STANDING ON THE CORNER

With P. J.

Criticism is something you can avoid by saying nothing, by doing nothing, and by being nothing.

So, with the knowledge that the following will draw criticism, I'll say it anyway.

Sometimes events happen that literally make people fighting mad. That something that made my blood boil this week was the activity of the Ku Klux Klan.

In a land where mob activity is forbidden, it's strange to me why the state or national governments allow organizations (they certainly don't allow individuals) to terrorize anyone.

Aand frankly, I'm tickled to death that the Indians in this case (the first Americans in the country) took up for their rights. More power to them, and anyone else for that matter, who will not allow their people to be scared to death, if not actually harmed.

A few months ago, a member of the Ku Klux Klan in Texas sent me some literature which tried to point out that the burning of the cross is a Christian act.

If there's anything in the New Testament that says terrorizing is a Christian act, I'd like to see it.

My Bible has the story of the Good Samaritan, as well as the fact that the Christians were the ones who were persecuted, not the ones who did the persecuting—or do I have the wrong version of the Bible?

The other day Norma—Thomas was heard to say that she will give up her backseat driving just as soon as John gives up his dining table cooking.

The W. T. Kidwells said the other day that when they began their new home, it started out to be small—and as time went on, just kept on growing. When it's finished it will be one of Tahoka's loveliest homes.

And I don't know anyone who isn't tickled to death for them—a story of home-town boy makes good, who started on a shoe-string and is now a well-established businessman.

It is said that the best writers are the ones who can say the most in the fewest words (that lets me out).

With this fact in mind a newspaper editor confronted a new reporter: You use too many unnecessary words. Now here's a story I want you to go out on, and when you come back, tell it as simply as you possibly can.

This was the story the reporter turned in:

Donald Green, route 2, lit match to see if tank had any gas. Yes. Age was 41.

Have you seen Mrs. Calloway Huffaker's new cashmere coat? She's doubly proud of it, we hear, because son Wayne had it made up clear across the blue Pacific and sent it to her for Christmas. A lovely gift from a very fine sailor.

Thought for the Day
Jesus is God's latch string hung so low that even a child can reach it and open the door—to everything.

Local People At S. C. Convention

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. (Cap) Rowe and Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Barnes last week attended the State Convention of Soil Conservation Districts in Corpus Christi. Although the couples traveled separately, both toured the Rio Grande Valley and took side trips into Mexico.

Denver Ford And Marilyn Carmack Are Named Best All-Around Students

The faculty of Tahoka High School has chosen the best all-around boy and the best all-around girl in the school and has named 12 students to Who's Who for 1957-58.

The highest honor that the faculty can bestow upon students are those for best all-around students, this year being Denver Ford and Marilyn Carmack.

Ford, a senior, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Ford of route 3, Tahoka. He is active in 4-H Club work and is co-chairman of this district. School activities find him a member of the National Honor Society, the track team, parliamentarian of the Student Council and vice president of the senior class.

Miss Carmack, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Carmack of Tahoka, is also a senior student. She is editor of the Kennel, school yearbook, and is active in Future Homemakers of America, of which she is vice-president and in which she will receive her State degree in April. In addition, Miss Carmack is president of the National Honor Society, president of the Future Teachers of America, is a senior class representative to the Student Council, and holds sub-district and district offices in the Methodist Youth Fellowship.

Both students will be honored in the feature section of the school yearbook, as well as those named to Who's Who.

The 12 students in Who's Who, chosen as out-standing boys and girls in the school and leaders in various activities, include Karl Prohl, Mary Helen Whitaker, Idalia Wood, James Adams, and Betty Vaughan; all seniors; Jerry Adams, Virginia Willhoit, John Hegi, Benny Martin, and Weldon Calloway, junior students; and Jerry Bragg and Carol Smith, sophomores.

Sales in Texas during 1957 were $165,686,403, which is 85.8 percent of the State 1957 goal of $193,100,000.

Chairman Smith had this reminder: "Labor Unions, Fraternal, civic, service, patriotic and veteran's organizations, eleemosynary institutions and local and state government bodies are now eligible to purchase Series E and H Savings Bonds. Any organization interested in purchasing E or H bonds can make application at their local bank."

Plains Pioneer Dies At Lamesa

E. R. Yates, 83, brother of the late W. A. Yates of Tahoka, died Saturday in a Lamesa hospital. Funeral services were held at 3:00 p. m. Monday at the First Baptist Church of that city and burial was in Lamesa Cemetery.

