WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy has been an effective social and political ally of both her father, former mayor of Boston, and her husband, ambassador to the Court of St. James. But the news that, in accordance with her husband's decision, she presented only seven American women at court is one of her rare appearances in the headlines.

The 11, engaging Kennedys have been viewed more or less en bloc in the news and Mrs. Kennedy has never been in a very sharp lens focus.

She was one of the prettiest of Boston debutantes, 30 years ago, a rollicking girl with black hair and eyes of Irish blue. Back home from her convent training, she taught her father "Sweet Adeline."

He was John F. (Honey Fitz) Fitzgerald, and in his campaigns he sang his way to memorable political fame—riding like a surferboard the long, lingering "swipes" of the song taught him by his daughter—"the flower of his heart."

Joseph P. Kennedy, her childhood playmate, was twenty-five years old when they were married in 1914. He borrowed $2,000 for a down payment on a $6,500 house. Their fortunes grew as their family, with Mr. Kennedy president of a bank, in a year or two after their marriage.

Mrs. Kennedy once told a Boston drygoods clerk that she bought 200 suits and dresses a year. It takes a heap of shopping to make a home, like the Kennedys', and she became known among her friends as a paragon of household efficiency comparable to the one in Solomon's off-hand apostrophe to such skills and virtues.

Now she is mistress of the "castle" which was once J. Pierpont Morgan's home; also of a beautiful mansion in Bronxville, N. Y., a huge summer estate at Hyannisport, Cape Cod, and a villa at Palm Beach, built by one of the Wanamakers.

She is slender and girlish, comely and vivacious, weighs 115 pounds and takes size 14 in dresses. Violette makes her gowns and she is envied by other women for her magnificent jewels—noteable among them being a ruby and diamond bracelet which, it is said, is matched only by the one the Aga Khan gave his princess.

But she never lets the children run to unseemly display, holding them to restraint in regime and dress. Even without all these adventitious fixings, say her friends, she would be an admirable ambassador's wife, with her own quite adequate equipment of tact, charm and intelligence.

MAN and boy, this journeyman has helped process a lot of explorers' and adventurers' copy through the news mill. If it was ghost-written, it had only slick and synthetic excitement, like Ersatz pastry, and if it wasn't it was usually dull. Happily in contrast are the doubtless authentic and personally written yarns of W. H. Tilman, leader of the British Mount Everest expedition, now getting under way.

These stories from the Tibetan base camp have a professional ease and fluency, along with a ring of integrity which gives assurance that Mr. Tilman is really writing them. There is no ghost on the job here.

Mr. Tilman is thirty-nine years old, a keen-faced, hard-muscled Britisher of medium stature, who has been exploring ever since he left college.

He has climbed mountains in the Alps and in Africa, including Mount Kenya, Kilimanjaro and Ruwenzori. This is his fifth expedition to the Himalayas. The entrants in this high hurdle event are not youngsters. N. E. Odell is forty-seven, F. S. Smythe is thirty-seven and the others are all over thirty.

Bull Terrier, White Dog
When bull baiting was abolished by law in England, sporting men developed the bull terrier for dog fighting and badger baiting. About 1875, dalmatian and pointer blood were introduced in the strain, making them look less like bulldogs. The bull terrier is always white, has a long tapering head, wide, deep chest, stiff, glossy hair and tapering tail. He is gentle and good natured, but fears nothing and is a good watch dog.

Pennsylvania Democrats Turn on Lewis . . . Earle Named for Senator . . . Republicans Happy

On the eve of National Air Mail week the first air mail and passenger service between Juneau and Fairbanks, Alaska, was established by the Pan American Airways as the first link in its route connecting southeastern Alaska with the interior. This photograph shows the scene at Juneau as the plane, a twin motored Lockheed Electra, was about to depart for Fairbanks.

Earle Beats C.I.O. Man

THE desperate primary battle among the Pennsylvania Democrats resulted in complete victory for Gov. George H. Earle and his state machine and equally complete defeat for the Duffey-Lewis-C. I. O. faction, whose candidates all the way down from senator and governor to minor county offices, were routed. Earle won the senatorial nomination over Mayor Wilson of Philadelphia.

Charles Alvin Jones, Pittsburgh lawyer, captured the gubernatorial nomination, beating Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, who was on the Duffey-Lewis ticket.

Jim Farley, national committee chairman, had projected himself into the hot fight by advising the compromise choice of Earle and Kennedy, but the governor indignantly told him it was none of his business, and the voters gave him a swat on the head by rejecting his advice.

Republicans were elated because the returns showed a ground swell back toward G. O. P. conservatism. The Republican total vote exceeded the Democratic vote, and this fact, together with the graft and bribery charges that enlivened the campaign of the Democrats, led the Republican leaders to hope the Keystone state would return to the Republican fold in November.

Judge Arthur James won a smashing victory over Clifford Pinchot, twice governor, for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, and this was another swat at John L. Lewis, for he was reported ready to back Pinchot if Kennedy lost. Senator James J. Davis was renominated by a heavy majority.

Both Senator Guffey and Lewis appear to have lost their claims to political leadership. Lewis had boasted that he controlled 800,000 C. I. O. votes in Pennsylvania, but the best he could do was 520,000. Earle, though he came out on top, was considered to have lost prestige greatly by the accusations of misrule made against his administration. His presidential aspirations were believed wrecked.

The C. I. O. has lost other political fights, but none so important as this. President William Green of the American Federation of Labor called the vote a complete "repudiation of the C. I. O. leadership."

He added: "It now has become abundantly clear that no candidate who bears the C. I. O. brand can be elected to high office in this country. The primaries proved the C. I. O. is a political liability, not a political power."

Japanese Take Suchow
TOKYO gave out word that the Japanese forces had captured virtually all of Suchow, the important rail junction city in Central China. The assault force fought its way through a hail of Chinese fire and there was furious hand-to-hand fighting in the streets. Then other forces stormed the walls from other sides of the city.

A foreign office spokesman said Japan would now push on to Hankow, the capture of which is regarded as necessary from a strategic standpoint.

Some 200,000 Chinese troops were said by the Japanese to be trapped in the Lungai zone, but it was likely many of them would be able to escape.

F.D.R. Going to South America

ANNOUNCEMENT was made at the White House that President Roosevelt is planning an extended trip to South America this summer.

It is expected he will leave from an eastern port aboard a cruiser, pass through the Panama canal and spend a month along the west coast of South America, going as far as Santiago, Chile, and stopping at the capitals en route. On his return the President probably will disembark on our west coast and sweep across the country on a special train, making speeches.

Following a brief trip to Annapolis to see the boat races between Harvard and the Naval academy, Mr. Roosevelt inspected the model community project at Arthurdale, W. Va. In the middle of June he will go to Massachusetts for the wedding of his son John and Miss Anne Clark.

Daladier Defies Italy

NEGOTIATIONS for a Franco-Italian accord came to an impasse because Italy sought to break up France's alliance with Russia. Premier Daladier was angered and to newspaper men he declared that France would defend her frontiers against "all attempts at violence, whatever the circumstances."

The direct cause of a break in the conversations was shipment of arms through France to loyalist Spain. Shorn of diplomatic technicalities, Italy seems to have demanded that France choose between Italy and Russia. Should she choose Russia, disrupting Britain's plans for a general European settlement, Britain might leave France to her own devices and proceed to reach an agreement with Germany.

Slattery Has West's Job

RESIGNATION of Charles West as undersecretary of the interior was accepted by President Roosevelt, and Harry Slattery of North Carolina was immediately named in his place.

The retirement of West marks a complete victory for Secretary Ickes in their long feud. Only recently Ickes dismissed all but one of West's office assistants and then turned the office over to Assistant Secretary Ebert K. Burelle. Their feud began when the President named West to the post without consulting Ickes.

White House Secretary Steve Earle announced the President was looking about for another post for West.

Woman Ambassador?

THERE is a good chance that the United States will be represented at Moscow by a woman, for Mrs. Charles C. Broy is under consideration for the post of American ambassador to Soviet Russia, which Joseph E. Davies recently relinquished to become ambassador to Belgium. Mrs. Broy, who is a Texan by birth, is the wife of an American foreign service officer and the widow of Representative Thomas W. Sisson of Mississippi. She was recommended for the ambassadorship by the chairmen of the foreign relations and foreign affairs committees of congress, and has the backing of many prominent members of congress. If appointed and confirmed, she will be the first American woman to be an ambassador.

Mrs. Broy was officially presented to Secretary of State Hull by Senator Key Pittman, but the secretary has known her personally for 16 years.

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL

By Carter Field

FAMOUS WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

Washington.—Concession by even the most optimistic Republicans that the Democrats will control the next house of representatives by a wide margin makes the menace of the LaFollette Progressive party much more bearable to Democratic prognosticators than might otherwise be the case.

For the house of representatives, to be elected this fall, will elect the next President in December, 1940—IF a third party should prevent any Presidential candidate from getting a clean majority of the electoral votes.

Since the recent consensus of political experts was taken by Newsweek, the writer has checked carefully with some of the more optimistic Republicans to discover where they expect their gains in the house. The point is that a President is elected by the house, under the Constitution, when no candidate has an electoral college majority—by states, not by individual members. The majority of each state delegation determines how their state will vote in electing a President under such circumstances.

There are 15 states about which there is no doubt whatever. Many of them will have solid Democratic delegations in the next house. Since no political landslide is seen now even by the most optimistic of the Republicans there seems to be no chance that the Democrats will not have a majority in every one of these delegations.

These states are the group from Maryland to Texas, and include: Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Maryland.

Ten more states would be needed, as the Constitution requires a majority of all the states to elect a President in this manner. Which, as the present number of states is 48, would mean a total of 25.

