SNOW, RAIN IMPROVE CROP PROSPECTS

Joe Stokes Man Takes Own Life With Shotgun

Bob Curington, Respected Citizen, Was Buried At Wolfarth On Saturday

Discouraged and in bad health, his mind probably affected from despondency over financial troubles and the condition of his health, Bob Curington committed suicide Thursday evening or early that night by shooting himself with a shotgun while alone at a residence on the Gray farm about a mile and half west of Joe Stokes school house, to which he and family had just moved. The shot tore away a large portion of his head and death was evidently almost instantaneous.

Funeral services were conducted at Hopes and the remains were interred at Wolfarth Saturday under the direction of the Harris Funeral Home of this city.

Bob Curington and family had resided the past three or four years in the vicinity of Meadow and Hopes. Like many other good tenant farmers, however, he was compelled to give up his place this year and to seek another. It was very difficult for him to find a place but he finally rented a portion of the Gray farm near Joe Stokes. His credit was good, and the Hopesville Bank, we are told, had agreed to give him financial backing. The family removed to the Gray place on Thursday. Late in the afternoon Mrs. Curington and the two sons, one about 30 and the other seven, went back to their former abode to catch and move the chickens. When they returned to their new place of residence about 11 o'clock that night, they found the ghastly corpse of the husband and father. A shot gun with one discharged shell was lying near by. He left no note nor other word of explanation.

Mr. Curington was a highly respected citizen, a brother, John R. Curington, being district attorney at Corsicana. The brother and other relatives came out and attended the funeral.

The widow and sons and other relatives have the deepest sympathy of the people of this section, and specially of those who knew them.

M. L. Penn Elected Principal At Post

M. L. Penn, principal of the Tahoka High School during the current year, has been elected to a similar position at Post. We understand that the Post principalship pays a considerably better salary than the Tahoka school has been paying. We are not advised as to whether he will accept or not.

Mr. Penn has not only been successful and popular as principal of the school here but he has been a valuable citizen of the town. He has been president of the Rotary Club since its organization in October and scoutmaster for the Boy Scouts. He has taken an active interest in the civic and social life of the town and will be greatly missed if he should remove from Tahoka. He served as principal at Brownfield for several years before coming to Tahoka.

Summer Knight Is Still Suffering

We regret to have to report that the condition of Summer Knight is not very encouraging.

On Tuesday of last week physicians found it advisable to make an incision near the other ear. This did not afford the desired relief and on Wednesday of this week an operation for sinus trouble was performed. On Thursday the patient was reported as not feeling as well as had been hoped.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Knight left Thursday morning for Eastland, called by the serious condition of a brother of Mrs. Knight, who has been ill several weeks.

Nowlin, Finch, Mullins And Bovell Named City Officers

Deen Nowlin was elected mayor Tuesday without opposition, succeeding Jim Dye, who was not a candidate for the position.

Jim Dye, however, was an unsuccessful candidate for city marshal. Mill Finch, the present marshal, was reelected. The other unsuccessful candidates were Homer Harrison and L. E. Miller.

T. J. Bovell led the ticket for city aldermen. He was running for re-election. Two places were to be filled and there were four candidates. The other successful candidate was A. J. Mullins, who will succeed Jim

Farmers Receive $218,911 Checks

Lynn county farmers, and land owners have received $218,911.41 in soil conservation checks up to date, according to County Agent V. F. Jones.

A total of 1,374 checks have been distributed, representing 861 participating farms.

These checks therefore average $159.32 each, or $254.25 to each participating farm.

Rotarians Attend Lamesa Meeting

A party of Tahoka Rotarians and their wives attended the first meeting of the new Rotary Club at Lamesa last Friday night, the occasion being "Charter Night," when the charter was presented to the new club at a banquet served in the Williams Hotel and an elaborate program carried out.

The organization of the new club was sponsored by the Big Spring Rotary Club. Carl Roundtree of Lamesa had been elected president of the new club and the charter was presented to him by District Governor Fred Wemple of Midland. The principal address of the occasion was made by Superintendent Oberholzer of the Lubbock city schools. Each of the eight or ten neighboring clubs, through some representative, presented a suitable gift to the new club. The joint gift of the Post and Tahoka clubs was and is to be a large American flag but it had not arrived. An explanation and presentation speech was made by M. L. Penn, principal of the Tahoka High School.

About 125 persons, representing ten Rotary clubs, attended.

Tahoka Rotarians and Rotarians attending were: President M. L. Penn, W. G. Barrett, Wynne Collier, A. M. Cade, Rollin McCord, Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Craft, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hill, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. McCord, Mr. and Mrs. Homer St. Clair, Mr. and Mrs. E. I. Hill, and Dr. and Mrs. K. R. Durham accompanied by Miss Lorene Reese.

Connolly Elected To County Board

The county school board will meet in County Superintendent H. P. Caveness' office next Monday to consider matters pertaining to the schools of the county, Mr. Caveness has announced.

The personnel of the board was not changed at the election last Saturday, Chester Connolly being re-elected as county trustee at large and B. W. Baker as trustee for precinct No. 1.

Mrs. W. A. Waller County Pioneer, Is Death Victim

Had Been Resident Of County Since 1906; Is Survived By Her Aged Husband

Death came to the home of W. A. Waller, residing two and a half miles east of Draw, shortly before ten o'clock last Sunday morning, taking his aged companion, Mrs. Mary Margaret Waller. Death resulted from gastric infection.

Funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. C. F. Carmack, in the Draw Methodist Church at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon, and the remains were laid to rest in the Draw cemetery, with Harris Funeral Home directing.

Born on July 1, 1858, Mrs. Waller was almost 81 years of age. Like many of our other aged people, she was a native of Alabama. She was married in Arkansas, however, on September 6, 1876. She and her husband and their family later moved to Texas and lived near Dacatur for many years. They came from Knox county to Lynn county early in October 1906 and have continued to reside in this county since that time.

Mrs. Waller left surviving her husband, five sons and five daughters. The sons are: J. H. Waller, Post; M. L. Waller, New Mexico; C. Waller, Draw; W. W. Waller, Dalhart; and J. B. Waller, Priddy. The daughters are: Mrs. Myrtle McNeel, Post; Mrs. Maude Cook, O'Donnell; Miss Emily Waller, Draw; Mrs. Sadie Singleton, Albuquerque, N. M.; and Mrs. Willie Phillips, Oregon. She also left 33 grandchildren and ten great grandchildren.

Mrs. Waller had long been a member of the Methodist Church and lived a devoted Christian life. Her aged companion and the sons and daughters and other relatives have the sympathy of many, many friends.

Tahoka District's Scholastics 712

There are 712 scholastics in the Tahoka Independent School District, according to the returns made by Carl Griffing, secretary of the school board, who took the census. These figures are subject to revision, and the final number may be slightly different from the above.

This shows an increase of 48 over last year, but the returns one year were larger than they are this year. In 1934, a total of 743 scholastics were enumerated. That was the largest number in the history of the school. In 1935, the enumeration showed 679 scholastics and in 1936 only 664.

Stewart Is Raising Freakish Swine

Marshall Stewart, a prominent farmer of the Edith community, who raises a good many hogs as an adjunct to his farming operations, seems to have a penchant for the unusual in the swine he raises.

A. R. McGonagill reports that Mr. Stewart now has a pig two weeks old with six toes on each foot, twenty-four toes in all, or 16 toes more than he really needs, or is it more than he has any use for? At any rate this pig has quite a surplus of toes.

It will be remembered that a year or two ago we carried a story of a sow belonging to Mr. Stewart that had given birth to a litter of eighteen pigs. Mr. McGonagill says that this sow is still on the job. She has brought several litters of pigs running from 14 to 18 in number. She holds the championship of all Texas, no doubt as a brood sow.

Mr. McGonagill is thinking of grafting an additional tail on this freak pig's back just to see what he might look like then.

Miss Bamah Austin of San Angelo spent the week end here, visiting with her sister, Mrs. Chas. Curry.

L. E. Daniels Dies Wednesday Night

L. E. Daniel, 65, died at about eight o'clock Wednesday night of pneumonia.

Funeral services were conducted at the Methodist Church here at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon by the pastor, Rev. Ben Hardy, and interment was in the Tahoka cemetery with the Harris Funeral Home in charge.

Deceased was born in Tallapoosa county, Alabama, on May 20, 1871. When a small boy he came with his father's family to Red River county, Texas, where he later married and reared his family. Eight or nine years ago he removed to O'Donnell in this county and for the past year and a half he has been a resident of Tahoka.

Besides the widow he leaves surviving him six children, as follows: A. M. Daniel of Tahoka, Mrs. T. H. Moore of O'Donnell, C. A. Daniel of Tahoka, Mrs. E. A. Goad of Stamford, Mrs. J. T. Hemingway Jr. of O'Donnell, and E. B. Daniel of O'Donnell, all of whom were here for the funeral. Mrs. L. E. Browning of Jayton, a sister of Mrs. Daniel, was also here at the time of his death.

The News joins many other friends in condolence to all the bereaved.

Woman Falls Down Court House Steps

Voting in the city election Tuesday was painful and costing to Mrs. J. F. Greenwood.

Mrs. Greenwood, age 65 cast her ballot at the polls in the county court room, and was leaving the building from the north entrance. At the head of the court house steps she lost her balance and rolled to the bottom of the concrete flight, about 18 feet. The result was a badly injured arm, described by the attending physician as being "worse than a break", and numerous bruises over her body.

Applewhite Named WTCC Director

J. K. Applewhite will again represent Tahoka as director of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Applewhite has efficiently served this city in that capacity for several years.

Since there is not, at this time, any other representative organization of business men in Tahoka, the Rotary Club last week made the selection of the director.

Winter Desperately Attempts To Hang On Through April

Season In Ground Is Improved. Wheat and Grass Benefitted By Moisture Last Sunday

Old Winter has been putting up a desperate fight to remain through April. There has been a lot of cool, windy weather since the first of the month.

Early Sunday morning came a dash of rain accompanied by lightning and thunder. This was followed by a drizzle which later in the morning turned to sleet and snow. Much of the snow melted as it fell but before noon the ground was covered with a blanket of one to three inches. Most of it thawed in the afternoon but in some places in the county some snow remained on the ground for two or three days. The snowfall was much heavier in the north half of the county than in the south half. Beginning three or four miles north of Tahoka and extending northward, the snowfall must have amounted to three or four inches.

The precipitation in Tahoka, according to the Government rain gauge, amounted to .36 of an inch. It is believed that it amounted to at least 3/4 of an inch in much of the north half of the county.

This moisture was very fine for the wheat and for pastures and even for the cultivated lands which are to be planted in row crops. But every rose has its thorn. On Tuesday we had a hint of sandstorm. On Wednesday, the wind gradually arose out of the northwest and for most of the day one of the worst sandstorms that have visited this section this year raged and lashed young shrubbery and other vegetation.

