Ayer-Way Installs Pre-Spot Service

Ayer-Way Cleaners has installed new pre-spotting equipment, using a process of soil and stain removal before dry cleaning, as recommended by the National Institute of Cleaners.

The process restores brightness and newness to clothing and furnishes complete perspiration stain removal.

Granvel says this process is one of the greatest cleaning improvements since the "charge system," which is also being used by the Ayer-Way Cleaners.

Granvel invites you to "give us a trial for the finest in dry cleaning." (Adv.)

Miss Gloria Ellen James Becomes Bride Of Harold Leroy Crooks At New Home

Miss Gloria Ellen James, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude James of Wilson, became the bride of Harold Leroy Crooks Saturday night in the New Home Baptist church. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Crooks of Tahoka.

The Rev. Robert L. Clements read a double ring service. Miss Sylvia Edwards, organist, played traditional wedding music and accompanied Boswell Edwards as he sang "At Dawning" "Because" and the "Lord's Prayer".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of chantilly type lace over blush pink slipper satin. The fitted bodice was fashioned with an ec-colooped neckline and full balerina length skirt.

Her finger tip veil of imported French silk illusion fell from a tiera of iridescent sequins and pearls. She carried pink roses atop a white bible.

Miss Patricia Inman of Muleshoe, cousin of the bride attended as Maid of Honor. Bridesmaids were, Miss Dorothy Taylor and Miss Martha Crooks, sister of the bridegroom.

Attendants wore frocks of net over taffeta in shades of pale green, pink, and yellow.

Shirley Batey, cousin of the bridegroom, acted as flower girl. She wore identical dress as bridesmaids. Jackie Walton of Snyder, cousin of the bride, was ring bearer.

Candles were lighted by Gayland James, brother of the bride.

Ford rides on a Ball-Joint cushion

...and it handles with ball-bearing ease

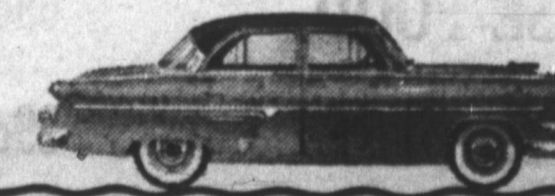

CONVENTIONAL KINGPIN SUSPENSION depends on hinge-like joints for movement of front wheels up and down or right and left. This system also requires lubrication at 8 points of wear at each front wheel. Doesn't permit maximum up-and-down wheel travel and is not sealed against dirt and water.

NEW FORD BALL-JOINT FRONT SUSPENSION replaces "hinges" for pivoting and up-and-down wheel movement, with sealed ball joints. This eliminates 12 points of wear ... helps keep front wheels in line longer. You get a smoother, more level ride. Your Ford keeps that new car "feel" longer.

It's THE GREATEST chassis advance in 20 years. And only the '54 Ford in its field has it! It pays off with the smoothest ride you've ever experienced in a low-priced car ... easier handling ... fewer service worries ... and many, many other advantages.

And besides this revolutionary advance, Ford offers two brand new deep-block power plants: the 130-h.p. Y-block V-8 and the 115-h.p. I-block Six. You'll also find a new stronger frame ... a beautiful new Astra-Dial control panel ... new styling inside and out ... plus all the other finer features that have already established Ford as America's "worth more" car!

At a recent meeting of the District Board of Supervisors, the main subject of discussion was the importance of organic matter in the soil. The drought and the high price of cotton have been factors that, in the case of organic matter, have worked together to make it difficult for farmers to maintain a normal level of organic matter in their soil.

The Supervisors are hoping that this year, with the help of some rain, farmers can concentrate more on a vegetative program that will add both organic matter and fertility to the soils in the district.

Two practices they think are especially promising and certainly worth a trial are the planting of guar and the planting of feed and peas in the same row. It was brought out that feed and New Era peas in the same row have been tried on the High Plains before and that all reports have indicated this to be a very beneficial practice. When the feed is combined there is considerable vegetation left to turn back to the soil and the peas furnish nitrogen in addition.

Guar is one of the most promising dryland legume crops to come along in years. The crop may be harvested for the guar beans but the greatest benefit is obtained if the crop is turned under green. The guar plant makes a growth of green vegetation and has tap roots that do a good job of opening up the subsoil. It also has the ability of all legumes to take nitrogen from the air and put it into the soil through nodules on the roots.

