask "what is the practical value of such extremely fine measurement?"

The answer is simple—without this means of accurate measurement the building of automobiles in great numbers would be impossible. The Ford car, for example, has 186 points of contact in which tolerances of less than five 1/10,000ths of an inch are required.

History in Murals

By means of colored murals, the Johansson exhibit shows the history of the measurement of length. One picture explains that the digit was the breadth of a finger, or from .72 to .75 inch. Measuring by use of the digit is portrayed in the lower photograph, one of a series of murals showing the development of measurement to the present-day accuracy of the Johansson gauges, used in the making of Ford V-8, Lincoln and Lincoln-Zephyr motor cars.

"We have come back to stay," the Judge says.

VISUALIZE GREAT GOLD CAMP HERE SOON

H. Clay Read and son, Earl, are convinced they have unearthed flour gold near our city which will result in a big development program when the proper machinery has been installed to recover the gold. They have recently found additional areas in which flour gold is in evidence.

The new tract is 1800 feet long and is three quarters of a mile west of the original discovery.

They have now located an area containing more than one billion tons of flour gold bearing material and they ask that the public visit this deposit, secure samples and send them to reliable assay offices in any part of the nation and ask for an assay on flour gold.

They have also discovered, at right angles to their original discovery tract, three immense deposits of decomposed lava. These outcroppings showing a face of 18 feet lay 400 feet south and 40 feet below the original. Seemingly the lava was forced up thru the original gold bearing sands. The decomposed lava carries showings of gold and silver.

Mr. Read is repairing a washed out section of the road leading to the coming gold field one mile northeast of the city and as soon as this is completed he invites one and all to go out and secure samples.—Big Springs News.

CHURCH OF CHRIST NOTES

Our meeting closed last Sunday night with a large crowd and good interest. Four responded to the gospel invitation, three were baptised and one returned to his first love.

We want to thank the surrounding congregations for their splendid cooperation, especially O'Donnell, Dixie and Grassland.

Brother Wallace delivered some strong messages and we hope we will all heed them. I will fill the pulpit next Lord's day and every member is urged to be at their post.

The kind of men and women the world is looking for: Those who are not for sale and are honest and sound from center to circumference. Those with "conscience as steady as the needle to the pole and will stand for the right if the heavens totter and the earth reels, who will tell the truth and look you in the eye while doing it. Men who know their place and fill it, who will not lie, shirk or dodge. Who are not too lazy to work nor too proud to be poor and admit it. Those who are willing to eat what they have earned and wear what they have paid for.

Come to the friendly church, where you are a stranger but once. R. P. Drennon

Y.W.A. HAS BIBLE STUDY MONDAY NIGHT

The young woman's Auxiliary of the Baptist church had its regular weekly meeting Monday night at the home of Mrs. Forrester.

Twelve were present. Officers for the year were elected as follows: Miss Lois Goad, president; Miss Beryl Robertson, vice-president; Miss Valrie Wells, secretary-treasurer.

After the business session Mrs. Penn led in a bible study on the book of Esther. The meeting next Monday will be at the home of Mrs. Penn.

THE SENIOR EPWORTH LEAGUE

The Senior Epworth League had its regular meeting Sunday p.m. at 6:30 with sixteen present.

An inspiring program was planned by Miss Dama Anglin. The subject was "Hymn Singing". The leader talked on the subject and also Miss Lida Strasner gave a short talk.

We are striving for a larger attendance and every young person's presence is urged at the services next Sunday evening.

Irrigation Wells On The South Plains

The drouths that have visited this section of the country the past few years have emphasized the need of irrigation plants.

A few small plants have been installed in Lynn county, but lack of an abundant underground water supply will make irrigation on a large scale impossible in this county.

However, there are other counties on the plains which are blessed with a seemingly inexhaustable supply of water at a comparatively shallow depth and in these counties the irrigation movement is gaining considerable momentum. Numbers of wells are in operation in the vicinity of Plainview and Lockney. It is said that 5,000 acres are under irrigation in Lockney's trade territory this year, and the cotton will produce a bale to one and a half bales per acre.

The Hockley County Herald last week gave a report of the results of irrigation the past two years on the J. H. Goodpasture farm six miles east of Levelland.

