Near 100,000 Bales Ginned In County

Cold Weather Haults gathering. Freeze Did Little Damage To Late Crops.

Cold and unfavorable weather has somewhat retarded the gathering of Lynn county's bumper cotton crop since our report last week but it has had little effect on the ginning, for practically all the gins of the county were far behind when we gathered the last report.

Our figures were gathered this week a day earlier than usual, however, Wednesday morning about ten o'clock.

Up to that time the five gins in Tahoka had ginned 19,697 bales; three at Grassland, 12,411; two at New Home, 5,458; one at Draw, 4,990; one at New Lynn, 3,240; one at Petty, 1,504; total for the thirteen gins, 47,300.

If the other fourteen gins in the county had ginned a like amount, which is a practical certainty, the county had ginned approximately 95,000 bales up to Wednesday morning. In all probability the correct figures are not less than 97,000.

The gins from which we have no reports are: five at O'Donnell, Wilson, 3, Gordon, Wayside, Lakeview, Newmore, Wells, and T-Bar 1 each. There are several thousand bales already picked but yet unginced, which are not included in this report. There are many other thousands of bales in the fields yet un-picked.

The hard frozes last week undoubtedly destroyed most of the immature bolls and damaged some of the mature ones that had not yet opened, but these will reduce the county's production only a few thousand bales.

There seems to be little doubt at this time that Lynn county will lead the state.

F.F.A. Boys Win Free Trip

Twelve of the Tahoka Vocational Agriculture boys entered the contests held by the Cooper High school Tuesday November 22 at Woodrow and as a result four of them won free trips to the Carlsbad Caverns. There were eight events in the day and a Tahoka boy was winner in four of them. Those winning were Bryan Wright, Dairy Cattle; R. L. Bosworth, Dairy Products; Robert Sanders, Heggari; and J. C. Womack, Corn and Wheat.

The free trip is given by B. E. les of Lubbock. Other Schools entering the contests were Lubbock, Slaton, Wilson, Friendship, New Deal, and Cooper. In all about 80 boys entered the contests and local boys made a fine showing.

Those entered from Tahoka were: Poultry, Jack Edwards, Howard Davis, Lester Adams; Grain, Robert Sanders, J. C. Womack, Bryan Wright; Dairy Products, J. H. Dyer, R. L. Bosworth, Willis Edwards; Cotton Classing, Dick Bosworth, Kingston Crouch, James Price; Dairy Cattle, Bryan Wright and Robert Sanders. In the Dairy cattle contest Robert Sanders finished second, so for that contest Tahoka won both first and second.

This is the first contest of the year and the local boys have made a start that will be hard to maintain.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Noble returned Tuesday from a week's visit with relatives at Eufaula, Muskogee, and Oklahoma City in Oklahoma. Mr. Noble says they were kept indoors by disagreeable weather most of the time they were there, and they left in the snow.

Mexican Youth Is Burned To Death

A Mexican boy, 15 years old, was so badly burned in a fire that destroyed a shack in which he was sleeping a few days ago on a farm near Post that he died a few hours later. An older brother barely escaped with his life and then succeeded in dragging the younger boy from the burning building. Officers reported evidences of foul play.

An investigation was made but without results.

Transient Killed In Truck Accident

Tony Falco died in the Lubbock Sanitarium early Monday morning from injuries sustained Sunday afternoon when he was pinned beneath a truck which turned over while rounding a corner at a junction of a lateral road with Highway No. 84 a few miles east of Tahoka.

Falco was transporting a truck load of Negro and Mexican cotton pickers to the Arch Reese place when the accident occurred. Too sharp a turn at the speed he was traveling caused the truck to overturn. He either jumped or was thrown from the machine just as it was about to turn over and it caught him beneath it, crushing the pelvic bones, rupturing his bladder, and causing other injuries.

He was brought to town and then rushed to the sanitarium in the Harris ambulance for treatment, but it was impossible for physicians to save his life.

The body was shipped back to his home at Marlin for burial. He had been here only since the cotton picking season opened.

Toys and Supplies For The Needy

Mrs. W. T. Clinton has been placed in charge of a Government project down at the county sewing rooms which calls for the gathering, mending, making, and distributing toys, clothing, and useful articles of any and all kinds, to the kiddies and to needy people in the county. Next Friday afternoon has been set as the time for the gathering up of articles that people may wish to contribute. County Judge P. W. Goad says that a truck will be sent around to the people's homes, and boy scouts will assist in the work.

Mrs. Clinton requests that everybody hunt out any spare or discarded articles of any kind that they may have, place them in a container, and have them ready when the truck calls. It would be well to place them on the front porch so that they may be readily gathered up.

Old dolls or scraps suitable for making dolls, discarded clothing, toys of all kinds, or any article that can be used in or about a home will be accepted. The only requirement is that the articles contributed be clean. New material may be contributed if desired.

There are twelve women employed down at the sewing room for the purpose of mending or making over such articles.

Everybody is asked to kindly cooperate, for this is a service that will make many children and not a few adults very happy.

Thanksgiving

This is one Thanksgiving occasion, when it seems that every person who believes that there is a Divine Providence who rules in the affairs of men should be extremely grateful.

Every person, whether he profess to be religious or not, must feel at times his utter helplessness and insignificance in the great maelstrom of life. At such a time, either consciously or unconsciously, he turns for help to the great Power that he feels must have created and rules the Universe.

In the presence of great danger or impending death, most of us involuntarily lift our hearts to the Supreme Ruler.

If we involuntarily turn to Him to avert calamities that threaten to overwhelm us, surely we should also turn to Him in gratitude for the blessings that we enjoy.

And this year, surely, we should be thankful.

For the past several years many of our people have been out of regular employment. Many have been on the relief rolls. Many others have been facing desperate business conditions. Everybody has felt the pinch of "hard times".

But this year a marvelous change has been wrought. Copious rains have fallen just at the right time, and the Earth has brought forth her increase. Our fields are white with cotton or a-glow with golden grain. Never before in the history of our county have such crops been produced. All the wheels of industry are a-whir. Men and women are busy everywhere. Some are working day and night, endeavoring to take care of the business that has come their way and to efficiently serve the public.

In such a situation, many of us forget the origin of our prosperity. We forget to be grateful. Some of us, no doubt, feel our own self-sufficiency, and therefore we forget God.

It should not be so. Whatever be our lot or station in life, let us this day turn grateful hearts to Him who has poured out these blessings upon us, who has filled our cups to overflowing, who has prepared this table before us in the presence of our enemies, if enemies we have. Let's trust in Him, and surely goodness and mercy shall follow us all the days of our lives, and we shall dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

Lynn Teachers To Houston Meet

A number of Lynn county teachers left Wednesday for Houston to attend the convention of the State Teachers Association in session there the last half of the week.

Supt. W. G. Barrett and Mrs. Lenore Tunnell are representing the Tahoka schools. Mr. Barrett was accompanied by Mrs. Barrett and the children as far as Waco, where they were to visit relatives while he attends the convention.

O'Donnell is represented at the convention by Superintendent Johnson and two members of his faculty.

Superintendent J. T. Carter and Vocational Agriculture teacher, William Hall of New Home and Superintendent S. G. Antony of Wilson went via Amarillo, from which place they expected to go by rail. Mrs. Carter is visiting relatives there in the meantime.

Both Thursday and Friday are being observed by the schools here as holidays.

New Highway Being Sought

Designation of a new north and south highway through the west plains sections of Texas is being sought.

Representatives of sixteen counties through which the route of the proposed highway passes appeared before the highway commission in Austin last week in support of the application.

No definite answer was given, but it is said that the applicants felt much encouraged by the attentive and sympathetic hearing given.

The highway, if granted, will pass through Dallam, Hartley, Oldham, Deaf Smith, Castro, Lamb, Hockley, Terry, Gaines, Andrews, Ector, and other Southwest Texas counties to the Big Bend country. On the route will lie such towns as Dalhart, Hereford, Littlefield, Levelland, Brownfield, Seagraves, Seminole, and Odessa.

Mrs. J. W. Phillips and daughter, Amalene, of Byrds, Brown county are here visiting in the home of Mrs. R. B. Floyd.

Negro Jailed After Fight

Two transient Negroes out on the W. N. Williams farm near the county line between Wilson and Slaton had a rather violent disagreement Monday afternoon as a result of which one of them is in the Mercy Hospital in Slaton and the other is in the county jail here.

One of the Senegambians undertook to emphasize his arguments with the use of a six-pistol. To make his point effective, he fired a bullet into the other Negro's thigh. The wound is not considered as extremely serious but it was evidently rather painful.

The colored gentleman who wielded the gun is an involuntary boarder of the County, having a nice room up in the steel compartment on the fourth floor of the court house, pending the outcome of the injuries he inflicted in his military operations. Officers here will probably file a complaint for aggravated assault or assault to murder.

Another Big Cotton Tale

When Dr. Callaway told that story about gathering ten bales of cotton a day from one of his farms, he seems to have started something. Irvin Stewart, you remember, informed the Doctor that he had a bunch of hands that gathered eighty bales in three days.

Now comes H. W. Williams of Draw and reports that he had a bunch of hands last week that gathered a bale every 35 minutes, or about 17 bales a day.

There are probably a number of cotton growers in the county who could far surpass them.

When this crop shall have been gathered there should be some production stories also that would be interesting. We hope that our farmers may bring us in a few of the best ones.

The Big Four

The three "L's," Lubbock, Lynn and Lamb counties are joined by Dawson, making up the so-called "big four" in a race to see which will gin the most cotton this season. One of these four is almost certain to lead the state and the entire country for the 1937-'38 season. The County Wide (Littlefield) News.

Cotton Warehouse Is Under Construction

Wyllis Car Agency Opened Here

D. A. Parkhurst announces that he has accepted the agency for the Wyllis car for this county.

He plans to build a display room soon on his premises west of the business section. He will also install a filling station.

Rev. Ben Hardy Remains at Tahoka

Nearly all the Methodist pastors in Lynn county were returned to their charges by Bishop Boaz, who read the appointments at the closing session of the Northwest Texas Conference in Quanah last Sunday night.

Rev. Ben Hardy, as was expected, was returned to Tahoka. He had served here just one year and went to Conference with a most excellent report. An able preacher, a very devout Christian, and a very fine gentleman, he is popular with his congregation and with other people of the town, and no change in this pastorate was expected.

The other pastors in the county must be popular too, for Rev. J. T. Howell was returned to Wilson, Rev. M. R. Pike to O'Donnell, and Rev. J. N. Hester to the Southland-New Lynn charge. Rev. C. F. Carmack of the Draw-Grassland churches retired from the active ministry, and Rev. E. B. Thompson was sent to this charge.