Other vegetative practices that were discussed and which are good soil improving practices are the spreading of cotton burrs, winter legumes under irrigation, strips of feed and peas or guar, and planting combine feed and leaving a good stubble to return to the soil.

The Board of Supervisors are hoping that every farmer will make plans now to start a program of soil improving this year on a part of his farm. The County Agent and Soil Conservation Service technicians in cooperation with the Board will help any farmer with his soil improving problems.

Auto Inspection
Deadline Nears

AUSTIN, March—If Texas motorists continue getting their autos inspected at the same rate that they are currently, there will be no chance of a "log jam" at the inspection stations prior to the April deadline.

That was the opinion today of Homer Garrison, Jr. Director of the Texas Department of Public Safety who complimented the 65 percent of Texas car owners who have already had their vehicles checked for mechanical defects. At the same time, he passed on a repeated word of warning to nearly a million other motorists who have neglected, thus far, to meet the requirements of the State's motor vehicle inspection law by reminding that approved stickers must be on cars after April 15th or the owners will face court action.

George W. Busby, Chief of the Safety Department's Motor Vehicle Inspection Division, announced that inspections are now being conducted at the rate of 150,000 weekly and that no stations are experiencing a capacity business. "In the four-weeks remainder before the inspection deadline," Busby said, "the licensed stations will be fully capable of taking care of every vehicle in the State remaining to be checked without undue waiting or inconvenience unless too many folks put off having their autos inspected until the last minute."

The day is planned for all children in the Tahoka district who expect to start to school next September—children who will be six years of age before Sept. 1, 1954, or who will be in school for the first time next September.

This program has been planned to prepare children for the new experiences of starting to school and to acquaint them with their new environment before actually becoming a part of it.

First grade teachers will be relieved of their regular duties in order to meet each child and parent and conduct a typical "school day" of activities. While the children are in class, parents are invited to sessions which are based on a short course on parent orientation. Regular students will not come to school that day.

Parents are asked to bring their children to the South Elementary School office at 9 a. m., where they will be registered and assigned to rooms. The children will remain through the regular lunch hour. The cafeteria is preparing to serve lunch to the children and their parents. Parents will be charged 25 cents. Everyone will be dismissed at 11:40 a. m.

Half-ton beauty
with a two-ton punch

THIS new '54 GMC light-duty wasn't born just to win beauty contests.

Sure, its sleek lines, full-width grille and panoramic windshield are handsomely un-trucklike.

There's the same dashing air about the inside, too. Two-tone color scheme. Harmonizing, supple-as-leather upholstery. Smart instrument panel, with dials clustered for instant reading.

But mister—take another look!

A burly, brawny brute of an engine—a real truck engine—makes you think of a Miss America who also can bend horseshoes. 125 horsepower says that this beauty can heft a top load with ease and dash.

That's more power than some makers pack into their two-ton models. That's more usable power than in any other 6-cylinder engine in its class!

And its wide, deep box holds at least 8 cubic feet more than the roomy '53 model. That tail gate is grain-tight—and sand-tight.

Finally, it offers Truck Hydra-Matic Drive* that saves you, saves your cash, saves your time.

(Note to the luxury-minded: there's a DE LUXE model at extra cost, with chrome grille and trim, two-tone paint, curved rear corner windows—the works!)

Come in and drive this great GMC. It will do all its own selling!

Exclusive Blowout Shield guards you against dangerous bruise-caused blowouts. If the cord body is seriously damaged, flexing ultimately opens a tiny hole in the double liner. Air escapes slowly so car can be brought to a safe, sure stop.

Odds and Ends

(BY E. I. THE ELDER)

Our Mexico correspondent, Senorita Aurora Gutierrez, sent the following "Article," entitled "Tropics" for publication in this column last week, but on account of the large amount of data which I had already collected pertaining to that tiny but most charming little country of the Old World in ancient times, the Land of Galilee, much of which data I didn't find room to use after all, I decided to let Aurora's contribution go over until this week. More than half of the territory and doubtless more than three-fourths of the population of Mexico are to be found south of the tropic of Cancer, which marks the northern boundary of the torrid zone. The tropic of Capricorn lies the same distance south of the equator, as you well know, and the tropic of Cancer lies north of it and crosses South America far down toward its south end. Half of Mexico, all of Central America, and most of South America, therefore, are within the tropics, or the Torrid Zone; but Aurora is writing about that small portion that lies in the mountainous region east of the City of Mexico and west of Veracruz and vicinity. This "article" as well as all that have gone before it pertains to this region. I give you that, folks, by way of explanation. So, here is her article for this week.

