Fall Rush One Of Biggest In History Of Plains

Sheriff W. F. Cato Took Own Life Tuesday

Well Known Garza County Peace Officer Despondent Over Reverses

Lynn county friends were greatly shocked Tuesday when they learned that W. F. Cato, former sheriff of Garza county for ten years, had shot himself through the heart that morning, dying instantly.

Sheriff B. L. Parker of this county, intimate friends of Cato hurried to Post immediately after hearing of the tragic event. Mr. Parker was loath to believe that Mr. Cato had intentionally killed himself, but after an investigation by Garza county officers, Justice of the Peace M. L. Morris of Post pronounced it a case of suicide.

Hearing the report of a pistol immediately after Mr. Cato had gone into his bedroom at about 7:30 o'clock Tuesday morning, Mrs. Cato rushed into the room only to find his dead body lying back across the bed on which evidently he had been sitting when the shot was fired, and a 45 caliber single-action pistol lay beside him. Investigation revealed that the bullet had pierced his heart. The pistol used was one that his friend Sheriff B. L. Parker had given him several years ago.

Funeral services were conducted in the Methodist Church in Post at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon by Rev. M. C. Bishop, former pastor of the First Baptist Church of Post, assisted by Rev. Clarence Bounds, the present Methodist pastor. A vast throng of friends, including many peace officers, crowded into the church to pay their tribute of respect and esteem to their fallen friend who had come to his death by his own hand. Sheriff B. L. Parker of this city was one of the pall bearers.

W. F. Cato served as sheriff of Garza county for five consecutive terms. At the July primary election last year, he was defeated in his ambition to serve a sixth term by Jim Power. Several months ago he opened a blacksmith shop in Southland, a business in which he had engaged before being elected sheriff more than 11 years ago, and his business had prospered. Nevertheless, he had been worrying much of late, according to intimate friends, over financial difficulties.

His troubles started on February 7, 1935, when he slew Spencer Stafford, a federal narcotic agent, who

Tahoka Defeats Olton 29 to 12

Tahoka Bulldogs gave a fine exhibition of offensive football in defeating Olton 29 to 12 here last Friday. Every member of the squad saw service and Olton was held scoreless until the fourth quarter.

Tahoka opened her barrage in the first quarter, scoring 15 points, two touchdowns and a forced safety on Olton, in the first few minutes of play. Snowden, Casebeer, Edwards, Walker, and others participated in sensational plays.

Olton outweighed the local boys, but Pettit, who made the two touchdowns for the visitors, was the only constant groundgainer. The Tahoka team showed much improvement over previous games and may give Lamesa a big surprise in the game there tonight.

Report Max Minor Slightly Improved

Max Minor, who seemingly has been so near death the past several days, is apparently slightly improved at last report received before going to press.

Max has been suffering from peritonitis and underwent an operation in a Lubbock hospital last week.

Will Not Cut Old Age Pensions

Assistance for the aged is not to be cut off or reduced after all, at least not for the months of November and December, according to an Associated Press news dispatch from Austin Tuesday.

Recently the Board of Control sent out a statement that unless additional funds were provided by the legislature, assistance for the aged would be reduced if not discontinued altogether in November or December. They cited the fact that a loan made by a Dallas Bank for the benefit of this fund would become due in the sum of $1,626,000 some time this month.

It is explained now that, following the failure of the legislature to provide the additional funds needed, the board of control effected an arrangement with the bank to pay the loan by annual installments. With this arrangement made, funds will be available to continue to pay the pensioners as heretofore.

This news comes as a great relief to all the aged needy, who have little means of support other than that provided by the State.

Rev. Jeff Davis Speaks In City

Rev. Jeff Davis, head of the Texas dry forces with headquarters in Dallas, spoke at the Baptist Church Sunday morning respecting the liquor problem in this state.

Rev. Mr. Davis is remarkably well informed and is a forceful speaker. He was heard by an attentive and appreciative congregation. It would be well if every citizen of Texas could hear discussions similar to this, for the liquor problem is not yet solved by any means.

Saturday A Big Day In Town

Merchants report that last Saturday was one of the best business days the town has had in years.

One merchant stated that they had had nothing to equal it since the fall of 1928. Another said that so many customers crowded into his store that his force were unable to wait on all of them. Some left without being served.

The grocery stores likewise were jammed full, as were many other places of business.

Of course a large percent of the shoppers were Mexican cotton pickers, but many of the resident farmers and their families were also among the number.

Business has also been unusually good during other days of the week. Farmers and merchants are hoping for many more days of fine weather favorable to the harvesting of the cotton crop.

Cleveland Littlepage Is Fair Director

Cleveland Littlepage, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Littlepage of the Midway community, who is vocational agriculture teacher in the Hobbs Rural High School on the line of Scurry and Fisher counties, acted as VA and FFA superintendent in the Scurry County Fair recently held at Snyder, according to the Scurry County Times. Cleveland is a graduate of the Tahoka High School and the Texas Tech.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Brooks are happy over the birth of a six-pound daughter, which event occurred at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in a Lubbock hospital. The little lady has been named Billie Jaunelle. The mother is the former Miss Billie Louise Thompson.

A son was borne to Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Wood at 8:25 o'clock Wednesday night at the West Texas Hospital. He weighed 8 1/2 pounds and bears the name of N. E. Jr. Mother and babe both doing well.

Unemployed Of County Will Be Enumerated

Committee Appointed By Mayor To Assist Government In Gathering Data

Mayor Deen Nowlin announced Wednesday a committee of local citizens to assist in taking of the U. S. government census of unemployed and partly unemployed.

Cards will be distributed to every home on November 16th by the local postmaster, and these must be filled in and returned by Nov. 20. The census, calculated to give a quick and adequate picture of unemployment conditions in the United States will be conducted through the facilities of the Post Office department.

Since this is the busiest times Lynn county has experienced in several years, there are very few people unemployed who want to work, or who are able to work, and the value of such a census in this section is problematical. However, at the request of National Administrator John D. Biggers, Tahoka is cooperating, and Mayor Nowlin has appointed the following committee members to assist.

W. E. Smith, Postmaster.
Business Men: R. W. Fenton Jr., W. S. Anglin.

Labor: W. P. Anderson, Everton, Nevill.

School: W. G. Barrett.

Newspaper: Frank Hill.

Religious Groups: Rev. Ben Hardy, Rev. George A. Dale, Elder R. P. Drennon.

Women's Clubs: Mrs. G. M. Stewart, Mrs. Milt Finch.

Foreign Language Groups: Clarence Gausson.

Red Cross: Tom Garrard.

Veterans: A. M. Cade.

Rotary Club: H. B. McCord, A. D. Seth.

Mrs. Pauline Thompson Walker, who is teaching commercial work in the Ralls high school, spent the week end here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Thompson.

Women Attend Grand Chapter

Mrs. A. M. Cade of Tahoka, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Allen, Mrs. Tom Yandell, Mrs. Cora Harris, and Mrs. Waldo McLaurin, all of O'Donnell, returned Friday night from El Paso, where they attended the Grand Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star, which was in session there the most of the week.

The Lynn county delegation went with two bus loads from Lubbock, who gathered there from over the south plains. Mrs. Cade reports that about 3,500 were registered at the meet, and great programs were rendered. The guests were shown many courtesies by the people of El Paso. Of course they visited Juarez just across the river from the Texas city.

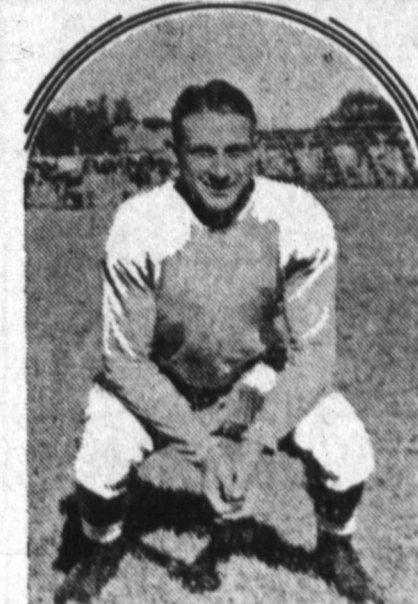

Dale Fills Merkel Baptist Pulpit

Merkel is fishing for one of our Tahoka pastors.

In response to various and sundry urgent invitations, Rev. George A. Dale filled the pulpit of the Merkel Baptist Church last Sunday. And the Merkel Church, we understand, is offering him strong inducements to become its pastor.

He was accompanied to Merkel by Mrs. Dale, and the two visited old-time friends near that city Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. McPherson and children attended a reunion of the Aycock families at the home of Mrs. McPherson's parents in Lubbock. Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Aycock, Sunday. All nine of the children with their families were present. Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Aycock, formerly residents of Tahoka, were among the number.

JAMES MINOR

James Minor Star At Howard Payne

Brownwood, Nov. 4.—James Minor, former Tahoka high school gridiron star, is now high man in the Texas Conference scoring race. Minor, mainstay of the mighty, unstoppped Howard Payne Yellow Jacket offensive, has accounted for more points and yardage than any other man in the entire Texas Conference.

Known to his teammates as T. M. G.-G. (Tahoka's Mighty Galloping Ghost), Minor is one of the most popular students in Howard Payne College. Only a sophomore, he has twice been president of his class since entering college.

Already a triple threat man Minor bids fair to be the outstanding player of the Texas Conference during the remaining two years that he is eligible to play football. The work of Minor and his fellow Jackets have earned for the Howard Payne team the name of the Minnesota of the Texas Conference. In the nine years the Texas Conference has been in existence, the carriers of the Blue and Gold have seven times been champions. Only three times in all the nine years have conference foes beaten Jacket teams.

Minor is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Minor of Tahoka.

Tahoka Plays At Lamesa Tonight

The Tahoka Bulldogs are going up against the strong Lamesa team on the Lamesa gridiron tonight. Many Tahoka fans are expected to go down and root for our boys.

The closing game of the season is to be played at O'Donnell on Armistice Day, Thursday, November 11. This will doubtless be another good game. By all means Tahoka people should be there strong.

This afternoon (Friday) the Brownfield Juniors are coming over to play the Junior Bulldogs. Go out and root for the home kids, folks. They are a promising team.

Mahon In Lubbock This Week End

Colorado, Nov. 3.—Congressman George Mahon has announced that he will be in Lubbock Friday and Saturday, November 5 and 6, for the purpose of conferring with anyone wishing to see him concerning official and legislative matters prior to his return to Washington. He will occupy offices 301 and 302 in the Federal Building.

Mahon expects to leave for Washington about November 10th in order to be present in Washington November 15th when the special session of Congress convenes.

Mexican Woman Was Buried Wednesday

A Mexican woman bearing the name of Harsula Castro, who gave birth to a still born child Wednesday night, died soon thereafter at a cotton pickers camp about twelve miles north of Tahoka.

The two bodies were buried here Thursday afternoon.

Cotton, Cotton Everywhere, And Gins Are Far Behind With Their Work

Important Elections Held On Tuesday

Elections of national importance and nation-wide interest were held in a number of cities and in several states Tuesday.

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, supported by the Republicans, the Communists, one wing of the Socialists, and many New Deal Democrats, won a sweeping victory over the Tammany candidate, Jeremiah T. Mahoney, supported by that organization, both the U. S. Senators from New York, Wagner and Copeland, Governor Herbert H. Lehman and Postmaster General James A. Farley.

Although La Guardia is an independent Republican and Mahoney is a Tammany Democrat, both were avowed supporters of Franklin D. Roosevelt and the New Deal.

In Detroit, the C. I. O. labor organization of John Lewis attempted to capture the city government but failed miserably.

