Aged Resident Of Magnolia Died Last Sunday

Mrs. Elizabeth C. Hendrix, 82 Years Old, Is Victim Of Pneumonia.

Mrs. Elizabeth C. Hendrix died t 12:30 a. m. Sunday at her resilence on the J. E. Morgan premises miles east of Tahoka, lacking less than a month of being 82 years of age. Death followed a brief illness of only one week of the influenza or La Grippe.

Death stole upon her quietly and she died apparently at peace with her Maker and with all the world.

Funeral services were conducted at her residence on her late husband's birthday, Monday, December 27, and the body was laid away in the cemetary at Southland. Her pastor, Rev. D. W. Reed, conducted the services, assisted by a former pastor, Rev. J. W. Webb of Lamesa.

She was preceded in death by her husband, R. N. Hendrix, who died on May 24, 1933. During his lifetime the children made it a practice to return to the paternal home on his birthday and there do honor to the father and mother. On this birthday aninversary, the father being dead, they had come to visit their mother but Death came also and tenderly they laid her body away.

All the living children were present except one daughter, Mrs. Maggie McGregor of Malakoff, who was unable to come.

The condition of Max Minor was apparently decidedly improved Wednesday, according to reports from the hospital.

After having been out of the hospital for several weeks, Max had a sudden relapse last Thursday and had to be taken back for further treatment. It was found that another operation was imperative and several section of the intestines were removed. For two or three days practically no hope for his recovery was entertained but his condition since has been much more encouraging.

County Ginnings Total Is 128,000 Bales Cetton

Cool, Damp Weather, Holidays Retard Gathering Of Crop During Past Week.

Thirteen of the twenty-eight gins in Lynn county had ginned 63,675 bales of cotton this season, according to reports gathered by the News. Wednesday morning and Thursday morning. The county total is now approximately 128,000.

This represents a gain of about 2,800 bales over our report of two weeks ago. The published figures show a gain of only 2,619 bales, but one of the Tahoka gins unintentionally made an error of about 200 bales in its report of two weeks ago, fracture of his spine on Wednesday making its report at that time too

The five gins at O'Donnell, three at Wilson, and the others at Newmoore, Wells, T-Bar, Gordon, Wayside, Hackberry, and Lakeview, 15 in all, have undoubtedly ginned conconsiderably more cotton in the past two weeks than have the 13 gins from which we have gathered reports. It may be conservatively estimated that all the gins in the county have ginned approximately 6,500 bales since we gathered reports two weeks ago and considerably more htan 7,000 bales since the Government report was gathered on December 14.

The gathering of the remnants left in the field has been greatly hampered the past two weeks by cold and damp weather; also by the holiday season. Vice President

As the time for quitting approached Garner Mr. Roosevelt called Vice President Garner to the White House to help devise a plan of salvage. With the veteran went Speaker Bankhead and Senator Barkley and Representative Sam Rayburn, majority leaders of the senate and house. The topic of discussion was what should be done with the debris of the administration program and how much should be demanded of congress in the next session.

Just before adjournment the senate passed the housing bill, which the house had already approved. But it was necessary to send the measure to conference, so final enactment was delayed.

Crop control bills were passed by both senate and house, but they differed widely and early final enactment was impossible because the joint conference between committees of the two houses to reconcile the measures could not get into action before January.

Chairman O'Connor of the house rules committee said that a good deal actually was accomplished during the special session in the way of "spade work" which would enable the law makers to get along faster with their work in the regular January session. This was especially true concerning revision of the tax

Wage-Hour Bill Killed

WHEN the bill for regulation of wages and hours, approved by the senate in August, came up for action in the house the President suffered one of his greatest legislative defeats. Southern Democrats and the Republican minority combined to send the measure back to the labor committee, which meant its definite defeat. This bill, which would have set up an administrator with dictatorial powers over labor and business management, was considered only second in importance to the farm bill. It had the support of the C. I. O., so John Lewis shared in the defeat. The A. F. of L. had offered a substitute which was rejected, as President Green had expected it would be.

No action was taken on the President's other "must" measures, which were for revision of antitrust laws, regional planning and federal government reorganization. --

Cummings charged that the grand jury was prepared to return indictments when it was dismissed.