"Of all the hot-country towns from Tampico in the north to Puerto Mexico in the south, Veracruz reigns as queen. Here, when the Spaniards were building an empire in the Americas, galleons anchored. Here, behind stout breakwaters, giant ocean liners dock today while brown-skinned stevedores tug frantically at sleek motor car bodies brought in for Mexico City assembly lines, then quickly load the holds with vanilla or gold, bananas, or mahogany, mercury of cocoa beans. "But don't ever imagine that life in Veracruz is all work. The Veracruzano and his mate get a good deal of work done, but in two other departments of life they have their Ph. D's. One is play. They are muy alegres (very lively) and go in for fiestas of many kinds. During the week preceding Easter Sunday—el carnaval—the streets are filled with merry-makers from far and wide who find Veracruz mirth contagious. Throughout the year Saints' Day, the christening of new houses, Dios patrios (God and Country), and the many other holidays with which Mexico is so abundantly supplied serve as pretexts to "throw a party". The Veracruzano follows the injunction of the nursery rhyme to "work while you work and play while you play." They're gay. Above all, they love to dance, whether the musicians strike up one of the torrid hot-country songs, a waltz, a danzon, or swing. They'll dance till dawn at the baptism of a babe, or the saint's day of a friend, and after they've snatched a few hours sleep, you'll find them at Villa del Mar by mid-day sipping lemonada and . . . guess what? Dancing! "If these people know how to work and love to play, they're also past masters in the lost art of relaxing. Any native of the region can do nothing at all and do it more gracefully than almost any one else in the world. If you're not in the mood for loafing, you might rent a boat and visit Sacrificios Island, where Cortes is said to have witnessed a human sacrifice for the first time. To be continued"

These contributions that Senorita Aurora is making to this column certainly do confirm the verity of the statements we have so often heard up here north of the Rio Grande to the effect that the Spanish and Mexican people are a light-hearted and pleasure-loving people as a rule even though they may be genuinely serious and purposeful when crisis arise, or when the occasion demands it.

However, the common people of Mexico have undergone many trials and tribulations and have suffered much persecution during historic times. Mexico was the first great region of America that was explored and exploited after the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus, as everybody knows. The world was thrilled by that event and the history of the world has been completely changed as a result of it.

The story of Columbus and his efforts to enlist the interest of European Governments in his beliefs that the world is round and could be circumnavigated is one of the most interesting and thrilling true stories in all the many centuries of world history. This story involves a royal romance, religion, two or three wars, the intolerance of ignorance, the courage born of knowledge and reason, the god sense and helpfulness of a great and good queen, and countless disappointments, heart-aches, the joy resulting from final victory, and final death of the hero resulting largely from the envy and maliciousness and ingratitude of wicked men. The hero of this story, of course, heroine was good Queen Isabella of Spain. I may not be able to compress this story with its immediate background and collateral events into one treatise but I shall make a start and go as far as time and space will permit.

I must say before going farther that I get my facts from general European history, from H. B. Parkes' History of Mexico, and from an article entitled "The Queen Behind Columbus" by Donald C. Peattie appearing in the recent March issue of Reader's Digest.

The remote background was the long struggle between the Mohammedan Moors and the Roman Catholics for the domination and possession of the land now known as Spain and all the territory of northern Africa from Egypt to the Rock of Gibraltar at the western end of the Mediterranean. This struggle had gone on intermittently for more than 700 years and did not finally end until just a few years prior to 1492, when Columbus discovered America. If it had not ended victoriously for Spain when it did, the chances are that Columbus never would have discovered America, and nobody can guess how many long years it would have been before some other man discovered it.

The facts are that Columbus was fitted out and financed by Spain to make the voyage which resulted in the Great Discovery, and there was no other nation, despite arguments and importunities made to several of them, they showed the slightest interest in the proposed project; and Spain itself did not become a unified nation until a few years before it sponsored and made possible the voyage. The voyage even then would not have been made possible except for the sympathetic interest and aid given by Queen Isabella, who herself had almost despaired of being able to furnish the necessary aid, when the door of opportunity eventually swung open.