O'Donnell Man Is Injured In Fire

Harvey Lines of O'Donnell sustained a dislocation of the ankle Thursday morning while assisting in the extinguishment of a fire at the Farmer's Cooperative Gin in O'Donnell. The injury occurred when he jumped from the gin platform onto the ground. He is a member of the O'Donnell Volunteer Fire Department. He was taken to a Lubbock Sanitarium for treatment.

The fire did considerable damage to the press of the gin but was extinguished before heavy loss was suffered.

New Home F.F.A. Organizes Band

The officers of the New Home F. F. A. recently attended the Officers' Training School at Ropesville. District officers were elected at this meeting. The district meeting is held every three months. Olin Parris of New Home was elected first vice president.

The chapter has organized a string band. A special meeting was called last week and two of the boys appointed to assist the advisor, Mr. Hall, in conducting the Binga booth at the school carnival Friday night, October 29. Olin Parris and Billy Hancock were those appointed. Also plans were made for the F. F. A. string band to play a few numbers at the school carnival. The music was excellent.

Mr. Hall, the teacher, is making his course a real vocational one. Week before last, he took his classes out and culled a flock of 215 hens. Last week they made several trips and castrated twelve calves and five pigs.

New Citizen Has Old Photographs

H. C. Calahan, up in the seventies, who removed to Tahoka a few months ago from DeQueen, Arkansas, was a visitor in the News office Monday afternoon, making his way to the office with the aid of a walking cane which his father used as far back as fifty years ago and which he believes is at least seventy years old.

Mr. Calahan says that on Sunday, he celebrated his fifty-second year of married life, he and Mrs. Calahan having celebrated their golden wedding anniversary two years ago.

Mr. Calahan is a photographer, and he has followed that occupation for 56 years. He has in his possession many photographs taken many years ago, which he prizes very highly.

It is time to renew that subscription to the Lynn County News.

Cotton! Cotton! Cotton!
Nobody before ever saw anything like it—on the plains.

Field after field, field after field of the snow-white fleece, provided by Nature for the clothing of the human family.

Sunday afternoon we made a hurried swing around the circle just to see the sights—the scenic beauty of the cotton fields that are yielding their marvelous abundance of the fleecy white gold.

In some fields, where the plant is thinner than usual in the row or where the water collected in low places, the stalks are shoulder high and loaded from top to bottom. Half the bolls are yet not open. In other fields, where the plant is high-high, practically all the bolls are open, and the panorama that spreads out before one reminds him of a field of snow.

This trip carried us seven or eight miles west and thence due south to the Wells gin, thence south and east to O'Donnell, thence back through the Joe Bailey, Midway, and South Ward communities. It's the same story with slight variations everywhere.

And in the towns, the sight is almost as marvelous as in the country. Every gin yard crowded with truck loads of cotton, waiting to be ginned. Literally hundreds of bales on the yards in O'Donnell and Tahoka and other places, waiting, waiting, and the gins running day and night. Adjacent to some of the gins, hundreds of bales have been unloaded from trucks onto the ground and loom up like great white snowbanks from a distance.

In addition to this, nearly all the gins, anticipating something of the rush that was to follow, early in the season erected great cotton houses on their premises in which to store cotton that could not be ginned immediately. These houses were all filled long ago.

No, nobody has ever before seen anything like it on these plains—nor anywhere else in the wide world.

Knight Boys In Ripley's Cartoon

The pictures of Winter and Summer Knight of this city appeared in Ripley's "Believe It or Not" column in scores of papers throughout the United States a few days ago, since which time their friends have been congratulating them upon the fine appearance they make in print. The pictures were drawn by the Cartoonist Lowrie Smith of Dallas, better known as Hillbille Lowrie.

Early this week Winter Knight received through the mails a letter from the cartoonist, the only address being a reproduction of the cartoons and their names. The name of their town did not appear anywhere on the envelope, but it found its way straight to Tahoka nevertheless.

Winter also received a communication from Walter Scott of the law firm of Scott & McLean of Fort Worth, who had noted the cartoon. Winter had met both Mr. Scott and the cartoonist, Smith, on previous occasions.

Little Change In S. N. McDaniel

S. N. McDaniel, who was given two blood transfusions in the Marcy Hospital in Slaton within the past week, was brought back to his home here Tuesday morning.

Little change in his condition has been noted.

A baby girl weighing 6 1/3 pounds was born to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stone Tuesday afternoon in the Marcy Hospital in Slaton. The babe has been named Wanda Joyce. Mother and child both doing well.

NO LABOR PEACE YET

A. F. of L. and C. I. O. Reject Each Other's Proposals
... Japs Drive Back Chinese ... Will Not Attend Parley

The news camera man took his life in his hands to secure this excellent photograph of Japanese "mopping up" operations in the Chapel district of Shanghai. "Mopping up" is the military euphemistic term for stamping out whatever life is left after the artillery bombardment has done its work.

Labor Parley Deadlock

LEADERS of the American Federation of Labor and the C. I. O. couldn't get anywhere in their peace conference in Washington. So they adjourned temporarily, and some of them said the parley might not be resumed. George M. Harrison, head of the federation delegation, said that unless the C. I. O. attitude changed there was no prospect of peace.

Both sides had made offers, but these were scornfully rejected by the opponents.

The A. F. of L. proposed that the fate of the C. I. O. affiliates organized since the split be decided at an immediate conference "between representatives of organizations chartered by the A. F. of L. and organizations chartered by the C. I. O. and which may be in conflict with each other, for the purpose of bringing about an adjustment to bring the membership into the A. F. of L. on terms and conditions mutually agreeable."

This clause of the federation proposal brought a denunciation from Philip Murray, chairman of the ten-man C. I. O. peace committee, who asserted that it asked "desertion and betrayal" of these unions.

The C. I. O. proposal was that its unions should return to the federation and that a new autonomous department should be created, to be known as the C. I. O., to have complete and sole jurisdiction over its policies and operations. This plan represented no concessions.

John L. Lewis called Murray and others into a strategy meeting to consider whether a new proposal for a truce should be offered by the C. I. O.

James Dewey, Labor department conciliator, and Senator George L. Berry of Tennessee were busy trying to find a way to peace. The position of President Roosevelt was unknown, but it was believed he would continue his hands-off policy.

Japs Smash Chinese

JAPAN officially declined the invitation to the nine-power treaty conference in Brussels, and her forces went ahead fast in their operations in China. They had been checked by a desperate stand of the Chinese defenders of Shanghai, but launched a new offensive that forced the Chinese to abandon Shanghai, the native section, and fall back to a new line to the west of the international settlement. There they entrenched with their backs to the Soochow creek on the other side of which were the United States Marines. These American troops had orders from Admiral Yarnell to shoot at any planes attacking them or at non-combatants.

The British troops in Shanghai had similar orders, and the international tension was brought nearer to the breaking point when a Japanese tank fired on a British infantry detachment of which Brig. Gen. A. P. D. Telfer-Sollett, British commander in chief, was a member. A few days before a Japanese machine-gunner in a plane had killed a British soldier.

In refusing to send a delegate to Brussels the Japanese government said the conference was inspired by the League of Nations and would "put serious obstacles in the path of the just and proper solution of the conflict."

Japs Mobbed in Frisco

FIVE eminent Japanese citizens, sent out on a good will mission to the world, arrived at San Francisco and were at once besieged on their steamship by a howling mob which struggled with the police for two hours.

The demonstration was sponsored by the district council of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, comprised of seagoing unions affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization. But about a third of the crowd was comprised of Chinese, who streamed out from the city's vast Chinatown to vent their rage at things and persons Japanese.

Help for Stock Market

EVER since the slump in the stock market began the government has been urged to do something about it. Finally the administration yielded to the demands and the federal reserve board of governors reduced margin requirements on stock purchases from 55 to 40 per cent and imposed a 50 per cent margin on short sales. The new requirements went into effect November 1 and are not retroactive.

No official explanation was given for the board's action but it was understood that it was designed to adjust the margin requirements to current stock market conditions.

Imposition of the increased margin requirements on short sales was an innovation from the board's standpoint, a stock exchange rule requiring only 10 point protection on short sales. It was understood that before arriving at its decision the reserve board consulted with the securities and exchange commission.

Many brokers were doubtful that this action would stabilize the market; but the immediate effect was to give stock prices a start upward.

Yardstick for Power

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, in conference with J. D. Ross, administrator of the Bonneville dam project on the Columbia river, established the "yardstick" rate by which the charges of privately owned utilities for electric current are to be judged.

The formula is to pay operating charges, amortize the federal investment in power generation in 40 years and provide a net return of 3 1/2 per cent.

For the present the formula is to apply only to the Bonneville project, but Ross recommended that the same principle be followed with respect to power from the TVA and other government plants.

Miss Roche Quits Treasury

MISS JOSEPHINE ROCHE, first woman to be an assistant secretary of the treasury, has resigned that post and returns to the presidency of the Rocky Mountain Fuel company of Denver. The position will be left unfilled, for the administration hopes she will resume it later. She was appointed by President Roosevelt three years ago and has been in charge of the treasury's public health and other welfare activities.

Steiner to Retire

TWENTY years of public service is enough for Senator Frederick Steiwer of Oregon, Republican. He has announced that he will not seek re-election next year, but will return to the practice of law. Steiwer was the keynoter of the Republican national convention of 1936.

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL

By Carter Field

Washington.—Frank R. McNinch is going to blow away the smoke that has been hovering over the Federal communications commission and put out the fire if there is any. Primarily that is what he was put in there for. Scarcely anything pending on Capitol Hill has worried President Roosevelt more than the Walla White resolution providing for sweeping senate investigation in FCC. Particularly in that this resolution would be handled by the senate interstate commerce committee of which Burton K. Wheeler is chairman. The President correctly interprets Wheeler's attitude as one of active dislike for himself despite Wheeler's approval of many of the New Deal economic and social objectives.

Whatever may be the truth about the "fire," certainly many folks in the industry just assumed that it was there. They gave no open indication of a suspicion that anything as gross as actual passage of money could be effective, but many approved the policy that the distillers allowed, when they offered the jobs their czar first to James A. Fary and then to Forbes Morgan, Mr. Roosevelt's uncle. There were little signs of this, such as the hiring of Charles Michelson by one radio station which wanted its license extended.

Actually, whatever the fact may be, it has been the common assumption in Washington and in the industry that wave lengths were awarded according to the political influence those seeking them were able to bring to bear.

McNinch, although formerly a politician, has shown no evidence of being swayed by politics in any action since coming to Washington. He is in the best beyond question, and punctilious about merit as he sees it. In fact, it is often commented that it is worry about which is the right thing to do that causes his bad spits of nervous indigestion.

Three Lums Less

Just two weeks after taking office McNinch killed three birds with one stone by abolishing the set-up by which the seven-man commission has been divided into three water-tight compartments dealing, respectively, with telegraph, telephone and radio matters, thus neatly removing three juicy political plums from the Washington tree. For when the three divisions cease to function on November 15 there will be no further need, of course, for the services of Robt T. Bartley, A. G. Patterson, or Joseph F. Killen, the directors of the three divisions. Bartley just happens to be a nephew of Representative Sam Rayburn, house majority leader; Patterson is a close friend of ex-Senator Hugo L. Black (who now has a better job), and Killen is an old associate of Postmaster-General James A. Fary and of Edward J. Flynn, Democratic leader in the Bronx in New York City.

To analyze the action justly, it should be explained that the reduction in personnel was a secondary result. It is the genuine acknowledgment of the purge victims have performed adequately the rather superfluous duties of their respective position. It is also admitted that the commission's work will probably be carried on without noticeable lag after they leave. The real objective can be read between the lines of McNinch's official statement: "... Experience has shown that to divide a small commission has divisive effect and tends away from co-operation and mutual understanding; the assignment of such important work (to division) ... has resulted in two members of the commission ... exercising an undesirably large portion of the power and functions of the commission, we denying the other commissions any practical opportunity to participate in decisions. ... Common sense not on a particular divisional basis but a natural reluctance to inquire into the work committed others ... The aggregate wisdom and judgment of seven minds surely greater than any two of the seven."