Other appointments of interest to many people of the county are the following: Rev. C. C. Armstrong was sent back to Anson, and Rev. H. C. Smith back to the San Jacinto Heights Church, Amarillo. Rev. R. T. Breedlove also remains at Brownfield and Rev. Clarence Bounds at Post. Rev. J. O. Quattlebaum comes from Canyon to Slaton, and Rev. T. C. Willett is the new pastor at Lamesa. Rev. Tony Dyess will fill the pulpits at Anton and Spade, and Rev. Horace Lindley will be the supply at Whiteface.

Presiding elders for the districts were announced as follows: Abilene, Rev. C. A. Bickley; Amarillo, Rev. J. O. Haymes; Clarendon, Rev. Thomas S. Barcus; Lubbock, Rev. O. P. Clark; Perryton, Rev. T. M. Johnston; Plainview, Rev. E. E. White; Stamford, Rev. E. B. Bowen; Sweetwater, Rev. S. H. Young; Vernon, Rev. Carl C. Wright.

McDaniel Is Home From Hospital

S. N. McDaniel, who has been seriously ill several weeks, was brought back home from a Lubbock hospital Monday much improved. Three blood transfusions were given him last week, and he is now able to sit up part of the time.

His son, Henry McDaniel, who was here last week, has returned to his home at Alpine, Arizona.

Hogs Are Stolen From G. B. Sherrod

Some thief took six hogs from the pen of G. B. Sherrod a few nights ago. Neither the hogs nor the thief have been located.

Ted Clark of the Lakeview community also lost one hog.

Grover Stewart says that a few of his hogs are missing but he does not know that they were stolen.

Permanent Building of 1800 Bale Capacity, To House Government Loan Cotton.

On a block of land lying immediately west of the old cotton yard recently purchased from the Tahoka School Board, The Lynn County Bonded Warehouse Company is constructing a big cotton warehouse in which to store Government loan cotton.

The building is being constructed of heavy frame timbers and corrugated iron, with 10-foot walls, on a concrete foundation. Its dimensions are 60 by 166 feet, and its capacity is approximately 1,800 bales. It is intended as a permanent structure.

The Company is composed of R. W. Fenton, Jr., and Irvin Stewart of Tahoka and W. H. Melton of Lubbock. Mr. Fenton will be the manager, and Marvin Woods will do the weighing. A government cotton classifier will be present at all times to grade and classify the cotton.

Storage and insurance charges will be 25 cents per bale per month. A flat charge of $1.00 will be made for sampling, grading, classing, weighing, tagging, and placing each bale in the warehouse.

When cotton is ordered out by the Commodity Credit Company, there will be no additional handling charges for the farmer to pay.

The farmer can procure his loan through the same person or agency as heretofore. The Warehouse Company does not interfere with this matter in the least. When the farmer has procured his loan and placed his cotton in the warehouse here, he can present his papers to the bank and get his money immediately. There will be no waiting for returns from Dallas or elsewhere.

However, if the farmer prefers to have his samples sent to Dallas for classification, the warehouse company will do that for him without any extra charges.

Mr. Fenton says that the Warehouse Company is here for service, and they expect to give service. If more warehouse space becomes necessary other warehouses will be built.

Farm Meetings To Be Held

A series of district meetings will be held in Lynn County within the next few days for the purpose of electing community committeemen for the 1938 Farm Program, according to V. F. Jones, County Agent.

The county will be divided into five districts, just as it has been the last two years, and each will elect a community committee of three members and an alternate.

The following meeting places and dates have been set: November 26th Wilson; Morgan and Gordon communities at Morgan.

November 29th, West part of O'Donnell community, Wells, New More, T Bar, and Three Lakes communities to meet at Wells school house; East part of O'Donnell Community, Joe Bailey, Midway, Redwine, and Draw communities to meet at Draw school house.

November 30th, East part of Tahoka community, Edith, Southward, New Lynn, Magnolia, and Grassland communities to meet at Edith school house. West part of Tahoka community, Dixie, Petty, West Point, Lakeview, New Home, and Joe Stokes communities to meet at New Home. Each meeting will start at 7:30 p.m. on the above dates and all farmers are urged to go to their respective meeting places for this meeting.

What Irwin S. Cobb Thinks about

The Law's Injustice.
SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—Had it happened in another country, we'd say, "What curious ideas foreigners have of law enforcement."

A footpad with an evil record held up a victim. A bystander saw the crime, identified the thief.

The ruffian was held under indictment. But he could give bond. The spectator was "detained" as a material witness—a gentle way of saying he was locked up, exactly as though he had been the criminal. Well, he was guilty of being poor.

Six months later came the trial. The defendant, having been out all that time on bail, looked hale and hearty. The prosecution's witness was produced under guard, pale and sickly from close confinement. It didn't help his health any when the crook's attorney browbeat him, yelled at him, practically accused him of perjury.

The citizen sued the state for false imprisonment, for loss of wages, for separation from his family, for all he'd suffered. Under the statutes he had no standing. They threw his case out.

Meanwhile, the convicted crook had been released by the parole board and was free as a bird.

Aquatic Novelties.
INTERESTING discoveries were made in Hawaiian waters by government ichthyologists. For fear the similarity of sound may lead to wrong impressions, let me state that this department has nothing to do with Secretary Ickes, although, since ichthyology pertains to fish, Mrs. Secretary Perkins might possibly have a contrary view on this point. Because they do say there are moments in the cabinet when all is not sweetness and accord.

However, the point is that Uncle Sam's piscatorial sharps dredged up a fish that is most delectable for six months of the year, but poisonous the other six months. So at least they've found a creature emblematic of the California climate.

Let this be regarded around here as treason, I will state that I'm as loyal a native steppson as any that ever came out of Iowa, having been here long enough now to join in passing resolutions endorsing the scenery and at intervals uttering three loud ringing cheers for the sunsets.

Also let envious Florida refrain from gloating. To typify Florida's climate that fish would be good only four months of the year and powerfully hard to put up with the rest of the time.

Lecturing Adventures.
IN ALABAMA is a sect which forbids its converts to laugh or even smile. Now I know who it was bought out the house when I delivered a humorous lecture down there.

The other day a chap asked me why I didn't go back on the lecture platform. I told him I'd appeared in practically ever sizable town in America, and though it was years ago and probably popular indignation had abated now, still I wasn't taking any chances—I was waiting for some new towns to be built.

Once I tried the experiment of slipping around to the front door to hear what the crowd said, coming out. That was the night I attempted suicide by gas, but was saved when someone, passing through the hotel corridor, smelled something that smelled even worse than the hotel smelled.

A lecturer's lot is not a happy one. But usually it's the audience that suffers most.

Eating Oysters.
THERE'S a brand-new movement called eat-oysters-in-any-month-you-please movement, or, unless you're working on space rates, it may be called E. O. I. A. M. Y. P. M., for short. Its sponsor says the prejudice against eating oysters in months having an "r" in them is a fallacy dating back 2,000 years when, between hiccoughs, a Roman senator said: "Oysters should be eaten only in certain seasons."

So it appears we've been penalizing ourselves ever since then for the indigestion of a Roman senator, although, so far as eating the California oyster is concerned—he runs around forty to the dozen—I personally could refrain for the whole year without any undue longings. The California oyster looks something like a brass overall button suffering from vertigris.

Still, maybe it's all for the best. Because during May, June, July and August is when the oyster does practically all his courting. There's little enough romance left in the world—and anyhow, who am I to come between an oyster and his love-life? He doesn't seem to have any too much fun the rest of the time.

CHINESE QUIT NANKING

Chiang Will Lead His Armies Against the Invaders... Congress Is Expected to Enact Tax Law Revision

Looking as if he had just bitten into a sour, very sour, pickle, Norman H. Davis, chief of the American delegation to the nine-power conference in Brussels, is pictured chatting with British foreign minister Anthony Eden (left) and French foreign minister Yvon Delbos (right).

Chinese Flee From Capital

NANKING, capital of China, was abandoned as the seat of the government because of the rapid advances westward of the Japanese forces. Officials were being scattered in several cities, the central point being Hankow, on the Yangtse 300 miles west of Nanking. One army of the invaders was moving from Shanghai on Nanking, and another was about to attack Tsinan, capital of Shantung province in North China.

China, however, was far from giving up the fight. It was reported in Shanghai that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek had resigned as president of the executive council in order to lead his troops in a final effort to stop the Japanese and win the war. H. H. Kung, it was said, would succeed Chiang in the presidency. He is finance minister.

Thousands of civilians and foreigners were fleeing from Nanking. But military authorities remained there and declared the city would not be surrendered to the Japanese without a desperate fight.

If the Japanese penetrate the powerful "Hindenburg line" anchored on Soochow, Changshu, and Kashiing, the Chinese were expected to fall back to new positions stretching from Kiangyin, on the Yangtse river, to Wushih, 100 miles east of Nanking.

Paris heard that Japan was threatening to establish a naval blockade of the Chinese coast if any nations attempted to send supplies to the Chinese armies.

Britain Woos Hitler

VISCOUNT HALIFAX, lord president of the council in the British cabinet, was in Germany ostensibly for the purpose of visiting a hunting exhibition but actually to negotiate with Hitler and other Nazi chiefs for the establishment of more friendly relations between Great Britain and Germany. Public belief was that he was authorized to hint to Hitler that there was hope Germany might regain some of its lost colonies if Germany would abandon its economic isolation and co-operate with other European powers in a revised League of Nations.

The British want to detach Germany, and Italy, too, if possible, from their alliance with Japan. Halifax was a fitting messenger to send to Berlin, for he is an outstanding friend of Germany among British officials.

Leaving It Up to Uncle Sam

UNLESS congress changes the neutrality act, it is probable the nations that signed and adhered to the nine-power Pacific treaty will take no positive action against Japan for violating that pact. The delegates to the Brussels conference, with the exception of Italy, voted to censure the Japanese for making war on China, and then adjourned to get further instructions from their governments.

Great Britain and France agreed to join in any effort "short of war" which the United States may decide should be made, this meaning economic sanctions against Japan. But the isolationist policy of this country would have to be abandoned if such sanctions were to be of any avail.

A long document was submitted to the conference by China asking that the war be ended by the infliction of penalties against Japan. The memorandum gave statistical tables that showed economic sanctions could halt Japan because of that nation's dependence on foreign markets and foreign sources of supply.

Norman H. Davis, chief American delegate, in addressing the conference, was rather conciliatory toward Japan, but he said:

"The question in its final analysis, is whether international relations shall be determined by arbitrary force or by law and respect for international treaties. In fact, that seems to be the greatest issue facing the world today."

Airplane Crash Tragedy

GRAND DUKE GEORGE OF HESSE, his wife, mother and two little sons and six other persons were killed when a Belgian air liner crashed and burned near Ostend. They were on their way to attend the wedding of the duke's brother Ludwig in London. Ludwig succeeded to the title and the marriage ceremony was performed privately with him and his bride, Margaret Campbell Geddes, daughter of Sir Auckland Geddes, in deep mourning. Ludwig was the third grand duke of his line within a week, for his father died only a few days before the airplane tragedy.