And now, having given Queen Isabella chief credit for making it possible for Columbus to strike out on that "fool-hardy" voyage with three little old wooden ships, with the wind as motive power and only sails to guide them into the stormy Atlantic, whose width was unknown and whose western shores had never been seen by European eyes and whose waters possibly teemed with unknown sea monsters, let us stop a moment and see what crazy ideas impelled a sensible man to launch out on such a voyage and what induces a good and much beloved queen to encourage and help him in such a mad enterprise.

Well, even in ancient times there were learned men who believed that this earth was round, and there were men who lived in every generation since who believed the same thing but they had neither the means nor the courage nor the ever-impelling incentive strong enough to induce them to undertake the task of proving their views to be correct. But now the growth of populations and the increase of commerce throughout the known world was causing men to wish and seek for a shorter and less expensive route to India which was believed to be rich in gold and in useful and valuable products. It was an era of wishful thinking but nobody had the conviction or the nerve to do any thing about it.

So, it was into this kind of a world situation that a little prospective princess was born on April 22, 1451. She was the daughter of the king of Castile, one of the then independent states or divisions of what is now the kingdom of Spain. His name is all but forgotten, but they named the little daughter Isabella. A few years after her birth her father, the king, died. But he left a son, older than Isabella, her half-brother who was heir-apparent to the throne and who upon the father's death became king of Castile. He was called Henry the Impotent and apparently was mentally defective as well as a physical weakling. The little child, Isabella was a bright as a pin and grew up in King Henry's court at Madrid. Being both bright and beautiful as well as heir-apparent to the throne of Castile, upon reaching the age of 17, she received three offers of marriage, one from the grouch old king of Portugal, one from the unattractive brother of the king of France and one from Prince Ferdinand of Aragon. This was another independent state or little kingdom adjacent to Castile and also within the present bounds of Spain. In fact Castile and Aragon were natural political and racial allies and constituted even then the major portions of the loose but united country that covered most of the great Iberian peninsula. So, the brilliant young princess had not only long regarded Prince Ferdinand as an ideal young gentleman but secretly she had looked forward to the time when they not only could join their hearts and hands but also their fortunes and their kingdoms. So she slipped away from the palace of her half-brother weakling, King Henry the Impotent, at Madrid, and fled to her native town of Madrigal de Las Altas Torres, and therefore promptly sent her acceptance to Prince Ferdinand.

When her half-brother, King Henry, heard of their engagement he became furious. He not only threatened to arrest his sister, but he sent spies to watch the roads and to nab Ferdinand if he should attempt to enter Castile. But the daring couple evidently got word of King Henry's plans and outwitted him. Ferdinand disguised himself as a dirty-faced, shabbily dressed mule driver and thus drove across the line from Aragon into Castile unrecognized by the guards. He met the bride, probably the first time in life, in the palace at Valladolid. But neither was disappointed in the least with the other and a few days later they were married; date, October 19, 1469. Contrary to present-day custom, her age was given, his was not. She was 18, he must have been just a little older.

The historian H. B. Parkes comments: "Castile and Aragon were united by the marriage of Ferdinand and Isabella."

Donald Culross Peattie, whose account of the affair was published last month in the Reader's Digest, comments similarly: "In this indissoluble wedlock of Castile with Aragon—was conceived a new nation—modern Spain."

That was in 1469 and Spain now was prospectively a united nation but the full story is not yet told by any means. It is yet twenty-two years until Columbus sets out on his first voyage to search for a shorter route to India.

Ferdinand and Isabella are happily married but that scowling near-moron Henry the Impotent is still on the throne of Castile, and technically the kingdoms were not actually united until his death in 1474. When he died, Isabella fell heir to the throne of Castile, and she was compelled to make hasty preparations for her coronation, for there was a pretender making claim to the throne, according to the Reader's Digest writer, and King Ferdinand was busy in putting down an insurrection in Aragon. "So, on December 14, 1474, Isabella, clad in ermine, rode out on a white palfrey to be crowned in the main square of Segovia as queen of Castile. In the gorgeous procession escorting her, pages bore on a pillow the crown of the absent Ferdinand.

"When Ferdinand at last arrived," Peattie continues, "He was in a fine fury. When he demanded, had a queen ever been crowned before her husband? When had a Spanish wife ever aspired to equal sway with her lord and master?"