Makes It Worse

But along comes another government agency and makes the situation still worse—for the small employer. This is the government employment agency. Here is what has happened again and again in the last few months, when despite the alleged slowing down of business there has been a scarcity of skilled mechanics.

Mr. Big Employer needs 100 skilled mechanics of a certain variety. He informs the government employment agency of this need and tells what he is willing to pay. Whereupon the government agency rounds up the men for him, taking them from anywhere from 10 to 30 small competitors of Mr. Big Employer.

Wordout Hard Coal

Most people think of hard coal—anthracite—as rather an expensive luxury and what with oil and gas heating and occasional coal strikes, etc., pretty nearly a dying industry.

So far so interesting that a study been made of the situation in the eastern Pennsylvania, with a view to determining how the use of anthracite can be increased in producing electricity. And this in this of government subsidized water-power, with President Roosevelt's griefs of Bonneville and Granddams so recently on the front page.

The fact is that anthracite has been up for the production of electricity for some years. It is more economical in that little section of the country where the hard coal is mined. They have become rather efficient in using it under boilers in generating plants, too, being able now to produce a kilowatt hour from a pound and a half of low-grade anthracite. It took twice as much back in 1919.

Another strange thing is that the use of anthracite in power production is virtually the only market for hard coal which has not diminished in the last few years. Actually it has increased slightly. It is now running about two million tons a year.

There are points about this situation, which caused this study and inspire optimism among the hard coal miners, which are interesting in connection with the whole power problem.

As to Freight Rates

For example, freight rates. One of the reasons why so many folks are skeptical about the success of the big western power projects is just that. They figure that the manufacturer who goes to Bonneville to get cheap power is going to run into freight rates. Partly on his raw material, but mostly on shipping his product two thousand odd miles to where the consumers are.

It's not a new story. Back in the early '20's lots of farmers went broke on irrigated land in western Montana. They raised potatoes and shipped them to Chicago, considerably more than a thousand miles. Potatoes are heavy—for their value. Maybe the railroads ought not to charge so much. But it's a long haul. So one hears a lot about "intermountain freight rates."

Now the fact is, as the bureau of standards will tell you, that there are more units of heat in a ton of bituminous coal than in a ton of anthracite. And you can buy a ton of bituminous at the mine mouth cheaper than you can buy a ton of anthracite.

But it is cheaper to use anthracite to produce power than bituminous, if the production occurs in anthracite territory. The answer is freight rates.

Whereas right in the anthracite territory there are all the industries a power salesman could ask, and all the consumers for the products of those industries one could desire.

A Sore Spot

Apprentice training is one of the sore spots in the present business management problem, but there is little prospect of any corrective action. There is plenty of lip service for the idea of doing something—of opening the door to employment at the more lucrative trades to more boys and young men—but union opposition plus lethargy seems too strong for the irritated employers who suffer in times of shortage of skilled employees. Especially as the employers have never put up anything remotely resembling a real fight.

In most skilled trades it is more difficult for a youngster to get aboard the bottom rung of a ladder than it is for him to get into a very exclusive Greek letter fraternity at college.

Once the youngster has been "tapped" for apprentice training, it is fairly simple. Of course he has to put in four years' training before he is recognized as a mechanic, palpably absurd in most trades, and absolutely essential in none. But by the same token he does not have to display any special aptitude or mental ability, or physical dexterity to master something in four years which another boy would be able to do in from six months to a year—or he himself for that matter.

This has been the labor union rule. Recognizing the need for more skilled mechanics and for more young men trained so as to take care of the future, the government stepped into the picture and set up the Federal committee for apprentice training. This body has solemnly stood by the union requirements—four years, frills, Greek letter "tapping" to get started, and all.

Makes It Worse

But along comes another government agency and makes the situation still worse—for the small employer. This is the government employment agency. Here is what has happened again and again in the last few months, when despite the alleged slowing down of business there has been a scarcity of skilled mechanics.

Mr. Big Employer needs 100 skilled mechanics of a certain variety. He informs the government employment agency of this need and tells what he is willing to pay. Whereupon the government agency rounds up the men for him, taking them from anywhere from 10 to 30 small competitors of Mr. Big Employer.

Mr. Big Employer is able to pay more. Mr. Little Employer cannot hold them. Mr. Little Employer does without.

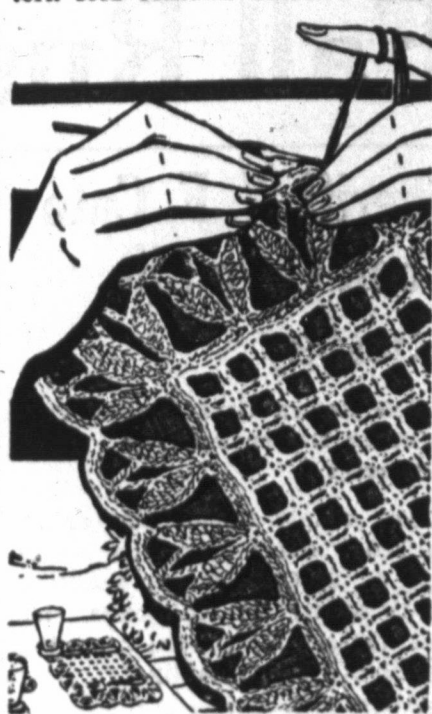

When this situation is pointed out to New Dealers, with the possibility that, if carried on indefinitely, such a course would lead to the gradual elimination of all the little fellows, New Dealers do not seem frightened.

"This practice tends to force wages up to their proper level," they answer. "These little employers you are feeling sorry for are exploiting their workers. They should meet the prevailing wage scale. This would boost the buying power of their communities, and help general prosperity."

'Tis Said Arithmetic Is a Science of Truth

"Figures can't lie," said the professor earnestly. "For instance, if one can build a house in twelve days, twelve men can build it in one."

"Yes," interrupted a quick-brained student. "Then 288 will build it in one hour; 17,280 in one minute, and 1,036,800 in one second. And I don't believe they could lay one brick in that time."

While the professor was still gasping, the smart one went on: "Again, if one ship can cross the Atlantic in six days, six ships can cross it in one day. I don't believe that either; so where's the truth in arithmetic?"

THE REASON HEADACHES ARE RELIEVED SO FAST

THE REASON BAYER ASPIRIN WORKS SO FAST
Drop a Bayer Aspirin tablet into a tumbler of water.
By the time it hits the bottom of the glass it is disintegrating.
This speed of disintegration enables genuine BAYER Aspirin tablets to start "taking hold" of headache and other pain a few minutes after taking.

All people who suffer occasionally from headaches ought to know this way to quick relief.

At the first sign of such pain, take two Bayer Aspirin tablets with a half glass of water. Sometimes if the pain is more severe, another dose is necessary later, according to directions.

If headaches keep coming back we advise you to see your own physician. He will look for the cause in order to correct it.

The price now is only 15¢ for twelve tablets or two full dozen for 25 cents—virtually, only a cent apiece.

CHAPTER I

Joyce sat on a leather puff beside her small-paned window looking out and down at the turning maple leaves. She was nineteen—tomorrow she would be twenty. Nobody living knew it but herself—nobody. She had lied about her true birthday since she was eight and owing to a single overwhelming catastrophe it had been easy enough to confuse her father. Twelve years—twelve years in Elsinboro, six of them without him, terribly alone with her stepmother. Yes, you could be alone with somebody else—far lonelier than if you were by yourself. She was alive—tremendously alive inside. That was the trouble; it had to stay inside. She palpitated with dreams of what might be—the secret dreams of a young girl who longs to believe in life as something warm, something you can hold in your arms. But when she looked outside herself she stared at a wall.

Elsinboro has its counterpart in Olean or Elmira but not in Wilkes-Barre, Scranton or Pottsville. Forty thousand strong, it has known no overpowering foreign infiltration and presents a cross-section of the American scene, old style, from a miniature Tammany to an elite who read French, talk liberalism and discriminate between one dollar and another. There are plenty of dollars, gathered by adventurous sons from the four corners of the earth, but there were no fabulous fortunes until Bolivar Smith got an idea 15 years ago. Six roughnecks believed in it and became multi-millionaires almost overnight. They took over the section now known as Platinum Hill and built their incongruous chateaux in a huge circle.

But Joyce Sewell was not of them; in fact she had no part or parcel of Elsinboro, new or old. She was pure North Shore, descended from generations of the Sewells who christened more clipper ships when the American merchant marine overtopped the fleets of the world than any other tribe. Her presence in the town was an accident—one of those tragic accidents that leave their mark for the whole of life. The scene—so far away, so long ago—lived in her eyes, shut or open. She would listen too, her ears trembling lest they hear. But memory is silent, part of its terror lies in silence.

No crash of guns reached her now, only the remembered flash. No thud of bullets on stone, wood and flesh, no choking scream—only the indelible, the unforgettable scene. Her mother unspeakably murdered. A pause—the eternal pause that had lasted but a second. Her father snatching her up under one arm, a petaca under the other, to rush along interminable corridors, followed by shots and the derisive jeers of the marauders who believed he could not possibly escape. Stairs—wooden stairs, stone steps, the secret door and the garden, black beneath towering cypress and spreading ash. Hurry! Hurry! The postern, unlocked, then locked. The starlit open night, immersion in the icy lake, a dugout and finally refuge in a humble peon hut. No—not finally. Followed days in a panner on the back of a mule, hours in a crowded train, a week on a refugee ship bound for New Orleans and on that ship Mrs. Irma Thorne, of Elsinboro, New York.

Irma Thorne, then three years a widow, believed it was her mission to do people good whether they liked it or not. She was not a refugee but a returning traveler with a well-filled pocketbook. She had soft, bacco-colored eyes, but there the softness ended; though the truth would have surprised and wounded her, her chin, her stocky body, her will and her conscience were as tough as rawhide. The mere sight of Cutler Sewell's lackluster eyes, gone dead in his head, staring at his little daughter but eternally seeing something else, was a supreme challenge to her peculiar aptitude for service and abnegation. She took charge. She gave Joyce her first bath in ten days and made her a frock out of her own best skirt. She rushed father and daughter to her home in Elsinboro. She was undoubtedly a good woman and by every rule in the copybook Joyce should have loved her. Gently admonished by her father she tried pitifully to do so and failed. It was no use. She was too young to think things out; all she knew was that a barrier of ice stood between her heart and her benefactress.

"Daddy, let's go away."
"We can't, Joyce; not just now. At present I haven't a cent."
"Please, papacito. I don't like her."

"You mustn't say that. She's a good woman—a very good woman."
"I know," quavered Joyce, bewildered by her own detestation but face to face with a fact. "Oh, please, papacito, please!"

He compromised, yielding to the endearing pet diminutive that had never yet failed her. On the excuse she ought to keep up her Spanish as a possible asset for the future he took her into his study for an hour every afternoon. That hour had been sacred, proof against any form of interruption from the day when a knock on the door had thrown Joyce into a paroxysm of screams followed by prolonged sobbing. Yet she was no cry-baby; that one convulsive protest was her last, but it had been enough. She and her father talked Spanish in peace, not always for the full hour. Sometimes, quite content to be at his side, she watched him write letters—long painstaking letters—always to one of two addresses.