We think every sandstorm surely is the last one, but we are making no wild predictions as to what will happen tomorrow.

Free Seed Testing Offered Farmers

By V F JONES, County Agent Did you save your planting seed from the 1936 crop? Do you know germination qualities of your planting seed? They may be good planting seed, or they may not be.

We would like to suggest that every farmer in the county have a germination test made of his planting seed, especially the cotton. The State Department of Agriculture at Austin has a free seed testing service, and we suggest that you send them a sample of your planting seed.

We will be glad to assist you in sending a sample of seed to Austin for this germination test. We have some seed mailing bags that are very convenient for mailing seed and will be glad to assist you, if you will bring about a pint size sample of seed to the office. All the cost to you will be the postage on the sample of seed mailed in.

Morgan Playground Ball Champion

Richardson, principal of the Morgan school, reports that his boys playground ball team is the all-around champion of Lynn county in that event by reason of having defeated the Draw boys last week. Morgan was winner of the rural school division of the county meet, while Draw was champion of the Class A and B divisions in playground ball. The score was Morgan 19, Draw 10.

Morgan played 11 games this season, losing only two.

The following boys composed the team: John Burnett, Lynn Perdue, Cecil and Ray Cook, Junior and William Bussell, Carol Busby, Billie Jernigan, Dick Cade, Bernard Cosgrove. Substitutes included C. W. Dodson, Norris Raymond, and Billy Joe Bartlett.

Incidentally, Morgan school has 81 pupils enrolled out of a total of 96 scholastics this year.

Franco Combating Revolt in Spanish Fascist Army— Developments in Labor Situation—President's Farm Purchase Plan Opposed.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

GENERAL FRANCO'S revolution in Spain, already checked by serious defeats on both the northern and the southern fronts, was further embarrassed by spreading revolt among the Fascist troops. His agents uncovered the plot and numerous arrests were speedily followed by numerous executions by firing squads. The mutiny first broke out in Spanish Morocco, and Franco himself hurried there by plane. There were persistent reports that 1,000 Italian soldiers had been landed at Ceuta and were being used to crush the mutiny. This was denied by the Fascist high commissioner of Morocco.

Gen. Franco

More than 100 high-ranking officers, most of them belonging to the air force, were said to have been implicated in the plot which was seemingly well laid in all parts of Spanish Morocco and the southern tip of European Spain. Government troops were said to be pushing back toward Cordoba the Fascist forces which were trying to break through for capture of the rich coal and mineral territory about Pozoblanco. The insurgent army there, alleged to include 10,000 Italians and Germans, was in danger of being surrounded and annihilated.

Great Britain and France officially warned Franco that they would no longer tolerate the stopping and searching of British and French merchant vessels by his warships. DEADLOCK over a new wage agreement brought about a walkout of soft coal miners in the Pennsylvania and West Virginia fields and its spread to other fields was certain unless the controversy were settled. The mine operators and officials of the United Mine Workers of America have been long in negotiation, with John L. Lewis dictating the stand taken by the latter. Edward F. McGrady, assistant secretary of labor, was trying hard to help bring about a settlement and kept the White House informed of developments. Maintenance men were ordered to stand by in the mines, but about 400,000 men quit work.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT discussed the labor situation with Secretary Perkins and Sidney Hillman, chief organizer of the C. I. O. drive to unionize the textile workers. Hillman told him he was hopeful the problems of the textile industry could be settled by co-operation and arbitration, and it was reported that he promised the textile workers would not attempt to use the sit-down strike. Senator Wagner of New York delivered an address in the senate on the sit-down strike situation, charging that the blame of it rested on a few giant corporations which, he said, have "hamstrung" the labor relations board by invoking injunctions in the courts and "who have openly banded together to defy" the labor relations law. Deriding the call for new federal legislation to meet the crisis, Senator Wagner declared that "the lack of power in the federal government to enforce the labor relations act and not any weakness in existing law is the root cause for the present economic warfare."

Representative Martin Dies of Texas appeared before the house rules committee and urged action on his resolution for a congressional investigation of the strike situation. He again called upon the President to intervene and pointed to section 5299 of the revised United States statutes as giving the chief executive authority to take action in the event of such an occurrence as the Chrysler strike. The continued silence of the President on the issue is "ominous," Representative Charles L. Gifford of Massachusetts told the house. He warned the President against the rise to power of John L. Lewis. Negotiations for settlement of the General Motors strike were progressing slowly, and officials of the corporation said that 10,000 employees were idle in four plants because of strikes in Pontiac and Flint, Mich.

UNDER pressure from his advisers to take a public stand concerning the sit-down strike, President Roosevelt immediately after his return from Warm Springs held a conference with Vice President Garner, Senate Majority Leader Joe Robinson, Speaker Bankhead and House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn. At its close Senator Robinson, presumably voicing Mr. Roosevelt's views, said:

"The government cannot initiate action under the circumstances thus far presented. It is felt that the sit-down strike situation in a general sense is improving."

"There are two conditions under which federal action may be invoked in case of acute strike conditions; namely where federal laws have been violated or where federal property, including the mails, is interfered with. Unless one of these conditions exists, federal intervention or action, under the Constitution and decision of the courts, is not warranted. The second condition is cases where state authorities, under the federal law, ask the services of federal agencies in the preservation of law and order and in the prevention of violence. Neither condition has so far arisen. Except in instances where interstate commerce is interfered with, where a federal law is disregarded, the federal government does not, and cannot under the Constitution, initiate action."

SEVEN Democrats joined the six Republicans on the house agriculture committee and disapproved the President's proposal to allot $50,000,000 to assist farm tenants to buy farms on easy credit terms. This majority of the committee objected to the program because it would put the government into the real estate business. The proposition is contained in one section of the farm tenant bill and would authorize the secretary of agriculture to buy farms for resale to tenants on terms that would give them as long as 45 years to pay. The interest rate would be 3 per cent. Sponsors of the measure probably will try to get it through the senate, and after house refusal to agree it would then go to conference. Only the day before the President had given out his farm tenancy program as follows:

1. Continuation of rehabilitation loans, most of which would go to people living on land which the government believes can be made to pay.
2. Purchase of submarginal land so that it can be taken out of cultivation and put into timber or grasses.
3. Federal purchase of land for resettlement of families taken off submarginal land and purchase of tenant farms to give tenants a chance to own the land they are tilling.

SENATOR GEORGE NORRIS of Nebraska is intent on his plan for the creation of a national power authority similar to the Tennessee Valley authority, and he intends to introduce a bill for this during the present session of congress. This he announced after conferring with the president, and he indicated the idea was approved by Mr. Roosevelt. He has experts at work investigating its feasibility and mapping out the details. "All rivers of the United States should be controlled by the nation if their nature is subject to it by national flood control policy," the senator said. "Whenever the river will develop power, we should take advantage of it. I've always regarded power as a subsidiary or by-product of flood control."

A LINK with a past era was broken by the death in Washington of Mrs. Robert Todd Lincoln at the age of ninety years. She was the daughter-in-law of President Lincoln and the mother and grandmother of his only living descendants, Mrs. Charles Isham, Mrs. Jessie Randolph and their three children. Mrs. Lincoln was the daughter of James Harlan, who was a senator from Iowa and later secretary of the interior. In 1868 she married Robert Todd Lincoln, the martyred President's son. In the administrations of Presidents Garfield and Arthur her husband served as secretary of war, and under President Benjamin Harrison, he served as minister to England. Afterward he was general counsel and then president of the Pullman company.

SENATORS, some fifteen in number, who have not committed themselves on the President's bill to enlarge the Supreme court, are earnestly trying to bring about a compromise that would enable them to go along with Mr. Roosevelt without laying themselves out to charges of supporting a plan to pack the court. Several compromise measures have been devised, one of which is that of Senator Carl Hatch of New Mexico, a Democrat and a member of the judiciary committee that is holding hearings on the administration bill. Mr. Hatch proposes to modify the President's bill so that no more than two additional justices could be appointed in any one year. Furthermore, it would provide for a flexible court with a membership varying between fifteen and nine judges. The additional appointments, made upon the failure of justices past 70 to retire, would not become permanent increases. They would be offset by failure to fill an equal number of vacancies caused by subsequent retirements. Further witnesses for the opposition, appearing before the judiciary committee, included Dr. Irving Griswold, professor of constitutional law at Harvard; Dorothy Thompson, prominent journalist; Walter F. Dodd of Chicago, constitutional authority, and Dean Henry M. Bates of the Michigan university law school.

ACCORDING to a survey made for the Corn Belt Farm Dailies, an increasing share of domestic meat requirements is coming from European countries and Canada, at the expense of American live stock producers.

Imports of pork from Poland early in March were running at record high levels, while increased shipments were unloaded at New York from Denmark, Lithuania, Italy, Hungary, Holland, Germany, Estonia, Czechoslovakia, Canada, and Argentina. The United States in normal times supplies Europe with meat, the farm papers pointed out. "It must be obvious that through restricted production and reciprocal tariff agreements we have adopted policies in this country that have opened our doors to the importation of meats in substantial volume," the survey commented.

THREE famous Americans, with their aides, will represent the United States at the coronation of King George VI of Great Britain in Westminster Abbey May 12. They were selected by President Roosevelt and are: James W. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany, special ambassador; Gen. John J. Pershing, commander of the A. E. F. in the war, and Admiral Hugh Rodman, U. S. N. retired, special representatives. Curtis Bok of Philadelphia will be secretary of mission. Col. James L. Collins will be aid to Gen. Pershing, and Commander Frank E. Beatty will be aid to Admiral Rodman. The battleship New York, flagship of the Sixth battle squadron with the grand fleet in British waters during the World war, will participate in the international naval review off Spithead on May 20.

THREE New Deal acts of legislation were upheld by the Supreme court in decisions that indicated that tribunal was becoming almost liberal enough to suit the administration. Two of them were unanimous. The third and most significant was rendered by five of the justices, with four dissenting. This last opinion was given in the case of the Washington state law establishing a minimum wage for women and the court reversed its position taken a year ago in upsetting similar legislation passed by the New York legislature. Justice Owen J. Roberts had swung over to the other side, but Justices Sutherland, Butler, McReynolds and Van Devanter dissented from the present judgment, declaring that "the meaning of the Constitution does not change with the ebb and flow of economic events." This was a slap at the majority opinion, which was read by Chief Justice Hughes.

