New Baptist Educational Building To Open Sunday Morning, August 28th.

The First Baptist Church here will open its new educational building Sunday morning when promotion day will be observed. The new building, which has been under construction since Jan. 1, adjoins the church auditorium on the north. Including the connecting corridors, the structure contains approximately 8,000 square feet of floor space and has been constructed for approximately $62,000 at a cost of $7.95 per square foot. Everton Nevill was the contractor. The walls of the building are made of brick and tile, and the floors are covered with tile. The doors and inside trim are of red oak with natural finish. On Sunday morning 10 departments will occupy their class rooms, which include four nursery departments, three primary departments with eight classes, two young peoples departments with six classes, and the young adult department with four classes. Three classrooms are to be used by the older department which assembles in the church auditorium. Two junior departments, two intermediate departments and one beginners department will continue to use space in the old building. The new building also contains one of the most complete church kitchens in this area and a fellowship hall which will seat about 150 persons at tables for banquets. It has five restrooms and a pastor's study. Many of the furnishings have been donated by various members of the church for the kitchen, dining area, and also pianos, air conditioners and several articles for the class rooms. The structure is equipped for a central forced air heating system, and the ductwork is installed for a complete air conditioning which will be installed at a later date. Several new classes and departments have been added for the coming year and will begin meeting when promotion is held for Sunday School and Training Union Sunday. Approximately 100 Sunday School officers and teachers have been elected and will assume their duties Sunday morning. Those who have held positions on the planning committee the past few months include W. A. Reddell, Ray Adams, and O. D. Howard. The construction committee consisted of Garland Pennington, O. E. Terry, and Terry Noble. Those on the furnishings committee have been Mrs. John Roberts, Mrs. C. N. Woods, Mrs. Terry Noble, and W. A. Fulford.

Ever wonder what "Santa Fe" means?

Back in 1901, about 40 years after the Santa Fe Railway was founded, the ancient Indian Cross-within-a-Circle design was placed in a square and the assembly was adopted as the official trademark of the young railroad.

The words "Santa Fe" means Holy Faith. Today, that faith and vision in America's future have built the Santa Fe Railway System into a vital network of steel, linking the West, Southwest and East with fast, efficient transportation services. These rails serve your town; help it grow and prosper.

And, no matter what your shipping or travel problems may be, Santa Fe will solve them. Your local Santa Fe agent is right here in your town to help you.

You can depend on him, as you can depend on the vast system he represents.

Debonne Visits Colorado Sites

Bernard Debonne, Tahoka visitor from Paris, France, can boast that he has seen more of the United States than many of its own citizens.

Recently, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Bray took him to Denver, Colo., pleasure trip, and showed him as on a combined business and much of the country in that area as could be seen in a few days. They visited many places of interest around Denver and Colorado Springs and returned by way of the Royal Gorge.

While in Central City, Debonne had a chance meeting with a friend of his from France who had come to this country under the same circumstances. His friend, who is visiting in Missouri had also been brought to Colorado by the people with whom he was staying.

Debonne, who is here under the sponsorship of the Rotary Club, went with Kenny Durham and Paxton Hutchison to Carlsbad, N. M., Thursday to tour the cavern there. He is a guest of Dr. and Mrs. K. R. Durham this week.

Attending market in Dallas this week is Mrs. Hall Robinson, owner of Robinson's Ready-To-Wear.

John Thomas Tippit Owns Nice Dryland Farm

A lot of people recognized this farm home as that of John Thomas Tippit, located two and a half miles east of Tahoka on U. S. 380, the Post highway.

First town reader to call the News was Ware High Jr. and first rural reader was John F. Thomas. Others calling included: June Chandler, Frank Greathouse, Lawrence Harvick, Harry Hudlin, Haynes Howle, Ronnie Browning, Larry Forsythe, T. B. Inman, Lonnie Wheeler, Mrs. John Minor, Mrs. Walter Kahl, Lynda Applewhite, Tom Murray, Wanda Jones, Mrs. Ruth Curry, Mrs. Gladys Stokes, Virginia Willhoit, Jean Flippin, Stephen Greer, D. H. Lindly, Mrs. Roy Appling, J. E. Holloway, Carolyn Adams, Carolyn Edwards, Ed Hamilton, Hilton Wood, Edgar Hammonds, Harry Short, Ann Gattis, Nelda Stevens, C. B. Earley, G. L. Autry, and Mrs. Jim Henry.