Extra Session Opens

WITH the evident intention of doing what it can to aid business, congress began its extraordinary session. Its first business was to listen to a rather long message from Mr. Roosevelt in which the Chief Executive committed himself to limited tax law revision for the purpose of removing admitted injustices suffered especially by small business and non-speculative investors.

Mr. Roosevelt proposed tax "modifications adequate to encourage productive enterprise," but explained that he sought primarily to aid at the expense of individual or partnership undertakings.

The President said exercise of "ordinary prudence" would protect the nation against prolonged business recession. He reiterated his intention to balance the next fiscal year budget, and demanded that congress find and provide new revenue for any added expenditures authorized now.

The President asked congress to provide:

1. Wages and hours legislation.
2. An "all-weather" crop control program.
3. Reorganization of executive departments.
4. National planning for better use of natural resources.

It appeared certain that a vigorous opposition to all or part of this program would arise, but nearly everybody seemed in favor of tax law revision.

Plot to Kill Stalin?

FROM foreign diplomats stationed in Moscow came reports that a plot by German agents to assassinate Dictator Stalin of Russia had been uncovered, and that it might compromise Maxim Litvinov, foreign commissar, who left the Brussels conference suddenly and apparently seriously worried. Investigations by the G. P. U. already have resulted in the recall or disappearance of many leading Russian diplomats. The German consul general in Leningrad was ordered to leave the country immediately. It is believed two German agents arrested some weeks ago confessed the conspiracy to murder Stalin and involve the country in a civil war.

AROUND THE HOUSE

When Washing Blankets: Never leave any soap in blankets as this will turn them yellow. Allow half a cupful of vinegar to each gallon of final rinsing water; this will clear all soap from them.

In Making Vegetable Salads: To prevent vegetable salads from becoming too watery, dry the vegetables before combining with the salad dressing.

Wipe Up Acid Foods: Since some enamels lose their luster when they come in contact with acid, always be careful to wipe up, immediately, any vinegar, lemon juice, tomato, or other acid food that is spilled on the enamel of your range.

To Wash Velour Curtains: Did you know that curtains and table covers of heavy velvet-finished furnishing velour can be washed? The trick is never to wring them—just douse them in warm soapy water, then in clear water and hang out dripping wet to dry.

Washing Voile: Voile frocks will not shrink if you use a tablespoonful of epsom salts to every gallon of water when washing them.

Improving Flavor of Bacon: When boiling bacon or any kind of salted meat, the flavor will be improved if six cloves, a dessert-spoonful of lemon juice, a tablespoonful of brown sugar, a sprig of mint, and a grating of nutmeg are added to the water.

Advertising Reduced Cost

A third of a century ago the price of the cheapest automobile was about $5,000. Today a much better car can be bought for around $700. Advertising created demand, demanded mass production, with many times the number of jobs, and mass production improved the quality and reduced the price.

Still Coughing?

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel the germ-laden phlegm. Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained from the very first bottle. Creomulsion is one word—not two, and it has no hyphen in it. Ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

In this modern time something wonderfully worth while can be done for practically every woman who suffers from functional pains of menstruation. Certain cases can be relieved by taking Cardui. Others may need a physician's treatment. Cardui has two widely demonstrated uses: (1) To ease the immediate pain and nervousness of the monthly period; and (2) to aid in building up the whole system by helping women to get more strength from their food.

Were you ever alone in a strange city?

If you were you know the true value of this newspaper. Alone in a strange city. It is pretty dull. Even the newspapers don't seem to print many of the things that interest you. Headline stories are all right, but there is something lacking. That something is local news.

For—all good newspapers are edited especially for their local readers. News of your friends and neighbors is needed along with that of far off places. That is why a newspaper in a strange city is so uninteresting. And that is why this newspaper is so important to you. NOW is a good time to get to...

Joyce Sewell, on the eve of her twentieth birthday, rebels at her lot, dependent on her detested stepmother, Irma, and full of tragic memories of her mother's murder twelve years before and her father's death six months ago. Irma calls in Heim Blackadder, an admiral, to help her persuade Joyce to marry rich, young Michael Kirkpatrick. Mike, sent up to Joyce by Irma and Blackadder, demands a showdown on his proposal and is rejected. Reading her father's papers, Joyce realizes that La Barranca, a Mexican hacienda which her father had owned, legally belongs to her. Later, she receives a letter enclosing a warrant on the United States Treasury for $10,000 compensation for her mother's murder at La Barranca. She confers with Mr. Bradley, a banker and only remaining friend of her father's. She confides that she wants to make a secret journey to Mexico. Bradley arranges all details for her. She departs by plane undetected. Dirk Van Suttart, second secretary of the American embassy in Mexico City, gives Joyce a chilly reception and she loses her temper. She finds a Mexican woman lawyer, Margarita Fonseca, who takes her to General Onelia, right-hand man to the Mexican minister of war.

CHAPTER III—Continued

"What's it got to do with me?" "Exercise your memory, General," said Margarita. "Who confiscated La Barranca? Who holds it now?"

"Dorado!" he cried.

"Exactly."

"What do you suggest?"

"General Dorado says he merely seized abandoned property. His tenure is based on salvage. My suggestion is that you arrange to have him abandon the hacienda in his turn."

"Nothing easier. I'll have him shot the next time he shows his face in town. I've been wanting to do it for years."

"I'm afraid I've come at your siesta hour. Naturally General Dorado must not be killed before the abandoned hacienda is definitely in possession of the rightful owner."

"Ah!" exclaimed Onelia.

"If General Dorado, who now holds La Barranca, should be killed—even if he should die a natural death—his heirs would inherit. They would have as good a case as he has now and our work would be all to do over again."

"Who wants the place? Not I."

Margarita looked at him steadfastly. "I wonder if you can see a picture if I hold it up before your eyes?" she inquired.

"Try me," said Onelia testily.

"Here's the picture, General, and that you're not to appear in it at all goes without saying. Suppose some of your trustiest men attend to the eviction of Dorado without killing him—simply drive him and his following out and chase them into the hills. Simultaneously your men plant the girl and leave her. The incident gets in the papers, here and across the border. The girl is young, beautiful, has perfect title as titles go and the courage of a bobcat to back it with. Do you begin to see anything?"

"Of course I see her getting herself killed, and so do you."

"Probably; but that's a mere incident—perhaps a necessary incident. It doesn't occur to you you might also see the ambassador from a country we both heartily detest up to his neck in boiling water and one or two of our own cabinet officers hanging to their toppling perches with nails and teeth? I used to think you had the brains of a great minister of war, but I'm beginning to doubt it."

"During her long speech Onelia had been advancing toward her with a catlike tread. Now he placed a blunt finger under her chin, tipped back her head and stood looking down into her unflinching eyes."

"You've started something," he rumbled, "and we two are going to finish it. If I betray you, you can always get me shot at the market price, but if you betray me I'll have you dragged by a frightened horse."

He stepped back, shrugged his shoulders and sat down. "Call in the girl."

When Joyce entered nothing could have exceeded Margarita's complacent air of accomplishment unless it was the General's urbanity.

"All you ask is to be put in possession of La Barranca. Is that correct?"

"Yes, General. I was happy there. I've never been happy since I left. The years of my childhood—"

"One moment, senorita. Our plan contemplates presenting you with the hacienda and nothing more. It is a dangerous plan—extremely dangerous to you, I mean. I don't exaggerate when I say the chances are ten to one you'll meet your mother's fate. The scheme is to filter a sufficient number of men within the walls of La Barranca, pick a quarrel at a given signal and then drive out General Dorado who now holds the property. It is essential that you be on the spot to take immediate possession—on the spot, mind you. Do you agree?"

"I do," said Joyce. "But this General Dorado—he won't be killed, will he?"

"No, child, certainly not; I'm glad to reassure you on that point," said Onelia unctuously. "The question now arises as to who shall be your personal escort."

He touched a bell and the door opened almost instantly. "Send Sergeant Buenaventura."

The soldier who presently entered the room immediately inspired Joyce with confidence. Loyalty was written in every line of his face.

"Sit down, Pancho," said Onelia; "this is a social gathering. Besides, you are now commencing a month's furlough on full pay, accompanied by a detail of eighteen men. Never by any chance are you to report to me what happens during your absence. It won't be necessary since I am about to tell you what you will do with every minute of your time."

He proceeded to give instructions so broad yet so complete to the last detail that Joyce was moved to admiration. "Understand, Pancho," he concluded, "the shot that kills General Dorado will surely kill you. Maim him if you like, but don't kill him."

"It is understood, mi General. When do we start?"

"Today, if you like," said Joyce. "If that's impossible, then tomorrow."

"It will take three days at least to place my men," he stated. "They must be sent singly and in advance."

"Attend to it at once," ordered Onelia. "As for you, hold yourself in readiness and see you have the sort of car which will attract shorter side there was a respectable entrance leading directly to the restaurant and dance floor. The room was fan-shaped and fairly large. The orchestra was placed in the stem of the fan which put the master of ceremonies, the highly popular Adan Arnaldo, at a distinct advantage since he could watch the entire assemblage without having to worry about anything behind his back. The tables were in two banks, one at the level of the floor, the other raised and hugging the slant of the walls. The wide outer fringe of the fan was given over to stage entrance, hallway, cloak room, cooking and service departments.

General Onelia met Joyce and Margarita in the foyer. He was dressed in multi and when Margarita, divesting herself of an ultralike overcoat, displayed a dark tailored suit, Joyce felt a qualm as to her own lovely semi-evening dress. But immediately her attention was seized by something else; at a murmured request from the check-room girl two men were condescending to park their guns with their hats. Margarita cast a hurried and curious glance at Joyce's face but found she need not worry—

Joyce was given a seat with her back to the wall. Sensing the concentrated stare upon her she was troubled and looked around anxiously. It must be her clothes. But to her relief she saw a few people on the dance floor in evening dress and then discovered a party of men against the opposite wall, all of whom were togged out in the full regalia of tails and white ties. She wondered about them, perceiving at once they were onlookers rather than participants. Evidently they had come to watch the fun, perhaps in an effort to forget the boredom of some diplomatic function. At the thought she examined them more carefully and suddenly found herself gazing at long range into the eyes of Dirk Van Suttart. She looked away at once, making no sign of recognition, but not before she had caught the rapid change of expression in his face. In an instant it had passed from surprise to wonder and from wonder to dismay tinged with aversion. He was profoundly shocked.

A flush of anger stained her cheeks but at that moment Adan Arnaldo came to Onelia's table to do homage to authority. He was a handsome young man and lacked the sleek look which usually distinguishes the master of ceremonies of such a bouté as El Tenebroso. His manner, as he greeted Margarita whom he knew, declared him a substantial partner as well. Acknowledging an introduction to Joyce, he took her hand but without removing his eyes from the general's face.