Panay Incident

WHILE Washington was awaiting a formal reply from Tokyo to the American notes concerning the murderous attack by airmen Japanese and machine gunners on the U.S. gunboat Panay, it was reported that Hirohito, emperor of Japan, had taken personal charge of the matter. If true, this would be a severe blow to the allmilitary powerful and naval factions in the Japanese government which have been doing about as they chose. It would be an astonishing development in another way, for hitherto the "Son of Heaven" has always held himself aloof from such concerns. The Japanese cabinet was called in extraordinary session to discuss the Panay incident and determine what reply should be made to the American protests.

Washington's second note was especially sharply worded because of the revelation that the Panay and the boats carrying its dead and wounded to shore were fired upon by machine gunners in Japanese army boats.

In Washington it was revealed that conversations were in progress among the American, British and French governments looking to joint to protect their nationals from Japanese attacks and to bring about peace in the Far East. Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Minister Eden told the British house of commons that Britain seeks a settlement of all world grievances without war but that "we are not forgetful of the duty to protect British interests."

Alf Landon, as head of the Republican party, telegraphed President Roosevelt his pledge of support of his policy in dealing with Japan, and in accepting it the President took occasion to condemn an isolationist attitude and to assert that 'we owe some measure of co-operation and even leadership in maintaining standards of conduct helpful to the ultimate goal of general peace."

This was especially pleasing to the British cabinet.

After Dinner Speeches.

JOUSTON, TEXAS. - Lately, for my sins, I've had to listen to a jag of after-dinner oratory, including plenty of mine. I hope people like to hear me. I do.

Feature writers say professional after-dinner speakers are dying out.

That may be true in New York, where folks are anxious to get the dinner over with so they may hurry to the nightspots and do some sincere and earnest drinking in an effort to forget what the stock market did to them yesterday and what it's going to do to them tomorrow.

But out in the hinterlands the new crop of native orators is a bountiful one; and the typical silver tongues of the great open spaces—I'm speaking of their neighborhoods although I might include their mouths-are still convinced that the sweetest music on earth is the sound of one's own voice uplifted in eloquence.

An English preacher had the best formula: Stand up to be seen, speak up to be heard, shutup to be appreciated. If he'd left out all but the last part, 'twould have been a perfect recipe.

Tomorrow's Treasures.

ANT to acquire untold wealth for your latter years, or, anyhow, for your grateful heirs?

Then collect things. Collect cheap things which are both common and commonplace. Then sit down and wait for these objects to become obsolete and therefore priceless. Yesterday's necessity is today's junk, but will be tomorrow's treasured antique.

Assume you'd saved up old circus bills, or Mississippi river steamboat menus, or buggy whips, or those handpainted slop-jars formerly found in all truly refined homes. Henry Ford or some museum would take a lot at any price.

I'm putting aside literary works of a purely imaginative conception. have one perfect specimen of idyllic creation-a time-table of the old Florida East Coast railroad, also a complete working synopsis of the Townsend plan-just sheer fantasy. But the most fanciful romances are the platform pledges adopted at national conventions of the two great parties during the last twenty years -there's real fiction for you!

Germany's Colonies.

EVERY nation is united in the magnanimous attitude that to Germany should be restored the colonies taken from her by the winning side in the World's war-except the nations that acquired the said colonies in the split-up.

That's the main hitch. It's more than a hitch. It's a hard knot, tied originally with hate and sealed now with greed. In other words, sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander-unless it happens to be out gander, which naturally alters the case. Nor seemingly has it occurred to any government that the original owners of Germany's former territorial possessions might like to have a say about whom they're going to belong to in future. But then, if ever we started considering the wishes of despoiled native tribes over the world, where would the white man's noble civilization be?

Cosmopolites. THE last time before this that Captain Mike Hogg and Major Raymond Dickson returned to their ranch at Cast Blanca, Mex., they were just back from New York. That night, at the bunkhouse, the hands, mostly Texas lads, foregathered to hear the bosses tell about the wonders of the great city. One or two of them had visited New York, so these cosmopolitans proceeded to exhibit their familiarity with its sights.

"Major," said one, "I reckon old Grant's tomb's still doin' business at the same stand, eh?"

"And I bet the aquarium is right where she was when I was there," said another. "And all them tall

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

> "When Two Spies Meet" By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter

ELLO EVERYBODY:

You know, boys and girls, when you stop to think of it, every one of us has had some outstanding adventure, sometime in our lives, that is of interest to other people. Leo Faccone of Jersey City, N. J., writes that he had been reading the adventure column for months before he thought of sending in his own ad-

Leo is twenty-eight and the father of two children, but aside from the great adventure of marriage and fatherhood, Leo says, the greatest thrill in his life came when he was only nine years old.