J. T. bought the half section farm in 1944 from George Small, pioneer Tahoka citizen who owned it for many years.

In 1950, he remodeled the home shown in the picture into a modern six room residence. This is considered one of the better dry land farms of the county. The land is terraced, and produces well and has made some good crops in some of the drier years. Although J. T. and family live on the place, the land has been rented last year and this to Finis Botkin.

However, J. T. keeps some milch cows, hogs, and chickens. He readily admits he has a weakness for automobiles and that is one reason he rented the place out. He has worked in town for Bill Strange Motors, later for Shambeck Motors, and now for Wharton Motor Co. selling Oldsmobiles.

A resident of Lynn county most of his life, J. T. says he believes he is about settled down now as a Lynn county citizen of the permanent variety. Last year, the grass looked greener, on the other side of the fence, and he went down to Gladewater, but after six weeks he had enough and came back home.

He was born in Coryell county, and came to Lynn in 1923 with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. I. Tippit. He attended Tahoka High School.

Mrs. Tippit is the former Lathue Cade, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Cade. Although she was born in San Antonio during World War I while her dad was stationed there in the Army, she counts herself a native of the Magnolia community of Lynn county, where her dad settled

"away back yonder." She moved to Tahoka when Aubrey became county Tax Assessor and Collector, and attended the local schools. The Tippits have two children, Geraldine, age 15, and Tim, age 8.

ELMORES VISIT HERE

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Elmore of Socorro, N. M., are here visiting their daughter, Mrs. Horace Rogers, and family.

Sunday, they attended a Tyler famil reunion held in Big Spring, Mrs. Elmore being a Tyler.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmore formerly lived at O'Donnell before moving to New Mexico, 18 years ago.

Farmers Desiring Mexican Nationals For Fall Must Sign Up Quickly

Farmers who intend to use Mexican laborers this fall must sign the necessary papers immediately, with some farm labor association, according to Ed McDonald, regional director, U. S. Department of Labor, Dallas.

and it is necessary that each organization's membership remain in status quo insofar as the use of contracted Mexican Nationals is concerned—without change by additions or transfers—to facilitate our audit of the acreage and housing information.

The following statement on the use of Mexican Nationals was received by Carl Jones of Post, president, and E. L. Short of Tahoka, secretary, of Grassland Farm Labor Association, which has secured workers for farmers in 10 South Plains counties.

McDonald writes: "This is to advise that during the period of Sept. 15 to Dec. 15, 1955, this office will not approve Forms ES-342-A for new members, or members desiring to transfer from one association to another."

"It is suggested that you secure approved Forms ES-342-A prior to Sept. 15, for all your members who may use Mexican workers during the 1955 cotton harvest."

"A review of all data submitted by the members for certification of need for foreign workers by each association will be under review during this period."

"Members of your association who are not approved to use Mexican workers prior to the above date may, if eligible, contract as individuals in their own name, if domestic workers are not available."

"As you know, the assignment of workers to a grower prior to your receiving the Form ES-342-A, approved by this office, is not permitted."

Odds AND Ends

(BY E. I. HILL, ELDER)

In previous contributions to this Column, recently, made, respecting the counties through which several of my relatives and I passed, as we went from Waco and Stephenville, respectively to Canyon to attend the funeral services for Mrs. Ola Hill, wife of Dr. J. A. Hill, who had just passed away, following a long and lingering illness, an account of whose death was published in this paper in its issue of that week. I have since been giving accounts of the various counties through which we passed, including a considerable amount of historical data, and particularly the names of the men for whom they were named, and why; but thus far I have said little about the name of the important county of Childress and its capital city of the same name.

The patronymic of this county and city was George Campbell Childress, who wrote the Texas Declaration of Independence.

That achievement alone, written when it was under the adverse circumstances that prevailed at the time, marked him down for all time to come as a patriot and statesman of the highest type.

It reminds one of that other immortal document written by Thomas Jefferson and, after being slightly revised, was adopted by the Continental Congress then in session in Philadelphia, and published to the world on July 4, 1776, as the American colonies' Declaration of Independence—as the voice of American speaking in ringing tones to Great Britain and to every other civilized nation on the face of the earth. That pronouncement marked the birth of a nation and eventually the re-birth of many nations.

When George C. Childress and four associates wrote that Texas Declaration of Independence and presented it to that convention of delegates assembled at Washington on the Brazos on March 2, 1836, it was adopted promptly, without a dissenting vote. I believe; and thereby another immortal document had been proclaimed to Mexico and to the world, declaring the right of intelligent and unoffending white men and women to govern themselves, without restraint or submission to the will of any dictator on earth.

This Texas Declaration of Independence is unique in the history of our country. No other state in this Union has ever found it necessary, separate and alone, to set forth a Declaration of Independence from a foreign power. Texas is the only state in the American Union that became an independent republic before it became a state in the Union.