No Hope for G. O. P.

Examining the Republican hope chests, it is interesting to note that there are more than ten additional states to those already named, in which there is no hope of the Republicans capturing a majority of the congressional delegations.

New York, surprisingly enough, has not had a Republican majority in her house delegation since the 1920 election, despite the fact that she rolled up an enormous majority for Coolidge in 1924, and went for Hoover by a small majority in 1928. Indiana has now only one Republican member of the house. A gain of two, or at most, three seats there is all that the Republicans hope for. Illinois is also apt to continue lodged solidly Democratic in her house delegation. So are Colorado, California, Oregon and Washington.

Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico have only one representative each, but that representative is just as important when the house is electing a President as New York or Pennsylvania. Not even the most optimistic Republican conceding to the writer since the Newsweek poll has any hope of electing a Republican congressman from any of these three little states.

And that makes the ten, which, added to the Southern states enumerated, totals twenty-five.

But there are any number of possibilities to make up for any unexpected local upset.

Arouses Curiosity

Inquiries from all over the country are reaching senators and officials asking private advice as to what is on the horizon to have caused President Roosevelt to make his sudden appeal for prompt start on the construction of two battleships.

The general impression on the part of the inquirers seems to be that there have been events in the international situation which caused this sudden move.

It may be authoritatively stated that this is not the case. No one in administration circles pretends that everything in the international situation is rosy. Quite the contrary. But the international picture had nothing to do with the President's haste to get battleship construction started. In fact it is admitted by high officials that if the foreign situation were such that the President thought the United States were likely to be forced into a war within, say, a year, the procedure would be entirely different.

The President would then, it is pointed out, be insisting on a very different type of spending for the intervening period. He would want the money spent on types of weapons which could be completed before the war was over.

It just so happens that, no matter how much the work is hurried, building a battleship is a very slow proceeding. It cannot be cut much under three years. To complete a ship in two years would really be an accomplishment. And this would mean from the time the keel was laid.

Back in the World war days the construction of battleships was stopped so that the skilled labor employed on them could be utilized for something which might reasonably be expected to be finished in time to make its weight felt before hostilities were concluded.

Reason for Haste

The real reason for the President's haste on battleship construction is not preparedness but economics. He wants to get men working on this job as speedily as possible—in the mines, the steel mills, the factories and the shipyards. Literally it is part of the pump-priming plan.

This does not mean that the building of battleships is a species of made work. On the contrary, the President's feeling is that the need for the additional ships is very vital indeed. But not for the immediate future.

The answer to all this is Japan. The majority opinion among naval and military experts studying the situation, and advising the President, is that Japan has no intention of provoking a war with the United States in the immediate future. But the same experts believe that Japan is counting on a war with this country eventually, maybe five years from now, maybe ten.

The theory behind these fine new battleships is that each one constructed tends to make that war less likely. The experts in question note with extraordinary interest the comment in Japan on the construction of these ships. Japanese newspapers which usually print just what the high army and navy officers of that country want the people to know are rather bitter about these battleships which congress has been authorizing and appropriating for in the last few months.

When it is considered that these ships will not be completed for from three to five years, at the earliest, this resentment is very interesting.

Curious Puzzles

Some very curious and intricate puzzles are presented by the recent Florida Democratic primary. One of them is accentuated, curiously enough, by none other than Chairman James A. Farley, of the Democratic national committee, in a statement rushed out even before all the returns were in to claim a sweeping victory for the New Deal.

"The signal victory of Sen. Claude Pepper of Florida, a staunch New Deal advocate, over Rep. J. Mark Wilcox, campaigning for the senate seat on the straight-out issue of opposition to the New Deal," etc.

Now the interesting point raised by Chairman Farley, inadvertently, revolves around his own denunciation of Wilcox. For it would seem to be a logical deduction that every voter who marked his ballot for Wilcox is an anti-New Dealer.

Viewed as a contest between two party factions, or between two candidates, Pepper's victory was overwhelming. He had a lead of more than two to one over Wilcox.

But if viewed that the men and women who voted for Wilcox were anti-New Deal, then it would appear that one-third of the Democrats in Florida are against the present Democratic administration in Washington.

That is not enough to make any difference, probably, in the Florida election. No one expects any Southern state to elect a Republican to the senate.

The Pepper Problem

But in Northern and Western states such a loss would spell inevitable disaster in November. It is an axiom in politics that no party can afford to lose 10 per cent of its voters. The Florida primary would seem to indicate a loss of more than 30 per cent.

Another, and entirely different, problem is presented by the fact that Senator Pepper, in his campaign, laid a great deal of emphasis on old age pensions.

It was this campaign by Pepper which led Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, to comment that President Roosevelt and Dr. Townsend would have to roll dice to see who was really the victor in Florida.

Now the question is whether Florida is merely like California, in that a tremendous number of old people have moved there to avoid the more rigorous winters of their native states, or whether this sentiment of the old for security and of the young to be relieved of their obligations to their own old folks is merely typical of all states.

In short: Was Dr. Townsend right in his assumption that there is so much sentiment for his plan that if put to any real test it would sweep the country? It is almost impossible, at the moment, for Washington politicians to do anything but guess at the answer. But this much is certain. The fact that Pepper was so extraordinarily successful will not pass unnoticed. Plenty of senators and representatives who have been worried about their chances for coming back are going to take a chance that the old age pension sentiment is very general indeed. What have they to lose?

Men of the Mounted

by Captain G. Elliott-Nightingale

"GUNBOAT" INVENTS THE "SNOWBALL" BRAND

"GUNBOAT"—CHARLIE, so named on account of his big feet, sat down by his little branding fire puffing and winded, for he had just thrown and tied a young white-faced bull that would fetch a handsome price once he met up with anyone who really knew anything about that sort of animal. And, as he regained breath and poise, he gave some attention to the iron rod in the fire, moving the end of it well down into the red coals, for it must be plenty hot for the job he had on hand. And, as he waited, hemmed in by the blackness of a cloudy Saskatchewan night, he patted himself on the back for the way in which he had escaped detection. They were all plain dumbbells, even the Men of the Mounted, or they'd have caught up to him long ago. On the other hand, he was right smart, was "Gunboat," for he was wily and cunning, and he knew how to hide a branding-fire in the recesses of a gully or coulee. He just used his head, that's all, and as long as he did that, he'd be able to carry on. Moreover, he knew just where to find a buyer.

A few minutes later, red-hot rod in hand, he scooted rapidly over to the prostrate young bull and the bluish-white smoke from burning hair and hide was coiling upward into the night. With all the care and precision of a surgeon doing a difficult operation, "Gunboat" moved that red-hot iron over the original brand until he had made a nice round spot. "When that heals up it'll be kinda whitish, so we'll just call it the Snowball Brand," he muttered as he finished. Within the hour he had performed a like operation on the three fat steers, and then rolled into his blankets with the satisfaction of a man who had done a real workmanlike job. Every bit of the original brands had been burned out, and no one would ever know the difference. They'd sell, easy.

Nor was "Gunboat" overestimating his ability as a cattle salesman, for at the end of a month he had turned the deal at top prices and had a belt full of good Canadian cash. Well-heeled, "Gunboat" disappeared into the nowhere whence he had come. Buyer and seller had parted good friends, and everyone was satisfied until a Man of the Mounted looking for a hot meal and a night's lodging, chanced to meet up with the four animals carrying the "Snowball" brand.

"Bought 'em from a feller thet passed through here 'bout a month ago," replied the homesteader, a newcomer, to the Mounted Man's inquiries.

"Those scars look mighty suspicious, partner," opined the Man of the Mounted. "It wouldn't surprise me if you had unwittingly bought some stolen cattle . . . looks like the original brands have been burned out. Did he say where he bought them?"

"Yep . . . sed he got 'em in the Willow Bunch country . . . an' as fer the 'original brands bein' burned out . . . why . . . say . . . I'm a law-abidin' man an' if ye think they's somethin' wrong . . . I'll git saddled up an' help yer run him down . . . I ain't buying stolen cattle if I know it . . . not me."

"Well, hang on to those cattle until you hear from me," said the Man of the Mounted as he rode off next morning. Inside of a week he was back at the ranch.

"The only way we can find out the original brands is to kill one of them."

"Yo're plumb crazy . . . Mr. Mounted Policeman, how're ye goin' ter find out anythin' by killin' 'em? Moresover, what 'bout me? I ain't gonna take no loss. Paid money for them animals, I did."

"I'll see about that part of it. You won't lose a penny. Let's get busy," replied the Man of the Mounted as he dismounted and walked toward the nearest steer. Inside of half an hour the homesteader learned a lot about cattle-brands. In spite of the very thorough job of burning and searing "Gunboat" had done on the outside of the hide, the original brand showed up all too plainly on the flesh side.

Several weeks later "Gunboat" Charlie was apprehended in another province, and was soon on trial. It was a great day for the dignified and bewigged judge as the Man of the Mounted, spreading the steerhide over the judge's bench, proved his point, that "Gunboat" had disguised the original brand by the outside burning, but had failed to go more than half way through the hide and thus spoil the original brand that now showed up all too plainly on the flesh side of the skin. On top of that, the owner of the original brand was in court, and he identified "Gunboat" as a man who had worked on his ranch for a couple of days and had then disappeared about the same time as four head of cattle. "Gunboat" was sentenced to two years at hard labor and, needless to say, from that time on no cattle or horse thief used the "Snowball" brand in that particular region.