"This farm this year," says the Herald, "is in the dry zone, and neighboring crops show plainly the effects of the drouth, with cotton requiring from six to ten acres to make a bale and feed in proportion."

TWO BALES TO ACRE
Last year Mr. Goodpasture had seventy acres of irrigated cotton which made a total of ninety bales. The lint was sold for a premium of one cent per pound because of its better quality, or about $6.43 per acre. The cost of watering the land was estimated to be $3.50 per acre and was more than equalled by the better price paid for the staple leaving the excess production to be net profit. Figure it for yourself.

"We have seen prize acre production on the Rio Grande and in other Western irrigated valleys, but nowhere have we seen better cotton than is on this farm this year. One patch planted in May and which is now open presents the spectacle of each row being a veritable wall of the fleecy, white staple, and men who profess to know say that it will make two bales to the acre. Other cotton planted in June will make over a bale but the frost will perhaps ruin much late fruitage, and Mr. Goodpasture is of the opinion that cotton under irrigated conditions should be started off in May.

Big Income from Seed
Each year only pedigree seed direct from the South's best breeding farms is planted, and raised under irrigated conditions the seed is unusually vigorous and sound and last year Mr. Goodpasture sold all his seed on the local market at an average price of $1.25 per bushel, or about $25.00 per acre.

$412 From Acre of Potatoes
"This year a measured acre of sweet potatoes was harvested and made 375 bushel, which sold at Levelland and Lubbock at $1.10 per bushel. A ton of onions was grown on a small plat 115 steps long and less than twenty-five feet wide.

The onions sold for two cents per pound.

Alfalfa Yields Five Tons

"A two-acre patch of Alfalfa has cut four tons per acre, the fourth cutting being delayed about ten days by the week's rain of a few weeks ago. Should frost be delayed until November 1, another cutting will be had. Had the fourth cutting been made in regular time the fifth cutting would have already been made.

May we give you six dollars?

NOT in cash, of course. We're speaking of its equivalent. But here is something for you to consider:

Every year this newspaper brings you at least three outstanding novels in serial form. Purchased as books each would cost no less than $2, making a total expenditure of at least $6 per year.

Like yourself, we could find plenty of uses for that $6. Some member of the family is always in need of a new pair of shoes or some other necessity. But at the same time your requirements for good reading material must be met. By accepting these three novels each year we feel you are treating yourself to real enjoyment, at the same time giving your purse a substantial boost.

These novels are a source of constant pride to us. Every year we select them from the season's most outstanding best sellers, offered in serial form by a large newspaper syndicate organization. We'd like to feel that you—as a subscriber—always look forward to reading the coming installment in the next issue. It gives us a great satisfaction to know that here is another reason why our paper is popular in the home.

You are invited to begin reading our novels now. These regular brief visits to fictionland will prove a delightful interlude from your work-a-day activities. And it will make us happy to know that you are getting enjoyment from them.

Scouts Hold Court of Honor Last Week

While it is not my habit to make predictions, I am confident of the outcome of the election. I think we shall win and that our majority will satisfy the most enthusiastic Democrats.

What concerns me most is what Texas will do. We must maintain our fine Democratic record. To do that, we must raise our quota of $250,000 and see to it that every loyal Democrat goes to the polls and votes.

I am deeply and personally grateful to the members of our campaign organization in every Congressional District and County for the fine and effective service they have already rendered. They have made a most creditable showing, but I want to appeal to them as strongly as I can to continue their activities from now on until the election. If they will I am sure the entire amount of our quota will be raised. I cannot help but feel that every loyal Democrat will be glad to contribute if given an opportunity to do so. I ask our committee to give them that opportunity by contacting them personally.

I want to appeal, also, to all of my fellow Texas Democrats to vote on election day. This is important not only that our State's Democratic record shall be maintained, but absolutely necessary to insure the continued prestige of our State in the councils of the Party. Our representation in National conventions hereafter will be measured by our Democratic vote. Every Democrat, therefore, should consider it a solemn duty to go to the polls.

I am conscious, and shall always be, of my lasting obligation to my fellow Democrats of Texas for the confidence they have imposed in me and the high honors I have received at their hands. That great obligation will be immeasurably increased if they will do their part, each to the extent of his or her ability, in fully meeting our objectives in this the most important campaign in our Nation's history.