When the answers came he filed them away, ever more and more sadly, in the petaca. It was a funny little trunk covered with rawhide stretched on the frame while still wet. The hair was mostly worn off but there were still arabesques of brass-headed tacks to which he had added a card bearing the following signed inscription: "Upon my death this box and contents become the property of Joyce Sewell, my daughter and sole heir." With each addition to the dossier he weakened, became less the man of property and more the chastened sacrificial goat. The day came when Irma Thorne married what was left of him for appearances' sake and for his and for Joyce's—not for her own. Perhaps he knew the surrender would kill him, but at least his orphaned child would have a roof over her head. She was sixteen when he died.

"What's the Matter With Joyce?"

Helm Blackadder was a rock of a man, forty-nine and virile, with bushy brows, steely eyes and crisp gray hair. He was a native son, a product of Elsinboro so interwoven in the town's pattern it had never occurred to him to consider any other place as a base. Yet in his capacity as an excellent engineer and a daring promoter he had wandered in South Africa, combed Korea and lived in Chile with varying degrees of profit. In the intervals he had known Irma Bostwick, Irma Thorne and finally Irma Sewell. Part of him frankly admired part of her; she had a bulldog quality and so had he. Now she had sent for him and as he entered her very comfortable living room he wondered why.

"Well, Irma, what's on your mind?"

"It's Joyce, Helm; but do sit down. Take that big chair. It looks as if it had been made for you."

"What's the matter with Joyce?"

"Mrs. Sewell frowned and then substituted a look of patient resignation. "You know all I've done for her. Don't think I mean I begrudge it since it was my duty and there's no greater satisfaction in life than seeing one's duty and doing it. But can you believe in spite of everything she actually dislikes me? She does, though; I think she always has." She waited, but since Blackadder refrained from comment she continued. "But that's not the worst of it; she's harming herself, deliberately destroying her great chance."

"How?" he asked bluntly.

"Oh, all this extra-curriculum studying she's been doing. She's kept up her Spanish so you'd think she could teach it anywhere but now she wants to take a business course."

"Secretarial?"

"No; she doesn't give it any fancy name—just plain stenography and typing."

"What's wrong with that?" demanded Blackadder. "It's the way several of the highest paid women in the world got their start and I can name half a dozen cases where it's been a royal road to marriage. So I don't see how it could hurt Joyce."

"You don't?" said Mrs. Sewell. She edged forward on her chair.

"Listen, Helm; I wouldn't tell this to anybody but you. Howard Sempter, Emil Schaaf and Michael Kirkpatrick have all proposed to her over and over again."

"Half of Platinum Hill!" said Blackadder, scowling. "Well, she's no business woman and never will be."

"Why? Why do you say that?"

"Because if she were she'd marry them all, one after the other, and retire."

"Oh!" gasped Mrs. Sewell, truly shocked.

"Which one of the three do you think she'd find it easiest to fall for and to handle?"

"That's what I wanted to ask you. It's got to be one pretty soon or none."

"Why? What's the hurry?"

"Can't you think it out for yourself? If Platinum Hill goes after a girl with no money it's largely because she isn't a stenographer."

Blackadder's scowl deepened. "I hate to agree with you but I guess you're right. It's a shame one town should be saddled with three of that brand of snob, but if she's so attractive, what about a boy or two of the good old stock? Aren't any of them hanging around?"

"They would if they could afford it, but they know they can't. The nice boys she knows are all in college with years to go before they'll begin looking for a job. They're too young. I have enough income to manage on and wait, but I know Joyce—she won't stay with me much longer and she hasn't a penny."

First the marquis demanded that his body be embalmed. That was simple enough and the undertakers had done so before the will was unsealed.

Then the marquis demanded that a small house be constructed on the shore of the Mediterranean, placed on a high point, with the walls of glass facing toward the sea. The body should be placed in this room with a radio set and family portraits to keep him company.

Authorities decided that the marquis must have liked the sea. They constructed the little house at the little port of Carro and equipped it with a special radio set which gives signals to passing ships to avoid the dangerous rocks that endangered the coast at this point.

The lifeboat at the Rogues de Carro was named after the marquis.

But the final request was too much for officials, for the marquis asked that his body be placed seated in the room from where it could look out on the angry sea. Perhaps the men who executed this will were suspicious and feared the baleful effects of the dead man's eyes.

Anyway, the marquis' body reclines now, with only a glass window in the coffin above his face. Seamen in the tiny port are thankful for the marquis' gift to them, but they feel better knowing he is asleep and not sitting watching them.

"What about her father? I remember hearing he owned one of the show places in Mexico. Do you know what that means? A hacienda that doesn't run over 20,000 acres would be at the foot of the class."

"He lost it—everything he had. He wasn't even compensated for the murder of his wife though his lawyer assured him he would be. Cutler used to speak of it as blood money and wouldn't have thought of taking it except for Joyce. And it's she that matters now. She's got to be saved from herself and you must help."

"I? Why me?"

"Because you're real, Helm, and the only man I know well enough to turn to. There's something in her frightens me. Sometimes she's a burning bush and the next instant she's quicksilver. Please, Helm. This child was put in my charge by a direct act of God. Whether she loves me or not it's my duty to guide her life along the lines of common sense. Which do you want her to do—go around looking for a job at $15 a week or be the first to bring a little culture to Platinum Hill? Which gives her the best chance for a full life?"

"A missionary, eh?" said Blackadder, his lips quivering oddly. He lifted his heavy shoulders and let them fall. "Well, Mike oughtn't to be so bad. I remember his father as a ditch-gang foreman with a laugh and plenty of punch besides."

Mrs. Sewell sighed resignedly. "I would have chosen Howard Sempter, but trust a man to pick a man is a good rule though we women seldom follow it. So it's to be Mrs. Michael—not Mike—Kirkpatrick. Anyway it sounds a lot better than Mrs. Schaaf." At that moment there was a sound of somebody entering the hall. "Joyce, is that you?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"She's never once called me mother," whispered Mrs. Sewell to Blackadder, a hurt and bewildered look in her liquid brown eyes. Then she raised her voice. "Come here, dear; we want to talk to you."

Blackadder disliked being rushed and felt he was being drafted without his consent, but immediately Joyce entered he was conscious of an odd reaction as though all his gears had gone suddenly into reverse. The girl was more than handsome. There was ardor in her bearing, her eyes and her half-parted lips that not only aroused his combative nature, but promptly convinced him that Irma was right—the sooner this potential dynamo was married off, the better for all concerned.

She nodded to him and turned to her stepmother. "Well?"

"Oh, do sit down, Joyce. Can't you sit down and talk reasonably for once in your life?"

French Nobleman's Will Provided Body Be Seated in Room to Face Angry Sea

The Marquis d'Urre d'Aubals was a curious man when alive, but when his will was read after his death the court was astounded. It was surprising enough for a marquis to leave $80,000 to the French postoffice, but the conditions accompanying this gift were a little too much for the court, writes a Paris United Press correspondent.

First the marquis demanded that his body be embalmed. That was simple enough and the undertakers had done so before the will was unsealed.

Then the marquis demanded that a small house be constructed on the shore of the Mediterranean, placed on a high point, with the walls of glass facing toward the sea. The body should be placed in this room with a radio set and family portraits to keep him company.

Interpreters of the Mode

SO LONG as you Sew-Your-Own, Milady, just so long will Yours Truly strive to interpret the mode for you. Today the trio brings you frocks for every size (from four years to size 52) for almost any occasion. Each has been designed to bring you the ultimate in style in its particular class and all claim a new high in simplicity and comfort.

Ultra-Smart Dress. It's nice to know you're easy to look at even if the occasion is only another breakfast session. That's why the ultra-smart dress at the left is so handy to have. Note the clever detail all the way through even to the inverted skirt pleat. See how beautifully the sleeves set-in—you just know at a glance how simple it is to put together. Cotton, of course, is the material.

Typical of Youth. The surest way to be a big little-body is to wear dresses that are as expertly planned as the grown-ups'. The little number above, center, has the smart styling of a sub-deb's frock. It is typical of youth's freshness and activity, and is one model that gets little girls' complete endorsement. It is the number one dress for the number one sweetheart in anybody's family.

An Orchid to You. Do you think of a charming sorority tea with lots of atmosphere and plenty of style when you look at the handsome new two-piece above, right? Would you like it made in one color and material, or, perhaps with a topper in gold lame or satin combined with a skirt of a rich dull fabric? Why not make it yourself to suit your own fancy and step into a swell little world of glamour crowded with fans and fun and festivity?

The Patterns. Pattern 1401 is designed for sizes 36 to 52. Size 38 requires 4½ yards of 35-inch material.

Pattern 1366 is designed for sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 8 requires 2½ yards of 39-inch material, plus 1¼ yards of machine-made pleating to trim, as pictured.

Pattern 1396 is designed for sizes 32 to 44. Size 34 requires 1½ yards of 39-inch material for the blouse, 1½ yards of 54-inch material for the skirt.

Home Heating Hints By John Barclay Heating Expert

IT'S really no trick to build a good furnace fire quickly and easily.

Leave a layer of ashes about two inches deep spread on the grates. Spread about two inches of coal over this layer of ashes. Over the coal, place a generous amount of kindling—newspapers and light, dry wood.

The turn damper in the smoke pipe and the ashpit damper should be open wide. If the ashpit damper on your furnace is in back, open it and also the ashpit door in front. This assures maximum draft and quick ignition.

When the kindling is burning well, add fresh coal gradually. In this way you get a deep fire in little time—the kindling burning the coal beneath it, and the fire, in turn, igniting the coal above it. From time to time, add additional fuel until you have a solid, deep fire. When this is done, check your dampers and close the ashpit door.

A HARD WINTER FOR THE OLD FOLKS

It seems to be another case of the pot calling the kettle black.

The House lays the blame on the Senate and the Senate lays the blame on the House.

Governor Allred had submitted only one matter for their consideration—that of providing revenue to wipe out the deficit and furnish funds for the social security program authorized by a vote of the people.

They were in session thirty days and provided not one cent of additional revenue.

The House passed a bill which, it is estimated, would have brought in $5,000,000 annually.

The Senate passed a substitute measure which, it is said would have brought in three or four million.

Then the matter had to go to a free conference committee.

But the two houses could not agree. And so, the special session came to a close with nothing done. Now each house is snarling and calling the other names.

As far as we can tell, both are to blame.

In the first place, politicians and demagogues in the House wrote a provision into the tax bill forbidding the pension board to ask any questions of applicants for old age assistance concerning the financial ability of the children of such applicants to provide all their needs. In other words, they sought to make the parents of millionaires eligible for pensions just the same as the parents of the poor. And it is estimated that this provision would have added at least 30,000 additional names to the pension rolls, which would have required about three million dollars additional funds annually to pay. This would have left only 2 million dollars of the 5 million provided in the bill, to take care of the blind and the underprivileged children. There would have been nothing left to apply on the deficit.

The Senate eliminated this pension steal provision in the House bill, but the House refused to yield. To this extent we think the Senate was right and the House was wrong. But the Senate is not blameless either.

There are a number of able lawyers in the Senate who are there for no other purpose, apparently, than to look out after the welfare of the particular interests which they represent—Oil Sulphur, Utilities, Liquor, etc. These Senators wanted no tax bill at all. They fought tooth and nail to prevent the passage on any bill that would materially increase the taxes on the interests which they represent. They were gleeful when the tax bill failed. They insisted on cutting down the appropriations which had been made in the regular session of the legislature and introduced a bill to that effect, although the governor had not submitted such matter for their consideration. Then, when the tax bill came to them from the House, they employed all kinds of dilatory tactics to prevent the passage of any bill at all. And the House played into their hands when it insisted on the pension-steal provision remaining in the bill, which the Senate had eliminated.

It really looks as if we very much need a unicameral legislature, each member to be paid an adequate salary and to be prohibited from taking any other employment while representing the people.