WILLIAM MACLEOD RAINE'S

To Ride the River With

COPYRIGHT WILLIAM MACLEOD RAINE—WNU SERVICE

SYNOPSIS

Ruth Chiswick of L. C. ranch, obsessed by fear of danger to her outspoken father, Lee, from a band of lawless rustlers headed by Sherm Howard, decides to save him by eloping with young Lou Howard, Sherm's son, and comes to the town of Tall Holt to meet him. While in Yell Sanger's store, a crook-nosed stranger enters, and when a drunken cowboy, Jim Pender, rides in and starts shooting, protects Ruth, while Lou Howard hides. Disgusted with Lou's cowardice, Ruth calls off the element, and sends the stranger for her father at the gambling house across the street. There the stranger, calling himself Jeff Gray, meets Morgan Norris, a killer, Curly Connor, Kansas, Mile High, Sid Hunt, and other rustlers, and Sherm Howard. Lee Chiswick enters, with his foreman, Dan Brand, and tells Sherm Howard of his orders to shoot rustlers at sight. Jeff Gray returns to Ruth and coldly reassures her of her father's safety. At supper, Ruth introduces Jeff to her father and Brand. Coming out into the street, they are greeted by sudden gunfire. Lee is wounded, and Jeff Gray appears with a smoking revolver. Two days later, Ruth tells her father of her projected elopement and her disillusionment. Later, Ruth meets Jeff Gray, whom she thinks tried to kill her father. Ruth accidentally wounds Jeff. She takes him to Pat Sorey's camp. Ruth is credulous of Jeff's story of shooting at the assassin rather than at her father, and later pleads with Lee to listen to him. When Lee arrives at Pat Sorey's, he finds only a note to Pat from Jeff. Meanwhile, Jeff rides into Tall Holt and sends word to Sherm Howard he wants to see him. He shows Howard a poster with his picture, with the name of Clint Duke, wanted as the leader of a band of outlaws. The rest of the band arrives. Jeff shows the outlaws the poster and asks their confidence. They agree to allow him to stay. Another raid on the L. C. cattle causes Lee to line up his men in pursuit, and to send his son Frank to town to reconnoiter. Pat Sorey finds Gray's horse's hoofmarks on the trail with the suspected rustlers. Jeff calls on Frank and warns him Norris and Lou are threatening him. Frank receives a message that his father wants him at Sanger's, and despite warning, starts out. Shooting starts, and Gray helps Frank hold off the killers until he and Frank can escape. Arriving at L. C. ranch Frank tells of the ambush and of the part played by Gray.

Gray said: "Ready to leave town yet? Or am I still too big a liar to believe?"

"I don't know what you are," Frank answered. "Hadden't been for you they would have got me. But you fired the first shot at me."

"You were walking right into their ambush. I fired to stop you. Lucky for you. It started them up before you were close enough to hit in the darkness."

Frank was still suspicious and ashamed of it. "You disguised your voice when you talked with them in the barn."

"So I did. I'm staying here. Would you want me to yell out my name to them?"

"You saved my life. No two ways about that. At the risk of your own."

"Oh, hell!" Gray said. "You're such a fool someone has to look after you. . . . Where is your horse?"

"At the Alamo corral."

"Then get down there and saddle. Hit the trail for the L. C. quick as you can."

The younger man agreed. "I'm much obliged," he added gruffly. "I won't forget it."

Gray watched him go, then cut across to the main street and joined those who were hurrying to the fire. He saw the roof of the barn crash in as he climbed over the wall.

His gaze swept the crowd. He caught sight of Morgan Norris and joined him.

"How'd the fire start?" he asked. Norris said a look at him. "How would I know?"

"Thought maybe you were among those here early," Gray said lightly. "It was important for him to find out whether he had been recognized by the ambushers. He thought not, since in the darkness he had not known any of them. But he had to be sure."

"No, sir, I wasn't."

The eyes of Norris were slits of shining light. This business tonight had got out of hand, and he had to watch his step. He had started out to kill one man, not three. Now there would be war to a finish with the L. C. outfit. Lee Chiswick would not rest until he had avenged the death of his son and the other two riders.

"Thought I heard some shooting," Gray said guilelessly. "I was down at Ma Presnell's fixing to turn in when things began to pop."

"I reckon some drunk was punctuating the scenery," Norris said, watching his words. "Me, I was playing seven-up with some of the boys."

"Likely some lad was bedding down in the hay and lit from his cigarette," Gray suggested.

"Might be that way. If so, hope he got out."

"Time this town had a fire department," the red-headed man mentioned. "If a fire started when the wind was blowing hard, the whole main street would go."

"So it would," Norris agreed indifferently. "But I got no chips in this town's real estate."

A vaquero known as Kansas sided up to them.

"Fire's burnin' out," he said to Norris.

Gray read fear in the man's shifty eyes. He decided that Kansas had been one of those involved in the attack. Like Norris, he had been appalled at the swiftness with which three men had been wiped out so horribly. To shoot men was one thing; to burn them up another.

"Morg and I were just hoping nobody got caught in there," Gray told the cowboy.

The startled eyes of Kansas stabbed at Norris. "Why would there be anybody in there?" he asked hoarsely. "You don't figure that—that?"

"We don't figure a thing," Norris answered, his cold gaze fixing Kansas. "Crook-Nose here allowed that maybe someone sleeping in the hay might have lit it from a cigarette."

"Gray is the name, if you're meanin' me," the red-headed man drawled gently.

"That's right." The young killer's words dripped malice. "Clint Gray, isn't it?"

"No, sir. Nor Jeff Duke. Jeff Gray would be right. I'm a little particular about my name, Mr. Norris."

The steady gaze warned the other that he was treading on dangerous ground.

"Call yoreself Paddy Ryan or John L. Sullivan for all I care," Norris said, his laugh insolently offensive. "Well, the show's over. I'm headin' back to the seven-up game. You comin' along, Kansas?"

Gray watched them go. "That's two of them," he thought. "Lou Howard is probably another."

He walked up the main street to the Golden Nugget and sat in at a poker game.

Sherm Howard slammed a big fist down on the table in front of him. "Never saw anything more crazy in my life. That's no way to get a man—lie in wait for him right here in town so Lee Chiswick will know some of us must have done it. Couldn't some of you have bushwhacked him out on his own range? On top of that, you bump off three men instead of one. Bad medicine, Morg. These aren't the old days. We got to be more careful what we do. And you're not satisfied with shooting. You've got to burn 'em to death, like you were a bunch of Apaches."

"A fellow who calls himself Jeff Gray saved my life."

"Ride yore son Lou," Norris said sulkily. "He was in it deep as any of us."

"I'll ride you all. It was the most foolish thing I ever heard of white men doing. We'll never hear the end of it. Were you all drunk?" demanded Sherman Howard.

"Not drunk. We'd been drinking some," Norris explained resentfully. "Not our fault three of them got caught. We laid for young Chiswick. The other two popped up out of nowhere. Nobody knows who they were. They got what was comin' to them for buttin' into a game where they weren't invited."

"We didn't aim to burn 'em," Lou Howard whined. "We told them to come out so as we could arrest Frank Chiswick."

"Arrest nothing," Norris said, snarling at young Howard. "We aimed to put him outa business. You egged us on because you were sore as a toad on a skillet account of his having whopped you. What's the use of lying among ourselves?"

"You're whistling right we meant to rub him out," Kansas admitted despondently. "But like Lou says, we didn't mean to burn him. The idea was to blast him as he walked up to Sanger's from the boarding-house. And we didn't figure on the two other guys who busted in and took chips."

"When did they come to town?" Sherman Howard snapped, his superabundance of stomach overflowing the table as he leaned forward accusingly. "Who saw them after they got here? Does anyone know who they were?"

"I wouldn't know the answer to any of those questions, Sherm," answered Norris, sulkily defiant. "Better ask Lou. It was his party. Maybe he knows."

The opaque eyes of the older Howard rested on his son, not without contempt. It was plain that Lou was sweating fear. Maybe he had better get him clear out of this part of the country before he broke down. That could be arranged later. Just now he would send him up into the hills. The big man brought his mind back to the immediate business of the day.

"Mighty funny about these two mysterious L. C. men," he said, thinking aloud. "What did they come here for? Where did they leave their mounts?"

"Search me," Kansas replied. "I didn't see but one of 'em."

"How do you know there were two? Who saw the other? Did you, Morg?" challenged Howard.

"Sure I saw him. He was in the barn. Up in the loft. Saw him when we rushed the stairs," Norris rubbed tenderly the side of his head, where he had been pistol-whipped during that rush. To him it seemed that the loft had been full of defenders.

"But you don't know who he was?"

"No, I don't. It was black as a manzanita gulch in the dark of the moon. No way of telling who was roosting up there."

"Hmp! Something here I don't get. Looks like Lee Chiswick has a card up his sleeve."

A knock sounded on the door. Sherm Howard barked, "Come in!"

Jim Reynolds, owner of the Alamo corral, walked into the room. He was a short, thickset man with slanted eyebrows that always seemed to be asking a question. He nodded a casual greeting.

"Just happened to be passing, Sherm," he said. "Don't know as it's important, but I thought I'd let you know young Chiswick has left town."

After Reynolds had gone, the big man turned on the others with bitter sarcasm. "Now we don't know where we are at. You're a fine bunch of warriors. Arbuckle hands. I would say. Why pack guns at all? Better shuck them and go back to Kansas and Iowa. All four of you plugging at this Chiswick and he gets off scot free. You'd better find out soon as you can about the other two fellows who were with Frank. Maybe they're getting sore sides laughing at you. Was there a back door to this stable?"

"No, there wasn't," Norris said, sulkily. "I don't see—"

He stopped, a sudden gleam of light in his smoky eyes.

"Well?" asked Sherm.

"They kept making a noise upstairs in the loft—some kind of pounding." Morg Norris ripped out a vicious oath. "I'll bet they knocked a hole in the 'dobe wall and got away."

"Sounds reasonable," jeered their leader. "You boys were having such a good time at the fire you never thought to watch the back of the barn."

