Explain Procedure for

Canning Boneless Chicken

The following procedure for can-ning boneless chicken is recommended by food technologists. Precook to the point where the meat is easily removed from the bones. Remove the skin and cut the fowl into regular rieces. Remove the bones leaving the meat in as large pieces as possible. Small pieces and meat scraped from back, ribs, and neck are kept for soup stock or creamed chicken. The bones and skin are also kept for soup stock. The prepared meat is packed into clean dry pint or half-pint jars. Fill to one inch below the top of jar, leaving a little room for liquid. Add 1/2 teaspoonful of salt to each pint jar and hot broth from the cooking vessel to fill to within one inch of the top. Partially seal jars and process under 10 pounds pressure or 240 degrees Fahrenheit for 90 minutes. When the pressure falls to zero remove the jars and complete

The soup stock is strained through four layers of moist cheesecloth to remove the fat. ful with some homemakers.

Acids Needed in Growth A recent discovery at the University of Idaho has shown that dried field peas (Alaska), either raw or cooked, contain all of the amino acias necessary for growth excepting methionine. The addition of 0.3 per cent of methionine to a diet containing peas as the sole source of protein raised the value of the protein of peas to the equivalent of casein of milk. Methionine is one of the essential amino acids and is found most abundantly in eggs, milk and meat products. Subjecting the peas to either dry or moist heat did not improve the value of the pea protein, but actually reduced it slightly. Further research has revealed that by combining one egg with one serving (approximately one-half cup) of cooked dried peas the total protein of the food is bolstered to a value equiva-

Thus by combining peas with eggs the most efficient use may be made from the 21 per cent of protein supplied by the peas. Further research to find other complimentary food conducted. Now it appears that dried peas may find new usefulness as components of practical diets of all mammals.

Vitamin Intake

Stock at pasture or animals fed well-cured leafy hay will receive all the vitamin A that is needed. Calves too young to eat hay, and growing poultry, especially turkey poults, that are not on range or are not being fed rations containing alfalfa meal, often need some vitamin A supplement. The vitamin A requirement for turkeys is considerably higher than that for chickens. Exposure to sunlight in the summer and feeding properly cured hay in the winter usually insures an adequate supply of D, the so-called sunshine vitamin. As with vitamin A, young animals, for example, calves, pigs, puppies and growing poultry, often need special supplements of vitamin D, particularly during the winter months. Farm animals fed home-grown feeds probably do not suffer from a lack of vitamin E, the 'so-called anti-sterility vitamin.

The government classing of cotton under the Smith-Doxey act is checked each day by the U.S. board of supervising cotton examiners. Cotton is classed by expert classers with many years of experience, whose work is checked every day by the national supervising board located at Memphis, Tenn. These classers give an unbiased report on the grade and staple of the cottonsamples and their jobs depend upon their ability to maintain a high record of accuracy.

The farmer receives a small, green card that gives him the grade and staple of each bale of cotton and also its loan value, which is of great service to the grower in marketing his cotton and also in getting a loan on it. The price shown on the card is acceptable for a government loan in any approved warehouse or for farm storage.

The first play, a pass, netted 27 yards. The second play was a pass that brought the Eagles another 27 yards and to the 7 yard line. Two running plays netted 5 gards, and then from the 2 yard line, Halfback Royce Copeland shot a pass to Mansell Oglesby, another half, for a touchdown. Seagraves kicked goal for the extra point. But the Bulldog had solved the Seagraves passing attack in those five plays, and never again were the Eagles very close to Tahoka's goal line.

During the second quarter. La Vaughn (Seabiscuit) Caraway, Tahoka fullback, intercepted a Seagraves pass on his own 38 yard line and carried it 41 yards down field. Tahoka made 7 first down to 9 for Seagraves, gained 118 yards on running plays and 47 on passes, as Seagraves was picking up 113 on running plays and 72 passing; but these figures do not include the pass interceptions and run-back of punts. AND FOR MEXICANS TOO

There has been much discussion of late respecting educational facilities for Negroes in Texas and the South. We sincerely hope that better public school and college facilities will speedily be provided for them. But we are also wondering what is being done for the education of Mexicans in Texas. Mexican children, of course, are permitted to attend the schools for whites but we are wondering what percent of Mexican children of scholastic age in Texas actually attend the public schools. In Lynn county there are 'few resident Mexicans, but thousands of them swarm into the county and remain here through the cottongathering season. Practically none of these attend school here. wonder if they attend school anywhere else during other parts of the year. Many of them doubtless do but it is doubtful if scarcely any of them attend school more than three or four months in the year, and many probably do not attend school at all.

We believe that the Mexicans are capable of a much higher degree of education and civilization than they have yet attained. Many of the children who come to this county seem to be bright and intelligent. We believe that education and Protestant Christianity would soon lift them to as high a level as that of our own Anglo-Americans.