Let's go back over the years with Leo. The World war was on and Leo was playing soldier with little John Ferara and other Italian-American youngsters of the neighborhood. These boys' forefathers were of a race that once conquered the world, and playing soldier came natural to them. When it was suggested that Leo play the part of a German spy and hide, he agreed. The shades of night had just fallen and it would soon be time for the boys to go home, but there was time for one last game. Leo, as the spy, slipped away to hide. He knew a swell hiding place behind the blacksmith shop, which backs on the right of way of the Pennsylvania railroad. There were lots of wagons standing in the yard, between the railroad embankment and the building, and Leo slipped in between them like a real German spy and lay, quiet as a mouse, on the ground.

Play Spy Met Up With a Real One.

Lee could picture the other boys looking for him-everywhere but here. The spot was the sort of place that people would avoidunless, of course, they were determined German spies like Leo. Out in the street traffic went by now and then and once a train roared by on the tracks over his head, but otherwise the spot was as quiet as the grave.

Suddenly, however, Leo became aware that he was not the only person hiding out that night. The tall figure of a man rose quietly—only about ten feet away from him-and furtively arranged some sort of box he carried in his hands. The actions of the man frightened Leo. "Perhaps he is really a German spy," Leo thought. Frightened but determined, the boy lay still and watched. He could not see the features of the man, but he could see his outline and hear him tinkering with the box. Once-frightened apparently by someone passing in the street-the man dropped to the ground and lay still. He hid himself so well that even Leo could not see him. Leo was glad of that because it meant that the man in turn could not see him.

There Was a Ticking in the Box.

Minutes went by during which Leo shivered with excitement. Here he was out playing that he was a spy and suddenly the tables were turned and a real spy was before him. He hoped the other boys wouldn't come hunting for him here and spoil it all. Leo wasn't very old to be a detective, but he knew from the man's actions that he was doing something he shouldn't be doing and Leo wanted a chance to get the police. What a feather in his cap if the man did turn out to be a spy!

As he was thinking these thoughts and listening to his own heart thump, the man's tall figure rose suddenly again right beside him! He was closer, if anything, and Leo was scared stiff that he would be discovered. The boy got ready to make a break for it at the slightest sign of suspicion. But the man-whoever he was-seemed unaware of Leo's presence. He was intent on the box before him. He handled that box very carefully, Leo noticed, and once when a passing car threw a light in the yard, Leo saw a tense, cruel face under a mop of gray hair. He hugged the ground and waited. Finally Leo, listening, heard a strange sound from the box. It sounded like a clock ticking. The man seemed satisfied with the sound and moved with the box in the direction of the railroad embankment. Leo saw him bend over and place it under a culvert beneath the tracks.

And just then the other boys nearly spoiled the whole game. They started calling for Leo to give himself up. Well sir, Leo says he'd seen enough anyway and was pretty glad of a chance to sneak away, if he could do it without being seen. He crawled along on his stomach and then made a run for it.

The other boys were scared when they saw Leo's pale face, but when he told them about the spy he had found they all ran in different directions for a policeman. A policeman was found and he brought with him two other men who didn't laugh when Leo told them his story. Instead they went back on one side of the blacksmith shop while the policeman went on the other. The boys stood on the sidewalk and watched a real spy chasing game.

Yes, It Was a Big Time Bomb.

The policeman went along noisily flashing his light to the spot where Leo had seen the man. Some of the boys thought Leo had just been 'seeing things' and started to laugh, but the next minute the laughs froze on their faces as a man, running at top speed, tore out of the darkness away from the policeman and toward them.

He didn't get far though, Leo says, before he had run right into the arms of the two men waiting for him. They caught him and held him while the policeman came up. Leo says he didn't look like a spy at all when they had him in the light. But a good spy never does look like one. The man never said a word, Leo says, while the policeman called the patrol wagon. Leo even began to feel sorry for him and to think he had made a mistake, but in a few minutes he knew differently. He led the policeman back to where he had seen the man place the box. They picked the box up gingerly. And what do you suppose it was? A time bomb! With enough explosives in it to blow up the entire neighborhood! The clock was set for midnight when a train would be passing and, according to experts, the explosion would also have killed Leo and his whole family who lived a few doors And that, boys and girls, is the story of how Leo caught the German spy. Luck? Perhaps. But luck and adventure are companions. Copyright.-WNU Service.