He was president of the First National Bank of Lamesa, a former hardware merchant of that city and a pioneer rancher of the area. Born in Dallas county in 1875, Mr. Yates came to Sweetwater in 1899 and a year later moved out to Borden county.

He worked on the Slaughter ranch for a number of years as a cowboy, later filed on four sections in Dawson county, and at one time carried the mail by hack from Big Spring to old Chicago, the predecessor to Lamesa, and then operated the Lamesa post office in his home.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hale and Mr. and Mrs. John Fulford attended the funeral rites.

Altitude of Denver, Colorado, is 5,280 feet

Housing Project Possible

Tahoka can have a housing project for low-income families without it costing the citizens or the City one red cent, according to George A. Parker, field office attorney for the Public Housing Administration of Fort Worth.

Parker spoke to the City Council and about 20 civic leaders of the town Wednesday night on the possibility of the project here and following a discussion the Council passed a resolution stating that the town is in need of housing for those now living in sub-standard conditions.

A project that is not in competition to standard rental property, it will take care of families living in slum districts.

In cooperation with a local Housing Authority, which will be a board of five commissioners appointed by the mayor, the PHA will sell 40-year bonds to a large bank, syndicate or to the highest bidder at a low interest rate after construction has begun on the project. Rental from the housing will pay the bonds off and the Federal government insures to pay any difference between the rental collection and payment of bond, if such exists. The City is in no way liable for the bonds.

Money has been allotted by Congress for such projects and it will cost the taxpayers no more than it costs them at the present time because the housing will be built, whether in Tahoka or not.

To begin construction, contract to the lowest bidder, the PHA advances financial support, and buys the property for the sites of the housing.

The City will receive 10 percent of rental in lieu of taxes after the utilities are taken out and Parker assured the Council that it will more than pay them for the taxes the City would ordinarily receive for the property and the slum housing that exists as it is now.

Tahoka, in view of its population, will probably be eligible for 25 to 40 units. Parker said that because of the 40-year bond, the PHA insists on substantial dwellings to be built of brick, or like material, that will hold up for that period.

Rent will be determined by the income of a given family, and the maximum income will be set for those who are eligible to live in the dwellings. Rental fee is usually set at 20 percent of the income. For instance, if a family's income is $100 per month, the rent would be $20 per month, etc. As income goes up rent goes up proportionately.

Also, those now living in standard and modern housing are not always eligible to rent in the project, and certain preferences are given, such as disabled veterans, other veterans, large families, widows with children, elderly people, etc.

The PHA suggests duplexes for the project, and these can be built on different sites in the town. Some may be built in the white section, some in Colored section and some in the Latin American section. The sizes may vary also. (Cont'd. on Back Page)

Poll Tax Payments Are Still Short

Only 239 citizens paid their poll tax in Tahoka this week bringing the total paid to 1439, according to J. E. (Red) Brown, tax assessor and collector.

This, however, does not include the receipts received at boxes in O'Donnell, New Home and Wilson, where reports have not yet been obtained.

Next Friday, Jan. 31, is the deadline for securing the poll tax receipts and all those who have not yet paid for such are urged to do so immediately in view of important elections coming up this year.

Bracero Is Burned As Stove Explodes

Candelario Valenzuela, a bracero, was burned on the face and hands when the butane stove exploded in a house on the W. T. Kidwell farm one-half mile west of Dixie.

He is in fair condition at Tahoka Hospital, where he was taken by a member of the fire department.

The cause of the explosion, which occurred about 7:00 p. m. Tuesday, was unknown. Valenzuela was the only person in the house.

The farm building where he was living was the old apartment garage that was moved from the lot at the location of the new W. T. Kidwell home. The explosion caused about $200 damage after the door and one inside wall were blown out.

Floydada Defeats Tahoka, Abernathy Takes Spur, Puts District In 3-Way Tie

District 2-AA basketball went into a three way tie Tuesday night when the Floydada Whirlwinds blew down Tahoka 53 to 44 in the winner's gymnasium, and Abernathy won over Spur giving all three a 4-1 record in conference play.

Tonight Tahoka and Abernathy clash in the local gym for probably one of the more important games of the year, considering the district standings.

While the boys were losing in Floydada, the local girls came home victorious 24 to 21.

The boys game started out in a real tussle with the score tied at 13-13 at the end of the first period. Floydada gained the lead in the second and led at the half 23 to 19.

The Whirlwinds picked up speed in the third scoring 20 points with the winners' high point man, Teague, pitching in 12 of his 21 points. Floydada led at the end of the third 43 to 32.