How to get sufficient money with which to continue payments to the aged needy is now a problem for the governor, the pension board, and the board of control to work out.

It looks like a hard winter for our needy old people.

"WHAT'S THE CONSTITUTION BETWEEN FRIENDS"

This matter of flouting the constitution seems to be developing into a regular fad. Everybody, it seems, is trying to circumvent the fundamental law of either our state or the nation.

Just now it is our state constitution that is being ruthlessly violated or evaded, and it is our own governor who is doing the job.

We regret this, for Jimmie has been eminently right so nearly all the time that we hate to spank him. We believe, however, that it is a serious matter for us when the people and the leaders of the people come to regard lightly the fundamental law of our land.

We are referring to the appointment of Harry N. Graves of Georgetown as associate justice of the court of criminal appeals to fill the vacancy created by the death of Justice O. S. Lattimore.

We have no criticism of Mr. Graves' character or ability. We understand that he is a fine Christian gentleman and an able lawyer. He is probably well qualified to fill the position to which he has been appointed.

But Article 3, section 18, of our constitution contains the following provision: "No senator or representative shall, during the term for which he may be elected, be eligible to any civil office of profit under this state, which shall have been created, or the emoluments of which may have been increased, during such term."

Mr. Graves was serving his fifth term as a member of the House of Representatives, having been elected for the present term in November of last year.

During this term, the legislature increased the salary of justices of the court of criminal appeals from $6,500 to $8,000 per year.

Following the death of Justice Lattimore one day last week, Mr. Graves resigned his position as a member of the House and almost immediately thereafter was appointed by Governor Allred to the court position made vacant by Justice Lattimore's death.

Now the hair-splitters will tell us that this was not a violation of the constitution for the reason that Graves had already resigned as a member of the House and was not a representative in the legislature at the time he was appointed to the higher position.

But the plain intent of this constitutional provision was to prevent just such appointments as this.

If the highly technical hair-splitting construction just mentioned is to be placed on this provision of the constitution, then the whole intent and purpose of the provision is defeated and nullified.

What was the purpose of the provision?

Obviously, it was to prevent a legislator from profiting personally by his own act. It was to prevent legislators from creating lucrative offices with a view to being appointed thereto themselves, and to prevent them from increasing the emoluments of an office with a view to being appointed thereto and reaping the pecuniary benefits themselves.

Graves was a member of the legislature that increased the emoluments of the judicial position to which he was later appointed at the same term. Obviously, he resigned in order to be appointed to the position on the court. To hold that this can be done constitutionally is to kill the essence and spirit of this constitutional provision if not its very letter.

The Governor doubtless was intent only on making a good and at the same time a diplomatic appointment. He probably did this, but in doing so, it seems to us, he ravished the constitution.

In our opinion, we should scrupulously respect and observe our constitution or tear it up and throw it into the gutter.

NO TIME FOR JUBILATION IN TEXAS

The News can see no cause for jubilation in Texas over the announcement this week of the U. S. Department of Agriculture of a two million acre reduction in cotton acreage for 1938.

Every year for the past five, foreign countries have matched every acre taken out of cotton production in America, and more, until today we face a vanishing world market and demand for our cotton. A government policy which allows California and Arizona to increase cotton acreage while demanding heavy reductions in Texas and the South, and does nothing about a tariff which loses us our cotton exports in increasing ratio is a menace to the future of Texas and the South.

If we were editing a foreign newspaper where cotton is being produced in growing volume every year, we would print with great jubilation the nearly ten percent additional cotton acreage cut in the United States. It would be big prosperity news. Here in Texas it is the reverse.

On one celebrated occasion a football player created a national sensation by running the wrong way with the ball, unconsciously aiding his opponents. A two million acre reduction on top of an accumulated cut over the past few years is like that. We are advancing the ball—the wrong way.—Clarendon News.

Differences in color, language, and advancement in knowledge have erected barriers between the white-skinned people of the United States and the brown-skinned people of Mexico that seem almost insuperable. We are in the habit of looking down upon the Mexican as inferior in intellect, inferior in moral standards, and inferior in nearly every respect to ourselves. But that they have the same emotions, the same impulses, the same human nature, and possibly the same capabilities as ourselves was brought home to many who heard a few Mexicans talk and sing in a religious service at the Baptist Church here Sunday night. What Mexico needs above all things is an open spelling book, and an open Bible. An adequate public school system with compulsory attendance, evangelical Christianity and complete religious liberty would soon work wonders in our sister "republic across the Rio Grande. And, by the way, Protestant Christianity never had a more fruitful field in which to labor than is afforded by the hundreds of thousands of Mexicans residing within the borders of Texas today.

Harley Sadler's Tent Theatre Will Show Here Next Wednesday And Thursday

"ROSE OF THE RIO GRANDE" TO PLAY HERE TWO NIGHTS

The amusement loving public of this section will have a real treat in store for it in the way of a good stage production when Harley Sadler's Own Company erects its mammoth tent theatre beautiful for two nights' engagement in Tahoka Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 10-11.

There is an old saying that "variety is the spice of life." Harley Sadler promises just that! They carry a band and orchestra; the band will give a free concert in front of the big tent at 7 p. m. Kennedy Swain and his musical mavericks make their appearance for a fifteen minute program preceding the rise of the curtain on one of the Southwest's most romantic plays, a comedy drama in three acts, "Rose of the Rio Grande," according to the management, which possesses all the qualities of a perfect evening's entertainment, laughter, romance, villainy, pathos, and comedy. Special scenery and electrical effects are provided and a first class production is promised. Between the acts of this romantic comedy drama, high class vaudeville will be given, which will include the Big State Quartet, the Range Riders string band, the Nolls, Donald and Myrtle, high class entertainers, Sputters himself, Denver Crumpler, radio tenor; Billy Mack, eccentric dancer; Gloria Sadler, everybody's sweetheart; and Musical Slim Andrews, the boy from the Ozarks.

According to the management the big tent theatre is positively waterproof so as to be comfortable regardless of weather conditions.

For some twenty years this organization has been playing in Texas territory and is always cordially received by large crowds because their entertainment is represented as being clean, high class and wholesome.

Popular prices will be in order of the day when they appear in Tahoka. General admission prices are only ten cents for children, and twenty-five cents for adults. Several hundred seats are available at these prices. Special high back comfortable folding chairs may be obtained at a small additional charge. The doors open at seven; the curtain rises promptly at eight o'clock.

Adding Machine Paper for sale at the News office.

Boyd Infant Is Buried Here

Little Hazel Carol Mae Boyd, the ten months old infant of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Boyd of Tahoka, died at 10:45 o'clock Wednesday night at the West Texas Hospital in Lubbock, from a complication of diseases. The child had not been well for a number of weeks.

Funeral services were conducted at the Harris Funeral Home Thursday afternoon, with Rev. George A. Dale officiating. Interments was in the Tahoka Cemetery.

Mr. Boyd is employed on the highway here. There are several other children in the family.

The parents and other relatives have the sympathy of many friends in their bereavement.

Miss Phebe Thomas, 20, daughter of Reverend and Mrs. J. C. Thomas, formerly of Lamesa, but now residents of Lenora, Martin county, was instantly killed Wednesday night of last week when struck by a car on the highway fifteen miles north of Stanton. She and others had been to Big Spring, car trouble developed, and she was out assisting to start the car off by pushing it, when she stepped in the path of an approaching car, it is said. Miss Thomas visited friends here a few weeks ago.

ELDER DRENNON RECOUNTS EVENTS OF A BUSY DAY

Old Mr. North Wind reminds us that winter is near. So in life: summer, fall, winter and the grave. But as the new life will come in the vegetable kingdom next spring, so in the Resurrection we will come forth from the grave with a new body. What a hope the Christian has!

Last Lord's Day was a busy day for me. I preached twice at O'Donnell; came back here and united in the holy bonds of matrimony Mr. William Willis Stanley of Odessa and Miss Bonnie Frances McAnear of Slaton. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's sister at 2 P.M. The groom is a merchant at Odessa, where they will reside.

What a serious thing the marriage vow is! I am happy to say that of all the knots I have tied, only one or two have slipped, as far as I know. I try not to tie any slip knots and will not tie any over that have slipped if I know it.

Looking over the paper tonight I see where two men in their prime were successful but suffered a setback and then took their own lives; which leads me to think how we parents should teach our children how to stand reverses as well as success. The life of Joseph is one of the best examples I know of. The pulpit ought to give some teaching along this line, and one good text would be Matthew, Chapter 6, verses 19-21; also Matthew 16: 25-26.

I will fill the pulpit at Gail next Lord's Day.

Yours for more family altars and home Bible study.—R. P. Drennon.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Porterfield of Santa Fe, New Mexico, were here this week visiting relatives at Draw and the G. C. Shaffer family here. The Porterfields formerly resided in Tahoka.

Bow church or St. Mary-le-Bow in Cheapside, London, derives its name from the stone arches, "bows," of its Norman crypt, built about 1090. The church was rebuilt by Sir Christopher Wren about 1680. The crypt probably is a relic of the church built in Norman times and is given in Baedeker as the oldest surviving ecclesiastical structure in the city of London. The church has long had one of the most celebrated bell-peals. John-Dun, mercer, in 1472, gave two tenements to maintain the ringing of Bow bell every night at nine o'clock, to direct travelers on the road to town; and in 1520 William Copland gave a bigger bell for the purpose of "sounding a retreat from work."

The Bow bells are twelve in number, states a writer in the Detroit News, eight of which were recast in Whitechapel in 1762. According to legend, it was the sound of Bow bells which inspired the poor boy, Richard Whittington, in the Fourteenth century, to return to London and become its famous lord mayor.

In the Middle Ages the term "cockney" was applied to a pampered child, a person petted and made effeminate by over indulgence. Later it was applied to city dwellers by country folk who scorned the soft habits of the town-bred. As in English eyes London was "the city," by 1600 the term cockney had become applicable solely to Londoners, and particularly those born within the sound of Bow bells, in the heart of London. As it would be difficult for anyone to claim birth in that region of city offices and warehouses, a cockney is anyone possessed of the London peculiarities of speech, etc.

Woman Saved Crown Jewels

When Cromwell was Lord Protector of England he sent an expedition to Scotland because the Scots had brought Charles II from exile in 1651 and crowned him. Cromwell also wanted the crown jewels. The wife of the pastor of the church at Kinross Parish smuggled them through the British lines and her husband buried them in the walls of his church. They remained hidden until Scotland consented to a parliamentary union with England. One of the provisos of the agreement was the jewels were never to leave the country. The jewels were taken to Edinburgh castle and have been on public view since 1817, which action was taken on orders of King George IV.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Randal and son Joe were at Moulton, LaVaca county, last week end looking after business matters.

The World's Best Tractor at a Price and Terms that should Please Every Farmer!

Save Time, Labor, and Money

If you have never tried it, you have no idea how much you can save by the use of a tractor on your farm.

SOMETIMES YOU CAN ACTUALLY SAVE A CROP

We believe there is no tractor on the market today equal to the FARMALL. Equipped to burn either distillate, kerosene, or gasoline.

Warning, Tractor Owners!

DRAIN YOUR RADIATORS NOW! If you neglect or forget, it may be just too bad. Many tractors are damaged every winter because the owner neglected or forgot to drain the radiator until a hard freeze came.

Punctuality

Punctuality is defined by Webster as the characteristic of keeping the exact time of an appointment or engagement. To be successful in any walk of life this quality is essential. One who is not punctual can never be depended upon, and hence, never is.

A punctual person always makes a lasting impression. This trait whether natural or acquired, not only shows that a person is conscientious but also shows that he had regard for the convenience of others.