"Why should we, Sherm, when there was no door and no window?" Kansas protested.

"What did you figure the hammering was about—that they were making toys to play with?"

"We didn't know. Looked like we had them trapped and we were watching the front door for the time when they made their break." Kansas added a heartfelt wish: "Hope you're right, Morg. I'm no injun. I'd hate to think I was anyways responsible for those men being burnt."

Remains of Far-Famed "Sea Serpent"

Property of University of California

The University of California stands ready to stake its scientific reputation on the existence—if not at present, at least some 40,000,000 to 50,000,000 years ago—of the far-famed "sea serpent," writes a Berkeley (Calif.) United Press correspondent.

Whether there also existed at that time seaside resorts where the press agents could take advantage of the appearance of a sea serpent to attract the patronage of the public to his beach, the university does not know.

However, the existence of the sea serpent in what is known as the Upper Cretaceous period has been definitely established by the finding in the San Joaquin valley of a splendidly preserved fossil.

The monster, which is some 30 feet long in its fossilized form, is of a particularly rare type, according to Dr. L. C. Camp, curator of the museum of paleontology at the university, who assisted in the excavation.

Up to this time, the plesiosaur, as the marine reptile is scientifically known, has been unknown on the Pacific coast, although fossil fragments have been found in other parts of the country.

The present specimen, which is one of the most complete ever found, first was uncovered by a laborer, while hunting for gypsum in the oily shale near Mendota.

He notified Fresno State college, which in turn notified the University of California and the two joined in the final excavation of the stone-like carcass and which involved some thing of an engineering feat.

The rounded portion of the body, with three flippers, weighed a ton and had to be dragged from the ravine where it was bound on a specially constructed sled attached to a truck by a rope.

"All right. Go find out the facts," ordered Howard.

Twenty minutes later his men reported that there were no bodies in the ashes and that a hole had been knocked in the stable wall.

CHAPTER VII

Frank Chiswick swung from the saddle stiffly.

"How's every little thing?" his brother Bob asked.

"All right with me."

"Anything doing at Tall Holt?"

"Plenty. Where's the old man?"

"In the house writing a letter."

Frank unsaddled and turned his horse into a pasture.

"Better come along and listen to my story," he said.

From a kitchen window Ruth saw her brothers and followed them into the office. She heard her father's booming greeting.

"Lo, Frank," she said. "You haven't changed much. We still have the same old cat."

"You came mighty near not having the same old brother," he told her with a grin.

"Some. Maybe it was my own fault. I had a fight. I've been shot at several times. I was cornered in a hayloft when the stable was on fire. A fellow who calls himself Jeff Gray saved my life."

The family stared at him. This category of adventures struck them dumb for a moment.

"Sit down, son, and tell it," his father suggested after he had found speech.

When Frank reached in his narrative the fight with Lou Howard, his sister cut in sharply.

"I told you to leave him alone—that it was my fault as much as his," she scolded. "Now you've made more trouble."

"Sorry it came out that way," Frank said, in penitent justification. "He was bragging around how he jilted you. It came to me from two different people. One was Ma Presnell. I thought I ought to stop it."

"You did right, son," his father approved. "I hope you whopped him good."

"He wouldn't fight—not to amount to anything," Frank said simply. "But I marked him up considerable. I reckon he made up his mind to have me rubbed out and took that killer Morg Norris in with him. They had two or three others along."

"Along when?" Bob asked.

"When they ambushed me."

"You recognized Howard and Norris," Lee said, his eyes blazing with excitement.

"No, I didn't. No time for that. Jeff Gray warned me they were intending to bushwhack me."

Lee Chiswick's face was a map of bewilderment. "Jeff Gray! Why would he help you?"

"I don't know. I never did find out."

"Then what?" Ruth asked tensely. Frank told his story.

"I ought never to have sent you to town alone," exclaimed Lee. "I knew there were a lot of bad hombres in that bunch of rustlers, but I didn't think they would go so far as to try to burn a boy to death. Well, I've had my lesson. I might have known that any outfit bossed by Sherm Howard would be rotten. About this fellow Gray. I don't get him at all. We no sooner get him pegged for a double-crossing scoundrel than he up and goes into the fire for you. What's his game? Who in time is he?"

"Two or three times I heard that he was an outlaw wanted in Texas for robbing a train," Frank said. "Name of Clint Duke, it was claimed. He's in with Howard's gang somehow. When we were in the barn he changed his voice so they wouldn't know who he was."

SHALL THE POLLS BE OPENED TO THE UNFIT?

One or two of the candidates for governor, some of the candidates for the legislature, some newspapers, and some of our other good citizens are advocating the repeal of the law requiring the payment of a poll tax as a pre-requisite to vote.

We are persuaded that many of these are not familiar with the conditions that developed in this state which brought about the adoption of the poll tax law.

If they could have witnessed a familiar election scene forty years ago just prior to the enactment of the Terrell election law, which contains the poll tax provision, they might hesitate a long time before advocating a repeal of this provision.

There are many negroes in Texas who are good citizens, there are hundreds of thousands of others who have many excellent traits of character and may be classed as good negroes, but there are very, very few who are prepared to vote intelligently and who properly appreciate the responsibilities of citizenship. In other words, a vast majority of the negro vote, when he has a vote, is for sale to the highest bidder.

Men who can remember conditions in this state before the enactment of the poll tax law can remember that designing white men bought and sold the negro vote as some ranchman would buy and sell a bunch of cattle. They can remember that these negroes were frequently herded to the polling places and voted as the cowboys today round up their herds and drive them into the corral. Polling places were frequently crowded for a portion of the day with a horde of negro voters, nearly all of them voting alike for some candidate or on some political issue. Nine-tenths of the negroes—and probably we should ninety-nine hundredths of them—proved themselves to be unworthy of the right of suffrage.

It was conditions such as this that prompted the passage of the poll tax requirement. Not many negroes will take the trouble to pay the poll tax. This eliminates them as a political factor. Of course it eliminates some worthy white men too, but ordinarily intelligent white men and women capable of exercising the right of suffrage intelligently can find the means of paying the small sum requisite to obtain a poll tax receipt. Of course the negroes are barred from the Democratic primaries by the executives of the Democratic party, but they can not be thus barred from any general election or from voting on any question submitted to the people for their decision.

The poll tax requirement is really more of an intelligence test, a fitness test, than it is a property test.

In other words, people who are advocating the repeal of the poll tax provision are advocating the placing of the ballot again in the hands of thousands and thousands of unintelligent and irresponsible blacks residing mostly in other parts of the state than West Texas, thus increasing the voting power of other parts of the state at the expense of West Texas, at the same time lowering the quality of the voting mass.

Without having thought it thru, we believe that the proposal made by Karl Crowley, candidate for governor, proposing the creation of an agency for refinancing farm mortgages in Texas whereby the owners of mortgaged farms may have the mortgages converted into forty years loans at three per cent interest, is probably the best proposal made yet for the farm owners of Texas and for tenants who would like to acquire farm homes of their own. We believe Karl has got something there.

Coke Stevenson is conducting a pussy-footing, still-hunting, hand-shaking campaign for lieutenant governor. He has issued no platform and has thus far made no public speeches. If he continues this kind of campaign to the end and should be elected lieutenant governor, he will go into office without the people knowing how he stands on any vital issue, except as they may judge his future by his past. Come out from under cover, Coke, and tell us what you stand for.

Tom Hunter, candidate for governor, is a man of considerable ability. Also, he has some good planks in his platform. He might make an excellent governor. But he is advocating some things that to us seem absurd and unwise, in the highest degree. He favors abolition of the state pension board and the vesting of its functions in county judges and county commissioners. That would put the administration of the pension law in politics in every county in Texas. What county judge, with an opponent, or a prospective opponent, could resist the demands of any aged man or his relatives that he be given a slice of the pie? What county commissioner could resist? To vest the administration of the old age assistance law in county judges and commissioners courts would mean that practically every person in Texas over 65 years of age would go on the rolls, all except a few negroes and a few poor whites without friends or influence. That would mean that the pension to each individual would have to be reduced to a mere pittance or that we would have to double or treble our taxes in this state to pay the pensions. It may be a good vote-getting plank but it would work disaster to the people of Texas—even to the needy pensioners themselves.

Jack Stricklin of the Terry County Herald keeps explaining why he is running those beer ads and worrying about our refusal to run them just as if his conscience were hurting him. Don't worry about us, Jack. We need the money all right, but we think maybe we will be able to get by somehow anyway. We have always noticed that if we lived through the month of May we lived all the balance of the year, beer ads or no beer ads. It might not do anybody much harm for us to run the ads but we know it will not do anybody any harm to omit them. So our conscience is not worrying us, though our bank account sometimes does.

That fellow Brooks of Dallas, who is running for lieutenant governor, must be a wizard. He is going to pay all the old people their pensions in full, he is going to pay pensions to the retired teachers, he is going to carry out the social security program by properly caring for all the blind and all the dependent children in the state, and yet he is going to reduce taxes. "I hate taxes" is his slogan, and therefore he promises that no new taxes of any kind shall be levied against anybody, and that the present tax rate will be greatly reduced. How is he going to do it? By economizing. Yeah, he is a great bird.

A map showing the condition of business throughout the United States was published in some of the daily papers a few days ago, and the largest white spot on the map is on the south plains of Texas. The second largest white spot was in southern Arkansas, and the third and smallest spot was a little corner of northwestern Wyoming. We do not know just what produced the white spots in Arkansas and Wyoming but cotton did, it on the south plains. A fair price for a large yield put money in the farmers' pocket. A smaller yield and a curtailed acreage will call for less labor and will mean less prosperity. It's fine to help the farmer become prosperous, but we believe it should be done without compelling him to reduce his cotton acreage or his wheat acreage or his corn acreage or any other acreage. Let the farmer manage his own farm and produce all he can, thus affording employment for many of the unemployed and thereby increase their purchasing power.