"Isabella merely tapped the pre-nuptial agreement Ferdinand had signed—which she had drawn up. Therein he had accepted rights in Castile limited to those of a consort—relying, no doubt, on male domination over the weaker sex. Now he discovered that this wife was weak in nothing, wise in much. Forever after, this royal pair acted only in consultation and gave orders in unison. Their statecraft, like their marriage, became the stronger for the early test."

Isabella was only 18 years of age when she married and only 23 when she was crowned queen of Castile and so she had now achieved her childhood purpose or at least her dream that some day she would wed the boy that she loved and hereby proceed to unify and solidify Spain, but the most important achievement of her life had not yet entered her dreams. In 1474 Isabella was only 23 years old and Columbus is believed to have been less than 40. He had not yet begun pressing his views as to the refunding of the earth upon the sovereigns of Europe with a view to obtaining funds with which to test his convictions. If Isabella had even heard of Columbus at that time, she most certainly had not been asked to help him. That problem still lay far out in the future. But she had just reached that stage in her life and station where wisdom and courage and heroic action would be required thenceforth to meet the problems just ahead of her—where her greatness is just beginning to manifest itself. But our space is running out on us and we must leave the remainder of the story, the most thrilling part of the story, until next week. So Bueno noche.

Take it Easy
you don't have to prove a thing!

LET'S be sensible about this subject of horsepower. An all-American tackle doesn't go around tackling people in everyday life. A world-record sprinter doesn't have to demonstrate his prowess on city sidewalks. The better you are, the less you have to prove it. And that's how it is with a Buick CENTURY. Of course it's a spectacular performer—a car with instantly responsive action. It has to be, for this one combines a high-compression 200-horsepower V8 engine with a nimble weight of only 3866 pounds as it comes off the assembly line. That's a power-to-weight ratio that chalks up a new record—a ratio that no other Buick has ever reached before. It can spin your wheels on a dry pavement if you give it the gun, but why waste rubber? If some show-off wants to get the jump on you at a traffic light, why not let him have fun? He isn't kidding anyone but himself, when the name on your car is CENTURY. simply this: You know so well what it can do that you never have to prove it. That lets you enjoy the tireless ease of its gait in ordinary driving, when only a fraction of its eager power is working. It gives you a quick reserve for breasting a hill—and the happy knowledge that there's still more to come in a sudden emergency. Sure, this is more power than most people really have to have. But you can hardly call it extravagant, when you are buying more horsepower per dollar in a CENTURY than you get in any other car in America.

Little Steele Girl In Dallas Hospital

Estra Steel, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Steel of Tahoka, was admitted March 3 to the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children in Dallas.

The hospital was founded 30 years ago by Texas Masons to provide the best treatment for Texas' crippled children at no extra cost to the patient.

Since that time, the Scottish Rite Hospital has treated more than 17,000 children in the wards and 80,000 clinical patients. An extra staff of doctors, nurses and therapeutic technicians provides the treatment, both corrective and surgical, by means of contributions from the general public.

ings of the Bureau and emphasizing that all policies are determined by a vote of individual members up to the top officers. He said some Northern states have as high as 96 percent of their farmers in the Farm Bureau. This is the only means, he declared, of our farmers getting direct representation in a united effort, and urged that more farmers come into the organization and take part in setting policies.

O. K. Holley of Seymour, organization officer for the Northern half of Texas, was the next speaker. He outlined the services of Farm Bureau, and said it would attempt to carry out any program the farmers want.

Telling of its legislative program, he said the Farm Bureau sponsored 36 bills in the last Legislature, and 30 of them were passed. It opposed seven bills, and all failed to pass. The weight of 54,000 farmers in the organization can not be overlooked.

He also told of the insurance program, research program, and community program. He closed with a strong appeal for support of youth programs, 4-H and FFA.

"The best crop we can grow is our kid crop," he declared.

Opening the program, T. L. Weaver's string band presented music. Th. L. entertained for about 20 minutes with magic and sleight-of-hand.

B. L. Hatchell is secretary of the Lynn county unit. Directors are: J. W. Gardenhire, Ward Eakin, E. L. Short, Billy Hancock, Lois Smelser, Leonard Crawford, and R. F. Stagemoeller.

In Washington, she told of meeting Secretary Stevens and General Matthew Ridgeway. Her daughter, Savannah, a secretary in the office of Congressman George Mahon, accompanied her to Atlantic City.

The speaker was introduced by Ronald Sherrill, program chairman for the day.