During the last four weeks of school routine in T. H. S. there is a record of ninety tardies for approximately two hundred and seventy-five students. This is not a record of which to be proud. The fact is, several pupils are consistently late and this causes the large average of tardies. Students of T. H. S., try to improve this record; it not only causes you to have an imperfect record but it causes a hardship on all concerned. Benjamin Franklin says, "Better to be an hour early than a minute late."

Senior News

The Seniors are very glad to have Lavern Allen back this week after long illness.

The Senior English Classes have been studying the Elizabethan age of English literature in preparing for their future study of Shakespeare's Hamlet. Among the interesting projects they have completed in this work are hand drawn sketches of the Elizabethan theatre of Shakespeare's time, a five hundred word theme on the rise of the English drama, and a vocabulary study of important people, literary devices, and study of words peculiar to that period.

About one half of the forty-one Seniors have paid for their rings, and the Senior play copies are being sent by air mail so work on it may start immediately.

Junior News

The Juniors have decided to carry on a campaign against the defacing of school property. It was agreed that if any Junior were reported for any destructive action, his voting privileges in home room would be forfeited. The Juniors would like to see other rooms join in helping them protect the school building and equipment.

Sports

The Bulldogs play the Lemasa Golden Tornadoes tonight on the Lemasa field. Although slow in getting started, the Bulldogs have been gaining momentum as shown by their victory at Olton's expense to the tune of 29-12. The Bulldogs hope to repeat this win in upsetting the Tornadoes, which would mean their fourth conference victory. In the conference standings to date, Tahoka had won three and lost three games in maintaining a record of fifty per cent.

With deep feeling for their fellow Bulldog the team dedicates the game with the Tornadoes to Max Minor. The fact that Max has not been able to play for sometime makes them realize just what a real fighter he is and just how much they really need him to put across another victory for T. H. S. To show their real esteem and admiration for their fellow classmate and pal, they are going to try to the last degree to win this game for him.

The tennis courts are now in good condition for some valuable practice for the spring contests. About eight or ten students have reported for practice and Mr. Dodson wants all tennis "addicts" to come train.

The Vocational Agriculture Department and F.P.A. has had a very strenuous week, on Sunday afternoon Mr. Hufstader accompanied by Robert Sanders, Bryan Wright, and J. H. Dyer went to Dermont and brought back three pure bred Hereford steers. Here's hoping their projects are a success.

On Tuesday eleven boys and Mr. Hufstader made a trip to the Government Experiment Station at Lubbock. They left first period and came back to school by the seventh period. This trip was very interesting as well as educational.

We are sure that the citizens of Tahoka will be able to rest in peace for another year till next Halloween.

The Spanish Club held its semi-monthly meeting last night at the High School building. Several of the members wore typical Spanish costumes and an interesting program was also enjoyed.

By The Way

Casey: "Where do all the bugs go in the winter?"
Hiram: "Search me."

"Julia: "What shall I do if they ask me to sing?"

Hazel: "Why, sing of course. It'll be their own fault."

Olga F.: Stop biting your nails. It looks bad."

Jerry dean: "Oh, all right."

Olga F.: "Don't you ever file your nails?"

Jerry Jean: "Oh, no, I just throw 'em away."

Moments of Agony

When Mr. Barrett hesitates before calling on you to answer the next question, and you had decided last night to see that show instead of studying Chemistry.

While Mrs. Tunnell watches you take dictation.

While Mr. Dodson decides what "to do with you" because you cut English class yesterday.

Just a Poem

Life is real, life is earnest
We must strive to do our best,
And after departing leave behind us
Notebooks that will help the rest.

Mr. Harris: "This exam will be conducted on the honor system. Please sit three seats apart and in alternate rows."

Named for a Pioneer
Lassen peak, the southernmost in the Cascade range, elevation 10,453 feet, was named after Peter Lassen, a pioneer of the 1850s, says Nature Magazine. It dominates the topography of the area yet is easily accessible to a normally active person. A trail, two and one half miles in length, leads to the top of the mountain.

Building boards made from sugar cane afford protection against termites in the tropics, according to recent tests.

Pledger Coleman accompanied his wife down to the home of her mother in Runnels county last Friday, where she will probably remain through the winter months. Mrs. Coleman has been suffering from asthma so intensely the past few weeks that she hopes to find relief in a lower altitude.

A. W. White Makes His Clothes Last

A. W. White, who resides in Los Angeles, California, but who is here now looking after his farming interests, donned an overcoat Tuesday which he had worn every winter for the past 25 years. This coat was made for him in October, 1912, as the name and date on the inside pocket indicates. It is still a neat and unusually comfortable coat.

But more remarkable than this is a vest made of corduroy material which Mr. White was wearing and which he has been wearing for 34 years, not all the time, of course, but much of the time during the winter months. Mr. White says that the vest originally belonged to an Englishman, who wore it till he got tired of it and discarded it. In fact, he gave it to Mr. White. That was in 1903.

But better still, Mr. White says he is still wearing a set of teeth, upper and lower, that he has been wearing for 72 years. They are still sound and very serviceable. Who can beat it?

Gray's Hand Mashed In Gin Machinery

Some of the fingers on one hand of Charles Gray were crushed Thursday morning when caught in the eccentric of the steam engine at the West Texas Gin No. 1, operated by W. O. Henderson.

He was taken to a sanitarium at Lubbock, where it was found that amputation of the little finger was necessary.

ROY STEPHENS

Roy Stephens On College Squad

Brownwood, Nov. 5.—One of the best of the younger Howard Payne Yellow Jackets, Roy Stephens of Tahoka, will see plenty of service in his remaining three years at Howard Payne. Already a strong reserve and of much use in Jacket games of the year, Stephens will be the ranking tackle on the graduation of Co-captain McDonald this year.

A member of the large traveling squad, Stephens will see service against the powerful Arkansas State Teachers, in the Jackets' only out of state game of the year. The Arkansas Teachers are unbeaten and untied since 1935 and are expected to give the Jackets, leaders of the Texas Conference since the early part of the season, a tough battle.

Roy Stephens is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Stephens of the Midway community, near Tahoka. He not only is active in football, but is a leader in student activities.

NEW LYNN H. D. CLUB HEARS INTERESTING REPORT

The New Lynn home demonstration club met at the home of Mrs. W. W. Rowland Tuesday, with Mrs. J. A. Honea as assistant hostess.

Miss Lillith Boyd, the county home demonstration agent, was present and demonstrated the making and baking of a Japanese fruit cake.

A very interesting report, describing the recent cake show held at Tahoka, was given by Mr. Newman Bartley.

Officers for the next year were elected as follows: Chairman, Mrs. R. W. Barton; vice-chairman, Mrs. Andrew Cooper; secretary, Mrs. Newman Bartley; reporter, Mrs. Doyle Terry; council delegate, Mrs. P. K. Fleming; parliamentarian, Mrs. J. A. Jaynes.

The hostesses served coffee, sandwiches, and cookies to the following: Miss Boyd, Mmes. Andrew Cooper, J. A. Jaynes, E. B. Terry, P. K. Fleming, H. A. Winkler, T. D. Lishman, Newman Bartley, R. W. Barton, John Meeks, Clyde, Holcomb, and Alton Fleming.

Mrs. Jim Crenshaw of Big Spring and her nephew, Graves Barnett, of Whitt wed here Sunday visiting Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Riddle and other relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Knight visited their son, Buddie Knight, and his family in San Angelo a couple of days last week.

China Ware Luxury Until

About Two Centuries Ago

As late as 200 years ago China was a luxury of the wealthy. Indeed many considered it economy to order solid silver table services, which did not break and add the cost of occasional replacements. Everyday tableware was generally of pewter, writes Emerald Bristow in the Richmond Times-Dispatch.

For the poor and for the servants' tables wood, leather or tin served for plates, bowls and drinking mugs. Stoneware and crude crockery had been produced since Tudor times, but was used sparingly because of its being easily broken when provided for servants' use and because it was never a beautiful product of fine workmanship worthy to be brought to the tables of gentlemen of fashion.

Probably the first English dinner table set entirely with a china service was the state dinner given by James I in the early 1600s. All the plates and bowls were imported Chinese porcelain, and the guests were given the plates they had used as souvenirs of the memorable occasion. Oriental porcelain was the only fine china to be had until about a century later and, being imported by slow sailing vessels or tedious lengthy caravans all across Europe, this was too expensive for ordinary use at table even for the wealthy. So plates and bowls from the Orient were kept as prized ornaments, like the Chinese vases and colorful little porcelain figurines.

English and other European potters tried to copy the beautiful Chinese porcelain. They discovered two interesting ceramic fabrics in their tireless experiments that were all doomed to failure until special clays were smuggled from China. These were the salt glaze ware, which was not much admired in its own day but is much sought by collectors.

Dentists Once Trained on Apprenticeship Plan

Prior to the inauguration of formal dental education, practitioners received their training by serving as apprentices to dentists already in practice. This method of instruction continued throughout the world until 1840, writes Harry Bear in the Richmond Times-Dispatch. American dentistry has developed through schools for instruction, scientific societies and journals for the dissemination of its literature.

The founding of the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery in 1840, the first dental school in the world, was the beginning of formal dental education. The Baltimore college, the publication of the American Journal of Dental Science in 1839, and the organization of the American Society of Dental Surgeons in 1840 marked the real beginning of the development of American dentistry. In 1840, a student was required to spend only four months in college to receive the degree of doctor of dental surgery.

The entrance requirements and the content of the dental course varied for many years. In 1884 the curriculum had advanced to a two-year course of five months each. When the University College of Medicine was established in Richmond in 1893 the dental course was three years in length. The admission requirements consisted of a "good English education."

Practitioners have for many years observed that affections in one part of the body manifested symptoms elsewhere. During the past century writers have recorded observations of diseases which may have had their origin in other organs of the body—the teeth, for instance.

"None But Americans on Guard" There is a tradition that during an especially critical period of the Revolution General Washington issued the order, "Put none but Americans on guard tonight." There is no record that such an order was ever issued, but that it might have been issued is suggested by a circular letter which Washington sent to his regimental commanders in 1777 regarding recruits for his bodyguard: "You will therefore send me none but natives." A few months before Thomas Hickey, a pretended deserter from the British army, had tried to poison Washington and had been convicted and hanged. "Put none but Americans on guard" was one of the mottoes of the Know Nothing party which was organized about 1852.

Use of Word "Bonus" The word "bonus" is a Latin adjective meaning good, and is used in England in the sense of gift. In that country it was first applied to a dividend or distribution of a surplus to policy holders of a life insurance company, while in this country, in industrial and commercial circles, it came to mean something extra, or to the good. It was not until after the World war, however, that a gift or additional compensation to soldiers was called a bonus.

Origin of Pointer in Doubt The origin of the pointer is not clear. The theory that it originally came from Spain has been shattered in recent years. It is generally conceded that pointers came into use in the British Isles and on the continent of Europe about the same time. However, to the English goes the credit for developing the English pointer. As for the pointer's lineage, there isn't much doubt that several breeds have helped make the English pointer as we have him.

11,759 Bales Ginned To Date Here

At 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon, the five gins in Tahoka had turned out 11,759 bales this season, a little more than 3,000 bales the past week. They have turned out a little more than 6,000 bales during the past two weeks.

It is believed that the 26 or 27 gins in the county have ginned at least 55,000 bales.

There has been little change in the price of cotton. Seed are now worth $20 per ton.

Canyon Band In Concert Here

The Buffalo Band of West Texas State Teachers College, Canyon, played a concert at the high school here Thursday at 1 o'clock. Charles Strain is the director.

The band is on a concert tour, during which it will attend the Sul Ross-West Texas game at Pecos today.