Helping Teague win the conference tussle was Patterson with 17 points. For Tahoka Jerry Brown hit for 19 with Karl Prohl and Jay Gurley each making 7.

Jan Thomas and Patsy Norman took scoring honors for Tahoka inking 11 and 9, respectively. Carol Smith made 4. Floydada's Womack made 12 for the losers.

The local girls led 5-4 at the end of the first, but had a cold second quarter being unable to score at all and Floydada led 14 to 5 at halftime. However, Tahoka bounced back in the third but still trailed 15 to 13. The win came in the final period when Tahoka scored 11 points to Floydada's 6.

Bulldogs Take Slaton Tigers

Tahoka took its fourth conference win of the season Thursday night of last week defeating Slaton 52 to 41. Slaton won the girls game 27 to 11.

The Bulldogs started out with a bang in the first quarter, leading 17 to 5 at the end of the first quarter. The game continued at a rapid pace for the Bulldogs with the local team holding a 15 point lead at half time, 30 to 15.

In the second half the Tahoka quintet cooled off considerably and Slaton threatened to catch up, several times coming within five points of tying the game. Although the Bulldogs have played much better ball games, Jerry Brown was able to scorch the nets with 31 points, one of his top scores for a single game. Jay Gurley hit in double figures with 10 points. High point man for Slaton was Doug Corley who made 13.

The crippled Tahoka girls, without the aid of Jan Thomas who was out with a sprained ankle, were defeated by the Slaton six who led from the beginning of the game. Halftime score was 15 to 5.

Carol Smith had four points for the losers. Pat Schilling and Linda Smith hit for 11 and 10, respectively, for Slaton.

Technicians of the Soil Conservation Service filed several requests for the re-organization of irrigation systems by installing underground concrete pipe. The irrigation system is designed to row water on the land and short-cuts runs to make maximum use of irrigation water and maintain rainfall.

Lonnie Howell, four miles east of Tahoka, plans to install a form of underground plastic pipe in re-organizing his irrigation system. This pipe is manufactured to operate at pressure high enough to use a sprinkler system. Mr. Howell's farm is terraced and he plans to leave terraces to hold rainfall while reducing water erosion. Terraces can be watered over when irrigating with portable sprinkler systems.

Effects of Stubble Mulching
Most of us will agree that stubble-mulching is advantageous, but do we actually realize the full extent of these advantages? For example, it is common knowledge that residue left on the surface of the soil will help preserve the moisture and at the same time increase the water holding capacity of the soil. According to a nation wide experiment carried out by U. S. D. A. moisture content in the soil plots were increased from 1-50 percent by stubble-mulching. Erosion was decreased by an even greater per cent. Soil fertility was maintained and tillage costs were decreased greatly. Other benefits, too numerous to discuss produced similar results.

At the present time, equipment is not commonly available to do complete stubble-mulching, but we can approach this practice with good crop residue management. Contrary to common belief, to get full benefit from crop residue, the land should be left flat with the stubble on the surface if possible. In the event that listing is

Fall Rain Aid To Water Wells

By Lee H. Williams, Agricultural Engineer
Big Spring, Texas
Fall rains and recent showers in this area have brought soil moisture in many fields up to field capacity.

On irrigated land, this means it will be some time before the application of irrigation water is resumed at the pace it was going last year at this time.

Many farmers are wondering about when to start irrigating again, but this is a question which cannot be answered, said technicians of the Soil Conservation Service.

The answer depends on several factors. The time to start irrigating depends on how much available moisture is in the soil, the rate of moisture consumption by the crop, and evaporation rates. Available moisture can be stored in the soil varies with texture and depth of the soil. Fine textured soil will hold more moisture per foot than will coarse soil.

The size and rate of growth of plants will determine the moisture consumption rate. Large plants which are growing rapidly use moisture at a greater rate than do small plants or those which are near maturity.

To determine when to begin applying irrigation water, the farmer should be able to make an accurate estimate of available moisture at any time. This can be made by various methods. There are several electrical and mechanical devices which can be used to determine soil moisture.

One method is in forming a sample of the soil into a ball, after digging a hole beside an average-size plant where roots have removed moisture. The ball can then be squeezed firmly. The hand is then released, and the farmer can observe moisture conditions. On sandy land, it is too wet if necessary the old middle should be opened to through the beds around the stubble, leaving as much residue on the surface as possible.