Karl Crowley opened his campaign for the governorship at Quitman, county seat of Wood county, Saturday. He advocated the abolishment of the ad valorem tax and the levy of a sales tax, which he claimed would make possible the payment of a pension of $30 to every qualified person over 65 years of age. He favored a production tax on natural resources, such as sulphur, oil and gas. He favored the creation of a state controlled institution to refinance a half billion dollars worth of mortgages on Texas farms, reducing the interest to 3 per cent on 40-year time. He embraced Nelson's proposal for a unicameral legislature but proposed that three members be elected from each congressional district, which is a minor point of difference. If Crowley were better known throughout Texas and had entered the race several months earlier, he might have become a strong contender for the place.

Every indication is that this work of flood control is in its infancy. We have done practically nothing yet as compared with what will be done probably within the next quarter century. We can visualize the day when dams of varying sizes will be built at intervals across every tributary of our larger water courses from their headwaters to the mouth. Not only will this serve to minimize flood dangers but it will also help to conserve the soil, will afford water for innumerable irrigation projects, and will furnish power for electric light and power lines that will thread the entire country. We have thus far just scratched the surface in this matter of flood control and water conservation.

It is gratifying to see so many Lynn county farms now terraced. The day is probably not far distant when practically every farm in the entire country will either be terraced or threaded with drainage ditches. People are beginning to realize the necessity for soil conservation, and they have just learned in recent years how to conserve the soil. With all our farm lands properly terraced, innumerable irrigation projects, launched in the course of time along all our streams, the gradual advent of smaller and better farms, and the growth of the practice of intensive farming, this country may be made to produce twice as much as it does now. America yet has a great future.

A. R. McGonagill was taken back to a hospital in Lubbock Monday for further treatment. He has been in very bad health the past few months.

Rev. Geo. A. Dale Rotary Speaker

Rev. George A. Dale was the principal speaker at the Rotary Club luncheon Thursday. He told of his recent trip to Richmond, Virginia, where he attended the Southern Baptist Convention.

He described the scenery along the route as most charming and in places majestic. He also gave a vivid picturization of the people of aristocratic old Virginia, showing how they reverence the past, the great men of an earlier day, and the historic spots of the state. Old Williamsburg, the first capital of the state and the seat of William and Mary College, which became a dead town following the establishment of the capital at Richmond and whose public buildings and business houses and residences all but crumbled into dust, is being rebuilt, he said, and rehabilitated by John D. Rockefeller Jr. Practically every building is being restored just as it was when built. All the buildings, of course, are of the stately colonial style, and so the rebuilt city is a strange but beautiful thing in the modern world of ours.

Many other things he touched upon but necessarily omitted many interesting things for lack of time.

Rev. Dale also called attention to the fact that there is to be a change in the mail schedule into Tahoka beginning July 1, as a result of which mail would arrive here much later in the day than at present. A committee consisting of E. I. Hill, Tom Garrard, and Kirk Pitts was appointed to investigate and to take the matter up with the proper authorities with a view to preventing such a change as would be unsatisfactory to the people of Tahoka and vicinity.

Leonard Craft announced that the committee appointed for the purpose of raising funds with which to send delegates to the San Francisco Rotary Convention had decided upon a Merchants' and Politicians' Show to be given in one of the school auditoriums on the night of June 9. Our readers will probably hear more about this later.

Jungle Is Termed Safer Than Cities by Priest

Cleveland.—After 32 years in the Amazon jungle, Brother Raphael Haag is bewildered by the multitude of automobiles on the streets of modern American cities.

The rush of motor traffic so confused him that he gained the impression there were more automobiles than pedestrians on the city streets.

Brother Haag made his first trip to America since 1905 to visit a brother, Herman Haag. The priest is a teacher in the mission school of the Holy Ghost fathers in Tefte, Brazil, on the Amazon river.

Being a missionary is the safest occupation at Tefte, Brother Raphael is convinced.

"The Indians distrust all white men," he explained, "but they respect the priests for the long, white cassocks we wear." One day, one of the brothers ventured into the jungle without his cassock but dressed in native garb of white shorts and shirt. He soon was dodging missiles fired at him from blow guns.

50-Year Photography of Sun Planned by Experts

San Jose, Calif.—A photographic mapping of the entire sky which will take 50 years to complete soon will be undertaken at the Lick Observatory on Mount Wilson, Dr. Joseph H. Moore, assistant director, has revealed.

The project has been made possible by the donation of $65,000 which will be used in the construction of the largest star camera in the world. The instrument will have a 20-inch lens.

The carrying out of the 50-year program will make possible the measurement of the rotation of the entire stellar universe.

Governors Get Bibles

Springfield, Mo.—A women's church club here has sent Bibles to governors of the forty-eight states and asked that they be read daily in the state penitentiaries.

At the Rotary luncheon last week, District Attorney Truett Smith, who is a member of the club, spoke on "The Trials and Tribulations of a Prosecutor," laying particular emphasis on the protection and advantages given the law violator when apprehended. His talk was an excellent one, and filled with information not usually considered by the layman.

Boyd Smith Rock- Veneers Home

Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Smith have completely remodeled their home on north Main Street. It is now one of the most attractive, inside and outside, in the entire town.

Originally a frame structure, its walls have recently been veneered with stone gathered from many places in Texas. Most of them came from Hood county, but a few were gathered in this county, a few at Roscoe, and a few in other sections of the state. Among the stones that have gone into the building, are quite a number of pieces of petrified tree fragments. The entire mantel of the fireplace is made of this material with the exception of the capstone or shelf, which was made of concrete.

The interior has been repapered throughout and the wood work repainted. The home is furnished with beautiful new furniture, and the whole is as neat as any woman could wish.

Recently the premises outside have been beautified with grass and trees also and the lawn will soon be one of the prettiest in town.

J. P. West and family went down to O'Brien last week end to visit relatives. J. P. returned home Sunday but the family remained to visit through this week.

Marvin Crawford and family left Wednesday with their household belongings for San Angelo, where they will make their home, he being employed there in a lumber yard.

Joseph R. Griggs, Lubbock county superintendent, formerly a teacher in the Tahoka schools, was here Thursday to attend the Hancock funeral.

Lloyd Harris, teacher in the local schools, has gone to Higgins, where he will spend the summer.

Mrs. Scott Davis was brought home from the hospital Wednesday where she has been seriously ill the past few weeks. She is gradually improving.

We wish to express our thanks and appreciation to the kind friends and people of Tahoka who assisted during the death and burial of our father and grandfather.

Lobby Is Fighting One-House Plan

Lubbock, Texas, May 24—"The best evidence that the one-house legislature is a progressive, practical measure is the way the organized lobby is fighting it," Senator G. H. Nelson of Lubbock, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, declared this week.

"These paid representatives of special interests know that the one-house legislature is the most practical lobby-controlled bill offered in Texas in a quarter of a century," Senator Nelson asserted.

"Naturally they favor the old system where their henchmen can vote one way in public and work another way in private. Naturally they want a system where they can control all legislation if they can influence either the Speaker of the House or the Lieutenant-Governor. Naturally they want a legislature whose members are underpaid and who must make a living from outside activities," he said.

Back home from an intensive swing through South and Southeast Texas, Senator Nelson declared that public sentiment is overwhelmingly in favor of his proposal for a one-house legislature.

"Those who want economy and efficiency in our state government have realized that before we can ever have this kind of government, we must first abolish the buck-passing and log-rolling and confusion which prevails under our present legislative system. Moreover, all those who believe that the people's will should be carried out by legislation want to change our present system which is made to order for the obstructionist tactics of the organized lobby," Senator Nelson pointed out.

LETA RUTH EDSON

Showing a safe impartiality, Bandleader Art Jarrett chose three blondes and three brunettes from the sixteen Texas State College for Women beauties who paraded before him on the stage of the Pan-American Casino last fall.

The chosen six are Misses Alice Bryan, Shanghai, China; Lucy Nelle, Dallas; Jeanne Hansen, Plainview; Joan Ladd, Sherman; Ruth Martin, Denton; and Leta Ruth Edson, Stanton.

Four nominees from each class were introduced at the Revue, from which Jarrett selected one of each classification and two at large. His decision has been kept secret all winter in order to enhance the traditional presentation of beauties at the Spring Senior Formal. Each of the girls has a full page picture in the Daedalian yearbook, which was released the day of the senior prom.

NOT DEAD, BUT ONLY TAKING A SIESTA

Those who passed an overturned car on the Big Lake road, near the golf course, last Sunday thought the two men lying on the ground about the car were dead and hurried on to report. It was soon ascertained that the report of their death was somewhat exaggerated.

Investigation led to the conclusion that the ditch on the side of the road suddenly jumped up in front of the car and turned it over. Being tired, the boys lay down on the ground to rest and wait for the ditch to get back in its place. However, deputy sheriff Hinton Emery insisted that the boys had become somnolent from imbibing too great a quantity of some character of inebriating fluid.

We didn't learn their names, but Jim Alsop said he thought he heard John Walraven say that M. C. Mitchell said that a tourist told him he thought they were old man Damphool Bonehead's boys.

One of the boys was brought to Dr. Everett for surgical treatment. After examination the doctor pronounced the young man's trouble a clear case of dentus supra eyebrow, superinduced by a sudden contact with a hard substance to him unknown at least that is what we understood Doc to say. After doing some much needed tailoring on the fellow's countenance Doc suggested a sleep for his patient and let him go.—Sterling City News-Record.