The court unanimously upheld the provisions of the railway labor act requiring railroads to engage in collective bargaining with their employees for the purpose of settling labor disputes. The opinion was read by Justice Stone and was closely studied by leaders of the administration who hoped to glean from it an indication of what the court might decide concerning the Wagner labor relations act, now in litigation. The Wagner act does not apply to railway workers. The decision was handed down in the case of the Virginian Railway company and upheld a ruling by the Fourth circuit court of appeals directing the company to engage in collective bargaining.

The Supreme court also upheld the constitutionality of the new Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium law. The decision, read by Justice Louis D. Brandeis, whose opinion condemned the earlier Frazier-Lemke act, was unanimous. The law was passed to replace a similar statute which the court held unconstitutional in the spring of 1935.

Floyd Gibbons Adventurers' Club Hello Everybody!

The Thin Edge of Doom

By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter

FREDERICK PRESNOILE of New York city walks away with the blue ribbon today, with a yarn that will curdle your blood, make your hair stand up, and bring you up out of bed in the middle of the night in a cold sweat. And Fred's adventure is another one of those yarns that goes to show how the real hot adventures don't come to the birds you'd expect them to come to. Fred served as a soldier with the British army in France and Belgium. He got himself into many a tight spot during the war. But the big adventure of his career came to him while he was working at the comparatively peaceful job of medical technician. It was on September 9, 1932, that Fred received a call from a prominent physician, summoning him to a case in an apartment building Park avenue. When Fred got there he was met by a woman, the widow of a wealthy New York merchant, who told him that her son had been suffering from a mental disorder and needed to be taken care of.

Patient Had Homicidal Tendencies.

The woman took Fred to her son's room. He was sitting by a window, looking out at the street. He paid no attention to Fred, and when Fred spoke to him he got no reply but a vague mumble and a furtive look. Fred pretended to be interested in things around the room. But he hoped of the young fellow might respond to that sort of treatment. But the lad just sat in his chair and sulked, and paid no attention to Fred at all. About six-thirty that evening the doctor arrived. He looked over his patient, and then he warned Fred to watch him closely. "He's developing homicidal tendencies," the Doc said, "and it's hard to tell what he'll do. But he may become dangerous at any minute." So Fred decided he'd have to watch his step that night.

The evening wore on—and still the young fellow sulked.

Midnight Fred persuaded him to go to bed. A cot had been set up in the room for Fred, but before he lay down on it he locked the door from the inside and put the key in his pocket. He waited until he was sure his patient was asleep, and then he lay down himself.

That Doze Was Almost Fatal.

Says Fred: "I was very tired, having just finished a strenuous case that same morning, and I must have dozed off. That doze nearly cost me my life. I awoke suddenly with a nameless feeling that all was not well, and there, not two feet from the foot of my cot, creeping toward me, was my patient."

Fred says no words that he knows could describe the demoniacal fury of the young lad's distorted features.

"And," he says, "in his right hand was an OPEN RAZOR. To say that I went cold with horror wouldn't be telling the half of it. But that feeling only lasted a second or two. Then I managed to pull myself together again.

The young fellow must have sensed that I was awake, for with a bound he was at my side.

His arm went up and started to come down again. He meant to decapitate me with that razor. But my left hand shot out and seized his right, and I got a death grip on his wrist to stop the murderous swing. But now the madman's left hand was reaching for Fred's throat, and there in that locked room began a terrible battle. The young fellow fought with all of a maniac's superhuman strength. He was armed with a razor, and Fred thought that sure enough this was going to be his finish. Still he struggled, and still the maniac fought on.

Nearly Split by the Razor.

"He made no sound," Fred says, "but kept spitting in my face as though to blind me. Finally, with a furious heave, he flung me to the floor and tore loose his right arm—the one with the razor in it. The arm went up, and I could see the razor gleam in the light that filtered in through the window. Emitting a grunting sound like a woodchopper swinging an axe on a block of wood he brought that razor down to split me in two."

And then, something else happened.

Fred says it's a strange thing, the way a man's mind and body will co-ordinate in a moment of stress. He put every ounce of strength he had into one great effort of pitching himself away—out from under that descending razor. He rolled violently to one side, and as he did, his right hand landed on one of his shoes.

Fred doesn't even remember thinking his next move out.

He thinks he must have acted almost entirely by instinct. But he clutched at the shoe as a drowning man would a straw, sprang to his feet, whirled around and swung the heel of the mad young fellow's temple. He did that all in one motion—and did it so swiftly that it was all over before his mind half caught up with what he was doing. The heel of the shoe landed—right where Fred wanted it to land. The young fellow slumped to the floor, and lay still.

Fred struck him again with that shoe.

He looked as though the first blow had knocked him unconscious, but he might have been playing possum, and Fred wasn't taking any chances. And then the fight was over; Fred stripped the sheets from the young fellow's bed and tied him hand and foot. He unlocked the door, and there, outside were the young lad's mother and the maid, both of them almost frantic. They had heard the sounds of the struggle but couldn't get through the locked door. They took the young fellow to a sanitarium the next day. Fred never found out how he managed to get hold of that razor. Fred grabbed that razor, by the way, and kept it for a souvenir of a ghastly night's experience. But I'll bet a lot of money he doesn't shave with it.

Early Pueblo People Had Their Balanced Rations

At a time when our own Nordic ancestors were living chiefly on half-cooked or raw meat, ignoring the necessity of eating plenty of spinach and fresh fruit to make them red-blooded and strong, the Pueblo people knew all about balanced rations and were thriving on a variety of delicious foods, declares a writer in the New York Times. Yellow corn was the staple diet; yucca fruit was utilized, wild honey and sweet caps were excellent substitutes for sugar, and beans were so important as a ration that the Spanish name for bean, "frijoles," persists today in the name given to one of the most famous cliff-dweller ruins of New Mexico—Frijoles Canyon, in Bandelier National Monument, some seventy miles beyond Santa Fe. There were also squashes, edible gourds, bulbs of the Mariposa lily, and other roots; berries, pinoon nuts, and the seeds of certain grasses which were ground into meal in the stone metates, or grinding basins of hollowed stone, pounded with a stone pestle or manos. For salt, to be sure, the Pueblo dweller had to travel long distances, securing it through mining or barter. Even today the scarcity of salt in some of these remote Pueblo villages is the occasion for seasonal trips to distant points for supplies of the mineral.

Ideals of a Nation

The strength and greatness of a nation do not lie in the sinews of its people, nor in the money bags of its traders, nor in the glibness of its orators, but in the devotion of its citizens to a lofty ideal of public and private duty, in the love for all that is true and good and beautiful, and the hatred of all that is false, evil, mean and ugly; in their strenuous pursuit of knowledge, and their readiness to apply it to the making of life larger, fuller and happier for all.

All Gloversville Makes Gloves

In Gloversville, New York, the art of making gloves is a community proposition. In one factory, where handmade gloves are manufactured exactly as they were a hundred years ago, three of the best sewers of gloves are the wife of the mayor of the town, and the captain of police and his wife. The making of one glove involves no less than 74 different steps.

The GARDEN MURDER CASE

by S. S. VAN DINE

Copyright S. S. Van Dine WNU Service

Vance jumped down and turned to us.

"Frightfully sorry," he said. "Height does affect most people. I didn't realize." He looked at the girl. "Will you forgive me?"

As he spoke Floyd Garden stepped out on the roof through the passageway door.

"Sorry, Vance," he apologized, "but Doc Siefert wants Miss Beeton downstairs—if she feels equal to it. The matter is putting on one of her acts."

The nurse hurried away immediately, and Garden stroled up to Vance. He was again fussing with his pipe.

"A beastly mess," he mumbled. "And you've certainly put the fear of God and destruction into the hearts of the pious boys and girls here this afternoon. They all got the jitters after you talked with them." He looked up. "The fact is, Vance, if you should want to see Kroon or Zalia Graemv or Madge Weatherby for any reason this evening, they'll be here. They've all asked to come. Must return to the scene of the crime, or something of that kind. Need mutual support."

"Perfectly natural. Quite," Vance nodded. "I understand their feelings . . . Beastly mess, as you say . . . And now suppose we go down."

Doctor Siefert met us at the foot of the stairs.

"I was just coming up for you, Mr. Vance. Mrs. Garden insists on seeing you gentlemen." Then he added in a low tone: "She's in a tantrum. A bit hysterical. Don't take anything she may say too seriously."

We entered the bedroom. Mrs. Garden, in a salmon-pink silk dressing gown, was in bed, bolstered up by a collection of pillows. Her face was drawn and, in the slanting rays of the night-light, seemed flabby and unhealthy. Her eyes glared demoniacally as she looked at us, and her fingers clutched nervously at the quilt. Miss Beeton stood at the far side of the bed, looking down at her patient with calm concern; and Professor Garden leaned heavily against the window-sill opposite, his face a mask of troubled solitude.

"I have something to say, and I want you all to hear it," Mrs. Garden's voice was shrill and strident. "My nephew has been killed to-day—and I know who did it!" She glared venomously at Floyd Garden who stood near the foot of the bed, his pipe hanging limply from the corner of his mouth. "You did it!"

She pointed an accusing finger at her son. "You've always hated Woody. You've been jealous of him. No one else had any reason to do this despicable thing. I suppose I should lie for you and shield you. But to what end? So you could kill somebody else? You killed Woody, and I know you killed him. And I know why you did it."

Floyd Garden stood through this tirade without moving and without perceptible emotion.

"And why did I do it, mater?"

"Because you were jealous of him. Because you knew that I had divided my estate equally between you two—and you want it all for yourself. You always resented the fact that I loved Woody as well as you. And now you think that by having got Woody out of the way, you'll get everything when I die. But you're mistaken. You'll get nothing! Do you hear me? Nothing! Tomorrow I'm going to change my will. Woody's share will go to your father, with the stipulation that you will never get or inherit a dollar of it. And your share will go to charity." She laughed hysterically and beat the bed with her clenched fists.

Doctor Siefert had been watching the woman closely. He now moved a little nearer the bed.

"An ice-pack, immediately," he said to the nurse; and she went quickly from the room. Then he busied himself with his medicine case and deftly prepared a hypodermic injection.

The woman relaxed under his patient dictatorial scrutiny and permitted him to give her the injection. She lay back on the pillows, staring blankly at her son. The nurse returned to the room and arranged the ice-bag for her patient.

Doctor Siefert then quickly made out a prescription and turned to Miss Beeton.

"Have this filled at once. A teaspoonful every two hours until Mrs. Garden falls asleep."

Floyd Garden stepped forward and took the prescription.

"I'll phone the pharmacy," he said. "It'll take them only a few minutes to send it over." And he went out of the room.

As we passed the den door, we could hear Floyd-Garden telephoning.

"I think Mrs. Garden will quiet down now," Doctor Siefert remarked to Vance when we reached the drawing-room. "As I told you, you mustn't take her remarks seriously when she's in this condition. She will probably have forgotten about it by tomorrow."