To turn the stubble under is practically defeating the purpose and leaves the land subject to both wind and water erosion. In most cases erosion losses are in direct proportion to the amount of residue left on the surface of the soil.

Soil structure is one benefit that is commonly disregarded. Actually this is one of the more important aspects of mulch farming. A soil without structure is a soil without life. Efficient production on this type soil is impossible.

Another fact to be considered is the effect of crop residue on soil bacteria. Generally speaking there are from 10 to 50 million bacteria in one teaspoon full of soil. These bacteria are essential both to soil structure and fertility. Crop residue is essential for good bacterial growth.

From the above discussion we can readily see that good soil management is almost impossible with crop residue utilization or stubble mulching.

the soil tends to stick together. It is ready for irrigation if it appears crumbly and will form only a weak ball. It needs immediate irrigation if it breaks down into a powdery condition.

On mixed land, that which forms a ball and is very pliable is too wet, but that which is somewhat crumbly but will hold together after pressure is ready for irrigation. That which is powdery and dry needs watering immediately.

On heavy or tight land, that which is too wet will form a pliable ball and will ribbon easily between the fingers. It is ready for irrigation when it is somewhat pliable and will ball under pressure. It needs immediate irrigation if it is hard, sometimes having loose crumbs in the surface, and will not form a ball.

Generally, application of irrigation water should be started before the crop needs it, preventing that part of the crop which is watered last from suffering. The first soil irrigated after a rain may not need a very heavy application. The farmer can then start watering again when the first part of the field irrigated previously needs water.

The amount of moisture to allow to be taken from the soil before irrigating can be determined from the type and depth of the soil. The farmer's conservation

Diseases, Weather Cut Cotton Crops

College Station—Texas cotton producers literally took it on the chin from a lot of sources in producing their 1957 crop. Floods, hail storms, insects and unfavorable weather during the normal harvest season all took their toll but, reminds Harlan Smith, extension plant pathologist, cotton diseases got in a lick and cut production in the state by about 10 per cent.

He says, the state average, however, doesn't tell the story because in areas where diseases struck the hardest, losses ran into ruinous figures. The three diseases which caused most of the damage were listed by Smith as bacterial blight, root and seedling diseases. These same diseases have been listed for the past six years as big trouble makers for cotton growers.

The specialist advises farmers to become familiar with the diseases most common in their area. This knowledge will enable them to plan a systematic control program. Detailed maps of the fields on which are shown areas known to be infected with cotton diseases are an aid in combating this production problem. These spots or areas can be left out of cotton and handled in a different way.

There isn't much that can be done about most cotton diseases after the crop is up and growing. Here are suggestions from Smith on practices which have proved their value in cotton disease control. All planting seed should be treated; whenever available disease resistant varieties should be planted; cultural practices, and crop rotations are of great value in control programs and he advises against mixing high and low planting seed. Low quality seed may be the source of infection of many diseases. The application of a complete fertilizer with a high phosphorous content will aid in controlling seedling diseases and no planting should be done until the soil temperature is 70 degrees F. for three consecutive mornings at a depth of 3 inches. The temperature readings should be taken around 7:00 a. m.

The pathologist suggests a visit with the local county agent for more detailed information on a disease control program for your county.

4-H Bosys See Dairy Cattle Film

At a recent meeting of the 4-H Club for sixth and seventh grade boys, County Agent Bill Griffing conducted a study of dairy cattle.

Pictures of the dairy cattle were shown the boys and the five breeds were learned. Most of the 4-H boys now feel they can tell a good dairy cow when they see one.

Miss Norma Ruth Terry and Dewey Corley were married Saturday at 7:30 p. m. in the New Lynn Missionary Baptist Church before an archway of white gladioli, greenery and candelabra. The double ring vows were read by Rev. George Lane, pastor of the Boswell Heights Baptist Church.

Miss Joyce Church, pianist, played the traditional wedding music and accompanied a trio composed of Misses Nieta Hewlett, Nancy Cook and Marcia Standefer, all of Wilson, who sang "O Promise Me," "Whither Thou Goest" and "Wedding Prayer."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of Chantilly-type lace and tulle over net and satin. The fitted bodice featured a Queen Ann collar and long petal-point sleeves. The full skirt was designed with ruffles of lace and tulle. The bride's veil of illusion fell from a crown of encrusted pearls.