"Well, Adan," said the general, "I don't have to ask you how things are going. Jam-packed as usual."

"Not so bad," admitted Arnaldo.

"The genius of this place," remarked Margarita, "consists in its diversity. There's one clientele at midnight, another at two and a third at four in the morning."

"Yes," said Arnaldo, "and if we could close at one o'clock I'd be poorer but a lot happier." He glanced at Onelia. "It's a long time since you've honored me."

"Quite true, but I'm a busy man and I've taken to going to bed. I suppose the old habits are still on the job? I haven't seen Castellito, Diego Borda, Vasconcellos, General Dorado or Pancho Iroyogon since I came here last. That about covers the list, doesn't it?"

"General," said Arnaldo laughingly, "I compliment you on your memory."

"So? How could I forget any of that flock of flamingos?"

At that instant Dorado raised his own gun aloft, but end down, and crashed it on the table so violently that plates, knives and forks went flying. "Musical!" he roared. He pointed uncertainly at Joyce with a wagging forefinger, then waved it to include every woman in the room. "Musical!"

least attention. You may go." As Sergeant Buenaventura left the room the general turned to Margarita.

"We have overlooked an important point," she said. "It is vital Dorado should be in residence; otherwise we would be committing a mere trespass."

"Couldn't I instruct Pancho to wait, in that case, until Dorado returned?"

"No; we've got to find out about Dorado and there's only one sure source of information."

"Where? Who?"

"Adan Arnaldo of El Tenebroso."

"Call that a source?" exploded Onelia. "Try to make it flow!"

"That's the trouble," said Margarita; "I couldn't do it alone, neither could you. But the two of us—in casual conversation?"

"What's El Tenebroso?" asked Joyce, intrigued by their manner.

"A resort, my dear," said Margarita. "A bolite, what you would call a night club."

"Oh, please let me go too," begged Joyce.

It was odd the way their heads turned toward her as though moved by identical springs and equally strange that both faces should glow through the same changes of expression. Their Latin eyes were seeing her at El Tenebroso. No girl of breeding could crash that door and keep her social standing, and whether anything happened to her or not had nothing to do with it. Of course Joyce was unaware of any such deadline, which only made it more amusing.

"It might not be a bad idea," remarked Margarita at last.

"Not at all a bad idea," agreed Onelia. "As a matter of fact, unless accompanied by both of you, I wouldn't consider for a moment going myself. I'll send my car to pick you up. Shall we say at midnight?"

"Too early by at least an hour," said Margarita. "Make it one o'clock."

CHAPTER IV

El Tenebroso occupied a triangle at the intersection of a side street with the Calzada Manuel Villalongin. A string of private rooms comprised its longer flank but on the

"No, no, not that," corrected Arnaldo. "You remembered not to mention a single one of the dead!"

Margarita laughed. "You're worried, Adan. Who's on the rampage nowadays? Are you expecting Dorado or is it only Castellito?" Arnaldo did not answer. "Tell me," she persisted. "Who is the cause tonight of that little crease of worry on your brow?"

"General Onelia," said Arnaldo as he rose to resume his duties.

Onelia scowled at the ambiguous distinction. Compliment, insult, threat or warning—he could take his choice. He sat in a moody silence, paying no attention to his guests. Smoldering inside him was dull rage at Arnaldo. What had he meant? He knew of the long-standing Onelia-Dorado feud—everybody did. Had he guessed at once that he and Margarita were after information as to Dorado's whereabouts and plans? In spite of her hosts' neglect Joyce was not bored. She sipped her wine sparingly and let her eyes wander.

Abruptly she sensed Onelia had gone tense in every muscle and following the direction of his gaze she saw an individual in uniform, accompanied by two bodyguards, erupt from a slight commotion in the entrance hall on her left. Never before had she seen a visage so striking, so individual, so different from the ordinary conception of a human face. Jet-black hair, close-cropped, came down in a sharp peak to within an inch of heavy eyebrows and where cheekbones should have protruded there were indentations, causing the massive blue-black jaw, divided midway by the gash of full red lips, to appear to slant outward. Feeling her eyes upon him the man stopped, stared, smiled and saluted gaily. He was drunk and as he staggered toward the table hurriedly being placed for him at the edge of the dance floor, Arnaldo darted forward, apparently to greet him. But he took up his stand in a direct line between Onelia and the new arrival.

Joyce leaned toward Margarita. "Who is that man," she whispered, "the officer who just came in?"

"General Dorado," murmured Margarita almost inaudibly.

Arnaldo, chatting cheerfully with Dorado, took out a cigarette and tapped it on his wrist. At the third tap the orchestra began to pack up its instruments and one of the four tiers of lights went out. Adan did his best to hold the attention of the recent arrival but when a second bank of lights was extinguished Dorado awoke to realization of what was intended. An odd hush fell on the room, accompanied by an electric air of expectancy. It was real, something even the uninitiated could feel, and Joyce's knees began to tremble from excitement. Her evening bag slipped from her lap. She leaned over quickly to pick it up and to her consternation caught the glint of a service revolver clapped against Onelia's thigh. Her first impression was that it was quite still but as she rose she realized its muzzle had been moving slowly upward.

Then she heard Margarita whisper to him hoarsely: "Don't be a fool or you'll spoil everything. Leave it to Adan and nothing will happen—nothing!"

Domestication of Horse Is Traced Back Additional Thousand Years to 3000 B. C.

The history of the domestication of the horse has recently been traced back an additional thousand years, says Field Museum News, Chicago. Previously it had been thought that the horse was introduced into Babylonia by the Kassites during the early portion of the second millennium B. C. However, the Early Dynastic I (circa 3000-2800 B. C.) tombs at Kish, excavated by the Field Museum-Oxford university joint expedition to Mesopotamia, yielded animal bones some of which have now been identified by Prof. Wolfgang Amshler, of the College of Agriculture, Vienna, as those of the domesticated horse (equus caballus). These horses were larger than the Arabian—horse of today, standing 15 hands 3 inches at the withers.

These skeletal remains of horses were found hitched to chariots as the animals had fallen, after being slaughtered in the tombs of their masters to provide transportation in the afterworld. The bronze harness trappings and portions of the chariots were well preserved, and it is possible to reconstruct the pictures from scenes on seals and plaques found at Kish and other sites.

Thus far, no Sumerian word for horse is recognizable, and it was thought that only the donkey was referred to in texts of this period. Now, with the realization that the horse was used at that time, it may be possible to identify some descriptive form of ass with the word for horse, as was done in Old Babylonia where the horse is known as the "ass from the mountains." The earliest Egyptian records show that the Hyksos (circa 1700 B. C.)—the "Shepherd Kings"—brought the horse into the Nile valley.

Founded Benedictine Order

The Benedictine order was founded by St. Benedict about 529. It was at first intended to be only a philosophy of life, but within its first century the order was formed. The Benedictines, famous for their manufacture of a liqueur, were the saviors of Christian art in western Europe. At St. Ottilien, says the Digest, their vows of industry have taken them from crude handwork to highly mechanized production.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Silk Shades Give a Soft Glow

THERE is subtlety in the light that glows through a silk shade, and many decorators are using them for the room that needs the softness of plaited folds and the mellowness obtained by placing two tones of fabric one over the other.

Two tones of China silk, one to be used for a plain lining and the other for a gathered outside covering will make an attractive shade. Before you buy the material it is best to experiment with samples one over the other trying them both in daylight and over an artificial light. You will also need a roll of silk binding tape matching the top color of the shade. This tape is to wrap the wire frame. And fancy braid either in gold, silver or a harmonizing tone of silk is used to bind the top and bottom of the shade. Use cotton thread to match the outside tone of the silk.

Slip the binding tape off the roll and wrap a rubber band around it as shown here at A. Working from the inside end of the tape wrap the frame as shown at B. The outside layer of silk is put on next. This is gathered both top and bottom and pinned to the wire covering as at C and D so that it is stretched quite tight. Joinings in the outside covering need not be sewed but may be hidden under the folds. This material is sewed in place as at E.

Next, cut a straight strip for the lining and fit it around the outside of the frame as shown here at F. Trim the joining allowing a seam as shown at G. Sew to the frame at the bottom as at H. Trim quite close at the bottom. Turn lining to inside as at I. Slip stitch the joining. Turn in raw edges at top and whip

Are Women Better Shoppers than Men?

GRANTING a woman's reputation for wise buying, let's trace the methods by which she has earned it. Where does she find out about the advantages and details of electrical refrigeration? What tells her how to keep the whole household clean—rugs, floors, bathroom tiling—and have energy left over for golf and parties? How does she learn about new and delicious entrees and desserts that surprise and delight her family? Where does she discover those subtleties of dress and make-up that a man appreciates but never understands?

Why, she reads the advertisements. She is a consistent, thoughtful reader of advertisements, because she has found that she can believe them—and profit thereby. Overlooking the advertisements would be depriving herself of data continuously useful in her job of Purchasing Agent to the Family.

For that matter, watch a wise man buy a car or a suit or an insurance policy. Not a bad shopper himself! He reads advertisements, too!

REVISE 'EM AGAIN, SAM

J. Sam Lewis, staff correspondent of the Lubbock Avalanche, is still estimating Lynn county's cotton crop at 100,000 bales. He had a story in last Sunday's Avalanche estimating the crop at this figure in each of the following four counties: Lubbock, Lynn, Lamb, and Dawson, although in the column giving the number of bales actually ginned he was compelled to give Lynn county 10,000 more bales than Lubbock county, placing Lynn county's ginnings at 75,000 bales and Lubbock county's at 65,000.

We do not know how much cotton Lubbock county had ginned up to that time, but we do know that Lynn county had ginned actually more than 85,000 bales. It is estimated by gin men and cotton buyers in Lynn county that from 10,000 to 15-000 additional bales had already been picked and stored in cotton houses, in gin yards and other open spaces, and in the farmers' fields, ready to be ginned as soon as the gins could get to it.

So, there must have been at least 95,000 bales already picked in Lynn county when Sam's story was published. And there were many, many thousand bales already open in the fields but not yet harvested.

In spite of the fact that some of the late bolls were caught by the freezes of last week, it still seems reasonably certain that Lynn county will gin at least 125,000 bales from the crop of 1937, and this has been perfectly apparent to close observers in this county for many weeks.

You are going to have to revise your figures again, Mr. Sam. And the final revision in all probability will find Lynn county leading the state. We are willing to concede Lubbock county second or third place.

CROP CONTROL

The worst feature about government control of cotton will be reduction in acreage planted to cotton another 10 million acres. This means thousands more farm tenants will be forced on relief rolls and foreign nations will increase their cotton acreage. Pay a subsidy on the cotton raised on the small acreage but permit the farmers to raise all the cotton they can for the world market.—Big Spring Weekly News.