"Her bitterness, however, did not seem entirely devoid of rationality," Vance returned.

Siefert frowned but made no comment on Vance's statement. Instead he said in his quiet well-modulated voice, as he sat down leisurely in the nearest chair: "This whole affair is very shocking. Floyd Garden gave me but a few details when I arrived. Would you care to enlighten me further?"

Vance readily complied. He briefly went over the entire case, beginning with the anonymous telephone message he had received the night before. (Not by the slightest sign did the doctor indicate any previous knowledge of that telephone call. He sat looking at Vance with serene attentiveness, like a specialist listening to the case history of a patient.) Vance withheld no important detail from him.

"And the rest," Vance concluded, "you yourself have witnessed."

Siefert nodded very slowly two or three times.

"A very serious situation," he commented gravely, as if making a diagnosis. "Some of the things you have told me seem highly significant—a shrewdly conceived murder—and a vicious one. Especially the hiding of the revolver in Miss Beeton's coat, and the attempt on her life with the bromin gas in the vault."

"I seriously doubt," said Vance, "that the revolver was put in Miss Beeton's coat pocket with any intention of incriminating her. I imagine it was to have been taken out of the house at the first opportunity. But I agree with you that the bromin episode is highly mysterious." Vance, without appearing to

"I was just coming up for you, Mr. Vance. Mrs. Garden insists on seeing you gentlemen." Then he added in a low tone: "She's in a tantrum. A bit hysterical. Don't take anything she may say too seriously."

"I Called the Sergeant Just After I Phoned You."

do so, was watching the doctor closely. "When you asked to see me on your arrival here this afternoon," he went on, "I was hoping that you might have some suggestion which, coming from one who is familiar with the domestic situation here, might put us on the track to a solution."

Siefert solemnly shook his head several times.

"No, no. I am sorry, but I am completely at a loss myself. When I asked to speak to you and Mr. Markham it was because I was naturally deeply interested in the situation here and anxious to hear what you might have to say about it." He paused, shifted slightly in his chair, and then asked: "Have you formed any opinion from what you have been able to learn?"

"Yes, Oh, yes. Frankly, however, I detest my opinion. I'd hate to be right about it. A sinister, unnatural conclusion is forcing itself upon me. It's sheer horror." He spoke with unwonted intensity.

Siefert was silent, and Vance turned to him again.

"I say, doctor, are you particularly worried about Mrs. Garden's condition?"

A cloud overspread Siefert's countenance, and he did not answer at once.

"It's a queer case," he said at length, with an obvious attempt at evasion. "As I recently told you, it has me deeply puzzled. I'm bringing Kattelbaum up tomorrow."

"Yes, as you say, Kattelbaum." Vance looked at the doctor dreamily. "My anonymous telephone message last night mentioned radioactive sodium. But equanimity is essential. Yes, by all means. Not a nice case, doctor—not at all a nice case . . . And now I think we'll be toddlin'." Vance rose and Siefert also got up.

"If there is anything whatever that I can do for you . . ." he began.

"We may call on you later," Vance returned, and walked toward the archway.

Siefert did not follow us, but turned and moved slowly toward one of the front windows, where he stood looking out, with his hands clasped behind him. We re-entered the hallway and found Snead waiting to help us with our coats.

We had just reached the door leading out of the apartment when the strident tones of Mrs. Garden's voice assailed us again. Floyd Garden was in the bedroom, leaning over his mother.

"Your solicitude won't do you any good, Floyd," Mrs. Garden cried. "Being kind to me now, are you? Telephoning for the prescription—all attention and loving kindness. But don't think you're pulling the wool over my eyes. It won't make any difference. Tomorrow I change my will! Tomorrow . . ."

We continued on our way out, and heard no more.

Shortly after nine o'clock the next morning there was a telephone call from Doctor Siefert. Vance was still abed when the telephone rang, and I answered it. The doctor's voice was urgent and troubled when he asked that I summon Vance immediately. Vance slipped into his Chinese robe and sandals and went into the anteroom.

It was nearly ten minutes before he came out again.

"Mrs. Garden was found dead in her bed this morning," he drawled. "Poison of some kind. I've phoned Markham, and we'll be going to the Garden apartment as soon as he comes. A bad business, Van—very bad."

Markham arrived within half an hour. In the meantime Vance had dressed and was finishing his second cup of coffee.

"What's the trouble now?" Markham demanded irritably, as he came into the library. "Perhaps now that I'm here, you'll be good enough to forego your cryptic air."

Vance looked up and sighed. "Do sit down and have a cup of coffee while I enjoy this cigarette. Really, y'know, it's deuced hard to be lucid on the telephone." He poured a cup of coffee, and Markham reluctantly "sweated the coffee." Vance went on. "It has a delightfully subtle bouquet, and it would be a pity to spoil it with saccharine."

Markham, frowning defiantly, put three lumps of sugar in the cup.

"Why am I here?" he growled.

Vance drew deeply on his cigarette and settled back lazily in his chair. "Siefert phoned me this morning, just before I called you. Explained he didn't know your private number at home and asked me to apologize to you for not notifying you direct."

"Notifying me?" Markham set down his cup.

"About Mrs. Garden. She's dead. Found so this morning in bed. Probably murdered."

"Good God!"

"Yes, quite. Not a nice situation. No. The lady died some time during the night—exact hour unknown as yet. Siefert says it might have been caused by an overdose of the sleeping medicine he prescribed for her. It's all gone. And he says there was enough of it to do the trick. On the other hand, he admits it might have been something else."

CHAPTER XII

Markham pushed his cup aside with a clatter and lit a cigar.

"Where's Siefert now?" he asked.

"At the Gardens. Very correct. Standing by, and all that. The nurse phoned him shortly after eight this morning—it was she who made the discovery when she took Mrs. Garden's breakfast. In Siefert hastened over and after viewing the remains and probing round a bit called me. Said that, in view of yesterday's events, he didn't wish to go ahead until we got there."

"Well, why don't we get along?" snapped Markham, standing up.

Vance sighed and rose slowly from his chair.

"There's really no rush. The lady can't elude us. And Siefert won't desert the ship."

"Hadn't we better notify Heath?" suggested Markham.

"Yes—quite," returned Vance, as we went out. "I called the sergeant just after I phoned you. He's been up half the night working on the usual police routine. Stout falls, Heath. Amazin' industry. But quite futile."

Miss Beeton admitted us to the Garden apartment. She looked drawn and worried, but she gave Vance a faint smile of greeting which he returned.

"I'm beginning to think this nightmare will never end, Mr. Vance," she said.

Vance nodded somberly, and we went on into the drawing-room where Doctor Siefert, Professor Garden, and his son were awaiting us.

"I'm glad you've come, gentlemen," Siefert greeted us, coming forward.

Professor Garden sat at one end of the long davenport, his elbows resting on his knees, his face in his hands. He barely acknowledged our presence. Floyd Garden got to his feet and nodded abstractedly in our direction. A terrible change seemed to have come over him. He looked years older than when we had left him the night before.

"What a hell of a situation!" he mumbled, focusing watery eyes on Vance. "The mater accuses me last night of putting Woody out of the way, and then threatens to cut me off in her will. And now she's dead! And it was I who took charge of the prescription. The doc says it could have been the medicine that killed her."

Vance looked at the man sharply.

"Yes, yes," he said in a low, sympathetic tone. "I thought of all that, too, don't y' know. But I certainly won't help you to be morbid about it."

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By REV. HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, Dean of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.

Lesson for April 11

THE SIN OF ADAM AND EVE

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 3:1-15.
 GOLDEN TEXT—The soul that sinneth, it shall die. Ezek. 18:4.
 PRIMARY TOPIC—In the Garden of Eden.
 JUNIOR TOPIC—Trying to Hide From God.
 INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Sin Is and Does.
 YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Consequences of Sin.

"One of the curiosities of the British Museum is a brick from the walls of ancient Babylon which bears the imprint of one of Babylon's mighty kings. Right over the center of the royal seal is deeply impressed the footprint of a 'pariah' dog which apparently trod upon it when it was soft and plastic. Long ages have passed; the king's superscription is visible but defaced; the footprint of the dog is clear and sharply defined.

"Human nature is like that brick. Man originally was made in the image of God, but over the royal beauty of the Divine likeness there has been superimposed the dirty disfigurement of the Devil's imprint" (D. E. Hart-Davies).

Last Sunday we saw the heavens and earth, the animals, yes, the entire creation crowned by man himself, as it had come from the hand of God—"and behold it was very good" (1:31). But, sadly enough, it did not long remain so, for sin which had already entered the universe soon found its way into the world.

God created Adam in his own likeness and image, gave him "a helpmeet unto him," and placed him in perfect surroundings. He gave him congenial employment, and above all the inestimable privilege of fellowship with Him.

But because man was not a mere automaton—a toy in the hands of a superior being—God gave him the power of moral choice, the opportunity to exercise his God-given personality in making that choice. Obedience is the underlying moral principle of the universe.

Today we go with Eve and Adam into that cataclysmic experience which we call "the Fall of Man," for as we read in Romans 5:12, "by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned."

I. Temptation (vv. 1-5).
 Satan is not a cloven-hoofed monstrosity with a forked tail and a trident in his hand. No, indeed, he is more subtle than anything in creation. We read that he is "transformed into an angel of light" (II Cor. 11:14). His approach in our day is as smooth, and cultured as it was in the garden of Eden. An example is the insidious liquor advertising of our day. Another is his use of the man who stands behind the pulpit or sits in the professor's chair and destroys the Christian faith of young men and women.

Note the five steps in the fall of man:

1. Listening to a slander against God (Satan lied about God).
2. Doubting God's Word and love (If we trust God we will obey Him).
3. Looking at that which God has forbidden (The eye will betray us unless we guard it).
4. Lusting after what God had prohibited (Compare Genesis 3:6 with I John 2:6).
5. Disobedience to God's command.

II. Sin (v. 6).
 Sin is deliberate transgression, not a natural weakness, nor a necessity. It showed itself in its true light when it at once reached out and dragged down another. We do not sin alone for very long.

1. The serpent is cursed.
2. Sin, death and condemnation enter the world.
3. Sorrow is linked with motherhood.
4. Responsibility and headship is given to man.
5. The ground is cursed and the burden of labor introduced.

III. Consequences (vv. 7-15, also 16-19).

1. The serpent is cursed.
2. Sin, death and condemnation enter the world.
3. Sorrow is linked with motherhood.
4. Responsibility and headship is given to man.
5. The ground is cursed and the burden of labor introduced.

IV. Redemption (v. 15).
 Here we have the first promise of redemption, and the scarlet thread of redemptive truth thus runs from this point at the Bible's beginning to its very last chapter. Even in judging the first Adam for his sin God promises the coming of the second Adam who is to redeem the race. You are in the family of the first Adam by natural birth; have you entered the family of the second Adam by supernatural rebirth? (I Cor. 15:21, 22, 45.)