Description of Humming Bird

The earliest account of the hummingbird ever made in English, as written in William Wood's "New England's Prospect," published in 1634, said: "The Hummingbird is no bigger than a hornet, yet hath all the dimensions of a bird, as bill and wings, with quills, spiderlike legges, small clawes; for colour she is as glorious as the raine-bow; as she flies she makes a little humming noise like a Humble-bee, wherefore she is called the Humbird."

Beginning a New Year is always a thrilling experience. The thought of an unwritten record is a pleasant one and at the same time most solemnizing. We must take heed, you and I, what we write upon that page which lies before us with the inviting caption-"1938." Next to having New Year's day fall on Sunday, it is most appropriate that the Lord's day should come between the holiday of yesterday spent with our family and friends, and the work-day on the morrow, when we begin the year's labors. Today we tarry in God's house to pray and counsel together in the light of his Holy Word regarding the new year of grace and opportunity. We begin today a six-month study of the Gospel of Mark, which presents Christ as the Servant of God. It is the Gospel of the mighty acts of divine power, rather than of words. It is characterized by energy and spontaneity. It moves rapidly. The characteristic words are "straightway," "immediately," and "forthwith," which are used more than forty times. Before considering our lesson for today, we would undoubtedly like to "meet the author." John Mark was the son of the Mary in Jerusalem in whose home was "the upper room" where so many important events took place. He was a cousin of Barnabas and went with him and Paul on the first missionary journey. For some reason he lost heart and went home, much to Paul's distress. Happily we find that the young man redeemed himself in Paul's estimation and was later well spoken of by him (Col. 4:10, Phile. 24, and I Tim. 4:11). The lesson text chosen for our 'preview" of the Gospel is one which shows the weakness of human ambitions as contrasted with the true spirit of humble service which characterized Christ. I. Selfish Ambition Rebuked (vv.

35-41). Ambition is not in itself wrong, but when it becomes so extreme that it projects self forward at the expense of others it becomes selfish and destructive. The fact that these men were evidently earnest and were, indeed, seeking a place with the Lord in his glory does not change the situation. They were selfish even in dealing with holy things. James and John had asked for a great honor in the kingdom, but had not sought to share in the suffering that preceded it. Their own ignorance of what was involved, their own weakness, their observation of God's hand in the carrying out of his own plans, should have deterred them. There is such a thing as holy boldness, but there is also such a thing as unholy temerity. II. Sacrificial Service Defined

(vv. 42-45). Christianity is not organized after the manner of secular government (v. 42). Much of the mischief that has come to pass in the church is the result of "running the church" as an organization, when it should be allowed to develop as a living organism.

Anyone who observes with even a little care knows that the church of Jesus Christ is hindered most seriously by the presence of pride and selfish ambition. Some people will not work unless they can rule. Their money is withheld unless it buys for them a dominating interest. The pastor is persona non grata unless he recognizes the desires of the "right" people. None of these things are done as obviously as our words would suggest. . There is much careful "fixing" and "wire-pulling" behind the scenes. But it amounts to exactly the same thing, and it is all entirely foreign to the spirit of

Are there then no Christians who humbly serve the Lord? Yes, praise his name, there are many, and wherever they are found they are the salt of the earth. God uses and blesses them to his own glory. They may not be (and often are not) in "positions of leadership,"-but they are actually the leaders of the church in its true work on the earth.

Joyce heard him but her attention was riveted on something else. The bear-like apparition she had mistaken for Blackadder had undergone a strange transformation. Duffle bag and furs discarded, the slender figure of a young man in riding togs had emerged and was making a dash for the bridge. Joyce gasped, shaken by an insane desire to laugh, but the puffs of dust thrown up by bullets to the right and left of his flying feet quickly sobered her. She scrambled down the spiral stairway, rushed to the outer zaguan and ordered its heavy bar lifted. None too soon, for as it slammed shut behind the fugitive several spent bullets buried themselves in its solid timbers. He was a young man, at the moment too breathless to speak, but his gray eyes were dancing and even his mussed dark hair gave an illusion of merriment.

"So it's you," said Joyce slowly, trying to measure the meaning and consequences of his presence. "Yes," gasped Dirk, "and it's you too. Are-are you all right?" "Yes, thank you," said Joyce unsmilingly.