This cotton problem is a real problem. We doubt if there is any permanent remedy. If we do not control the acreage either by compulsion or by subsidy grants of some kind, then the annual average production is likely to be so large that the price will be very low, and farmers will realize little out of their crops.

On the other hand, every time we reduce our acreage we drive more tenants off the farms and into the relief line and at the same time encourage other nations to increase their acreage. Mr. Wallace has indicated that he thinks it desirable to reduce our acreage next year to about 25 million or 26 million acres.
This would be approximately eight or nine million acres below our acreage this year. If the bill now pending in Congress passes, the reduction will probably be made in accordance with Mr. Wallace's ideas.
Then what will become of the tenants who this year cultivated that eight or nine million acres? And what will become of the laborers employed in harvesting the crops from that eight or nine million acres?

O, we will plant it in other crops.
What other crops? The same bill that will control the cotton acreage will also control wheat and corn acreage. We are to have an "ever normal granary." Besides, most of the cotton land is not so hot as wheat and corn land. Out here on the plains we can plant it in maize and other sorghum grains, but what will we feed it to. The country's corn crop this year exceeded the crop of last year by nearly a billion bushels.

Raise cows and hogs. Well, just a few years ago we were killing our cows and leaving their carcasses on the prairie to rot because the price of cows was so low; and we were paying farmers a small reward or bounty for the hogs they didn't raise.

After several more years of experimentation, we will probably pass some stringent soil conservation laws for the benefit of future generations as well as the present one,
and subject to these laws, if held constitutional, we will probably permit farmers to raise all the cotton and corn and wheat they can raise, without let or hindrance.

If the Government is still in the subsidy business, it will probably grant an annual subsidy to the farmers to supplement the income from their crops, in inverse ratio to the prices they receive.

That is the only permanent remedy we can see for this whole agricultural problem — but of course we do not claim to be as wise as
Mr. Wallace or as Congress.

JACK DEFENDS THE "EXPERTS"

A couple of weeks ago we took a crack at the conservation "experts" up at Washington for claiming all the credit for the transformation of the "dust bowl" and for stopping the sandstorms.

We knew old Andy Jack would come alive.

He did. In an editorial in the Terry County Herald last week he excused the experts for their boasting and reminded us that we do live in a dry country out here, subject to long droughts and high winds, and that the sand will blow unless hindered by scientific methods.

The "experts" have the low-down on the proper methods. They say that the "dust bowl" should be turned back to grass—and by "dust bowl" they mean most of the plains, including Lynn and Terry counties.
But, if the farmers are determind not to turn their land back into ranch lands, then they should grow "cover" crops, according to the "experts".

But how the heck are your farmers going to grow cover crops on your corn and cotton lands in Terry county, Jack, and grow corn and cotton at the same time? And how the heck are they going to get cover crops up in a drouth that lasts four years, as the last one did up in the real dust bowl?

Every farmer knows that deep and frequent plowing and contouring of the rows will help a lot, but they learned that mostly from the local county farm agents and from observation and experience.

A good old soaking rain is worth a thousand highly-paid swivel-chair
Washington "experts" in any drouth,
in our opinion.

Still, the experts have helped a lot, as we said before; and in reply to our jibes, Andy Jack did tell a good story. Here it is.
"Editor E. I. Hill is now peeved because magazine writers give the soil conservationists credit for the dust bowl comeback instead of God.
Which reminds us of the little California lad, whose teacher asked several questions about who gave them their parks, boulevards, nice federal buildings, new schools and gyms.
Each time, the answer had been Roosevelt, with the response, correct. But when the question of sunshine, rain and flowers came, there was a slight hesitancy, whereupon a little son of Mr. Milktoast answered, "God gave them." He was promptly nudged in the short ribs
by a freckled faced son of old Ireland, who gave the little fellow a huge stage whisper, "shut up you d—n Republican."

About the meanest man we have heard of lately was a recent inmate of the city jail at Littlefield, if newspaper reports recently published were correct. A prisoner, having a grudge against a fellow prisoner, hauled loose and struck him on the jaw with his fist with such force as to break the jawbone. The injured man was taken to a hospital for repairs. The broken bone was set, and the prisoner was returned to the jail. The next morning the fellow who had delivered the jaw-breaking blow, called the victim to him in a friendly tone of voice as if he were penitent of his act, and when the victim with the bandaged jaw came within his reach he hauled loose and delivered a second blow on the same jaw, breaking it again, sending him to the hospital a second time. If there is a meaner man than this in Texas out of jail, officers can't get him inside the bars too quick.

We think our county judge and the commissioners court are doing excellent work in their efforts to get highway No. 84 paved at a very early date from Tahoka to Post, but we believe that the people of Tahoka and others in Lynn county should actively back up the efforts of the judge and other members of the court. By all means we should get behind this proposition with a sharp stick and get the job done.

The County Wide News published at Littlefield is conducting a guessing contest as to the number of bales of cotton that will be ginned in Lamb county this season. Twenty five guesses were published last week the lowest being 78,000 bales and the highest 130,000. The average is about 97,500 bales. In a few months we shall see how much the average man missed it.

BEDNARZ-MACHA

Miss Irma Marie Macha, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor H. Macha of Wilson, became the bride of William Leonard Bednarz, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Bednarz of Slaton, in a double ring ceremony performed by the Rev. Gabriel Diamante at 8 o'clock Wednesday morning at St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church in Lubbock.

The bride's sister, Miss Lebuscha Macha, was the maid of honor; while another sister of the bride, Miss Mildred, and a sister of the groom, Miss Evelyn Bednarz, served as bridesmaids. Walter Bednarz, brother of the groom, and Edmund Macha, brother of the bride, were groomsmen.

One hundred and 50 guests witnessed the ceremony, after which the wedding party and a large number of relatives and friends went to the Macha home for breakfast. The young couple left soon thereafter on a wedding trip to Schulenburg and other south Texas points.

The bride is a graduate of the Tahoka high school and a former student in the Texas Technological College. The groom has farming interests near Slaton.

ELDER DRENNON'S NOTES

Thanksgiving week again! How we have been blessed in this section with bountiful crops!

Not only have we been blessed temporarily but in many other ways, such as these: our nation has peace, our community has the privilege of worshipping God as the Bible directs without molestation.

Another thing that I am thankful for is that liquor is not sold over the bar in our town, and I hope we can keep the rotten stuff away from our boys and girls. I hear some say: "What about the bootlegger?" I guess he is here, I don't know, as I do not patronize him, but I do know that he is not as bad as the open saloon. I have lived under both and I know whereof I speak.

I wrote last week about fresh pork for the editor. I don't know about him, but I got results. Also, it pays to advertise in the News. I spoke about marrying people, and a couple came all the way from Baird and I tied them up Monday night at the parsonage.

When we visit over the county and see so much cotton, I am reminded that God controls crops and that our government had best leave it to Him; also that supply and demand are the best price regulators. Man proposes but God disposes.

Some people seem to be bothered about when I am going to leave town by the inquiries that are made. Will say that I do not know when. Besides, I think Tahoka a fine place to live, in fact as good a place as I have ever lived, and I hope I have the privilege of leaving with your best wishes when I go.

I will preach at O'Donnell next Lord's Day. Yours for more thanksgiving and less complaining.—R. P. Drennon.

Y. W. A. HAS PARTY

The frost was in the air and the pumpkin pie was on the table, along with the cranberry sauce and other good "eats". The occasion was the Y. W. A. Thanksgiving dinner at the home of Mrs. Chester Hufstader Tuesday night.

The food was spread on a large dining room table and was served buffet style; then the guests ate at four round tables.

The guest list included: Misses Robby Milliken, Pauline Rhines, Jody Bob Nevill, Lorene Reese, Jo Belle Milliken, Lois Goad, Estia May Rogers, Doris Connolly, and Rev. and Mrs. Dale.

PHOEBE K. WARNER CLUB

The Phoebe K. Warner Club will meet in the home of Mrs. C. L. Harter at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon, according to announcement given the News.

An interesting program is promised.

After a long-continued siege of the flu, A. T. Cobb was able to resume his work at the store Tuesday.

Delbert and J. D. Wise of Paradise visited Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Shawn Saturday night and Sunday. They are nephews of Mrs. Shawn.

UNION SERVICES AT BAPTIST CHURCH

Union Thanksgiving services were held at the Baptist Church here Wednesday night. Rev. Ben Hardy, pastor of the Methodist Church, delivered the Thanksgiving discourse. A special musical program was given by members of both the Baptist and Methodist choirs. Members of other denominations also participated in the service.

This is the first time a Thanksgiving service has been held in Tahoka for several years.

AN EDITORIAL

To please Harlem, chief Negro district of New York city, and thereby clinch a big block of votes for himself in the next Senatorial election, Senator Wagner of New York again brought up in the Senate last week his anti-lynching bill. Since there are little "Harlems" in nearly all the large cities of the North and East, most of the Northern and Eastern Senators, both Democrats and Republicans, have chimed in, in favor of the bill. Big Jim Farley, chief cook and bottle-washer for the Administration, would like to please the Negroes of New York and of the entire North, for in some states the Negro vote is strong enough to decide the election. Of course he is for the bill. President Roosevelt is no slouch as a politician himself, and of course he will sign the bill with much pleasure if it is passed. It is left up almost entirely to Southern Senators, assisted by that able, honest, and patriotic giant of Idaho, Senator Borah, to combat the measure. Brilliant, fearless Tom Connally, fighting with his back to the wall, has been leading the opposition. In a powerful speech last week, he showed that the bill is at once unfair, unnecessary, and unconstitutional. With biting sarcasm and blistering eloquence, he showed up the politics that is behind the bill and the insincerity and demagoguery of its author and other proponents. In one of his bursts of oratory he cried out, "Thank God for the Supreme Court — and for Justice Black." Black himself had made a speech against the bill while a member of the Senate. We doubt if there is an abler, more useful, or more patriotic man in the Senate than Tom Connally of Texas.

COMPETING WITH CHEOP

Fort Peck dam on the Missouri river in Montana, is generally conceded to be the largest construction project ever undertaken by man—larger even than the great pyramid of the Egyptian pharaoh, Cheops. The $200,000,000 of public funds to be spent on it will ultimately result in a vast pile of dirt, ranging as high as 342 feet over the river bed and extending across several miles of Montana prairie land. Behind this monumental upheaval will be created the "largest duck pond in the world."

Laboring taxpayers are told by "liberal" politicians that Fort Peck dam is justified in the name of humanity. They paint a glowing picture, but here is what the United States army engineer corps has to say of Fort Peck:

In regard to electric power, Major General Markham, chief of the engineers, recommended that the power plants be not installed for the practical reason that there is no market for the power. Fort Peck dam is located in a sparsely settled region having an average population of only 2.7 persons per square mile. Stock raising and dry farming are the principal occupations. The report likewise pointed out that the dam will be of no material benefit as far as flood control is concerned. And, finally, in regard to improved navigation: "The Missouri river never can and never will be a great originator of traffic. There are no mines, no factories, no other great sources of originating traffic on the river... many years, perhaps decades, must elapse before any considerable traffic will develop, if it ever does."