Draw-Redwine School Graduates First Class Since School Is Affiliated

Final Commencement exercises for the Draw-Redwine high school, officially designated as Rural High School No. 1, were held in the high school auditorium at Draw Tuesday night when seven graduates received their diplomas.

The class address was delivered by District Attorney Truett Smith of Tahoka and the diplomas were presented by Albert Williams, president of the school board. Superintendent R. K. Green presented the scholarship awards.

Pat Hensley was the Salutatorian, the subject of his address being Education and Democracy of the Past. Ruby Hale, another member of the class, used for her theme Education and Democracy of the Present. Rex Jackson was the valedictorian, and he spoke on Education and Democracy of the Future.

The Processional and Recessional were given by Pearl Edgin. The invocation was pronounced by Thomas J. Williams of Draw and the benediction by County Superintendent H. P. Caveness of Tahoka.

The class was composed of the following members: Pat Hensley, Ruby Hale, Delton Hale, Rex Jackson, Thelma Wallace, Elsie Williams, and Charles Florence.

On Thursday night of last week the seventh grade graduation exercises were held, and the 23 members of the class received their certificates of promotion to the high school. This is the largest number of seventh grade graduates in the history of the two schools, Draw and Redwine. Rev. Thompson, pastor of the Methodist Church at Draw, delivered the address to the class.

On Sunday morning the Commencement sermon was delivered in the high school auditorium by Rev. J. W. Braswell, pastor of the Redwine Baptist Church.

About 195 students have been in attendance of the Draw-Redwine schools the past year. The faculty consists of a superintendent, principal of the high school, and six other teachers, two at Redwine and four at Draw.

Superintendent R. K. Green has been teaching at Draw the past four years, but he has been superintendent during only the past year. He has been elected for the ensuing year.

Durwood Dodson is the high school principal and the other teachers on the faculty are: Miss Drucilla Eberhart, Warren Berzett (who has been elected principal at Gail for next year), Miss Marie Crawford, Mrs. Lawrence Sanford, Corbin Douthit, and Mrs. Gladys Collings.

This is the first class that has graduated from the high school since the two districts were combined.

The Draw-Redwine school has promptly taken its place as one of the best school systems in the county. It recently won literary cups in the Class B high schools and grammar schools of the county. It lost by only one point the basketball championship for the entire county.

Charles Florence, a member of the Senior class, won two places at the district interscholastic league meet in Lubbock and two first places at the regional meet at Canyon and participated in the state meet at Austin.

Rev. J. B. Thompson of Draw-Grassland led in the singing of several of Wesley's hymns.

Our third quarterly conference will be held next Sunday. Rev. O. P. Clark will preach at the 11 o'clock hour.

Our revival meeting will be August 7-21.

MRS. CURTIS STEVENS ENTERTAINS WITH PARTY

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Stevens entertained at their home Monday night in honor of her sister, Miss Nell Barrington, who left Tuesday morning to spend the summer with another sister in Paducah.

Games were played and ice cream cones and cake were served to the following guests: Misses Laura Jane and Gerry Milliken, Baby Tot Wetzel, Maxine Godsey, Margie Donaghey, and Sue Caturian of Lubbock and Messrs. Travis Shelton, Turner Rogers, Randall Pultz, Paul Edwards, Carl Lane, and J. W. and Weldon Curtis of O'Donnell, the host and hostess, and the honoree.

MRS. J. A. REA HONORED ON HER BIRTHDAY

Mrs. J. A. Rea was honored with a birthday dinner last Friday, when sixteen relatives and a few friends gathered at the Rea home in East Tahoka.

Relatives from a distance who were present were Amos Parker of Haskell, her cousin; Mrs. Anne Green of Spur, a daughter; and Mrs. Green's son and father-in-law, J. E. Green, also of Spur.

Mrs. Settles and daughter, long-time friends, from Brownfield, were also visitors.

Knight's Grandkids Worth A Million

W. L. Knight dropped into the News office Tuesday and blandly announced that he was getting into the multi-millionaire class. A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. J. Emory Nance in Omaha, Nebraska, on May 12, which is their second child but Mr. Knight's sixth grandchild. He says each of his grandchildren is worth a million dollars and therefore he is worth at least six million. The recent Omaha arrival has been named Jeff Emory Jr. Mr. Knight says his oldest grandchild, Knight Boyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Boyd of Amarillo, is expected to graduate at the Texas A. & M. College in June.

RESPECT FOR THE BENCH

In declaring to the American Bar Institute that there is hardly "any greater need at this time than continued respect for the judiciary tradition of independence and impartiality," Chief Justice Hughes made a nice distinction between the bench and the judge who occupies it in the courtroom.

He pointed out that for the dignity of the courts to be maintained, men must be selected as judges who fulfill judicial tradition by being "able and industrious, qualified by training, experience and temperament."

Much of the popular disrespect for the judiciary lacks definite support, but the general attitude toward judges is that described by Justice Hughes. Most Americans respect the position, and direct their contempt at the particular individual who does not measure up to "the judicial tradition" of which Justice Hughes spoke. It is the same proposition as respect for the cloth of the clergy which reserves the right to reject a particular minister.

Most of us, therefore, can appreciate the import of Justice Hughes' remark because we feel the same way about judges that he does. He knows that the critical spirit toward unworthy men who hold high positions is backed by a respect for the positions themselves. The first task is to find men big enough for the shoes they must wear—whether it be in the courtroom, the church, or any other place to which a public interest attaches.—Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

A. B. Davis, manager of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, a few days ago sent felicitations and greetings to the News from the Chamber in recognition of the cooperation we had given in the campaign to make Air Mail Week a success, from which we clip the following paragraph:

"This day should be remembered for two things-- The first a mail feeder flight to be made from Lubbock to Tahoka, and the first time a news story has ever been dispatched from Lubbock to Tahoka by air mail."

We published our own brief story last week of the visit of the mail plane here. It is hoped that a regular air mail route will be established from San Antonio via Lubbock and Amarillo and on to the north some time soon.

Mrs. E. I. Hill and the editor attended the graduation exercises of the Lubbock High School Monday night, when 189 students received their diplomas. Forty-two others are to be awarded diplomas in July. Miss Arnette Halsey, niece of Mrs. Hill, was one of the number who graduated Monday night.

Connolly Youth Gets Scotland Paper

Keith Connolly exhibited in the News office this week a copy of a special edition of Scotland's National Newspaper, the Daily Record and Mail, published in Glasgow.

This special edition is printed in magazine form, though printed on regular newsprint, and contains 64 pages. Dated April 28, 1938, it is filled with information and propaganda respecting the great Empire Exhibition which was soon to be held in that city.

The paper is interesting to an American.

Keith received this copy from Miss Frances Donachie, Boslyn Villa, Clyde Street, Dunoon, Argyshire, Scotland, with whom he has been corresponding just for the novelty and pleasure of it.

The saltiness of our tears is attributed to the fact that common salt is the most abundant salt in the blood stream.

A good cry, it is said, will really wash one's eye out. The inability of many persons to cry is due to non-functional tear ducts.

As a certain amount of crying each day helps develop a tiny baby's lungs, the normal crying of an infant should not occasion worry.

THE PATHFINDER

is the one and ONLY publication with the knowledge, experience and courage to give you every week the first-hand, inside information which is positively necessary for you to have. It is the ONE publication which is under no obligations to the big moneyed interests or Czars of trade—none of those fatal tie-ups with the selfish cliques who gamble in the very life blood of the people. That's why the Pathfinder is in a position to tell you the unvarnished facts in the plainest possible English. You can depend on every word it says—and there is no substitute for reliability.

EVERY WEEK FROM WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington is now the news center of the entire world. It is the one place in the country where a strictly unbiased and reliable publication can be issued. That is why the Pathfinder is located there. The same clear sighted vision which led to the selection of the National Capital as the home of the Pathfinder over 40 years ago is the backbone of every single issue of the Pathfinder today.

It is our privilege for a limited time to offer you at a greatly reduced bargain price the greatest and most popular national weekly—The PATHFINDER—together with THIS PAPER, both a full year—52 weeks—for

MRS. J. V. DYER CELEBRATES EIGHTY-SECOND BIRTHDAY

Mrs. J. V. Dyer of this city celebrated her eighty-second birthday at her home here Monday. All of her children except one, Mrs. W. F. Shepherd of Post, who is ill, were present. Of course it was a most happy occasion. Mrs. Dyer is one of the pioneer women of this county, she and her late husband settling here when this was a strictly ranching country with few of the modern conveniences. Having reared a large family of children, she was very happy to have them gather in her home on this her eighty-second birthday.

Those present and enjoying the occasion were: Mrs. S. W. Hawthorne and son, Sammie; Mrs. J. P. Manly and son Price, of Post; Mr. and Mrs. G. E. White of Dixie; Mrs. M. E. Morris and children Maurice, Jimmy, and Janie; of Gordon; Jim Dyer and daughters, Wanda and Gloria, of Tahoka; Mr. and Mrs. Billy Sanders and daughter, Billy June, of Tatum, New Mexico; Mr. and Mrs. Bill Guinn of Odessa; and a friend, Mrs. Holly of Dixie.

SCOTT-EDWARDS

On last Saturday Mrs. R. C. Forrester announced the wedding of her niece, Zada Mae Scott, to Mr. Raymond Edwards of Three Lakes. The wedding took place on April 22 at the home of Rev. Ben. D. Johnson in Lubbock.

Mrs. Edwards is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Scott of Lubbock but for the past year has been residing with Mrs. Forrester.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wright Edwards of Three Lakes.

The couple left Friday night for Borger, where they will make their home, Mr. Edwards being employed by a bus company.

Their many friends wish them much happiness.