"You're sure?" he persisted, "I mean quite, quite all right?" flushed at her frown. "Nothing's happened?" "Several things have happened," said Joyce dryly. "I hardly know what to do with you, Mr. Van Sut-"Why?" he asked flippantly. "Is the house crowded?" "Fairly," she answered, her cheeks coloring. "Unfortunately," she added gravely, "we already have more than a full complement of children."

He was confused, conscious he was being shamed, yet wondering why. He had felt genuine ardor at setting out to make what Arnaldo termed a sentimental gesture. He had come to rescue her from the clutches of Dorado; she had rescued

"It appears I'm not welcome. Are you suggesting I get out?" "That's the trouble," she said, frowning, "I can't ask you to go because you couldn't leave if you

"Oh, yes I can," said Dirk; "I'll show you."

He turned quickly, dropped one end of the bar on the great gate, dragged it open only a foot and slipped through. His cheeks burned with anger. He knew she was right, knew it better than she. There was more than the combination of Dorado and the wrecked roadster to keep him from leaving. His jobthe job so carelessly tossed him and so blithely taken on! He hadn't even nicked it; all he had done was to stand around while it swelled from a toy balloon into a blimp. But he was here and so was the job; consequently here was where he would have to stay. Joyce dashed after him.

"Don't be a fool," she protested angrily. "This isn't the time or the place to show off."

Dirk stopped and turned on her. "Go back," he ordered. "I'm not trying to show off and I'm not a I admit you're right on the rest of it. You can't throw me out and since my car is junk, thanks to your sharp-shooters, I can't possibly get away.

"Then what are you doing?" asked Joyce, bewildered. "Why are we out here?"

"I'm going to fetch my things," said Dirk sullenly, "but your being out here is just a piece of non-

Abruptly Joyce became aware of silence. She looked up and around. Far to the east she caught sight of the pillar of dust, this time moving away. She led the way toward the bridge. "I've been in lots of countries," Dirk grumbled as they walked "but this is the first where everybody shoots before they ask who you are. By the way, did you know mine isn't the only car parked the other side of the glorified ditch?" To her amazement she heard herself say: "No. Where?"

Why? Why had that lie sprung ready-made to her lips? Her brain had had nothing to do with it; it hadn't had time. Now she paused in her stride, almost brought to a halt by memory of Pancho's flivver. She had forgotten about it. So there had been a way, after all, to send Van Suttart packing. They retrieved Dirk's baggage and presently returned laden with duffle bag, rifle, coonskin coat, cap and gloves. Joyce watched Van Suttart with a curious expression as he replaced the bar on the great gate and then that of the zaguan. Reluctantly she led the way across the court and into the patio. He paused on its threshold and drew a long whistling breath. Luz came hurrying toward them, her dark eyes hard and questioning. Joyce gave her a rapid order. spective stepfather! What business "You'll have to talk faster than that is it of his? Why should he be givfor me to miss it," said Dirk. "You ing you instructions?"

"Yes, and you'll find it's about a quarter of a mile," said Joyce sharply. She was angry-no longer at him but at herself. Why had she done this thing-admitted an enemy when she could have let him go. She saw Maxie approaching. Hadn't he warned her? "Since we ourselves are our only friends whoever comes from without must be a foe."

"Who's the poor devil of a blind man?" asked Dirk, cutting in on her thoughts. "It's Senor Maximiliano, the superintendent," explained Joyce. "Maxie, let me introduce Mr. Dirk Van Suttart, second secretary of the American embassy." Don Jorge threw up his head as he held out his hand gropingly. "Ah, my apologies." "What for?" asked Dirk. "It was by my order you happened to be greeted with bullets." Dirk was led around two sides of single window looked down upon the walled enclosure of an abandoned threshing floor. It was comfortable rather than luxurious. He shaved and washed but did not change, then he found his way back to the balcony.

It was no place for a loafer. Hugging the rail he slipped down the stairs, intending to embark on a tour of discovery. As he passed the half-open door of what had once been Joyce's playroom he heard a low whinny. He entered and a moment later was passing knowing fingers over the heads, across the withers and down the legs of as fine a pair of hunters as he had ever handled. Where there were such horses there must be gear. He went out and walked along slowly, trusting his nose more than his eyes. No sooner did he emerge from the inner patio than the smell of leather led him to the tack room, and what a tack room! Harness, bridles, spare bits and stirrups; saddles of every description, hand - made, home - made and imported. Two English ones promptly caught his eye. He lifted their flaps, flexed the stirrup leathers and groaned.