The question of slavery was becoming a burning issue when Moses Austin came to Texas in 1820 to consult Spanish authorities with respect to a plan which his fertile brain had given birth, whereby the land called Texas might be colonized and developed as a province of Spain—for at that time Spain still owned Mexico.

He presented his plan to Spanish authorities then residing in the village of San Antonio, and they agreed to his plan and authorized him to proceed with his colonization scheme. Content with the success with which he had met, he started back to his home in Missouri but became ill and died en route. Anticipating the possibility of impending death, he had given instructions to his son, Stephen F. Austin, who was then studying law in New Orleans, to carry out his plans. So, upon his father's death Stephen Austin, then a young man, of course, took over the task, acting with much intelligence and vigor. Before Stephen F. Austin had time to carry out his father's will, however, Mexico won its independence from Spain; one Iturbide took over first, but that ambitious and unscrupulous demagogue, Santa Anna, soon made himself the emperor, or at least the "king fish" of Mexico. All the agreements that Spain had made with Moses Austin became null and void, and so Stephen F. Austin had to do the job all over again, dealing with such men as Iturbide and his henchmen, and a little later with Santa Anna, Bustamanta and other tyrants.

So, among them they soon had Stephen F. Austin in jail and kept him there for many months. But Stephen F. Austin had succeeded in getting the despots and grafters to allow him to start colonization according to the "Empresario" system and many red-blooded Americans were already coming to Texas.

One fact, I want us not to overlook: There were not more than about 7,000 people in Texas including all races and all kinds of characters, Spaniards and Indians and Mexicans, adventurers and renegades, when Moses Austin came to Texas in 1820 and not many more than that when Stephen F. Austin came in 1821. I think that both of them saw or thought they saw the possibilities of establishing a great and prosperous domain here in the land of Texas, whatever flag floated over the land, and probably they hoped that some day it would become a part of the great American Union of states; but there is no evidence that I have ever seen that they came as representatives of the slaveholders or slave-holding states. People of the North fore-saw, of course, that Texas most probably would be settled by Southern people and that if it were ever admitted into the Union as a state it would come in as a slave state; and it was easy for them to believe and to charge that its settlement was being promoted by the slave interests. But history has disclosed no such purpose on the part of the Aultins or other early settlers in Texas.

It was the lure of rich virgin lands, unoccupied and undeveloped, that brought Moses Austin to Texas and, upon his death, Stephen F. Austin, to promote and accomplish a great enterprise, the settlement and development of this great domain, mistakenly believing that Anglo-Americans and Spanish-Americans could live and thrive peaceably together under the same flag. That probably was expecting too much, for the background of the two peoples was so different, plitically and religiously, that it would have been little short of a miracle if such a happy result had been accomplished. The ideologies of the two peoples were totally inconsistent and even antagonistic toward each other.

Furthermore, as a matter of fact, Mexico's claim to any part of Texas in 1821 and during the colonization period that followed was virtually nil; for Mexicans themselves had not populated the land in great numbers and had done practically nothing toward its development. It was practically a "No-Man's-Land" when colonization by Anglo-Americans was begun. While the Empresarios recognized the legality of Mexico's claim to the land, yet they and the settlers whom they brought into Texas regarded that claim as rather weak and almost nominal as a matter of fact, and they were in no mood to bow to the decrees of tyrannical dictators. They were building homes on the land and developing its natural resources which otherwise would have remained unoccupied, undeveloped, and unproductive. They felt that self-constituted Mexican dictators had no right to impose tax bur-dens, religious restraints, or oppressive decrees of any kind upon them in which they themselves had had no voice in enacting. Rebellion against such tyranny was bound to come, and the matter of slavery or anti-slavery had little or nothing to do with it.

In the course of time, a very short time too, Anglo American residents of Texas began to protest to the Mexican Government against the oppressive measures being enacted or decreed and to petition the Mexican government for relief. Their protests were ignored and their petitions denied, but military proceedings were taken to compel by armed force obedience to the unjust demands. A Mexican army was sent into Texas and clashes came, resulting in most cases in victory for the Mexicans, because of the superiority of the Mexican forces in the matter of numbers involved, the lack of adequate organization on the part of the Texans, and the unpreparedness and confusion on the part of the Texas leaders as to how the invasion of Texas by vast hordes of Mexican forces could best be met. Many of the civil leaders of Texas, most of whom had had little military short time too, Anglo-American training, had rushed into the Alamo to defend Texas against Santa Anna's approaching army—highly patriotic but unwise military maneuver. About 137 Texas patriots and leaders were immured in the Walls of the Alamo when Santa Anna arrived in San Antonio with an army of 3,000 men. He had captured the city of San Antonio and was beginning to besiege the Alamo, when delegates from the various colonies in Texas met in conecntion at Washington on the Brazos on March 1, 1836, bent on declaring Texas as a free and independent republic. The situation in Texas at the time was intensely discouraging.