Mr and Mrs. Preston Strasner, formerly of Tahoka but more recently of Lubbock, left Thursday for California, where Preston has accepted a position with an oil company. Mrs. Strasner is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Sikes.

Health-Wrecking Functional PAINS

Severe functional pains of menstruation, cramping spells and jangled nerves soon rob a woman of her natural, youthful freshness. PAIN lines in a woman's face too often grow into AGE lines!

Thousands of women have found it helpful to take Cardul. They say it seemed to ease their pains and they noticed an increase in their appetites and finally a strengthened resistance to the discomfort of monthly periods.

Try Cardul. Of course if it doesn't help you, see your doctor.

MISS AUDA MAE AYCOX HONORED AT PARTY

Mrs. H. C. Story and Miss O'Bea Forrester were hostesses Monday evening at a garden party at the home of Miss Forrester honoring Miss Auda Mae Aycox and Mr. A. N. Norman of Lubbock, who will be married in June.

A color motif of white, pink, and silver was carried out in the decorations. The honorees were seated under an arch on each side of which were huge baskets of larkspur hung with silver bells. A basket of yucca and pink hearts on the chairs of the honorees completed the color scheme.

Truett Smith and Tom Garrard held a heated debate on the merits and demerits of Miss Aycox and Mr. Norman, candidates for "Chief Executive" of their future home. Mr. Smith was campaign manager for Mr. Norman and Mr. Garrard for Miss Aycox.

Peggy Fenton and Joan Edwards sang "You're a Sweetheart". Little Miss Helen Belle Pemberton, dressed in a "Grown-up" evening gown read "A Bargain."

Raymond Weathers, the election judge, conceded the counting of the ballots to the two candidates. When they opened the improvised "ballot box" of white and pink, they were confronted with a shower of wedding gifts.

Misses Mary Ellen Pesterfield and Paula Smelser presided over the punch bowl, and Mrs. H. C. Story over the guest book.

The following guests were present: Messrs. and Mmes. Raymond Weathers, Jess Gurley, Tom Garrard, Milt Finch, A. M. Cade, Carl Griffing, W. S. Swan, A. C. Aycox, G. B. Sherrod, and Messrs. H. C. Story, Truett Smith, H. O. Dickson and George Houghton of Lubbock, Mmes. Vernon Davis, D. V. Smith, A. N. Hughes, R. C. Forrester, and Misses Ruth Evelyn Story, Jewell Redwine, Viola Ellis, Hattie Server, Lillith Boyd, Helen Park, Joan Edwards, Peggy Fenton, Helen Belle Pemberton, Sue Robertson, Eloise Clark, Paula Smelser, Mary Ellen Pesterfield, Peggy Pat Sherrod, Virgie Cobb, Miss Beverly Wells of O'Donnell, and the honorees, Mr. and Mrs. Meldon Leslie were belated guests, arriving from Dallas after most of the guests had gone. Mrs. Leslie is the former Miss Fern Aycox.

PRESBYTERIAN SERVICES FIFTH SUNDAY

In a few days after these good rains, in spots, a good many fields will need more work done in them than there are workers or workmen to do it. Weeds and thistles seldom wait on the coming of the workman. They grow on and use up the moisture and the soil.

It is so in church and Christian work all over the world. There is need of more workmen for the fields, more preaching of the gospel out among the people, more living the Christian life, more witnessing and testimony in every place for Christ. We don't need any moratorium on preaching. We need more and better Bible preaching, all over the country. There is a hunger today among the people for the Word of God read and preached; and blessed are they which do hunger.

Being the Fifth Sunday, glad to be in Tahoka for the Sunday School hour and preaching at 11 a. m. next Sunday. Preaching services followed by the Communion service.

Morning theme: Christ Our Manna. It is the manna or starvation in the wilderness. Good songs and fine fellowship. Everybody cordially invited.

Glad to be in Tahoka this Fifth Sunday.—W. K. Johnston, Minister.

WILSON TEACHER IS HONORED WITH SHOWER

A miscellaneous shower honoring Miss Linda Franke was given at the home of Mrs. E. Herber, wife of the Lutheran pastor of Wilson Saturday afternoon with Mrs. L. D. Mueller assisting.

The bride elect has taught in the grades at Wilson High School for the past three years and will be married to Florence Probst of Mason, Texas where he is employed in the grocery business.

Mrs. Alvin Eppes played the Bridal chorus from Lohengrin as the bride-elect attired in a dress of rose beige lace with navy accessories entered the living room.

A short program was rendered with Ethel Green, Gladys Ahrens, Mrs. E. Herber, Leona and Elmer Shambeck, Wanda Rice, Addie Jane Gryder and Paul Eppes taking part.

After the program the doors to the dining room were opened in which a small grocery store was fixed with Ester Neiman acting as groceryman.

Luther Herber delivered the gifts to the honoree in a wagon from the store. Elmer Shambeck and Wanda Rice assisted the honoree in unwrapping and displaying her many beautiful gifts.

Refreshments were served by Gladys Ahrens, Ester Neiman, Mrs. E. Herber and Mrs. L. D. Mueller to about 30 guests.

After their marriage the couple will make their home at Mason, Texas.

ELDER DRENNON'S NOTES.

(From Monument, N. M.)

This is to let you know that Texas is a great place to live in after all. Lynn county has much to be thankful for. I have not found any place since I left home with enough rainfall to plant on.

This is an interesting place. It is named after a monument that is placed on the main street. It was designed and built by the one and only Jake Leedy of good old Tahoka. Another feature is that we have plenty of light to get about at night.

They are not electric and do not cost anything. They are the escaping gas from the oil wells that burns night and day. I counted about twenty last night. That lights up the town real well.

I began a meeting here yesterday with fair crowds and fine interest; some fine people even in these rough oil towns, and that is what Jesus will do for all who will let him have his way with them. Will continue over next Lord's Day. We are hoping, praying, and working that many souls will be saved.

I see by last week's issue our good friend Smith has come back to a good town to do business in. We wish him the best of success, for I believe he is a straight shooter, and we need more men of his type to help build up our community. (I expect a little credit for this plug, Smith.)

And you liquor that is on every hand out in this country, but don't let any one tell you that as much liquor is sold in dry territory as in wet, for it is not so. Keep Tahoka as dry as you can; also keep an eye on the drug stores to see that they don't fill too many prescriptions for whiskey. Shame on the doctor that will write them and the druggist

Lesson for May 29

MAINTAINING PERSONAL EFFICIENCY

LESSON TEXT—Dan. 1:8-16, 19, 20; I Cor. 9:24-27.
GOLDEN TEXT—Every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. I Cor. 9:25.
PRIMARY TOPIC—How Daniel Pleased God.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Ten Times Strong.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—In Training for the Game of Life.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Liquor's Effect Upon Working Efficiency.

Personal efficiency is a subject which is receiving much attention in our day. There has never been so much accurate and usable information as we now have regarding diet, exercise, and medical care. The mind as well as the body has come in for attention and scores of books are available on the development and full use of the powers of personality. Some of these are trash, but others are helpful. Business is co-operating with the school and the home in giving boys and girls the opportunity to grow up to be useful and happy members of society. The church adds its important contribution, although we must confess that it is far from what it might be by the grace and power of God.

I. A Sound Mind in a Sound Body (Dan. 1:8-16, 19, 20).

Daniel and his three Hebrew companions had been brought to Babylon as captives, and were there chosen to enter the royal school for future service at the court. Every provision was made for the students chosen for that school. Their diet, however, included not only meat which was unclean to the Jew but wine, which Daniel knew to be undesirable. It took holy boldness to ask to be excused from that which the king had prescribed, but Daniel was blessed not only with courage, but with tact and courtesy. A ten-day test of a simple diet and water proved so successful that the plan was continued. At the end of the three-year course the Hebrews were not only physically stronger but mentally and spiritually superior.

The experience of Daniel and his brethren is not just an incident eagerly grasped at by "blue-nosed reformers" to prevent their neighbors from "enjoying" intoxicating liquor. The testimony of science, of business, of experience in all ages, proves that the use of even an amount of alcohol so small that the user does not feel its presence materially "reduces endurance, accuracy, and rapidity of muscular action of all kinds" (Emerson). It so cuts down the ability to think clearly and to react promptly to danger that it is absolutely taboo with such responsible workers as railroad engineers. It is not a stimulant, but a narcotic, which dulls the nerve centers. Dr. Edward Rosenow says, "The use of alcohol as a beverage is never justified. There is no such thing as the right use of beverage alcohol."

Such information as the above is available in publications of temperance organizations, books by various writers, and even in publications by state liquor commissions. It is published in newspapers and magazines and circulated by safety organizations and insurance companies. Yet, unbelievable as it may seem, the use of liquor is on the increase.

II. Success in Life Calls for Self-Control (I Cor. 9:24-27).

Paul delighted in illustrations taken from the athletic field. He talked of running a race, of fighting a good fight. He knew the athlete's need of keeping his body under.

The one who serves his school or athletic association in physical competition gladly surrenders his personal liberty to the guidance of the coach. He eats carefully, sleeps full nights, exercises consistently, and above all does not use alcohol in any form. Listen to the words of great athletic coaches—Yost: "I would not waste my time trying to train or develop one who uses alcohol." Stagg: "Coaches and trainers are dead against the use of alcoholic liquors, even beer."

Paul rightly points out that all these sacrifices are made by men for what is but a transient earthly crown. How much more should we do for the sake of our souls. Temperance instruction may well stress the physical and mental degradation that follows the use of alcohol, but above all let us teach boys and girls that its use has sent countless souls to eternal punishment and separation from God. We should be deeply moved by the loss of personal efficiency, but what shall we say about the loss of a soul?