HOSPITALITY HOUSE, the graceful colonial mansion in which Continental Oil Company kept "open house" during the Texas Centennial and Pan American Exposition has been presented by the Company to the Dallas Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, which hereafter will use it as a meeting place. The presentation ceremonies included an address by Congressman Fritz Lanham from Fort Worth, Texas. Mrs. Cloyd H. Read, Regent of the Chapter accepted the gift, which will be known as Continental D.A.R. House. The former Hospitality House is air-conditioned and contains reception rooms, lounges and office space. More than 900,000 persons visited it during the expositions.

GRADING ON HOSPITAL SPUR TRACK STARTED WEDNESDAY

Looked like the Texas Pacific and Northern Railway had been revived when one of several grading crews of Howard county started building a grade for the spur track to the site of the West Texas State Hospital just northwest of Big Spring. Two additional tractor graders were put on the job Thursday morning and a fourth will be added next Wednesday.

The grading crews are to construct an 18-foot roadbed on the 100 foot right-of-way a distance of one and one-half miles. Fills up to 8 ft. have to be made. It is estimated that 30,000 cubic yards of dirt must be moved and the job will require thirty days of favorable weather.—Big Spring News.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Davis of Plainview are here visiting his mother, Mrs. E. S. Davis, and other relatives.

Mrs. Russell Fleming of Flagstaff, Arizona, is here visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Nevill.

A. A. WALKER RAISES SOME FINE CARROTS

While others may brag on their turnips, A. A. Walker claims to be the champion carrot raiser in Lynn county, and he just about proved it to our satisfaction.

He brought to the News office last Friday five carrots which he had plucked from his garden, weighing 4½ pounds, some of them weighing more than a pound each. Not only were they unusually large but they were also very smooth and gracefully constructed. Also, they were very palatable to such as like that kind of garden-truck.

Nature and A. A. Walker certainly did a nice piece of work with those carrots.

Mrs. Upton, widow of a former Methodist pastor here, now residing in Phoenix, Arizona, was a brief visitor Sunday in the home of Mrs. E. S. Davis. She had been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Ruth Upton Gilliam of Brownfield. Rev. Upton was pastor here around 1920. He died several years ago.

JOHN BROWN'S PAY CHECK

According to an article by Frank R. Kent, current slackening of government borrowing is a deceiving phenomenon. Instead of borrowing directly from the banks or the people through the issuance of bonds, the government has now adopted a policy of spending the funds—supposedly placed in trust with the government, by the people, under the Social Security Act. In other words, the money which is taken out of John Brown's weekly pay check, and which the government has promised to set aside to care for him in old age or when he is unemployed, is promptly being dumped into the public-treasury for general expenses!

The public treasury has simply become a vast and seemingly bottomless grab-bag. Politicians seeking to perpetuate themselves in office gleefully ply the treasury for money, and more money—money that is spent on everything from out-houses to cash registers. For the first 44 days of the current fiscal year the government spent $994,805,183.94; its receipts were $675,375,562.55; deficit, $276,429,621.39.

What will become of John Brown's hard earned savings if such a policy is continued for long? What do you think? —Industrial News Review.

We doubt if anybody ever saw a finer cotton crop at any time in any county in Texas than is being harvested in Lynn county this fall. Undoubtedly a few counties with a larger area, or acreage, have frequently raised more cotton than Lynn county has raised this year, but we doubt if any county in Texas with no larger area than Lynn has ever produced more cotton in a single year. We are sure that no county has produced more per acre, the county over. Dawson, Lubbock, and possibly Terry will be among the big producers. If the weather permits this South Plains cotton crop to be gathered in full this year, this section is going to bring Old Man Texas the surprise of his life.

Nearly all the cities and towns in this part of the state are reporting an unusually large number of drunks being lodged in jail over the week ends. This is due, of course, to the hordes of cotton pickers who have recently migrated to the West. Probably many bootleggers are operating among them; and it is entirely possible that some of the many drug stores that have recently taken out state liquor licenses are entirely too careless in handling the stuff.

POST NEGRO WOMEN ARE CHARGED WITH ROBBERY

Two negro women were charged in county court with aggravated assault upon a white man following their arrest in Slaton early Monday morning by Sheriff Jim Power. The women who gave their names as Ruby Johnson and Inez Lindley, were reported to have fought and robbed a clothing salesman of about $140 in cash about 9 o'clock Sunday night near the rear of the White House hotel.

They were arrested in the negro district of Slaton early Monday morning after an all night search by members of the sheriff's department. One hundred and thirty-four dollars of the money was recovered by the sheriff when he made the arrest. One of the women said she has lived in Post more than a year and the other has lived here about three weeks.—Post Dispatch.

Lee Harms of Paradise, brother-in-law of W. A. Reddell, is here spending some time with the Reddell family, and is temporarily working here.

Mrs. Herman Richards of Lubbock, the former Miss Valerie Jones, visited her brother, Clyde Jones, and family here Sunday.

JAIL FILLED WITH DRUNKS OVER THE WEEK END

Ten persons were booked for drunkenness, two for fighting and four on liquor law violations at the court house Monday, following a busy week end for officers of the sheriff's department.

Liquor raids Friday night and Saturday resulted in lodging charges against four Post people. Besides arresting ten persons for drunkenness and two for aggravated assault, several drug addicts were jailed over the night and ordered to leave immediately following their release.

A number of those jailed were released after paying fines.—Post Dispatch.

A Wide Difference

The difference between perseverance and obstinacy is that one often comes from a strong will and the other from a strong won't. Sport that is sport only for the onlookers, is not sport.

BUT NOW—I JUST ALKALIZE THE EASY PHILLIPS' WAY

The quick way to alkalize is this: Take two teaspoons of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia 30 minutes after eating and drinking. Or, when among others—take two Phillips' Tablets that come in a small flat tin you carry in purse or vest pocket. You do it unnoticed. Relief is almost immediate. "Gas," nausea, acid breath and other offensive symptoms leave. That "stuffed" feeling and pains from "acid indigestion" cease to annoy. You feel great. HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

There May Be Many Reasons for Making Quilted Chair Pads.

IF ALL the reasons for quilted chair pads were lined up in order of their importance the most intangible reason of all might head the list. Yes, it is quite likely that any decorator, amateur or professional would place atmosphere at the top. But then it is also possible that first rating might be given to the reason that the pressure of slats across the backs of chairs is softened by quilted pads. Then, though it might not be mentioned, it is a known fact that worn out cane seats are sometimes replaced with inexpensive composition seats which may be disguised by gay quilted pads.

Chintz, calico or gingham chair pads are in fact one of the simplest and most inexpensive ways of adding color and charm as well as comfort to a room. Such pads are often used on the backs of chairs and not on the seats, and especially for side chairs, the seat pads used without any back covering. In making such small things as these it is quite easy to do the quilting on the machine. Or, if you wish to take the other point of view about it, the work of quilting them by hand would not consume an unreasonable amount of time. There is no doubt that handwork has a certain quaintness that machine work lacks.

The pads shown here are made with one layer of sheet wadding between the two layers of the chintz. The edge bindings and ties are made of bias tape. Cut the three layers of the pad material exactly the size and shape you want them to be when finished. Place the sheet wadding between the two layers of covering material as shown here at A. Either pin or baste in this position, and then quilt, either by hand or by machine, as is shown here at B. Make the ties by stitching the lengthwise edges of the bias tape together, and then tack them to the corners of the pad as at C before it is bound. Now, bind the edges, sewing the ties right in with the binding as shown here at D.

Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book, SEWING. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers and dressing tables; restoring and upholstering chairs, couches; making curtains for every type of room and purpose. Making lampshades, rugs, ottomans and other useful articles for the home. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address, enclosing 25 cents, to Mrs. Spears, 210 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Illinois.

Still Coughing?

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel the germ-laden phlegm. Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained from the very first bottle. Creomulsion is one word—not two, and it has no hyphen in it. Ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

Friendly Talk

BUT after all, the very best thing in good talk and the thing that helps it most is friendship. How it dissolves the barriers that divide us, and loosens all constraint—this feeling that we understand and trust each other, and wish each other heartily well! Everything into which it really comes is good! It transforms letter-writing from a task into a pleasure. It makes music a thousand times more sweet. The people who play and sing not at us, but to us—how delightful it is to listen to them!

Yes, there is a talkability that can express itself even without words. There is an exchange of thought and feeling which is happy alike in speech and in silence. It is quietness pervaded by friendship.—Van Dyke.

When to Add Salt.—Salt will curdle new milk. In preparing porridge, gravies, etc., salt should not be added until the dish is prepared.

For Tight-Fitting Lid.—To remove a tight-fitting lid from a coffee can, wrap a light wire around the can below the lid, insert a stick and twist it up tight.

Cooking Doughnuts.—Doughnuts will crack and brown before they are thoroughly cooked—inside if they contain too much flour or if the fat in which they are fried is not hot enough.

Save Stale Bread Crumbs.—Bread that has become hard and stale can be ground into crumbs, browned in the oven, and used for improving the flavor and appearance of many dishes. Store in an airtight tin.

Uses for Beef Marrow.—Beef marrow is very nutritious. Add it to the suet for meat puddings and forcemeat, and to stews and soups. Mixed with tinned tomato puree, or haricot bean puree, you get excellent mixture for a savory toast.

Tomato Marmalade.—Half cup vinegar, one cup sugar, one quart chopped tomatoes, one teaspoon mixed spices, one teaspoon salt. Cook together until thoroughly dissolved. Pour into shallow pan and cook in slow oven for one and a quarter hours. Turn into sterilized jars and cover with paraffin while hot.

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF

"Escaped Ax-Murderer"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO EVERYBODY:

This adventure yarn just proves, once more, that you don't have to prowling around the African jungles to find thrills. No sir, you don't have to be a big game hunter, either, to run across tough spots where you have to do hair-trigger thinking.

Why, if Jimmy Hagle, who lives in Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, never sees a jungle, well—he will have plenty of adventure to look back upon. Hold on to your chairs, boys and girls.

Jimmy Hagle—it's James Ruthven Hagle now—was twelve years old, back in 1917, when America jumped into the World war. Frances—that's his sister—was eighteen. Both went to the same schoolhouse. Thanksgiving rolled around and school was dismissed at noon the day before, for the holidays.

Jimmy and his schoolmates were leap-frogging home, snowballing and whetting up their Turkey Day appetites.

Siren Meant Convict Had Escaped.

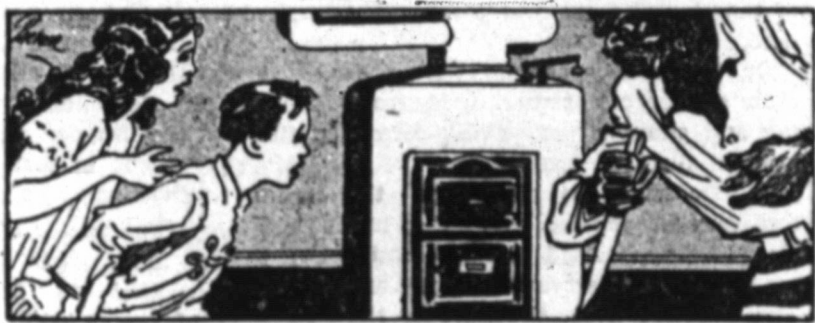

Right then, from over those snow-covered, vacant lots, came a low moan. It sharpened in the crackly air until it became a shriek. That meant just one thing to kids and grown-ups in Fort Leavenworth. There were three prisons around that town and when a siren groaned it meant that one or more convicts had escaped. It meant terror to women at home alone.

Jimmy and the boys were too busy with Thanksgiving plans to worry much about the siren's wail. Escaped convicts wouldn't bother kids. So they all shivered a little, started snowballing again and romped home.