As we see it, the people of Texas have a great opportunity and obligation to give these Mexican children the same degree of education as they give other white Americans; and the churches have the matchless opportunity and obligation to give them the Bible and the message of non-Catholic Christianity. As Dr. Sutton, that eminent educator of Atlanta, Georgia, showed conclusively in an address to the Rotary Club here two or three years ago. it pays big dividends in a business way, not to mention other considerations, to educate and to elevate the uneducated whatever their race

Tahoka Wins Over Seagraves 14 to 0

The Tahoka Bulldogs journeyed to Seagraves last Friday night to battle their conference foes, the Seagraves Eagles. The game was very close but Tahoka came out on top, 14 to 7.

Seagraves scored early in the first quarter on a series of passes. Tahoka came back in the second quarter, with Caraway going over for the score. That was all of the scoring in the first half, the half ending 7-all. Our second score came in the third period with Caraway again making the score. This time Bill Grider made the extra point, and tha was all of the scoring for the night. Seagraves threatened late in the ball game but we were able to stave off the rally and go on to win 14 to 7. The conference set-up- in this district is: If O'Donnell should beat Denver City this week-end and we beat O'Donnell in our Nov. 10 Homecoming game, the conference will be tied up, provided Seagraves doesn't stop Denver City and Seminole doesn't stop us. Tahoka's foe for this week-end is the class AA Big Spring Steers. This game will be played on the Big Spring field and likely as not many fans from Tahoka will go down for the game Thursday night. The Bulldogs have scored 80 points this season to their opponents 44. They have won three, lost two. and tied one. It is hoped that this record will be improved by the end of the season.

You mean, it's that easy ?

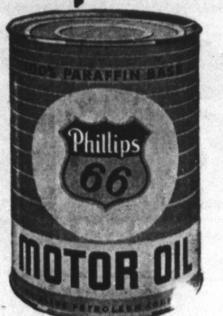

This Skeptical Gentleman represents many hundreds of thousands of automobile owners intelligent, patriotic drivers who are determined to give their cars the best of care, who understand the nation's need for keeping every possible car running for the duration.

They require no long-winded arguments to convince them that quality oil is the best policy. They ask only: How can I select a quality lubricant, when I am neither an engineer nor a chemist? Isn't there some simple, easy way to make sure of getting a motor oil of quality?

There is! Phillips, with an outstanding reputation in the field, makes a frank and clear statement to relieve all doubt when choosing between the various oils marketed under this good name. Phillips says, if you want our best oil, remember we frankly tell you that Phillips 66 Motor Oil is our finest quality... the highest grade and the greatest value... among all the oils we offer to average motorists.

Oil wears thin in summer use. It also accumulates dust, metal particles, and oxidation products. So it's wise, say experts, to drain every two months, under today's reduced driving conditions. Especially when you make the seasonal change, ask for the correct winter grade of Phillips 66 Motor Oil.

Attend Refrigerator to Get Maximum Efficiency Your refrigerator will "feel the heat" during overtime work and will need a little extra care to provide maximum efficiency. Keep the condenser coils free from dirt and dust which interfere with the motor's cooling efficiency and cause it to run more. Use a long-handled brush or a vacuum cleaner attachment to clean the coils, which on most refrigerators are behind or underneath the food chamber. If you have an electric refrigerator, be sure to turn off the motor before cleaning the coils. Avoid frequent and lengthy door openings. A small table or shelf near the refrigerator will be handy, as several articles can be taken out of the box at one time without opening the door frequently and letting the cold air out and the warm air in. If a refrigerator is overcrowded with food, the necessary circulation of air will be stopped. Wait until hot foods are cool before putting them in the refrigerator. There are many foods which don't need refrigerating, so you need not crowd the box with sugar-preserved foods, such as dates, jellies, honey and syrup; fresh foods, such as bananas, potatoes and avocadoes, or other

Fish Food

Plankton, microscopic plant and animal life that serves as food for fish, thrives on chemical plant-food applied to lakes and ponds as commercial fertilizer. Fish that consume fertilized plankton are bigger, tastier, more abundant, and gamer than those that eat only the usual plankton found in ordinary unfertilized waters. Attention was first attracted to fish-pond fertilization two years ago by the Alabama Agricultural Experiment station. Recently Prof. B. W. Taylor of Mc-Gill university in Canada reported that the yield of trout was increased from 4 pounds per acre of water in unfertilized ponds to 120 pounds per acre in a pond fertilized with a 4-8-10 fertilizer, containing nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potash, at a rate of 50 pounds per million pounds of water.

Dried Packaged Corn

Provides Good Serving Properly dried corn is hard, brittle, and semi-transparent. A kernel will shatter when hit with a hammer. When the test for dryness is reached, turn off the heat and open the oven door; allow the corn to remain in the oven for another hour-one damp kernel may ruin an entire lot.

Store in moisture-proof containers -airtight screw-top jars, paraffined cartons or bags, or tin cans with tight fitting lids. It pays to packin fairly small quantities, enough for a family serving. Roughly, one to two cups serve six people. Dried food is best when used soon after opening, and, if packaged in small quantities, the lot is not exposed to air and dampness each time some is used.

In preparing dried corn for servwater until the kernels are plumpdeners add layers of soil also, to will rob it of its sweet corn flavor