Employing Character
 A good character when established should not be rested in as an end, but only employed as a means of doing still further good.—Atterbury.

Punishment That Hardens
 If punishment makes not the will supple, it hardens the offender.—Locke.

To Have Friendship
 The only way to have a friend is to be one.—Emerson.

From Perfectly Cut Patterns

"I'M GLAD I'm not on the serving committee this week," muses Mrs. Smith of Walnut street, as she takes stock of herself in the mirror preparatory to leaving for the church supper. "I look entirely too swell for me—why, I'm almost excited! I always knew surplice waists were becoming, but how becoming I never knew till now. That little deceptiveness is just what I need, and these sleeves are the most comfortable things! If about half our circle wore dresses like this it would be better for all concerned; so many of us have outgrown the tailored streamlined styles. Now, Mrs. White for instance—"

Enter an Admirer.
 "Why Mother, you look de-lovely in that shade of blue! And you look real stylish, too—you ought to be going to a Coronation."
 "Oh, I'd much prefer the church supper, dear. 'll be a somebody there in my new dress but at a Coronation I would be little potatoes. By the way, what did they say about your new jumper at school?"

"Mother, I meant to tell you. Mary Jane and Betty are both going to coax their mothers to make one just like it. I said maybe you would loan them the pattern, would you?"

"Why of course. Did you tell them it took me only two afternoons to make yours including two blouses?"

Enter "The Duchess."
 "Sis, you're pretty young to be talking about clothes so intelligently. When you get a figure that clothes really count on—ahem, like Yours Truly's for instance, then it might be different—oh Mother, how nice! I'm crazy about it. Gee, such smart lines! Remember, you promised to help me with a new party frock next week if I did well with this short-waister. I wish all dresses were as easy to sew and as swell to wear as it is."

"Perfectly cut patterns spell success for any frock. Kay, your party dress is as good as made right now. But I must be on my way or I'll be more than fashionable late for the affair. Bye, bye—be good girls and see that Daddy gets something to eat."

JACK STRICKLIN AGREES

Jack Stricklin of the Terry County Herald is back on the job, slinging a wicked pen, after having spent a month down at Marlin having the rheumatiz boiled out of him—or maybe it was the gout. Anyway he quotes an editorial from the Lynn County News opposing the payment of a pension to everybody over 65, rich and poor alike, and then proceeds as follows:

"As bad as we hate to agree with you, Col. Hill, we'll just have to do so this time. While down in Ellis county recently, we were informed by a man who knew what he was talking about that a man who owned a black land farm was drawing an old age pension, while his sharecropper on the place could not make the grade. If that isn't politics, and also shows what 'pull' will do for you, we have lost all reasoning powers of what is equal justice to all."

That black land farm owner was over 65 years old, while his sharecropper was doubtless under 65. That landlord probably owned only one farm and it was possibly a small one; but if we grant a pension to everybody over 65 there are numbers of landlords in Lynn county over 65 who own a number of farms embracing thousands of acres of land, who will be listed on the pension rolls.

Here is Landlord Jones, for instance, who owns a dozen farms. On these farms are a dozen tenants, none of whom has reached the age of 65. But Landlord Jones is just above 65. If the proposed amendment to the pension law passes, Landlord Jones, though he rides around in a big car over his dozen farms, draws his Government soil conservation stipend at regular intervals, and smokes the best cigars on the market, he will be on the pension roll, but not a one of the poor devils out there on his farms toiling for the bare necessities of life will be able to get a single penny from the State.

Yes, we are "agin" the pension-for-everybody movement.

The devil never started a bigger lie than this, that whiskey will let you alone if you will let it alone. You may never touch a drop of liquor and yet some drunken fool will run into your car and kill you or cripple you for life. A drunken man is always a nuisance or a menace to somebody. We pity the youth who becomes addicted to the drink habit.

WASH

Where Washing Is A Pleasure!

SHARP'S STEAM LAUNDRY

UPHOLD WAGE LAW

The supreme court in upholding the Washington state wage law, did so by Justice Roberts changing from his former position when the New York wage law was invalidated. But this action in no wise means the court is to be changed. In fact the opposition is fighting the harder for the court to remain as is. If "pressure" has caused one member to change his mind, what would happen if there were six on the court who were as clay in the potter's hand?—Yoakum County Review.

We do not believe that pressure caused Justice Roberts to change his views. We take it for granted that it was an honest conversion. But if there were fifteen members on the court, how would the situation be different? Could not eight of them declare a law unconstitutional? Certainly so, and the fact about one man out of fifteen might change the decision of the court just as one man out of nine can do so now. President Roosevelt's proposal might be effective in accomplishing his immediate purpose but as a permanent solution of the problem, if there is a problem, it has no value at all. You are right, Brother Hale; President Roosevelt seemingly wants a Court of plastic clay, and of course he will be the potter.

SUMMED IT UP

After reading about the exploits of Speedy Bonehead in the News-Record of last week, Uncle Fred Whipkey, the dean of columnists, was impressed with the following paragraph:

"They were going so fast that the telephone poles seemed to blur into one pole. When the needle of the speedometer pointed at 90 he took his eyes off the road to look into the admiring eyes of his best girl. She looked so thrilled and sweet that he leaned over to kiss her—"

Then Uncle Fred summed up the situation in the four following lines: "A girl and boy went for a drive. His technique at par.

He tried to kiss her at ninety-five. No boy! No girl! No car!"

As everybody knows, Uncle Fred is the old scout who makes everybody anxious to read the Colorado Record.—Sterling City News-Record

There is decidedly too much laughing at enforcement officers with such derisive terms as "wagging a big six-shooter," and "two-gun" so and so. But, only recently, in the death of Sheriff Loyd of Lamb county, has it been bro't to us again forcibly that a peace officer takes his own life in his hands in approaching a criminal unarmed. In our own section, two other officers have been killed by desperadoes in the past year or two. Jailor Redwine of Tahoka, and the former sheriff of Dickens county, not to mention others over the state. We do not crave a job as peace officer, but if we did, we'd pack a good sixshooter too, and keep in fine practice, both to accuracy and speed on draw.—Terry County Herald.

The Sterling City News-Record is a small paper in a small town but it is ably edited. W. F. Kellis writes in an easy, breezy style that makes every editorial he writes forceful and interesting. In fact we know few country newspaper men who are in his class. Just now he is whipping 'em up for the Roosevelt court plan. He thinks younger men should be on the bench. He thinks the old ginks should be shelled. He is still a young man himself, and seems to be growing more brilliant every day. He is just a little past eighty, we understand. And we see no signs of his retiring from the editorial tripod.

WHAT THE CONSTITUTION IS FOR

We are reliably informed that a few very ignorant and UNETHICAL DENTISTS of Texas are now trying to get a law passed to prohibit all HONEST and up-right dentists from advertising their business in any legitimate way they see fit. No good dentists would ask for such a crooked and perverted law. Every business or professional man in every line should have a right to advertise his business in any way that is legal and that he sees fit, just as long as he tells the truth about what he sells in either goods or services rendered. We believe we can see the NIGGER IN THE WOOD-PILE.—When any dentist has discovered something worth while for the public good, this UNETHICAL LAW will STOP HIM FROM ADVERTISING it and in this way the public can never be benefited by his superior service. Again, if a dentist moved to a new location he would not be allowed to advertise and get his name before the people hence the old time dentists would hog all the trade and keep him from getting anywhere as to building up trade. A new dentist just from college could not advertise because of this UNETHICAL LAW, hence, he would be handicapped and could never get a start because this unjust law says he cannot be a FREE AMERICAN CITIZEN, and advertise his goods and services, which he certainly has a right to do, as long as he tells the truth about what he has for the public.—Claude News.

If this proposed law is as vicious as you think, Brother Waggoner, it certainly would be unjust and unfair. But you need not despair; we have a remedy. We have courts in this country that have the authority and the power to declare laws unconstitutional when they violate the constitutional rights of the citizen.

This is true in spite of the fact that you assert in another editorial that "The National Constitution does not give the Supreme Court the right to tell Congress and the President what they shall or shall not do."

If this bill proposing to prohibit advertising by dentists passes, don't you think that any dentist in this state has the right to test the constitutionality of the law?

Don't you think he has the right and should have the right, if prosecuted for a violation of the law, to set up the defense that the law is unconstitutional and void? And, don't you think the court should have the right to pass upon that issue? Don't you think that he should have the right to carry the case to the Supreme Court of the United States, if necessary, in order to have his rights under the constitution adjudicated? And don't you think that that court should then have the right to determine whether the law denying him the right to advertise is or is not in violation of the Federal Constitution?

You assert "When Congress passes a law and the same is duly signed by the President, the Supreme Court has no right, according to our constitution, to say such a law is UNCONSTITUTIONAL."

You are wrong. It does have such right. All the courts in the land say so. If it doesn't have that right then how can any man protect himself against an unconstitutional law? How could an "honest dentist" who wishes to advertise protect himself against a tyrannical and unconstitutional law that denies him the right? He couldn't. He would go to jail. How could you protect yourself against a law that might be passed by Congress or by the state legislature sometime curbing the freedom of the press? You couldn't. You would go to jail. What would the Bill of Rights in the Constitution amount to if the courts can not enforce them against a law of Congress? Just exactly nothing. For, if the Supreme Court can not declare an act of Congress unconstitutional, no other court can do so; and a majority of Congress, moved by passion or prejudice or malice, can enact any kind of unconstitutional and oppressive and tyrannical law it sees fit, and if the President approves it or if it passes over his veto then there is no remedy for the citizen whose rights are trespassed or destroyed.

The Constitution was written and the courts were instituted in order that Mr. John Citizen might be protected in his inalienable rights; and he has the right of such protection against Congress as he has against any individual.

THE AGE OF REASON?

In considering the reasons given by proponents of reorganization plans for the United States Supreme Court, one comes to some "blank wall" conclusions.

If seventy years should be the retirement age for Supreme Court Justices, why not for U. S. Senators and Representatives? If a man past seventy is no longer capable of considering governmental, legal and economic problems on the bench, is he any more capable of considering them in Congress?—Sudan News.

Lots of folks are going to be fooled before 1937 comes to a close. Most all cotton producers expect cotton to be a high price this fall and they are going to plant more cotton than in the past year or two. If a majority follow this plan it is certain that the price of cotton will be most disappointing when the crop is ready for harvest.—Big Spring Weekly News.

Every time we cast our eyes over that court yard, we feel like praising Miss Lillith Boyd for the fine supervisory work she has been doing.