Sam Houston had been elected commander-in-chief of the Texas forces as early as November 3, 1835, but that did not include defense of San Antonio and the Alamo. That duty was assigned to Gen Edward Burleson. A provisional Government was at the same time set up and Henry Smith was elected provisional governor. A council was organized which was supposed to determine policies to be followed in further dealings with Mexico, but this council was not able to agree on scarcely anything, and nothing therefore was done. Various leaders had their followers and each with a small coterie of men led them into various ill-advised engagements with one Mexican army or another and the results in many cases were defeat and disaster. This was the situation in which Texans found themselves when that convention of elected delegates met at Washington on the Brazos on March 1, 1836, to do something for the future welfare of Texas. So that convention did two things: It adopted a Declaration of Independence, and it re-elected Sam Houston as commander-in-chief of the Texas forces without any strings to tie him down or to hobble him in the performance of his duties.

Houston started out to do what practically every Texan expected him to do—that was to go to the defense of the brave men who had been trapped in the Alamo. But on reaching Gonzales on March 13, on his way to San Antonio, Houston found out that he was too late, that Santa Anna and his army on March 6, four days after he had been re-elected commander-in-chief, had stormed the Alamo and had killed every one of its 137 brave defenders, and was then headed eastward through Texas as a conquering hero, confident that the war was practically over, but bent on capturing President Burnet who was supposed to be in hiding at or near Harrisburg in the present confines of Houston. As Santa Anna and his victorious army approached on his glamorous march through Texas, unresisted by General Houston and his untrained little army of 400, the Texans became panicky and fled in great confusion for fear of being attacked by the cruel conqueror, and that Houston would be unable to protect them.

This is known in Texas history as "The run-away scrape." Their fear was no evidence of cowardice, however, but merely of concern for their families who apparently had been left without adequate protection, especially those living west of the Brazos. Houston knew what he was about, however, and was keeping his eye on the enemy in front of him, with a glance backward now and then, for he knew that the boastful enemy in front of him was the one he had to destroy and all the civilized world knows what the final result was—San Jacinto!

Now let's take a brief look at the man who in the face of disaster after disaster, of gloom and possible doom, stood up before that convention of brave Texans at Washington on the Brazos on March 2, 1836, and read before that body that ringing Declaration of Independence that denounced treachery and tyranny in government and proclaimed to Mexico and to the world that henceforth Texas was to be a free and independent republic and would nevermore bow the knee to demands of despots or

Some of these days I hope to give you the full text of that immortal document, but just now I want us to take a brief look at the man who wrote the document. For the present I shall make the story brief, but through the vigilance and forethought of a friend I have copies of a letter written by a grand-daughter of George C. Childress to Sam Houston together with other data, including a picture of the man clipped from the newspaper.

George C. Childress was a resident of what is now Milam county in E. Sterling C. Robertson's colony he wrote and secured the adoption of the Texas Declaration of Independence. On his mother's side, he was related to the Robertson family. He was born and reared in Nashville, Tennessee, from which city and state the Robertsons had moved to Texas. Childress was born on January 8, 1804. As a mere youth he studied law, and while a very young man he was admitted to the bar to practice his profession. But clients were not too numerous, and when the publishers of the National Banner and Nashville Advertiser offered him the position of editor, he accepted the position. In the early 1830's, however, he became greatly interested in happenings down in Texas, and finally came down to the Robertson Colony in 1834 on a prospecting trip, but it was not until December 1835 that he resigned his position as editor of the Nashville Banner and moved to Texas.

He immediately established himself as a lawyer at Nashville on the Brazos and by reason of his brilliance, learning, and zeal, he quickly became a leader in Tex-ac affairs. On March 1, 1836, in the afternoon of the first day of the convention which had met at Washington on the Brazos, Childress offered the following resolution: Resolved that the President appoint a committee of five to Draft a Declaration of Independence. The motion was unanimously adopted, and the President ((Henry Smith, I believe) appointed George C. Childress of Milam as chairman, James Gaines of Sabine, Edward Conrad of Fefugio, Collin McKinney of Red River, and Bailey Harde-man of Matagorda.

Childress presented the imperishable document the next day, and the same was promptly adopted without a dissenting voice or vote.