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"Monster From the Swamps"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Well, sir, if I seem to be continually harping on the fact that adventures are things you meet up with most frequently at home, you can put it down to the fact that I am continually being reminded of it. Just the other day, while looking through a sheaf of letters I came to a story by a woman who had an adventure on a farm. Well—of course, there's nothing unusual in that. The funny part of it was that the farm was in this country, and the adventure was of a sort you'd only expect to run into in the jungles of Africa or South America, or to read about in some account of the grim battles between men and animals that the ancient Romans used to stage in their gladiatorial arenas.

The woman is Lottie Hawco—Mrs. John Hawco, of New York city. And the animal she fought with was a wild boar. I'll bet a lot of people—including me—didn't know there were wild boars in this country. But there are, as any South Carolina farmer can tell you. How they got here is an interesting story.

You see, the ordinary barnyard breed of pig is nothing in the world but a descendant of the wild boars you read about in tales of old-time Merrie England. Those boars were tamed and fattened and domesticated until, over the space of six or eight hundred years they became the fat, lazy, gluttonous animals you see in hog pens the country over.

How Pigs Get Wild and Dangerous.

But a pig will stay fat, and tame, and lazy only so long as he's kept in captivity and stuffed with chop suey from that well known galvanized iron can out on the back porch. Once he gets loose and goes back to the woods again and has to rustle for his own food—well—then he gets thin and tough and rangy. His tusks grow out, and in a generation or two he becomes a boar again—just as wild and as dangerous an animal as ever he was when he roamed the marshes and forests of old England in the days of Robin Hood.

There are plenty of those backsliding wild hogs in the back country of South Carolina, and the farmers hunt them down and round them up because they destroy the nests of the wild turkeys in the neighborhood.

The Boar Viciously Attacked Lottie's Mother.

And that brings us to Lottie Hawco who, on February 18, 1931, was visiting with her mother and her sister, Inez, on a farm near Osborn, S. C., where a wild boar hunt was in progress.

A bunch of men from the neighborhood had been out all day, combing the marshes with packs of dogs, roping boars and herding them—alive—into a big high-sided farm wagon. They had just returned home with six or seven boars—big, vicious fellows—waist-high to a man and weighing three or four hundred pounds—animals that could break a man's leg with their huge, crunching jaws and which frequently did disembowel the fierce dogs that hunted them with one sweeping blow of their long, protruding tusks.

The men backed the wagon up to a strong enclosure and were untying the boars one by one and cautiously prodding them into the pen. Lottie, her mother and sister were standing near by, watching the proceedings—and then—suddenly—a terrible thing happened.

Attack by a Savage Boar.

The men had unlashed the largest boar and were prodding it toward the pen when it turned, squeezed between the wagon and the enclosure and rushed out into the open, gnashing its great teeth and foaming at the mouth. It headed straight for Lottie's mother, who was standing nearest the pen, and before she could turn to run, it was on her, throwing her in a heap to the ground, biting at her savagely.

It was the most terrible sight Lottie ever beheld in her life. Charlie, the foreman, stood with his mouth agape, too surprised for a moment to even move. Sister Inez, paralyzed with fright, clapped her hands over her ears and began to scream. Lottie herself was numb with terror, and for precious seconds—seconds that seemed like a lifetime—she stood rooted to the spot. All the rest of the men were on the other side of the pen, or on the wagon, too far away to reach the spot in time to do any good.

Then, all of a sudden, Lottie came to life. She can't explain what happened, but it seemed as if a spring inside her had suddenly been released. She sprang forward, threw herself on the snarling, screaming, rolling jumble of woman and beast, singled out the boar and began beating and mauling and scratching it with insane frenzy.

Surprised Him, So He Flew.

The boar could have killed Lottie with one thrust of its sharp, pointed tusk. Lottie's mother had been saved from death thus far only by her long skirts and thick clothing. But taken by surprise, the boar couldn't quite figure out this wild new menace that came beating and kicking at his flanks—tearing and scratching at his eyes. It was a thing of fury. It had come around from the other side of the pen to deal with him. And an animal will often reason that if you are not afraid of him, then he must have good cause to be afraid of you.

This one did just that. Snarling and grunting, he turned to flee from this inexplicable new attack. He got about three steps, and then he found himself tangled up in the ropes of the men who, by this time, had come around from the other side of the pen to deal with him.

The next thing Lottie knew, she was back on the porch of the farm house with her mother, looking over herself for injuries. She doesn't even remember helping her mother to the porch, and to this day she can't figure out how she came out of that fight without a scratch on her body.

IRON and COPPER

Shows How You Can Help to Avoid Anemia by Including These Blood-Building Minerals in the Diet

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York City

OF ALL the nutrition problems that challenge the homemaker, none is more important than supplying her family's need for iron. This mineral is sometimes described as the supreme element in nutrition because it is an essential constituent of the blood.

How Blood Is Constructed

If you should examine a drop of blood under the microscope, you would observe that it is composed of red cells and white cells. In normal blood there are about 25 million times a million red blood corpuscles, owing their color to the iron-bearing protein hemoglobin. They carry oxygen to all the body tissues, and remove the carbon dioxide formed during the combustion of body fuel.

A reduction in the amount of hemoglobin in the blood may cause shortness of breath, quickened respiration and an accelerated heart action. Lack of appetite, weakness, and a slowing of all vital functions may also result from the diminished supply of oxygen to the tissues.

Women Need More Than Men

Women require more iron than men, in proportion to the body weight, to make good the losses that occur during the menses. Expectant mothers need a generous amount of iron, not only to provide for their own needs and for the normal development of the fetus, but to create a reserve supply in the baby's body which will last through the period of lactation.

Lack of Iron May Lead to Anemia

In many young people the blood does not function normally, though frequently parents are unaware that anything is wrong. You may scold them for being lazy, for lacking interest in their work, or never heeding the things you tell them, when the real trouble is due to iron starvation which, if long continued, may lead to anemia.

The person who has a tendency toward anemia usually tires easily and lacks pep; complains of cold hands and feet; worries over trifles, and may have a complexion that is anything but rosy.

The great danger of an iron-deficient diet is that it deprives the body of its chief defense against disease. For when the quality of the blood is poor, one becomes an easy prey to infection. Moreover, if a serious illness occurs, lowered resistance makes it difficult to fight it off.

Two Forms of Anemia

Anemia may be due to loss of blood, deficient blood formation, or to increased blood destruction in the body. The different forms of the disease are sometimes classified as primary and secondary anemia.

Primary anemia is usually known as pernicious anemia. It is a grave condition in which the marrow of the bones has lost its power to make red blood cells.

Secondary or nutritional anemia may result from loss of blood in an accident, or it may follow a long, infectious illness. For any infection lowers the iron reserve in the body. But the most common cause is a diet lacking in sufficient iron over a long period of time.

How Much Iron?

It is believed that about 10 per cent of the total hemoglobin in adults is destroyed daily. And for this reason iron-rich foods must be included in the diet every day.

Investigators have found it difficult to determine the exact iron requirement, but according to the latest estimates, from 12 to 15 milligrams a day will not only provide adequately for bodily requirements, but will allow a reasonable reserve.

Women require more iron than men, in proportion to the body weight, to make good the losses that occur during the menses. Expectant mothers need a generous amount of iron, not only to provide for their own needs and for the normal development of the fetus, but to create a reserve supply in the baby's body which will last through the period of lactation.

The percentage of iron in the baby's body is about three times that of the adult. Nature has wisely designed this reserve to make up for the low iron content of milk which constitutes the chief food during the first six months of life. Nutrition authorities believe, however, that better health re-

Well Known Colored Couple Marries

Ruby Bivins, daughter of Mattie Bivins, colored, well and favorably known among the whites as well as the colored people of Tahoka, was married to Ollie Holt at 9:30 o'clock Monday night at her home "over on the hill", Rev. O. D. Hollins offi-

The bride has been here since 1925 and is well known. The groom

Mr. and Mrs. Ivan McWhirter, teachers of the West Point school, took about thirteen or fourteen of the pupils to the Carlsbad Cavern adult person as for that matter. It is indeed one of the great natural wonders of the world.

F. H. HANCOCK DIES OF HEART ATTACK

was under the direction of the Harris Funeral Home in the Tahoka Cemetery.

Mack Ferrin Hancock was a native Texan, having been born at Florence in Williamson county on August 26, 1875. He was therefore approximately 62 years and nine months old. To prevent confusion in names because of another Hancock having the same initials as himself, he began signing his name as F. H. Hancock many years ago, and it was by those initials that he was generally known here.

He was married on July 4, 1897, to Miss Jessie Boulter at Goldthwaite, and of this union seven children were born, one son and six daughters. The son is E. E. Hancock, superintendent of the Petersburg High School, and the daughters are: Mrs. B. M. Hays of Lubbock,
Mrs. Burr Morrow of New Home,
Mrs. Henry Heck of New Home,
Mrs. J. R. Link of Fabens, Mrs.
A. D. Seth of Lubbock, and Mrs.
George Hancock of New Home, all of whom were present for the funeral.

Surviving also are the widow and five brothers of deceased: W. C.
C. C. and A. C. Hancock of Mullin,
Mills county, Lee Hancock of Fort Worth, and John Hancock of Plu-vanna.

For many years Mr. Hancock and family resided at or near Goldthwaite. Then they moved to Winters, where they resided for some time, and came on to Lynn county in 1925. He and family had resided here ever since. For a number of years they resided at New Home.

moving nearer Tahoka a few years ago.

Mr. Hancock had long been a devoted member of the Baptist Church. He was a good father and husband, a good neighbor, and a good citizen. He made his life count for much in every community in which he ever lived. He will be greatly missed by his relatives and friends here. The News joins many others in condolence to all the bereaved.

Fred Barker is having his residence re-painted this week.