JOHN N. GARNER

Reed Did Not Escape From Plainview Jail

At their first court of honor since being reorganized the Tahoka Boy Scouts did themselves right proud. It looks now as if interest in the troop is on the upgrade. Some forty or fifty people were present for the court of honor and for the purpose of getting information concerning the new Cub Pack that is in the process of being organized. This Cub Pack will be a good thing for scouting and for the community. Cubs are eligible to enter the scout troop just as soon as they reach the age of twelve years.

Our troop is showing a whole-some growth. From nine active scouts at the beginning of our work, it has grown to a total of nineteen, twelve of whom came up for advancement. The program for the court was as follows:

1. Song—America Led by Mr. Mathis.
2. Tenderfoot investiture, directed by Mr. Penn.
3. Second class and first class awards, Mr. Barrett.
4. Star award, Mr. Grant (who is assistant Executive for the area).
5. Merit badge awards, Dr. Durham, local troop committee chairman.
6. Announcements.
7. Scoutmaster's Benediction—Troop 1.

Scouts advancing with their ranks were: Tenderfoot, Claude Slover, Wilbert Finch, George Hogan, Edwin Rogers, Truman Hines, and Billy Jack Edwards.

Second class, Carnie Reese.

First class: Gloyd Cloe, Herbert Womack, James Foster and Finis Connolly.

Star: Wade Howell.

Merit badge awards went to Wade Howell, Finis Connolly, James Foster and Herbert Womack.

Mr. Barrett, chairman of the court of honor for this district presided.

Mr. Penn, scoutmaster, expressed thanks in behalf of the troop for the interest shown in the court of honor by the parents and visitors who attended.

NAZARENE MEETING

"If the People Win, Who Can Lose?"

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

"Nothing will rule this country if the people themselves will undertake its safety; and nothing can save it if they leave that safety in any hands but their own."—Daniel Webster.

As this is written, citizens throughout the nation are preparing to exercise that individual responsibility for the safety of their country which election day entails.

It is an immense responsibility. In national affairs alone, it involves the selection not only of a Chief Executive, but of Senators from many states and Representatives from all.

How will America meet it? Pre-election forecasts promise the heaviest vote in our history. That is encouraging, because the decisions then recorded affect not only the safety and security of our Republic, but our personal lives as well.

It means something to every American—whatever his year, his job, or his daily activities. It extends to every citizen of voting age the opportunity to express what he or she may think.

Does youth, for example, desire the free opportunity for productive toil and its rewards that elder generations enjoyed?

Do the farmer, the wage-earner and the business man desire personal independence and the right to manage their own affairs and enjoy the fruits of their labor?

Do the housewives of America want government, whether Federal, State or Local, to hold down living costs by the exercise of a reasonable economy?

Do Americans as a nation, want to strengthen and safeguard their constitutional form of government, with its effective guarantee of a voice in government and freedom of religion and speech and action?

The ballot gives them all opportunity to say so.

For voting in America—as contrasted to elections in many nations abroad—is not merely an expression of loyalty to individual men. It is, instead, an effective method of recording public opinion. It is the greatest opportunity ever offered for registering the collective judgment of the people.

And so long as the people exercise that judgment with sincerity, independence and intelligence, America is safe.

Curse of Progress

Non-Stop
After an hour and a half of preaching, a clergyman who was given to both long-windedness and fanciful flights of oratory was just getting warmed up to his sermon on immortality.

"I looked up to the mountains," he shouted, "and I said, 'Mighty as you are, you will be destroyed; but my soul will not.' I gazed at the ocean and cried, 'Vast as you are, you will eventually dry up—but not I!'" And then he wondered why his hearers smiled. —Tit-Bits Magazine

How It Happened
Blinks looked a wreck. His face was covered with sticking-plaster; both eyes were black; and his left arm was in a sling.
"What happened?" a friend asked.
"A motor accident."
"No; a loose floorboard."
"Tripped over it?"
"No; trod on it, as I was sneaking in the other night and woke the missus up."

Half dozen slices of bacon are diced and fried in butter and to this is added a dozen little onions. When they are browned, there is added to them about two pounds of beef that has been cut in cubes. The whole is seasoned and when the meat is brown, two table-spoonsfuls of flour are shaken over the pan and mixed in with the rest. After this is cooked for a minute a small bottle of red wine is added a cup of bouillon. A bouquet garni is thrown in and the pan is well covered and allowed to cook slowly by the side of the fire for three hours.