Jimmy neared his house. A strange, black tomcat scurried out of the open coal chute. Jimmy heaved a snowball at it and ran into the kitchen to sniff of Thanksgiving preparation. Mother and Dad were all dressed up. Big affair up in Kansas City they had to attend. Mother would be back bright and early to fix that turkey. Jimmy and Frances had been tentatively planted with the neighbors for the night.

"Nix," said Jimmy. "We'll stay here. Think we're afraid?" Well, they did stay. Alone for the first time, the house seemed dark and sinister. The light snow turned into a Kansas blizzard. Rattled doors and windows and howled around the corners.

Lights out and twelve-year-old Jimmy lay sleepless, listening to noises of the storm. Memory of that walling siren came back. Memory, also, of his father's comment on newspaper articles. Dad had read aloud, before he left, that five convicts—four of them convicted murderers—had escaped. One was a maniac murderer, guilty of a triple slaying—butcher of three persons with a knife and ax.

It Was the Ax-Murderer, Insane—Desperate.

Jimmy tried to think of Thanksgiving. Troubled sleep came at last.

He was being shaken. His body tensed. Then, a voice called, "Buddy, I hear a noise in the basement. What do you suppose it is?"

Jimmy put on a brave air. "It's that cat I saw running out. He must have come back through the coal chute."

Giant Negro With a Knife.

Frances went back to her room. Jimmy's mind turned again to the siren—the escaped murderers.

Ten—fifteen minutes passed. The unmistakable rattle of sliding coal. Clump clump, clump. Footsteps down there, surely. Frances was at his bedside again—trembling. "I can't sleep. You must go down and put that cat out."

Jimmy wasn't sure at all that it was a cat. Cats don't clump, clump over concrete. But he couldn't back down before his older sister.

Both Jimmy and Frances tiptoed down the cellar steps, turning on the lights. Jimmy first opened the door to the food-storage room. In the dim light he saw nothing unusual. Then he threw back the door to the furnace room and entered. He glanced backward to see whether Frances was following him. She was. But behind her, at the door, was a sight that froze the blood of that twelve-year-old lad.

A giant negro—bared teeth and bloodshot eyes—was pressing the door shut with his powerful back. His right hand was on the knob. His left held a long-bladed knife—a butcher knife.

It was the escaped ax murderer—insane—desperate. He was mumbly—gripping the knife convulsively.

Jimmy and Frances screamed in chorus. Jimmy thrust his sister behind him. They retreated toward the wall. A twelve-year-old boy facing an armed maniac who had fought off armed posers of grim men for days—overpowered prison keepers and escaped.

The murderer was weaving stealthily forward, muttering. The knife was bobbing for a thrust. His words were intelligible, now. "They'll never get me. They'll never get me," he repeated.

Jimmy's arms stretched backward to protect his sister. His hands touched something.

Dad's tool bench!

Good Hammer Throw by Jimmy.

The smooth hickory handle of a riveting hammer was in Jimmy's fingers. Instinctively they closed upon it. The convict was still advancing.

Hardly aiming, Jimmy flung the hammer with his good right baseball arm at the leering face less than six feet away.

Blood spurted. The heavy hammer had struck the murderer squarely across the bridge of the nose. He sank to his knees, scrambled for a few dazed seconds—staggered to his feet.

Frances raced for the dark stairway. A black hand seized her flowing nightgown. Jimmy seized her, literally tore her free. She plunged up the stairway. She fell. Jimmy fell across her. Up again. Into the kitchen. The stairs shook with the heavy tread of the killer behind them.

They were crossing the dining room—the front door their goal.

A thud on the floor. The butcher knife, hurled by the convict, quivered in the floor beside Jimmy's foot. Blood spurted high, but brother and sister plunged on.

Frances flung open the door. Out into the blizzard, screams rising over the howl of the storm.

Lights flashed on. Jimmy and Frances fell exhausted upon a neighbor's porch. Police found marks of the struggle, and giant footprints leading from the Hagles' front porch. The convict had disappeared in the blizzard.

A few nights later, the killer prowled again. He was captured after a desperate battle. Today he is serving, in solitary confinement, the remainder of his life sentence in the Kansas State prison.

A Shake-Down Cruise

A shake-down cruise is sort of a pleasure jaunt to foreign shores to acquaint the crew with its duties. It's an old ship-builders' custom. Shake-down voyages of United States navy vessels, however, are preceded by other trials. First is the builder's own trials. Next come the navy's "standardization trials." Aboard this time are some navy observers, and the vessel is tried for speed. Then come necessary readjustments, recruiting of the crew and the shake-down.

Model Mate

After 50 years of observation Arthur Cleveland Brent, of the Smithsonian Institution, reveals that the red-shouldered hawk is the matrimonial model of birdhood. These birds marry very young, never desert their wives, and always live in the homes they stake out, even putting up no-trespassing signs made of fresh sprigs of evergreen. Most amazing of all is the elation with which they decorate the nest with violets when there's a new addition to the family.

Lesson for November 7

CHRISTIAN CHARACTER AND PEACE

LESSON TEXT—Colossians 3:1-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body.—Colossians 3:15.
PRIMARY TOPIC—In His Name.
JUNIOR TOPIC—In His Name.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How May I Have Peace?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Christian Cure for Strife.

Armistice day is but a few days away, a fact which was probably in mind when the title of our lesson was chosen, for while it speaks of "Christian character" it also refers to "peace." But the peace spoken of here is the peace of God which is the result of peace with God and which issues in holy living. The only hope of this world for a real and lasting peace is in the winning of men and women to glad allegiance to the Prince of Peace, our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.

Altogether proper is the close connection in Scripture between the most profound spiritual truth and practical holy living. Whether it be done in a land of enlightenment or in the midst of heathen darkness the teaching of the deep things of God brings forth in the receptive heart an appreciation of God's provision for our redemption, a consciousness and hatred of sin and an appropriation of victory in Christ. All three of these factors emerge in the study of our lesson.

I. "Seek Those Things Which Are Above" (vv. 1-4).

Faith in Christ makes us one with him in his death and in his resurrection. We are therefore to live in resurrection power. Our Lord has entered into heaven, and is there seated at God's right hand. If we are in him, if we have died and arisen with him, we are dead to the things of this world and our one desire is to "seek those things which are above."

The mystic union of the believer with Christ brings us so close to God our Father that we may say with the poet:

"Near, so very near to God,
Nearer I could not be.
For in the person of His Son
I am as near as He."

We are "hid with Christ in God." He is our very life. Note however that this union with Christ expresses itself in a most practical manner for we as Christians are admonished to

II. "Mortify Your Members . . . upon the Earth" (vv. 5-9).

The most spiritual Christian is the one who is most sensitive to sin and most earnest in his purpose that it should be mortified—which means "put to death." We may not temporize—we must not compromise with sin. Put it to death.

The list of things which are to be put away include a number of sins which we recognize at once as utterly inconsistent with a Christian profession. But note also that there are a number of them which are all too common among Christian people—covetousness, anger, wrath, malice, and so forth. Lying and shameful talk are condoned by some (and practiced by many).

III. "Put On the New Man" (vv. 11-17).

Christianity is positive. We put off sin—we put on righteousness. Knowing no lines of racial or creedal distinction we recognize Christ as "all and in all." Then as "God's elect, holy and beloved," we are clothed with the Spirit of Christ. Tenderhearted, kind, lowly, meek, of a forgiving spirit, long-suffering; all these Christlike ways of living should appear in those who are hid with him in God. As the encircling band which holds together these beautiful and precious virtues, we have love, "the bond of perfectness" (v. 14).

These outward manifestations of our oneness with Christ have an inward controlling power—for in our hearts "the peace of Christ" is to "rule." The word means to serve as "umpire," as a referee in times of difficulty. There is also the man's inmost being we also find the "word of Christ" dwelling, really abiding, and not in scarcity but "richly." Small wonder that there is in such a heart a never-ending song which glorifies God's grace and which helps and admonishes others.

Our final verse sums up the life of the Christian, for in whatever he does there is but one motive, one purpose—a willing thankful response to the will of God. He does nothing that he cannot do in the name of the Lord Jesus.

The Thought of God

The thought of the Divine excellence and beauty, how far it is exalted above us and yet how sweetly it shines upon us.

Result of Experience

Experience is a grindstone; and it is lucky for us if we can get brightened by it, and not ground.—W. H. Shaw.

Victory

Victory belongs to the most persevering.—Napoleon.

SHERIFF W. F. CATO TAKES OWN LIFE

was in Post investigating the traffic in narcotics. Cato was tried a few months later in the federal court in Lubbock on a charge of murder. He was acquitted. The evidence showed that he had shot and killed Stafford under a complete misapprehension of the facts. He had been notified by phone, according to the evidence, that a hold-up of a veterinarian's office was being staged, whereupon he got into his car and hurried to the scene. He found a man and a woman sitting in a car in front of the office and as he began to question them Stafford emerged from the building with a pistol in his hand. Each man apparently mistook the mission of the other. Believing that his life was about to be taken, Cato fired, killing his apparent assailant.

Although he was acquitted of the murder, his troubles were not over. For Mrs. Stafford, widow of the slain man, filed suit in the federal court against Cato and his bondsmen for damages. She obtained judgment against him for $10,000 and against his bondsmen for $5,000, who in turn recovered judgment over against him for the same amount. The judgments were still hanging over him, and he had apparently been worrying over them very much in recent months.

Cato was recognized as a good officer, and in spite of his unfortunate trouble with federal officers, he retained the confidence of the people of his county unto the last. Evidently despondent as a result of this string of troubles and the apparent impossibility of surmounting them, he broke under the strain and decided to end it all. Good men will not censure him. They will only sympathize, pity and excuse.

Baptists Attended Workers Meeting

Several Tahoka Baptists attended the Workers Conference of the Brownfield association held in O'Donnell last Tuesday.

They report an excellent program, though the attendance was not as large as usual, attributed, of course, to the extremely busy season.

The discussions of the day centered largely around Sunday School and B. T. U. work.

Those in attendance from Tahoka were: Rev. and Mrs. George A. Dale, and Mmes. Stroud, F. L. Kelly, E. J. Cooper, H. P. Caveness, Jim Burleson, Wiley Fortenberry, P. R. McIntyre, and C. C. Barnes.

Dr. Prohl Is Heard At Rotary Club

A bevy of Junior girls from the Methodist Church, under the direction of Mrs. Irvin Stewart, gave the first number on the program at the Rotary luncheon Thursday of last week. Following an introduction by Patricia Hill, in which she told the story of the Holy Grail, the girls sang "Follow the Gleam," with Mrs. Stewart as piano accompanist.

The program for the day was under the direction of V. F. Jones. W. S. Anglin gave an interesting history of the founding and growth of the electric light and power plant here.

Dr. E. Prohl spoke on the progress of medical science in controlling and stamping out many former virulent diseases, particularly smallpox. He gave the history of the discovery of vaccine and its use. He also emphasized the necessity for the strict observance of quarantine regulations on the part of the public in order to prevent the spread of any quarantinable disease that may break out in the community.

Dr. K. R. Durham directed a drawing contest, each Rotarian being required to draw a picture of the gentleman sitting to his right. The results were some masterful pieces of art. Dr. Durham's problem was what to do with the specimens after the contest had ended. Frank Hill's production was declared to be the winner, Lum Haney being the subject of his sketch.

Rev. Lawrence Hays Goes To San Angelo

Rev. Lawrence Hays, pastor of the First Baptist Church, at Snyder since he left Tahoka nearly four years ago, has accepted the call of the Park Heights Baptist Church, San Angelo. He tendered his resignation to the Snyder Church on Wednesday night of last week, according to the Scurry county Times.

Rev. Hays was pastor of the Baptist Church here about two years, resigning in 1934 to accept the pastorate of the Snyder Church.