T. J. Renfro Buried Here Last Week

Last week we made a brief mention of the death of T. J. Renfro, who died early Thursday morning. Since that time we have received a more extended account of his life, to which we gladly give space this week.

T. J. Renfro, aged 82 years, 5 months, and 23 days, died Thursday morning at 7:20 o'clock, after a lingering illness of the past three years.

Funeral services were held at the Harris Funeral Home at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon, with Rev. Ben Hardy, pastor of the Methodist Church, officiating.

Thomas Jefferson Renfro was born in Whitfield county, Tennessee, September 24, 1855, and moved with his parents when a small boy to Dalton, Georgia, during the Civil War, where he grew to stalwart manhood; and while there married Miss Louisa Anderson, and to this union six children were born.

Some 53 years ago he moved to Texas and settled near Crawford. After living near Moody, Waco, and McGregor several years, he moved to Tahoka February 12, 1925, and lived here until about a year ago, when his health became so poor he went to live with his daughter, Mrs. T. M. Lockaby of Ackerly, at whose home he passed away.

Mr. Renfro retained his jovial disposition in spite of his sufferings. Surrounded by a large circle of friends and devoted relatives, death came to him as a thief in the night, and the "silver cord" was loosed and the golden bowl was broken and the spirit returned to God who gave it.

He was a kind and loving companion and father. Mr. Renfro did not get to attend services regularly in his last years, but he paid at-

SIX NATIONAL DIRECTORS TO ATTEND THE BIENNIAL HEAD CAMP CONVENTION

The biennial Head Camp convention of the Woodmen of the World Life Insurance association in Texas will be held on April 15, 16 and 17 in Abilene, according to E. R. Coffee, of Houston, head consul for the state of Texas.

No less than six national directors will attend the session, he said. They are De Emmett Bradshaw, national president of the order, of Omaha, Neb.; United States Senator Morris Sheppard, national treasurer, of Arkansas; Farrar Newberry, newly-appointed secretary, of Omaha; and State Manager R. E. Miller, of Dallas, William E. Mooney, of Chicago, and Dr. H. B. Kennedy, of Omaha.

Prominent Sovereigns of Texas who have indicated that they will attend the convention include John J. Wahl, member of the Committee on Legislation of the 1935 Sovereign Camp; Judge E. D. Henry, member of the Judiciary Committee of the Sovereign Camp; Dr. C. J. Koerth, medical superintendent of the Woodmen of the World hospital, all of San Antonio; and the following Head Camp officers: W. A. Tidwell, of Shreveport, J. H. Flood, of Dallas, Frank Butts, of Ector, Guy Guisenberry, of Dallas, W. T. Moore, of Beaumont, George Knapp, of Calvert, and Pete Bacher, of Houston.

President Bradshaw, who is honored and respected in every state in which the association operates, is particularly interested in improving and enlarging the services of the Woodmen of the World Memorial hospital at San Antonio, Tex. Here, members afflicted with tuberculosis are treated without cost.

He is survived by his wife, two sons, and one daughter, H. C. and W. C. Renfro of McGregor and Mrs. T. M. Lockaby of Ackerly.

L. B. Russell of Comanche, a native Texan born at Goliad in 1850, a member of the Sons of the American Revolution, Sons of the Republic of Texas, Sons of Confederate Veterans, a Master Mason for 64 years, a Knight Templar 52 years, mayor of Comanche six years, lawyer, and former newspaper publisher, has written a brief letter to the News commending a couple of editorials appearing recently in this paper. Mr. Russell says:

"I want to commend your attitude in reference both to Senator Connally and Jim Farley as lawyers. I think the Senator's stand on the Court issue is absolutely invincible, and I also think that Jim Farley's knowledge of law is confined to what he has learned as a leader of Tammany.

"One of the greatest flops the Democratic party has ever made, and especially Southern Democrats, is from a half a century of abuse of Tammany to extolling its virtues and taking it into full fellowship. The result is that the Old South no longer exists, being swallowed up by its own short-sightedness, in which it has sold its birthright for a mighty cheap mess of pottage."

PRESBYTERY MEETS IN PECOS THIS YEAR

The El Paso Presbytery of which the Tahoka Church is a member meets at Pecos April 20 at 7:30 p. m., Dr. McDond of Big Spring, preaching the opening sermon, Rev. S. J. McMurry of Crosbyton is clerk of the Presbytery. All reports for the closing year and Presbyterial dues will be ready on time.

Messrs. Joe and George Bovell are Elders elected to attend the Spring meeting of the Presbytery from the Tahoka Church. Fishing is good all around there for those who can't stand confinement too long. Hope to have a fine attendance of Elders from all over the Presbytery.

The ladies of our church are to be commended for their steadiness, diligence and faithfulness in their work all this year.

Nothing so reinforces the preacher and the whole church-wide program as the loyalty and faithfulness of our people in their work for the Lord. It is not bigness, loudness or noise that counts in the battle, but faithfulness in action, always. Thanks for the help and cooperation of our members this closing year.

Be in our service at 11 a. m. Sunday. Remember the Sunday School hour. Fine lesson and fine fellowship. Always glad to have you in our Presbyterian services. Morning theme: "And the Books Were Closed"—The inevitable end of life's record. Come. Invite others. Everybody invited.

W. K. Johnston, Minister.

NOTES FROM THE CHURCH OF CHRIST

What a day last Lord's Day was for weather—a fine excuse for staying away from worship. I was sick and was able to deliver only one sermon.

The Lord has been good to me in giving me strength to attend worship. I think it is about twenty years since I missed both services.

Health! What a wonderful thing! I am afraid many of us do not appreciate it as we should. God expects us to care for our bodies as well as our souls. I think most of our aches and pains are due to the violation of the laws of nature. We need to realize that we cannot violate any of God's laws without paying the penalty. As I write this my body is racked with pain but I am glad it is well with my soul, or as Paul said, "Though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day." A sick body is bad but a sick soul is worse.

I will fill the pulpit at O'Donnell next Lord's Day at both services. Bible study 10 a. m. Worship 11 a. m. here. Visit the friendly church.—R. P. DRENNON.

Mrs. J. H. Colleenbach returned Tuesday from a two weeks visit with her daughter, Mrs. L. D. Anderson, in Abilene. The Andersons spent several weeks here with Mrs. Colleenbach following the tragic death of Mr. Colleenbach early in February. She accompanied them when they returned to their home two weeks ago.

Ancestry of Chow Dogs

Is Traced to Far North
The ancestry of the chow or chow-chow dog is traced to the dogs of the Far North and it is said that this particular breed was kept by the Buddhist priests in Northern China.

Naturally this created ill feeling toward all dogs and a certain number of them were destroyed. The scarcity of food in China and dire necessity no doubt forced many a native to sacrifice a pet for the sake of his family but the Chinese do not eat dogs, this or any other breed.

In many parts of China they were used as a sled dog, also as a hunting dog, and as a result of some early training or instinct they have an uncanny ability of always finding their way. You never see a chow out alone with a lost look. Rather he trots along paying strictly to his own business (expecting you to do likewise) and they are master hands in crossing a street amid busy traffic.

"Reading the Riot Act"

The original Riot Act was an English law passed in 1715, in the reign of George I, at a time when there was some apprehension of a Jacobite conspiracy against the reigning house. It provided that when 12 or more persons unlawfully assembled and refused to disperse within an hour after the reading of a specified portion of it by a magistrate or other competent authority, they should be considered as felons, liable to be fired upon by the military, etc.

Bald Eagle Not Bald

The bald eagle isn't actually bald, but white head and neck feathers make him appear so. It is among the largest and keenest-eyed of all birds, sometimes with a wingspread of eight feet. Old Baldy is a homebody, using the same nest year after year, adding only new layers of sticks and branches. One such, in use 35 years, finally grew to 12 feet in height, 8 1/2 in width. When it fell, its weight was reckoned 4,000 pounds—two tons.

Love Curls

Women love curls. They've always loved them. Years ago, a woman got kinks in her hair by putting a slate pencil in the kitchen range and twisting her tresses around it. She used quince seed juice to make "beau catchers," and when she combed them out they looked as if they had been starched.

How Pain and Pleasure

Vary With Individual

Pain, obviously, is an extreme quality or quantity of the same reaction that gives pleasure in its milder intensities. The amount of pain or pleasure that is derived from a reaction varies with the individual. One person can be thrown into ecstasies by the same stimulus that leaves another person unmoved.

The erroneous assumption that we all experience the same pain from the belief that some persons are better able to stand pain than others. Some persons get almost no sensation reaction whatever to causes that produce excruciating pain in others.

Almost all the pain we feel is carried to the centers of consciousness in the brain over the sensory nervous system. The motor nerves take no part in conduction of the sensation of pain. Parts of the autonomic nervous system, which automatically controls our internal affairs without aid from the consciousness, functions at times to block or inhibit pain. In hypnotism a blocking or inhibiting action takes place which makes it possible for painful stimuli to be applied to the body without the sensory centers in the brain becoming conscious of pain.

There is another situation which is the converse of this. A person can feel pain when there is no pain-producing stimulus acting on the peripheral nerves. Sir James Paget has pointed out that, if a person expects pain and looks forward to experiencing pain, that person will experience the pain even though there be no pain cause, the pain being produced entirely in the sensory centers of the brain, and the effect is just as keen and real as if caused by stimuli that came over the nerves. This is known as subjective pain.

Mrs. Lawrence Evans went to Slaton Wednesday morning to spend two or three days with her mother, Mrs. R. F. Swafford.

Mrs. Slaughter Of O'Donnell Dies

In the multiplicity of deaths which it became our duty to report last week, we unintentionally omitted mention of one, that of Mrs. Emeline Elizabeth Slaughter, who lived and died at the home of her son, E. O. Slaughter, five miles west of O'Donnell.

Mrs. Slaughter died at 9 a. m. Tuesday, at the ripe age of 83 years, and the remains were laid to rest the following day in the cemetery at Pride, the funeral services being conducted at the grave at 2 p. m. by Rev. Montie Robinson, a Baptist minister. Burial was in charge of the Harris Funeral Home of this city.

Mrs. Slaughter was born in Arkansas on February 10, 1854, but she had been a resident of Texas for many years. For a number of years she had resided in the community in which she died. She left surviving only one son, but she left other descendants. Among these is Mrs. R. F. Barton, formerly of Tahoka but now of Artesia, New Mexico, who has written the following letter with the request that it be published in the News:

Dear friends of mine and of Grandmother Slaughter:

I don't know how to commence to thank you all for what you have done to make her dear life brighter for her. Her passing away has hurt me beyond expression. I loved her like a mother, and was so hurt because I didn't get any message to come to her last few hours or to her funeral until it was too late. But I know she must have had lots of friends and loved ones near. My heart goes out to you, dear ones, one and all, with gratitude for every little deed of kindness rendered

Aurora Borealis Varies;

White, Green, Red, Purple

The intrepid English and Dutch sailors who searched for the northwest passage, a supposed water route around the northern end of North America, failed in their main objective, but nevertheless supplied scientific men with a wealth of meteorological information. The one phenomenon that most impressed them, and one that has come to be regarded as typical of northern latitudes, is the aurora borealis or northern lights, observes a writer in the Chicago Tribune.