"The Man Who-O-O"By
and
ELMO SCOTT WATSONAN EARLY "BLACK LEGION"

ON TREES were posted mysterious squares of paper, black, or white or red, summoning men to midnight meetings. At these meetings there were oaths and grips and pass-words.

That was more than three-quarters of a century ago, but members of the "Black Legion," who created such a furor early in 1936, would have felt pretty much at home in those meetings back in the forties and fifties. There they would have fraternized with members of "The Supreme Order of the Star-Spangled Banner," a secret society which grew into a political party, the Native Americans, with a platform of opposition to foreigners, the papacy, infidelity and socialism.

Later they became known as the Know Nothings because, when a member was questioned about the order, he invariably answered, "I don't know." In New York and Pennsylvania they elected several men to congress and in 1847 they held a national convention at Philadelphia. There they nominated Gen. Henry Dearborn for vice-president and recommended, but did not formally nominate, G. N. Zachary Taylor, the Whig candidate for President.

In 1854-55 the Know Nothings carried Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Kentucky and California and looked forward to the election of 1856 with high hopes. Soon the party threw off its secret character and it became apparent that they were mostly Whigs. In February they held another convention in Philadelphia at which they formally renamed their party the American party. They nominated for President Millard Fillmore, the Whig vice-president who had served all but one month of the term to which Zachary Taylor had been elected, and gave him for a running mate Andrew Donelson of Tennessee, the ward of "Old Hickory" Jackson. Fillmore carried only one state in the election which sent James Buchanan, the Democratic candidate, to the White House and the Know Nothings passed out of the political picture soon afterwards.

"TO THE VICTORS—"

"TO THE VICTORS belong the spoils!"

Although Andrew Jackson was the first exponent of that political creed, he was not the first man to express it in so many words. The man who did was William L. Marcy of New York, leader of one of the factions in the Democratic party when Polk was President.

The division in the Democratic ranks was over the distribution of federal patronage and it centered, as it has so often since, in New York state. The faction, led by Marcy, was called the "Hunkers" who were supported by Tammany and who were given that name because they were always inclined to hunger, or "hunker," for office.

The other faction, led by Silas Wright, was composed of disappointed Van Burenites—disappointed because Van Buren, whom Jackson had made his successor, had been refused a second term by the party which took Polk, a "dark horse," instead. This faction was called the "Barnburners," because, like the Dutch farmer in New York state who burned his barn to get rid of the rats in it, they declared they were ready to "burn" their barns to get rid of the rats," the upstart "Hunkers."

As a matter of fact they did just that in the campaign of 1848. Opposed to slavery they joined forces with the Liberty party, took the name of the Free Soil party and nominated Martin Van Buren and Charles Francis Adams of Massachusetts. This split in the Democratic party resulted in a victory for Gen. Zachary Taylor, the Whig candidate, over Van Buren and over Lewis Cass, the regular Democratic nominee.

Along with "Hunker" and "Barnburner" is another interesting name once applied to the Democrats, growing out of the rivalry of these two factions. In the campaign of 1840 the Whigs called their opponents the "Locofocos" because at a meeting of the New York Democrats the two factions were trying to get control of the meeting. One gang turned off the gas lights and in the darkness, the other gang, which had come prepared for just such a stunt, took from their pockets the new friction matches, called "locococos," struck them and by thus lighting the room were able to continue the session and dominate it.

Along with "Hunker" and "Barnburner" is another interesting name once applied to the Democrats, growing out of the rivalry of these two factions. In the campaign of 1840 the Whigs called their opponents the "Locofocos" because at a meeting of the New York Democrats the two factions were trying to get control of the meeting. One gang turned off the gas lights and in the darkness, the other gang, which had come prepared for just such a stunt, took from their pockets the new friction matches, called "locococos," struck them and by thus lighting the room were able to continue the session and dominate it.

That's the sensible way—relieve the constipation. Enjoy the refreshing relief which thousands of people have reported from the use of Black-Draught. Sold in 25 cent packages.

(International Temperance Sunday)LESSON TEXT—Romans 13:1-14.
GOLDEN TEXT—It is good neither to eat flesh nor to drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth. Rom. 14:21.PRIMARY TOPIC—Why We Keep Rules.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Junior Citizens.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC
—What Shall We Do About Drinking?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC
—Law, Love, and Temperance.