Stripped of verbal persiflage, Fort Peck dam becomes nothing but a monument to political vanity, a monument that will make the taxpayers sweat, and whose chief claim to fame is that it is bigger than Cheops' pyramid.—Industrial News Review.

Sumner Knight, we are sorry to report, is still confined to his bed most of the time.

MRS. T. J. RENFRO DIED EARLY WEDNESDAY

Mrs. T. J. Renfro, 79, died early Wednesday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. T. M. Lockaby near Ackerley, Dawson county.

Funeral services were conducted at the Harris Funeral Home here Thursday afternoon, by Rev. Ben Hardy, pastor of the Methodist Church, and the remains were laid to rest in the Tahoka cemetery.

Mrs. Renfro was a resident of this county for a number of years. A more extended account of her life will be given next week.

WAREHOUSE NEAR DEPOT RUMORED

Plans are being made by an out-of-town concern, it is reported, to erect a cotton warehouse on a block of land lying between the Santa Fe Depot and the cemetery.

No details were available to the News at the hour of going to press, however.

Snyder & Reed, ranchers and stockmen, are now feeding 20,000 head of sheep and 250 head of cattle at Levelland, according to the Hockley County Herald. They recently purchased 6,500 tons of feed which had been stored in trench silos, which is now being fed together with lime and crushed cotton seed cake.

Two dollars per ton was paid for the silage. Since about seven tons per acre had been produced, the feed brought the farmers who raised it about $14 per acre.

The First Baptist Church of Brownfield is now taking steps to complete their church building. For a number of years the church has been worshipping in a basement very similar to the one in Tahoka. A handsome and commodious second story is to be constructed.

Russell Keltner arrived Saturday from Mesa, Arizona, to accept a position with the Tahoka Drug Company until after the Christmas holidays. Russell was formerly employed at Las Vegas, New Mexico, and spent the summer in Denver.

REPORTS FROM THE COUNTY CLUBS

Miss Lillith Boyd, H. D. Agent

MRS. H. B. BREWER VENTILATES CABINET

"One part of my cabinet is ventilated and used especially for storage of vegetables in small quantities, such as potatoes, onions, and cabbage," said Mrs. H. B. Brewer, kitchen improvement demonstrator in the Draw Home Demonstration Club, when giving a story of her year's work.

"Opposite the 14 feet of cabinet space, including the work surface and sink with water piped in and out, I placed my gas stove under the half window. The window gives plenty of light and breeze when it is lowered from the top. Too, along the south wall is a dish cupboard, ventilated cleaning closet and hot water heater," she added.

Among Mrs. Brewer's other improvements, she finished the wood work in semi-gloss white paint and added new linoleum, paper and a refrigerator.

"I have followed meal plans the entire year," Mrs. G. B. Sherrod, president of the Dixie Home Demonstration Club, told the home demonstration agent.

During the food preservation period she followed a canning budget outline as a guide to the number of containers needed and the classification of each. There are twenty-six varieties in her pantry. She sold enough squash from her garden to supply the deficiency in tomatoes. The surplus garden products were canned and exchanged for fruit required in the food budget.

DIXIE CLUB MEETS WITH MRS. JOHNSON

At a joint achievement meeting of the Dixie Home Demonstration club, Mrs. Paul Johnson exhibited her pantry and Mrs. Buel Draper exhibited her improved kitchen.

"I have 39 varieties of canned products and 13 varieties of stored products," stated Mrs. Johnson. Mrs. Johnson had prepared on a separate table in her pantry suggestions for school lunches one might select from her canned and stored products. This included: ground chicken, canned sausage, beet and cucumber pickles, potato chips, salad dressing, stuffed eggs, jelly, cream filling on home made cookies, peanuts, apples, and milk.

Mrs. Draper's kitchen had been repaired, all woodwork refinished, cabinet enlarged, porcelain top table, kitchen stool, two new pictures and new curtains added.

In the home of Mrs. Draper the hostesses served refreshments to the guests which contained food prepared principally from their pantries.

WILSON H. D. CLUB MRS. S. G. ANTHONY

The Wilson Home Demonstration Club met at the home of Mrs. B. W. Baker November 17.

The home food supply demonstrator, Mrs. B. W. Baker, gave the story of her garden reporting three hundred ninety-two containers of vegetables canned from her garden.

The following officers were elected for the coming year:

President, Mrs. H. G. Cook, Vice-President, Mrs. J. F. Covey, Secretary, Mrs. D. A. Hill, Reporter, Mrs. Jack Miller, Parliamentarian, Mrs. H. B. Crosby, Mrs. Walter Brandon of Stephenville, Texas, was a visitor at the meeting.

The following members were present: Mrs. James J. W. Lamb, Howard Cook, S. L. Alderson, D. A. Hill, M. C. Brandon, Mrs. J. F. Covey, P. D. Server, B. W. Baker, Edwin May, W. H. May, S. H. Anthony.

O'DONNELL COUNTY HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB MEETS

On Thursday at two P. M., the O'Donnell County Home Demonstration Club met at the home of Mrs. Waldo McLaurin. Miss Lillith Boyd was present. She demonstrated the making of Japanese Fruit Cake.

Mrs. Alma House, chairman, presided during the business session of the club. It was decided to have a club Christmas party; the exact date was not set. Officers for the following year were elected. No committees were named or appointive officers filled. At the close of the meeting delicious refreshments were served by the hostess.

CAR IS STOLEN FROM DRIVEWAY

Recently Cleve Austin, a post office employee in Lamesa, borrowed the car of Mrs. Lila Cason, a co-worker in the office, to drive to lunch. While eating the noon meal, he heard the car start. He went out to investigate, and found that a thief was driving it away. The culprit had gotten into the car on the driveway of the Austin home, and backed it out into the street. In driving away he passed near Austin, who was gesticulating and protesting vociferously, but he only gave Austin the horselaugh and hurried away. Officers were notified but the thief made his getaway. He had pulled a smart stunt.

But there is a second chapter to the story, as is usually the case in such cases. Two days later the car was located in El Reno, Oklahoma, and the thief was caught and landed behind prison bars. Now he will be tried in the Federal court for transporting stolen property across a state line.

The third chapter will be a year or two in a Federal Prison; and there may be a fourth chapter, a term in the state penitentiary of Texas for the theft of the car.

Is the criminal really as smart as he thinks he is?

Mrs. Charlie Curry and children are visiting relatives in Stephenville this week.

Father, We Thank Thee!

For flowers that bloom about our feet,
 For tender grass so fresh and sweet,
 For song of bird and hum of bee,
 For all things fair we hear or see,
 For blue of stream and blue of sky,
 For pleasant shade of branches high,
 For fragrant air and cooling breeze,
 For beauty of the blooming trees,
 For mother-love and father-care,
 For brothers strong and sisters fair,
 For love at home and here each day,
 For guidance lest we get astray,
 For this new morning with its light,
 For rest and shelter of the night,
 For health and food, for love and friends,
 For ev'rything thy goodness sends,
 Father in heaven, we thank thee.

Thanksgiving — a wonderful day!
 I wonder if it means as much to us as it did to our forefathers who first gave thanks for the many blessings they had received.

Ours is a busy world and there is little time for calm meditation, for being thankful. Of course there are some people who can take time out to think a word of thanks even though they do not put it into words. We, a modern people, a busy people, have many things to be thankful for if we only stop for a moment and consider them. The professional man, the farmer, the business man, the day laborer, the home maker—all these have many things to be thankful for even on the very worst of days and in the very worst of times. Should it not mean fully as much to us as to our pilgrim fathers who gave us the idea? For one day of the three hundred sixty-five let us stop and give thanks to the God who makes it possible to have all the things we enjoy.

It seems to me that this poem should express the thoughts of every person on Thanksgiving Day:
 Praise God for wheat, so white and sweet, of which to make our bread!
 Praise God for yellow corn, with which his waiting world is fed!
 Praise God for fish and fowl, he gave to man for food!
 Praise God for every creature which He made, and called it good!
 Praise God for winter's store of ice!
 Praise God for summer's heat!
 Praise God for fruit-tree bearing seed: "to you it is for meat!"
 Praise God for all the bounty by which the world is fed!
 Praise God His children all, to whom He gives their daily bread!

"The Growl" wishes to express its thanks to Miss Simkins, Spanish teacher in T.H.S. for her contribution to the news this week in the form of the editorial. The Staff also wishes to tell Mr. Hufstelder that his efforts on "King Cotton" of last week were appreciated to the fullest.

Mrs. Tunnell and Mr. Barrett went to the Texas State Teachers Convention in Houston over the holidays. They left Wednesday at two thirty and are expected back sometime Sunday. Here's hoping that they learn some new method of conveying knowledge to the student body of T.H.S.

Mrs. Tunnell is going to "Bring 'em back alive" or know the reason why. The Seniors are trusting that under her guiding influence they will have their rings Monday.

"Goin' Modern" is progressing wonderfully. The cast had proved to be very capable and dependable in that they "never" miss a practice!

After a study of color, design and fabrics, the first year Home Eco. girls are starting school dresses.

The Second-year girls have been baking butter, sponge, and various kinds of cakes. Last on "baking day" one of the ovens exploded and burned two of the girls. They were Muri Akin and Mary Ann Wilburn, however, neither was seriously injured and both have attended school this week.

The Third year girls will soon be starting the study of mother and infant care. This promises to be very interesting and helpful.

The General Science class and instructor, Mr. Harlow, attended a most entertaining party in the home of Greta Joyce Applewhite on Monday night.

Odean Millman has returned from Pampa and has re-enrolled as a Junior. He decided T.H.S. wasn't so bad after all.

Sports

Tahoka Defeated by Ralls

The Tahoka Bulldogs took a lead of 12 to 0 in the first half last Friday afternoon at Ralls but could not hold onto it and were finally defeated by a score of 27-12. The aerial offense of the Jackrabbits was the deciding factor of the game.

The Bulldogs close this season Thanksgiving at Crosbyton. Eight Senior boys will be playing their last game for the Blue and White. They are Paul Casebeer, G. C. Price, Truett Cooper, Willis Edwards, Hiram Snowden, Travis McCord, Neill Walker, and Reginald Frazier.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Fowlkes of Abernathy were visitors in Tahoka last Sunday. Bert says that when he and Mrs. Fowlkes left here last Ozarks of Arkansas. There they labored in the great apple orchards, helping to harvest the apple crops until recently, and he admits that he likes it. He and Mrs. Fowlkes are now at Abernathy, however, just on the edge of the big cotton patch that covers the south plains and that is yielding the greatest crop in the history of the country.