This is an unearthly display of light that appears in the sky at night. It may be seen as far south as the northern part of the United States. In the eastern hemisphere, however, it is rarely seen farther south than the northern parts of Norway, Sweden and Russia. It usually appears as one of several distinct patterns of light. It may be an arch, the lower side of which is sharply defined, with the upper gradually fading into darkness; or the lower edge, instead of being arched, may be curved in irregular folds like the edge of a draped curtain. Sometimes it takes the form of radiant beams which may seem to spiral upward toward an infinite point at the zenith.

In color the aurora varies from pearly white to a pale green, although it has on occasion shown shades of red or purple. It may be easily the brightest object in the nocturnal sky, or it may be barely visible. It may last for only a few minutes or for many hours.

Frogs Have Teeth, but

the Toad Is Toothless

The eyes of toads and frogs have movable lids which are closed when swallowing and when swimming.

The ear (timpanum) of the toad or frog is the round disk situated directly behind and a little below the eye.

The tongue of a toad is attached at the front of the mouth instead of at the back of the mouth as with human beings. The tongue of a toad is long and thin, thickened at the end, which is covered with a sticky mucus.

The frog's tongue is attached a little way back from the front of the mouth and cannot be protruded a very great length. As the frog has teeth on the upper jaw and the toad is toothless, it is fair to suppose that the frog depends more on his jaws than on his tongue to keep body and soul together. A big bull frog, and they do grow to be a foot in length from the tip of the nose to the end of the outstretched legs, has been known to eat small birds and rodents.

The Earliest Diamonds

It was a Dutch farmer who discovered the first diamond, says a writer in the Philadelphia Record. To him it was simply a pretty stone with which some children were playing. He showed it to a trader. Neither of them knew what it was. But the French consul in Cape Town, a jeweler, pronounced it to be a diamond and valued it at $2,500. At this price it was bought by the governor of the colony. The profits were honorably divided between the owner and the trader. The same farmer paid all that he had—500 sheep, 10 oxen and a horse, to a native witch doctor for a stone four times as heavy which he was using as a charm. This the farmer sold for $56,000. It was the famous "Star of South Africa," valued at $125,000.

Many Species of Eucalyptus

The eucalyptus hemiphloia, Australian Graybox, attains a height of 90 feet, and is distinguished by its persistent, grayish and somewhat wrinkled bark, which often peels in long strips from the branches. There are about 300 species of eucalyptus, all native to Australia. Considering that a tree can acquire a height of upward of fifty feet within so short a span as five or six years, it is no wonder that it has a personality of great appeal. The name is derived from eu, well; and kaluptos, to cover as with a lid. It refers to the calyx, which covers the flower before expansion and afterwards falls off in one piece in the shape of a lid or cover.

Colorado's No-Man's Land

No-Man's Land in Colorado is a tract of about 1,200 square miles in the north central part of the state, about 50 miles from Denver. Lying between lands included in the Louisiana Purchase and in the Texas Panhandle purchase, it is not part of either, but was obtained in the cession of the Ute Indians under the treaty of March 2, 1868. It was included within the boundaries of Colorado when that state was admitted to the Union in 1876. On August 9, 1936, at Breckenridge, Colo., Gov. E. C. Johnson proclaimed American sovereignty over this land.

Hairless Squirrels

Hairless fox squirrels are not unusual, although they are not common. Generally they are alope while feeding or resting. Others of their family seem to shun them. They are not as active as squirrels in good fur and are constantly scratching themselves. Some have been found even with their tails devoid of hair and they appear more like a light brown rat than a squirrel.

Collier And Nowlin Elected Officials OF Rotary Club For Coming Year

The Rotary meeting Thursday was a business meeting.

M. L. Penn, the president, announced that he had decided to remove to Post following the close of school and stated that the position as president and as a member of the board of directors would be vacant following his removal on July 1. However, the Rotary year ends on that date, and the new officers will not go in until that date.

E. I. Hill was elected a member of the board of directors and Wynne Collier, a member of the present board, was elected president. Dr. K. R. Durham protested against serving another year as secretary and Deen Nowlin was elected to the position. All the new officers will take office on July 1.

M. L. Penn was unanimously elected as the delegate of the Tahoka Club to the district Rotary meeting to be held in Childress April 25, 26, and 27.

Each member present contributed 20 cents to a fund to send Fred Wemple of Midland, district governor, to the Rotary International convention to be held in Nice, France, this summer.

Mr. and Mrs. M. T. White and little son and James Lake drove down to Coleman Sunday for a brief visit and returned to Tahoka Monday.

Miss Lilith Boyd, home demonstration agent, gave a demonstration on cake making and on making boiled icing and then had the ladies judge and score the finished product.

Visitors present were: Mesdames John Fleming, Claude Meeks and Grady Meeks.

Members present were: Mmes. J. A. Jaynes, A. B. Short, Newman Bartley, R. W. Barton, P. K. Fleming, C. B. Caveness, S. B. Francis, Claude Roper, E. B. Terry, A. L. Browning, C. C. Coffee, Susie Bartley, Charles Taylor, Luther Reed, John Meeks, A. T. Cooper, and J. B. Hoskins.

Picture Of Curry Family In Paper

In the Abilene Morning News of Wednesday this week was a group picture of the Rev. J. F. Curry family, extending across four columns of the paper.

In the group were Chas. Curry, printer in the Lynn County News shop, Mrs. Borden Davis of Tahoka, and Albert Curry a former printer and Linotype operator in this shop, who is now operating a printing plant in Dallas. The other members of the group are: Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Curry, Joe, Rogers, and John Curry of Rule, Mrs. James Cupp of Tucumcari, New Mexico, Mrs. Ed Cloud of Rule, and Misses Virginia, Gladys, and Belva Curry of Rule; the family consisting of the parents, five sons and six daughters.

Rev. Curry and family were formerly residents of Tahoka, living in the old Clinton place at the turn of the highway just south of town. They also resided in the Newmoore community two years. Rev. Curry was missionary of the Brownfield Baptist Association for four years. He now resides at Rule.

Miss Lillith Boyd, H. D. Agent

TOOTH INFECTION CAUSE OF DISEASES

"Infection in the teeth can cause other diseases of the body," said Mrs. Earl George at the New Home H. D. Club Thursday, March 27.

"When we think or speak of infection of various parts of the body, it is in one of the following ways: First, through the mouth and then into the stomach and intestines; second, through the nose and lungs; third, through the skin and other openings of the body. It is generally accepted by the medical profession that sound and healthy teeth and gums are essential to normal health."

Those present voted to have a "43" party Friday night, April 9th, at the school house. Everyone every where is invited. The charges will be 25 cents per couple or 15 cents per person.

Members present were: Mesdames Loyd McCormick, Joe Poindexter, Earl George, H. A. Parris, J. T. Carter, Margaret Ross, J. R. Strain, and Boswell Edwards.

OLD BIRDS GOOD CANNING MATERIAL

"For canned chicken older birds give a better quality product because the meat is usually firmer, the broth more concentrated and the flavor more characteristic than that of young birds," said Miss Lillith Boyd, county home demonstration agent, to the members of the Wells 4-H Club which met with Mrs. John Etter April 1st.

Mrs. Lucille Barnes was a guest. Members present were: Misses Elsie Bernice Etter, Willie Ruth Lindley, Fay Johnson, Billie Louise Etter, Emma Jo Hinkle, Clota Roe Jones, Wanda Jean Tyler, Margaret Barrett, Lola Pearl Baker, Georgia Lou Lindly, Mary Lou Lindly, Lucy Alicia Baucum, Frances Nelms, Esiquia Torres, Geraldine Askew, Una Mae Cooley, Vona Lee Simpson, Vivian Carbell, Lizzie Mae Barrett.

TELLS HOW CANNED CHICKEN PREPARED

"To prepare boned chicken, pre-cook for at least eighteen minutes at 15 pounds pressure," said Miss Lillith Boyd, county home demonstration agent, at a meeting of the Grassland 4-H Club April 2nd.

"It should be packed into containers with the length of the pieces running parallel with the height of the container," she added.

Members present were: Billy Williams, Nelda Lois Moore, Margie Shepherd, Bernice Huffaker, Faye Blasingame, Frances Aten, Viola Roberts, Alta Bess Reeves, Billie Greer, Joy Lanell Moore, and Mary Alice Nprman.

HAT RACKS MADE WITHOUT COST

"Hat racks may be made without cost," said Mrs. Boswell Edwards to the New Home 4-H Club girls Tuesday, March 30.

Hat racks may be made out of a coat hanger or some sort of heavy wire shaped to a standing position and padded at the end. We might also make a hat rack out of pasteboard, and when not needed we can fold it and put it away. Hat racks are necessary in keeping our hats nice and in keeping our closets neat. By providing drawer and shelf space our folder garments may be kept in order.

Of our forty enrolled members, thirty-nine were present. The majority of the members are interested in the work, and we are hoping that their interest will continue.

NEW LYNN 4-H GIRLS STUDY CHICKEN CANNING

"After pre-cooking for boned chicken remove the meat from the breast and thighs, keeping it in large pieces," said Miss Boyd at a meeting of the New Lynn 4-H Club which met in the home of the sponsor, Mrs. C. C. Coffee, April 6.

"Pint jars should be processed for 60 minutes at 15 pounds pressure," said Miss Boyd.

Members present: Juanell Cearley, Ivorie Meeks, Venelle Walker, Effie Waggoner, Pauline Perkins, Ruth Evans, Mezzie Mae Baker.

Facts Needed!

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

Census Bureau officials, it is reported from Washington, are proposing that the customary ten-year count of our population and resources be taken this Fall, instead of waiting until 1940.

"They believe that information thus gained could prove helpful in formulating a practical policy in the distribution of Government relief funds."

Whether or not this change would have the desired effect only actual experience could tell. But the great need of a practical basis of facts for our huge relief program is widely recognized.

The responsibility for adequate help to the jobless and other unfortunate is acknowledged by all Americans. They want them to have the required help. But they want that help applied through practical means, free not only from needless waste, but from even the suggestion of political favoritism, manipulation or control, and within the ability of the nation to pay.

They believe that to achieve this end a reliable picture of actual conditions is essential. Such a picture has been hard to find. Reports of the number of our jobless are frequently contradictory. Records of those in actual want are similarly vague.