Revolution, political disorder, anarchy—these are words which characterize much of the world's news of our day. What should be our attitude toward government? Should a Christian participate in revolts against government? These are questions that stir the hearts of men.

The Bible has an answer, and it is found in our lesson for today. Let us study it with care and seek God's message for us and for our nation in these utterly confusing days.

We consider together a portion of Paul's epistle to the Romans in which, having laid his superb doctrinal foundation, he turns to a practical application. Let us ever remember that while right doctrine is necessary to right living, it is never sufficient to hold the doctrine and fail to permit it to control our daily walk.

Good citizenship of the true type is the result of staunch Christian character. Much of the weakness in our political and social life can be traced to the neglect of the things of God in the home, the school, and the church.

Paul presents the Christian as one who has the right attitude toward his neighbors, and toward his own daily walk. The Christian is al (vv. 1-7).

I. Politically-Intelligent and Loy-

Lectures on political economy are well worth while. School children should learn to love and honor their country. But for real intelligent citizenship we must have a study of God's Word. For all; governmental authority is dependent on a God-given power. No man has any right to rule over any other man except as God delegates that right to him.

No "divine right of kings" is justified by this passage, but clearly it does teach that government is ordained of God and functions by his providence. To resist such authority is to resist God.

Must we always obey the government? Yes; until it commands us to do that which is clearly contrary to the laws of God. We do not resist or question the authority of any properly appointed governmental agency, no matter how weak, or even wicked the agent may be, as long as he acts as "a minister of God . . . for good." Any government is better than anarchy. But no government has the right to command any man to disobey God.

In our land we have a powerful agency for the correction of governmental weakness and error—the ballot box. Let every Christina use it discreetly and in the fear of God.

Before leaving the passage, note that the Christian does not dodge, "fix," or leave unpaid the taxes which support the government under whose benefits he lives and works. There is too much dishonesty at this point, and we need to correct it.

II. Socially-Honest and Loving

(vv. 8-10).
"Love thy neighbor as thyself" and there will be no social dishonesty, strife, and ill-will. Remember the lesson of last week on love—I Corinthians 13.

III. Personally-Clean and Spirit- ual (vv. 11-14).

The time when our redemption is to be fully completed—that is, when the Lord himself returns—is at hand. We therefore will not live as those who walk in darkness, but as children of the light, clean in life and thought. We will "put on the Lord Jesus Christ."

In these days when almost every roadside store and hundreds of thousands of city buildings have been converted into drinking places far worse than the old-time saloon, when men and women are making drunken sets of themselves, it is indeed time for Christians to raise their voices in protest and to act to protect the boys and girls of America.

But above all—let us win them to Christ, for if they "put on Christ" they will "make no provision for the flesh to fulfill the lusts thereof."

Respect for Parents

Honor your parents in your hearts; bear them not only awe and respect, but kindness and affection; love their persons, and fear to do anything that may justly provoke them.—Rev. W. Cradock.

Good Neighbors

It is a small thing to a man whether or not his neighbor be merciful to him; it is life or death to him whether or not he be merciful to his neighbor.

A Trio of Trim Togs

This trio of trim togs offers an appealing variety to the woman who sews at home. There is style and economy in every design.

The Textile Department was visited, and there amid the hum and whir of spindles and looms, the newspaper boys and girls were shown how cotton fresh from the bale is converted into thread and how the threads are woven into cloth. Various kinds of cloth were being woven, and it was an interesting process, familiar enough to the people of the New England and South Atlantic states but not so familiar to the people of Texas, though they raise more cotton than any other state in the Union.

Dr. Krapp in person conducted the party through the various departments of the college, assisted by Cecil Horne and others, and his many courtesies were greatly appreciated.

At night, all the newspaper folks were given free passes to the football game, and many of them saw The Home Economics building, where we were served hot coffee, but no mere man can write up this department with any degree of accuracy; so we refrain from trying.

While most of us possibly had visited the various departments of the college at other times, yet we saw more of the institution Saturday than we have ever seen before at any one sitting, and all of us came away impressed with the remarkable growth of the Tech, the progress it is making, and the glorious future that is hers.