Rollin McCord is planning to drive down to Dallas Saturday, where he will meet Mrs. McCord Sunday. She is returning from a two months visit with her mother, Mrs. L. P. LaVoie, at Newmarket, N. H.

Kansas Red Wheat Came From Two-Gallon Hoard

In 1874 a colony of Mennonites, seeking religious freedom, departed from Caslov, Crimea, to find homes in Kansas. A patriarchal and agricultural people, knowing nothing of the conditions which they must face in the new country, they took along everything they thought they might need, including household goods, implements, and what at the time may have seemed unimportant, but later was to prove most important of all, two gallons of the peculiar hard red wheat of the Russian steppes. This wheat was of the type familiar to them, recites a writer in the Kansas City Times, and they had no way of knowing it would be an innovation in America. Those two gallons of grains were literally hand-picked, one grain at a time, by Mennonite children, each grain being examined for color, conformity and the necessary flinty hardness.

Near Hillsboro, Kan., the wheat was planted. At that time soft wheat was the type grown in this section and in the high plains it was a crop so unreliable that attempts to grow it had practically been abandoned. Surprisingly to the American neighbors of the Mennonites, the "Turkey Red" wheat, as it was known, flourished remarkably. Additional acreage was sown the following year, from the seed furnished by the first crop, and its success was so great that American farmers began to acquire the seed and sow it. Mills had formerly been of the burr type in Kansas; they now began to be converted into the roller type necessary for the harder grain.

By 1885 the demand for the new wheat was so great that a Mennonite miller sent to Russia for an entire carlot of it for distribution. The Kansas State college agricultural department experimented, developed and cross-bred the original "Turkey Red" into a variety of improved forms.

Land which had been considered fit only for grazing was broken in western Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma, and in the Texas Panhandle and eastern Colorado. By the time of the World war, the Southwest could literally lay claim to being the "bread basket of the nation."

Fifty-One Irish Kings

Died a Violent Death

Between A. D. 4 and A. D. 1172, there were 78 kings of Ireland and, on the average, they reigned only 6½ years.

Of these 78 Irish monarchs, 51 died a violent death, four became monks and one died on pilgrimage at Joppa. Fourteen Irish kings were slain in battle and 21 were assassinated, usually by their successors. Nor were the assassinations polite, asserts a writer in the Kansas City Star. One monarch was thrown into a lake and drowned, another was choked in a bog, a third had a spear thrust through his eye, another was poisoned by his sister, another—such was the Irish etiquette—was suddenly set upon by three unruly nephews.

Three kings were killed by thunderbolts. One of them had fled for safety to the Alps. But the thunderbolt got him, A. D. 421.

Even the great King Cormac-Ul-fhada, "a prince of most excellent wisdom who kept the most splendid court that ever was in Ireland," was choked by the bone of a fish at supper, A. D. 253. Among those Irish kings, you never could tell what would happen next.

Crows Steal Eggs

Tame or wild, crows are great "snitchers." They stick their sharp beaks through other birds' eggs, carry them away as on a spear. In India, they are so bold that cooks must often fight with them for possession of food cooking on the kitchen stove. From India comes a 3,000-year-old story of how a crow destroyed a serpent that had been eating its young, by stealing a king's anklet. The canny bird dropped the ornament in the serpent's lair. There the king's men found it, and killed the snake.

Crocodiles, Alligators

Crocodiles and alligators are so closely allied zoologically that many laymen cannot distinguish between them. Hence alligators are frequently accused of attacking and killing men when, in reality, the killers are crocodiles. Naturalists who have spent their lives in the study of these reptiles, says Collier's Weekly, state that they have never heard of an authentic case of a human death caused by an alligator.

John Ruskin Saying

When men are rightly occupied, their amusement grows out of their work, as the color petals out of a fruitful flower; when they are faithfully helpful and compassionate, all their emotions are steady, deep, perpetual, and vivifying to the soul as is the natural pulse to the body. —John Ruskin.

Gulfweed From Gulf Stream

Gulfweed is an olive-brown seaweed of the genus Sargassum, found in large patches in the Gulf Stream and the Sargasso sea. It was formerly thought to cover the sea entirely but actually occurs only in drifts. Numerous air sacs that look like berries make the weed float on the water.

David Livingstone Long a Missionary, Explorer

David Livingstone was a Scotchman, born in Lanarkshire in 1813, and when a boy he worked in a cotton factory. In 1840 he landed in South Africa, as a medical missionary of the London Missionary Society, and became an associate of Rev. Robert Moffat, whose daughter he afterward married.

For sixteen years he labored in the mission work, and during that time discovered Lake Ngami in the northwestern Bechuanaland, and crossed the continent from the Zambezi river to Loanda, a journey which occupied eighteen months. While in England in 1857 Livingstone published "Missionary Travels and Researches in South Africa," returning to Africa he devoted himself to exploration, and in 1855 resolved to find the sources of the Nile. During the remainder of his life, observes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, there were frequent periods when he was not heard from for months at a time, and it was during one of these protracted absences that Henry M. Stanley began his travels to search for him and found him in great destitution at Ujiji, on Lake Tanganyika.

Dr. Livingstone died in 1873 while exploring the river system of the Zambezi in the belief that these were the headwaters of the Nile, having penetrated to the south shores of Lake Bangweulu Rhodesia. In 1874 his body was interred in Westminster abbey.

Death Cannot Be Given Life

Pearls are things which never die. They are either born still-born and dead, or living. Still-born pearls with their dull, dead look can never be revived, according to a pearl specialist. This doesn't mean that all pearls that look dead are really so, though it takes a real expert to know when looking at them just after they have been extracted from the oyster. In most cases, the upper layer, or layers, of an oyster are not at all pretty. Having been built by the oyster in successive layers of congealed fluid, each layer has its own characteristic. The expert pearl jeweler's job is to see what layers lie below those which are uppermost, and to decide what that and what layer will give the greatest value to the pearl. And then to remove the less beautiful layers without damaging the lower, richer ones.

Old Method to Test Gold

The ancient test-stone, needles and acid method of determining the karat quality of gold never has been improved upon as a convenient test. Starting with the fact that pure gold is called 24 karat; that less than 24 karats indicates the relative amounts of gold and alloy in the metal (18 karat gold is 18-24ths gold and 6-24ths alloy); and that nitric acid dissolves alloy but not gold, it is seen readily why old methods are still in use.

"Who Wrote Shakespeare?" an Ancient Controversy

The controversy over the authorship of Shakespeare's works had its origin many years ago and appears from time to time. According to the Encyclopedia Britannica, cites a writer in the Detroit News, the idea that the plays and poems ascribed to Shakespeare were really the work of Lord Bacon appears to have been first presented by Herbert Lawrence in his work, "The Life and Adventures of Common Sense," (1769). The thesis appeared again in 1848 in J. C. Hart's "The Romance of Yachting," and in the article, "Who Wrote Shakespeare?" printed in Chambers' Journal (August 5, 1852). The first definite claim for Bacon's authorship was set forth in a letter by William Henry Smith, which was printed in extended form in 1857, under the title, "Bacon and Shakespeare." The earls of Rutland, Derby and Oxford have also been declared the real authors, at various times, and Bacon's claim has been extended to include the works of practically all the Elizabethan dramatists. In the United States, Judge Nathaniel Holmes wrote the book, "The Authorship of Shakespeare," and the controversy was continued by I. Donnelly's "The Great Cryptogram," which was based on the theorem that Bacon had embedded in the plays a cipher narrative declaring his authorship.

The various writers based their claims more or less on the following points: 1. It was assumed that Shakespeare did not have the educational or cultural background to write drama, while Bacon did. 2. Similar phraseology in the works of both Bacon and Shakespeare tended to show both to be the work of the same man, but investigation showed that such phraseology was common to all Elizabethan drama. None of the investigators have been able to prove that Bacon or any of the other suggested claimants ever wrote a line of blank verse.

Earthworms and Lightning Bugs

That earthworms turn into lightning bugs or fireflies is a common myth in some sections of the United States. The belief no doubt arose from the fact that the lightning bug or firefly is a species of beetle which passes through a larva stage. Adults, larvae and eggs are all luminous. Observation of the various species of glowworms may also have contributed to the popular belief. None of these luminous creatures is closely related to the common earthworm.

Charity Overseas

The Jains, a religious sect numbering, in all India, about one and a quarter million, had their origin in the Fifth century B. C. The great distinction between its members and the Hindus seems to lie in regard for animals, says Katherine Mayo in "The Face of Mother India." A poor Jain with infested clothes will carefully transfer his tenant from the cloth to better pasturage on his bare flesh, she declares.

Thanksgiving Day

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN National Chairman Sentinels of the Republic

Again in 1937, as through many years of its history, our Nation celebrates from ocean to ocean, from Lakes to Gulf, the most typical of all American holidays.

It is the observance of Thanksgiving Day—a celebration first dedicated to reverent gratitude for bountiful harvests; then later to appreciation of other blessings and promises of the passing years.

Never has America been without cause for such gratitude. For despite frequent problems, America remains, in a turbulent world, a land of faith and of fulfillment. That is true today, as in the past.

While other nations follow the hideous chimera of war, America remains at peace with her neighbors.

While other nations sacrifice the happiness of their people to the strutting show of nationalistic ambitions, the American people still believe in personal opportunity and freedom.

While other nations bow and scrape to the pretensions of dictators and their cliques, America is still dedicated to the proposition that all men are equal, and entitled to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

While other peoples suffer and die in the clutch of desperate economic and political experiments, Americans still enjoy the highest standards of life of any nation.

There is the glow of promise, too—not only of plentiful harvests, but of changing attitudes by our national leaders which promise freer opportunity for production of the many requirements of the American people, and wider recompense for those on whose enterprise and labor all production depends, whether at the plow, the lathe or the desk.

For these things Americans are grateful. For these they offer thanks to a Providence which blessed their efforts to make the earth yield more generously and to create by their own unfettered energy, the greatest, the freest and most bountiful land on earth.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank each and every one for their kindness shown us during the illness and death of our beloved husband and father.— Mrs. A. G. Deason and children at home, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Wyatt, Charlie Deason, Mrs. Coy Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Davis.

Home Heating Hints

Rubbish and Garbage Should Not Be Burned in Your Furnace; They Cause Trouble.

I SHOULD like to caution you against burning garbage and rubbish in the heating plant of your home.

Your furnace was built to burn coal, and coal only. Garbage and rubbish, when burned in it, deposit a thick crust of soot on the burning surfaces, and this soot absorbs much of the heat that should go into your rooms.

Don't burn rubbish or garbage in furnace. They cause heavy soot to cake on surfaces and waste heat and also cause clinkers to form.

Remember this: A clean furnace, like a clean automobile engine, will give better service and greater comfort.