A methodical search unearthed a half gallon of neat's-foot oil and an unopened tin of saddle soap. With a sigh of satisfaction he threw off his jacket, rolled up his sleeves and went to work. Oblivious of the passing hours he remained unaware of Joyce's approach. She stood watching him with unbelieving eyes. Here was no coxcomb but an expert who knew exactly what he was about. "I'm sorry I called you names." "Eh? Oh, it's you, When?" "You know; that first day at the chancellery." "That was a long time ago," he said with a shake of his head as if to wake himself up. "You've certainly been stepping since then."

"It does seem long," admitted Joyce, "but it's only a week. I'm curious. How did you get here and why did you come?"

'Official business," said Dirk. "Instructions."

"What instructions?" He dragged a flimsy from his hip pocket, unfolded it and studied the penciled interlinings with a frown. "I can't read it all because it's marked confidential, but it says I'm instructed to locate you with all pos-sible dispatch, show every attention including provision of funds and guard without annoying you." While he spoke Joyce had drawn near. With a sure movement, a pull rather than a snatch, she possessed herself of the paper and stepped back into the sunlight where she could read it at her ease. "So," she exclaimed, "I thought so! Pro-eyes flaring.—"On what grounds?"

Dirk thought desperately but fast.
What was the club Arnaldo had used on Margarida? He remembered 'On the grounds you're a minor."

Joyce's eyes traveled over him thoughtfully. "I came to tell you lunch is ready," she said at last. "While we're eating I'll decide whether to give you the run of the place on parole or have you locked

Neither of them smiled. Her sincerity was so evident that what she said fell naturally on his ears and was accepted at face value.

Lunch was not served in the formal dining room but in a much smaller apartment. Dirk sat on Joyce's right, Don Jorge Maximiliano on her left and they were served by a barefooted procession of servants equal in number to the variety of dishes. One forgot Don Jorge was blind, so neatly did he handle himself. He the balcony and then through a talked in uncertain but precise English with an Oxford accent, inquiring what posts Dirk had occupied and apparently trying to project himself backward into happy and distant scenes.

Silence fell. Dirk, reminded of the hunters, asked about them. "The last of a noble strain," said Don Jorge. "Dorado kept them close at hand, but as things turned out not quite close enough. He alone rode them, a daily profanation."

Dirk turned to Joyce. "Do you mind if I tend to them? They need grooming." "I'd love to have them looked after," said Joyce, "but what about your parole?" "You have it. I give you my word won't try to escape until you say can go—and perhaps not then." "Will you teach me to ride?" she bargained. "Certainly." He spoke with confidence. "I'll be ready to give you your first lesson in an hour. She rose from the table. "I'm not sure I can make it, but I'll try.

We dine in this room at half past seven." On his own responsibility he moved the hunters into two box stalls adjoining the tack room. One after the other he curried and groomed them until their hides shone. They nudged him violently more than once, expressing gratitude and hope. Dirk examined their feet; they had been freshly shod. As a finishing touch he oiled their hoofs and then had to make up his mind which he would saddle first. Among the campesinos about the stalls was Tobalito, a retainer. Dirk addressed him.

"What are their names?" he asked. "The bay is Tronido and the sorrel they call Rayo."

"Thunder and translated Dirk. Every bridle in the tack room was murderously equipped and it took some time to discover a couple of discarded snaffle bits, polish and substitute them. Dirk undertook to ride the bay first. He was prepared for trouble but somewhat to his disappointment, certainly to that of the crowd, there were no pyrotechnics. The animal recognized a master and his only show of insubordination was a quivering sidling toward the outer gate and freedom. Dirk walked, trotted and finally cantered him on a reach where the cobbles were bedded in chaff. He put his mate through the same meager exercise and found him equally amenable and spirited; nevertheless when Joyce appeared upon the scene there were no hunters in sight. In their place, ready saddled with the same gear, stood two rattail country ponies. "What's the idea?" flushing angrily.

"Now don't be cross, please," begged Dirk. "You wouldn't expect to play a concerto at your first mu-sic lesson, would you?" He looked her up and down admiringly. "If

"We'll soon fix that," said Dirk and proceeded to hand out the ABCs of equitation.