When the real facts are known a definite program can be approved by all. Perhaps the process of moving up the census date will supply these facts. If so, it would win undoubted approval from the great body of American citizens who willingly pay the bills, but who want to be assured that the money they supply is being spent in a way which will achieve the most effective results.

They want their money's worth—not for themselves, but for the families whom the billions of relief dollars are collected to help.

Such a relief program—based on actual facts—would help more than its needy beneficiaries. By decreasing waste and confusion it could speed our entire nation along the road to sound and lasting recovery.

Solons Excited Over Next War Would Plan Sort of Insulation So We Could Be Free From European Squabble

By EARL GODWIN

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Our hard working lawmakers are in great excitement over the next war. Not our war—nobody here ever plans on that except the professional warriors of the army and navy, but our farseeing lawmakers have heeded the urge of the folks back home and are right now trying to arrange a sort of insulation so that we will not be affected adversely by someone else's war in Europe or Asia.

Along with these efforts at safe and war-shedding neutrality goes the slogan, "The time has come to take the profit out of war." Our American people long ago reached the idea that a war profiteer is pretty low down.

We are all unanimous on keeping out of war—but we are divided on the method. We are, however, certain that we will not permit the death merchants to ship guns, shells, explosives, warplanes and other death-dealing material to any warring country.

But when other nations start warring, their men are taken out of the fields and factories, and immediately will start buying their necessities here. That's where our difficulties will begin.

One idea about keeping us out of war is a complete embargo: no ships to leave our ports for any warring country at all. That is impossible to arrange and has never worked out with other nations.

But it is far from being just that simple. If other nations should start warring within the next two or three years all of them would have to come here for goods and money.

I have been deeply impressed by the number and fine character of the deans and heads of great law schools who stood before the senate judiciary committee to plead for the President's plan to enlarge the court if necessary, and inject liberal freedom into the work of the court.

The practical situation, left by the court in some of its labor and wage opinions—is that organized labor leaders have leaped at the chance to declare that inasmuch as neither the federal nor state governments can help the working classes, the time has come to take matters into their own hands.

other countries at the time the war starts and the complexities begin to face us. Lawmakers generally are inclined to fear this sort of executive power, although it is distinctly written into the Constitution.

I think, however, that the President will accept any neutrality law congress gives him to sign. There has been a difference between the senate and house on the matter of leeway. The senate wants hard and fast neutrality and strict cash and carry terms.

Indications are that the President will accept any bill handed to him to sign and let it ride until war threatens. If he can't keep us out of war by the means then in hand he will rush up to the Capitol as Woodrow Wilson used to do and put the matter squarely up to congress—and get the power he needs on the spot.

Right now people should realize that war and neutrality, seemingly so far off, are a bread and butter matter with us. Right now Germany needs fats, oils—pigs. Germany lost before partly because she was short on this farm product.

The best journalistic minds here believe the President's Supreme court proposal will win in congress if the present general situation prevails. There are about thirty senators out of the present ninety-five who will never change their "no" to "aye".

The one solid element in organized American life backing the President is organized labor, which has been so badly treated by a majority of the court. Farm organizations are divided on the subject; and yet the Supreme court has denied all federal power to deal swiftly and directly with farm and agricultural problems.

The growing feeling here is that there is too much dictatorship in the Supreme court; that the five-to-four opinions which have upset the expressed will of the voters of states and the nation time and time again are closely allied with tyranny.

I have been deeply impressed by the number and fine character of the deans and heads of great law schools who stood before the senate judiciary committee to plead for the President's plan to enlarge the court if necessary, and inject liberal freedom into the work of the court.

The practical situation, left by the court in some of its labor and wage opinions—is that organized labor leaders have leaped at the chance to declare that inasmuch as neither the federal nor state governments can help the working classes, the time has come to take matters into their own hands.

DR. JAMES W. BARTON Talks About

Inherited Overweight. WHEN a patient consults a physician regarding a reduction in his or her weight one of the first questions the physician will ask is about the parents, grandparents, uncles, aunts and cousins.

Dr. Barton

Dr. R. Gurney, Buffalo, in Archives of Internal Medicine, Chicago, studied seventy-five stout women in the outpatient department of the Buffalo General hospital.

Fifty-five women who were definitely not stout were chosen at random as "controls" (that is, for comparison because they were of normal weight and build). These "controls" were of the same age group as the stout women and had practically the same number of operations and the same number of children.

When the "build" of the parents of the stout group and of the control group is investigated a difference in the occurrence of overweight is noticed.

Many Had Stout Parents. Of sixty-one stout women whose family history was easily investigated, twenty-six had a stout mother, nine had a stout father, and fifteen had both a stout mother and a stout father.

Planning Health and Energy. When the business man plans that his income will take care of expenses, he is said to budget his financial undertakings.

It would seem then that it would be only good sense if each and every one of us were to budget our health, our energy, so that we could do all that was possible for our health or energy to do without robbing ourselves and so causing ill health and lack of energy.

Dr. George Crie, in his book "Diseases Peculiar to Civilized Man" shows how the insane desire for speed of all kinds which afflicts and sometimes seems like to ruin this rather mad generation, is the cause of such well recognized ailments as ulcer of the stomach and intestine, increase in the activity of the thyroid gland in the neck, so that all the processes of the body are driven at an increased rate of speed, weakness of the muscular and nervous system, and brought about the knowledge of how to cure these conditions by cutting the transmission between the brain and the overdriven organs.

The treatment is for the physician to show the patient that it is overspending of energy in work or play that is causing the symptoms.

AROUND the HOUSE Items of Interest to the Housewife

Boiling Cabbage — When you cook cabbage, put a small handful of breadcrumbs tied in muslin into the pan. The bread absorbs all the bitter juices and makes the vegetable more digestible.

Worn Socks — Children very often get enormous holes in the heels of their socks. This is often due to the lining of the shoe which has worn rough. If the ragged bits are cut off and the inside of the shoe covered with adhesive tape, many a large "hole" will be prevented.

Washing Embroidery — Do not wring embroidery after washing. Press out as much moisture as possible between the folds of a towel, then spread on a towel or blotter to dry, face up.

Cooking Vegetables — A small piece of butter added to the water in which vegetables are to be cooked will prevent them from boiling over.

Flavoring Gravy — Half milk and half water makes the best colored and best flavored gravy.

Suede Shoes — Rain spots can be removed from suede shoes by rubbing with fine emery board.

Sausage and Fried Apples — Pan broil the required number of small sausages or cakes of sausage meat and as soon as the fat collects, add as many halved, cored and unpeeled apples as required, first dipping them in flour to which a little sugar has been added. Saute slowly until soft and browned. Place on a serving dish, with two small sausages on each half.

Ironing Shirts — Soft collars attached to shirts should be ironed on the right side first, then on the wrong side. This prevents wrinkling the collar.

INSIST ON GENUINE O-CEDAR

Don't take chances! Use only genuine O-Cedar Polish — favorite of housekeepers the world over for 30 years. O-Cedar protects and preserves furniture, prevents spider-web checking.

Dried Milk Was Used by Tartar, Mongol Warriors

A publication of the Douthitt corporation gives the following story of the early history of dry milk:

Marco Polo, the Venetian traveler of the Thirteenth century, recorded that the Tartar and Mongol warriors subsisted on dried milk made by boiling the milk, skimming off the fatty portion which they put into a separate vessel, and setting the remainder in the sun to dry. Each soldier carried ten pounds of this dry skimmed milk, and each day put a half pound of it in a leathern bottle with as much water as was thought necessary. Their motion in riding produced a thin porridge upon which they made their meals.

From that long ago time to mid-Nineteenth century, nothing more is of record concerning dry milk.

In 1855 Grimmade secured a patent from the British government on a process for drying milk. This required the addition of carbonate of soda or potash to the fluid milk, which was then evaporated in open jacketed pans with constant agitation until a dough like consistency was obtained. Cane sugar was added and the moisture was then pressed between rollers into ribbons; after further drying it was pulverized. This process was very slow; the product was of poor quality, high in moisture and generally unsatisfactory.

In the year 1887 malted milk, a combination of whole milk, extract of malted barley, and wheat flour, was commercially produced. Although this product was not dry milk, it led to the development of a suitable process for drying milk.

Palm Tree Leaves Used for Raincoat and Cape

Women of French Indo-China have a use for the palm tree. They strip and overlap its leaves, thus forming an absolutely waterproof raincoat or cape.

The coconut palm tree, most widely known of the 1,100 species, has been called Nature's most generous gift to mankind. The palm, incidentally, gets its name because its leaves resemble an outspread human hand. Fully living up to its name, the coconut palm gives man food, drink and building material, says a writer in the Washington Post.

There is a reason, too, why the shores of so many tropical isles are fringed with palm trees. The palm likes to be near water, so when its nuts ripen and fall they either splash into or roll down to the sea. Ocean currents carry them thousands of miles, waves pile them onto once desolate shores where, in the slightest of soil, they go to seed and, presto, there are soon more palm trees. The nut is insect and water proof. The tree bears for 80 years or more. No wonder it's called a friend of man.

Designed Ohio State Flag

The Ohio state flag was designed by John Eisemann, an architect, for use on the Ohio building at the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo in 1901. It had no legal status then, but the following year the legislature approved the design. The symbolism is somewhat fanciful, but it is thus described by the designer: "The triangle formed by the main lines of the flag represent the hills and valleys, as typified in the state's seal, and the stripes the roads and waterways. The stars, indicating the thirteen capital states of the Union, are grouped about the circle which represents the original Northwest Territory; and that Ohio was the seventeenth state admitted into the Union is shown by adding the four more stars. The whole circle with its red center not only represents the initial letter of Ohio, but is suggestive of its being the Buckeye state."

Luck and the Pessimist

Luck is that subtle something which the personal magnetism of the optimist attracts but which the pessimist repels. It is usually the optimistic type of individual who is regarded as lucky. If we all tried to live in expectancy and optimism, luck would inevitably come to all in proportion to the degree of optimism. Our personal state and environment in this complex world shapes our reactions to good fortune, says a writer in Pearson's London Weekly.

The Art of Forgetting

Relief from many daily worries by the art of forgetting is recommended by many psychologists, the Literary Digest states. By conscious trying to forget, the mind can control the flow of painful pictures and squelch them before they can implant themselves in the storehouse of memory. Some psychologists find it is as important to forget many useless and harmful happenings of life as it is to remember important and pleasant facts.

Location of London

London, the capital of England, the greatest city in the world, lies fifty miles above the mouth of the River Thames, spreading over both its banks. It has an area of 693 square miles and a population of more than 8,500,000. London is really the mother city of the British Empire, and dates back so far that there isn't a recorded time when there wasn't London. The Roman legions were there in A. D. 43.