T. E. Lawrence of Arabian fame dropped in for tea one day at the house of the famous dramatist, Bernard Shaw.

The result was that when he soon afterward hid himself in the British tank corps he enlisted as Private Shaw.

When Bernard Shaw later presented Lawrence with a copy of his play, "Saint Joan," he wrote a presentation inscription in it, "From Public Shaw to Private Shaw."

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"Worse Than Drowning" By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO, EVERYBODY: Charles Quinones of Bronx, N. Y., sends in a yarn that sets a new high for horror.

Charley is a Porto Rican who has come to the States to finish his education. It's a tale about his native land that he's going to tell us today.

They all lived in the town of Jajardo, on the northeast tip of Porto Rico, and the sea was not far away.

Fishing With Dynamite.

The tide came through the lagoon at El Faro at a pretty rapid clip. It was at the time when that tide was just turning that dynamite fishing was best.

They had to act quickly after that. If they didn't get those fish immediately the swift-moving tide would carry them away.

Between the Devil and the Deep.

The little fish came to the top after an explosion, but the bigger ones sank to the bottom—and it was the big ones that Charley was after.

Charley had made a good dive, but there was no time to lose. The current was even swifter down near the bottom than it had been on the surface.

It was a ghastly sight that Charley saw up there above him. Up near the surface, directly over his head, he saw something white swimming back and forth.

Huge Shark Was Terrifying.

Says Charley: "The sight of it almost made me faint, and there aren't enough words in any language to describe how terrified I felt.

Charley saw and thought all those things in a fraction of a second. He knew he couldn't swim upward.

Never in his life had Charley been in a worse spot. "What I suffered in those moments of cruel apprehension," he says, "seems incredible now.

Desperate Push to the Surface.

"And what made matters worse was the fact that no one could help me out of it. I was alone—more alone than anyone has ever been before, I believe.

"Up I went. Then, suddenly I heard a splash—felt a violent blow from a huge body—and lost consciousness."

When Charley came to he was lying on the beach, his friends all grouped around him.

The other young fellows had dragged Charley, half drowned, to the beach, and Charley says that's the last time he's been swimming in anything bigger than a bathtub.

Softening Water

The water is so hard in some parts of the country that softening forms a part of the purification process.

The land part of the international boundary between the United States and Canada, which is about 1,749 miles in length, is marked variously with monuments of iron, aluminum, bronze set on concrete, stone cairns and concrete, placed at points ranging from two and a half to four miles apart.

The water part of the boundary is defined by courses and distances between turning points that are referred to as light-houses or markers of metal or concrete on the shores of lakes and banks of streams.

CHRISTIAN FRUITFULNESS

GOLDEN TEXT—John 15:1-8. GOLDEN TEXT—Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples.—John 15:8.

Thanksgiving day has just afforded each one of us a special opportunity to return praise to God for the fruitfulness of America's broad acres.

Christian work of which we spoke last Sunday may (at least in a measure) be imitated, but fruit cannot be imitated.

The chapter before us is a portion of Scripture which has been the peculiar favorite of God's children in all generations.

Many are the expositions of this passage, but a beautifully simple one which came to the writer from Dr. W. Graham Scroggie is suggested as most helpful.

I. Life and Fruitfulness (vv. 1-8). Life results in fruit and there can be no true fruit where there is no life.

But, alas, there are branches that seem to belong to the vine but they lack the one indispensable evidence of life which is the normal bearing of fruit.

But, alas, there are branches that seem to belong to the vine but they lack the one indispensable evidence of life which is the normal bearing of fruit.

Let us beware lest we explain away their serious import. These are grave words of warning to false professors of Christianity, but they are not spoken to distress and dishearten true followers of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Fruit in the Christian is undoubtedly first of all the fruit of character but that character is also to show in conduct.

Do not miss the prayer promise in verse 7. It is an unlimited promise with a closely limited condition.

II. Love and Friendship (vv. 9-16). "This is my commandment that ye love one another."

"This is my commandment that ye love one another." In verse 10 we read that to abide in the love of Christ we must keep his commandments and now we learn that it is his command that we love one another.

The joy of Christ was fulfilled on the eve of Calvary by the love of his disciples for one another and for him.

Dr. Scroggie says, "We may be God's children without being his friends; the one is based on his gift of life to us; the other, upon our offering of love for him."

But, oh! the sweet intimacy of fellowship with him. Read verses 14 to 16. Chosen and appointed by him, for "he first loved us," we are not kept in the distant position of servants but are brought into his circle of friends with whom he shares the glorious secrets of his Father, and our Father. It is a great thing to be a Christian, a friend of the Saviour.

Intellect Every man should use his intellect not as he uses his lamp in the study, only for his own seeing, but as the lighthouse uses its lamps, that those afar off on the sea may see the shining and learn their way.

The Past The wise man must remember that while he is a descendant of the past, he is a parent of the future, and that his thoughts are as children born to him, which he may not carelessly let die.—Spencer.

Static Electricity is the Oldest Kind Known

Static is the oldest kind of electricity known, notes a writer in the New York Times. Our word "electricity" comes from the Greek "electron," meaning amber. Rub amber, as the Greeks did, and it becomes electrically charged. Then touch it and the charge is drawn off in a little spark. So with dry fur, glass, resin, wax, scores of materials.

Two positively electrified or two negatively electrified bodies repel each other. But positives and negatives attract. Franklin gave us this distinction between positive and negative.

Static electricity is like water on a rubber ball in that it clings to the surface. Just as a rubber ball can gather only so much water, so a ball of glass or resin can collect only so much static electricity. If more electricity accumulates than the surface can hold, there is what the physicists call a brush discharge, meaning a leaking away into the air. If the excess is great, the leaking may manifest itself in a visible glow.

Until Volta in 1800 invented the cell which we use in our batteries the only kind of electricity that science knew was static. Out of Volta's cell came not just one burst of electricity but a steady stream. After that science began to talk of dynamic or continuously flowing electricity. When at last the electric generator followed Faraday's discovery of induction it was naturally called a dynamo—short for "dynamo electric machine."

First Timepieces Used

Heavy Weights on Cords
The earliest timepieces were clocks for which the motive power was supplied by weights. The unavoidable dangling of the weights from their cords compelled the limitation of the use of timepieces at first to standing or hanging in one place.

This was the situation from about the year 1300 until about 1500, according to a writer in the Washington Post, when the first portable timepieces were made possible by an invention of Peter Henlein, of Nuremberg, Germany, who first applied spiral steel springs to take the place of weights for motive power. The value of this invention to mankind is incalculable.

At first mainsprings were made comparatively short and thick. In these there was so great a difference between the power when fully wound and partly run down that special mechanical devices had to be used to equalize the power.

The best of these devices was the fuse, which is used in marine chronometers. But for watches the problem of improving the uniformity of power was solved by using longer and thinner mainsprings, helped out also by the development of isochronal adjustment, which makes it less imperative that the extent of vibrations of the balance shall be uniform, as these are affected by the motive power.

Alaska Has Odd Geese

A race of dark-complexioned wild geese reside in the coastal region of British Columbia and southeastern Alaska. They are similar in general appearance and size to their better known relative, the Canada goose or "honker," but differ in being very much darker. They are known as the white-cheeked goose. Apart from the difference in coloration between these two races of geese there are differences in habit also, the most important being that of migration. The Canada goose makes long annual journeys to and from its nesting grounds; some raise their young on James bay and spend the winter on the Gulf of Mexico. The white-cheeked goose, on the other hand, may spend the entire year, or even all its lifetime in the same region.

Nightingale Pledge for Nurses

The Florence Nightingale pledge for nurses is: "I solemnly pledge myself before God and in the presence of this assembly to pass my life in purity, and to practice my profession faithfully. I will abstain from whatever is deleterious and mischievous, and will not take or knowingly administer any harmful drug. I will do all in my power to elevate the standards of my profession, and I will hold in confidence all personal matters committed to my keeping and all family affairs coming to my knowledge in the practice of my calling. With loyalty I will endeavor to aid the physician in his work and devote myself to the welfare of those committed to my care."

Use of Word "Tips"

As long ago as 1775 English waiters looked forward to liberal tips and customers grumbled about the practice. Exactly how old tipping is is doubtful, but in the days of Chaucer the English had a verb "to tip," meaning to give. That's probably where the word comes from, says the Washington Post, but there has been a more interesting origin suggested. This story has it that once there were boxes in coffee houses to receive contributions for waiters. These boxes were labeled "To Insure Prompt Service," or, sometimes, just "T. I. P. S."

Matador Band To Play Allphin's Composition

Lubbock, Texas, Nov. 24. — Two composers of band music are visiting Texas Technological College campus this month to hear their compositions played by the Matador band.

John F. Victor of Abilene, author of "Music Band Textbook" adopted by the State of Texas, attended a band rehearsal Nov. 18 at which several of his pep tunes still in manuscript form were played. Victor has publishing houses in Abilene, Cincinnati, and New York.

Next week N. W. Allphin of Tahoka will be here when Director D. O. Wiley's band plays his overture, "College Life". Last year he composed several marches which were included in the Tech band repertoire.

Jones Suggests Early Terracing

Farmers have begun making inquiries at the county agent's office relative to terracing and contouring of land, according to V. F. Jones, County Agent.

Mr. Jones states that there will be an unusual demand this year upon the county agent for running of terrace lines and he asks that farmers who intend to do terracing work, start the work just as soon as possible, so the terracing season may be spread over a longer period of time, and in that way more farmers can be aided and the terracing work will not all come at one time.

He suggests that if you intend to do terracing work, run the lines and mark them off as soon as the bulk of the crop is gathered, and you will then be ready to build the terraces as soon as harvest is completed and will not have any delay in waiting to have lines run.

Mr. Aubrey Floyd of Warrenton, Virginia, is here visiting his mother Mrs. R. B. Floyd and other relatives.

Candidate Crop will Be Large This Year

Verily the candidate will soon be abroad in the land.

Judge W. W. Price of Brownfield was a Tahoka visitor last Saturday and he confided to the News man that he would have an important announcement to make about the first of January. He expects to be a candidate next year for district judge.

We have heard whisperings of others who are likely to be in one race or another. So, it will not be long now until we shall meet the happy smile and feel the warm handshake of the candidate on every street corner. But the candidate is not always as happy as he looks. We should treat him kindly.

New Federal Building For Lamesa

The corner stone of a new Federal Building at Lamesa was laid last Saturday afternoon with appropriate ceremonies. District Judge Louis B. Reed was the principal speaker of the occasion. Other speakers were former Representative Carl Rountree, Mayor W. L. Marr, and a Federal Postal Inspector of Fort Worth. Postmaster Owen Taylor presided. And the Lamesa band played.

It was a great day for Lamesa.

Mrs. Clay Hughes, who underwent a serious operation a few weeks ago, is able to be up part of the time and is said to be recovering satisfactorily.