His patience matched her impatience and finally conquered it through sheer endurance. He made her mount and dismount a dozen times-reins, stirrup, pommel, then spring. When she was all but exhausted they rode at a walk and finally at a trot. She looked longingly toward the zaguan.

"I wonder if it would be safe," she murmured, "just for a little way?" She spoke rapidly to Tobalito in Spanish. "Go ask Leonardo if there's any trouble in sight. We want to ride only as far as the Tobalito deported at a run, presently emerged from the northeast bastion, waved his hand and proceeded to drop the bar on the zaguan. A moment later she and Dirk passed through the outer gate and immediately she put her pony into a canter. True to her word they rode only as far as the bridge and turned. The next instant she wondered what had happened. The scrawny pony between her knees had made for the open gate as though shot from a catapult. She did not go with him. She landed, all sitting, with a jar that shook every tooth in her head. While she was still seeing stars Dirk was on his knees at her side.

"Hurt?" he asked. "Don't be silly," she exclaimed angrily. "Of course I'm hurt."

Where?" "None of your business," she answered, scrambling to her feet. She stalked before him. In silence they reached the gate, passed through the courts and the patio. She disappeared and he was not to see her again until dinner time. Having bathed and dressed in his one lounge suit he entered the dining room with some trepidation, but woman can change everything she has on without changing her mood. He stared at her as if once more he were discovering the unknown, so different did she look in a fresh summer frock like a splash of flowers. The meal finished, the three of them sat for an our of lazy talk since on any hacienda time ceases with the setting of the sun. When at last she rose Don Jorge lifted his face toward her. "Shall I make the rounds, chica, or will you?" "I'll do it," said Joyce. "Perhaps you might show Mr. Van Suttart," said the blind man. 'Since he is now our friend he tart, will you come?" Dirk followed her through tortuous passages, up a spiral stairway and out on the esplanade of the rectangular roof. At the four corners towered the bastions. Beneath their feet were flat tiles so thick and so deeply embedded they could have withstood a cannonade. As far as the eye could reach shimmered the pale gold of the prairie, broken only by the distant snowy pyre of the Nevado de Toluca. Above their heads arched the low heavens, dangling the lantern of the moon and pierced by the myriad dots of silvery stars. Beauty stopped them

Last summer, being sure that Miss Mattie was away from home, Miss Addie went in through the rear gate and picked the fruit on Miss Mattie's side of the fence. The jam in the jar before her, which she had taken down from the shelf for her supper that cold New Year's eve was from that fruit. The jar had held candied ginger in Miss Addie's childhood and she recalled how she and little Mattie had eaten the ginger from it. She recalled that she and Mattie had picked gooseberries from a bush which grew near the place where the bush which had caused so much trouble now grew. She recalled the many happy times she and Miss Mattie had spent together-the times when Miss Mattie had been a real friend in need-had helped to ease some hurt or lighten some sorrow. What a pity it seemed that such friendship should ever be broken. Miss Addie's dog had been given away long ago, and Miss Mattie's cat had wandered away from home and never returned. With the two original causes of the trouble gone, wasn't it too bad for one-time friends to remain enemies? Wouldn't it be better to turn over a new leaf this New Year's day and renew their friendship?

It seemed so to Miss Addie and she resolved not to waste another minute, but do it right away! So with a jar of jam in her hand and love in her heart she went to wish Miss Mattie a happy New Year.

Not until the Eighteenth century was January universally adopted as the beginning of the year. England took the step in 1752, and Sweden in 1753, but other European countries adopted this New Year's day at an earlier date; France in 1564, Her land, Protestant Germany and Rus-

Who was it said the English couldn't take a joke, and that immediately?

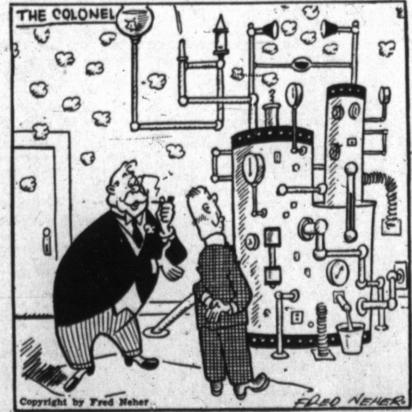

At a hectic political meeting where representatives of the various parties were gathered, an English politician, while addressing the assemblage, was struck full in the face with the body of a dad cat.