Everyday Religion

By J. B. Thompson

In the days of sideburns and saddlebags, when civilization was pushing ever westward, the pioneer preacher was found in the forefront. Armed with his Bible, hymnbook and often a "sixshooter," he made his lonely journeys from settlement to settlement on horseback or in a top buggy. He was a spiritual pioneer, blazing a religious pathway in a rough and troubled frontier. He rode alone over the vast reaches of the western plains with only an occasional glimpse of a skulking coyote, or a herd of bounding antelope scurrying away to safety beyond the far horizon.

He had no elegant church or comfortable parsonage but preached in the squatter's lonely "dug-out" or a brush arbor and slept many nights beneath the cold stars with his saddle for a pillow. He was welcome in ranch camp or farm house and wherever he went he left the imprint of his gospel message in the heart of a pioneer people. Camp meetings were held and hundreds embraced Christianity and became the religious and civic leaders of a growing civilization.

His work was hard but he did it well. He married the young and buried the dead. He wept with those that wept and rejoiced with those that rejoiced. He blazed the trail and laid the foundation for a mighty empire; where churches dot the lovely countryside and grace the cities' crowded streets; whose cultural and spiritual atmosphere strengthens the moral fiber of the people.

When the sage of the old west is told a romantic and heroic chapter will be devoted to the pioneer preachers. We do not possess the verbal coins to pay adequate tribute to those great souls but we bow in humble reverence when their colorful deeds are told. Some of them linger in the evening of life to enjoy the civilization they helped to build, but most of them have ridden on into the sunset of a bygone day.

Open New Bible Study At Methodist

WASHINGTON AND "SMALL BUSINESS"

BY C. WILSON HARDER

Before Congress gets out of session this time, there is going to be a lot of effort put forth to secure millions or billions of federal tax funds for education on premise that to meet Russian development in rockets, more money should be spent.

Yet, it is perhaps time to go deeply into just how efficient American education methods being let loose a lot more money.

There is no question the American people spend more money for youth education than any other nation, past or present. Yet, as evidenced by the Russian technological advances, such huge expenditures do not seem to be doing the maximum either for the youth or the nation.

For one thing, a system has been developed whereby thousands of youngsters might truly be said to go to school only to eat lunch.

Educational pressure groups, a few decades ago, in their zeal to build up the educational profession, were responsible in getting passed a number of laws in most states that militate against an efficient educational plan.

Many states now have laws that make it compulsory for a youngster to attend school until attaining the age of 18, or until graduating from high school. There is nothing that can be done but to keep students at a sufficient level so dull student can somehow manage to stay in school.

Thus, that percentage of the nation's youth that could develop into brilliant scientists, and other professional people, are held en in the Denton home.

Mrs. Earl Morris and Mary Lynn attended her nephew's, S. E. (Bud) Stuart, funeral in Post Saturday afternoon. Other relatives present were Mr. and Mrs. Billy Sanders and Mrs. W. A. Guinn of San Angelo, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Hawthorne, J. D. and Francie of Morton, Dyer and LaVeta White of Lubbock.

Mr. and Mrs. Billy Lancaster and son were here from Temple and spent the week with his parents, the Earl Lancasters. Billy spent the week hunting in the breaks and Saturday night they enjoyed a bird feast. Mrs. Carl Foster and Lena of Lubbock, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lancaster and son of Post, Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Lancaster of Muleshoe and Mr. and Mrs. John Taylor partook of the feast.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Seals, Sr. visited his brother and family and her brother and family in Ft. Worth last week end.

Pfc. Dale Edmunds spent the week end here with his parents,

And in all the hue and cry for trained physicists, it seems to be widely overlooked that Russia must also have some pretty competent machinists, metal workers, and other craftsmen. It is pretty well substantiated that only the brightest and most industrious students in Russia get classroom privileges.

Those who are not competent to become, for example, theoretical physicists, are encouraged to become skilled at a trade.

And it also seems obvious that thousands of mediocre white collar workers turned out each year by the present American educational system would be much happier in learning a trade. Of course, the unions have more or less frowned on any apprenticeship system.

And it also would seem quite obvious that the same talent that can be developed into a machinist capable of turning down a hard steel shaft to a tolerance of 100 one-thousandths of an inch is quite often not the same talent that can memorize the exact date of the battle of Hastings.

With every local tax bill showing a sizeable amount for local schools, this rigid examination of the purposes of American education should undoubtedly start at the grass roots level.

It appears nation's taxpayers are being tapped billions of dollars in an attempt to jam square pegs into round holes.

After all, you can jam a lot of poetry appreciation courses at a kid who would much rather be building an engine, and still end up with a kid who lacks any skills and still doesn't like poetry.

How many leaves have ye?
(Mark 6:38.)

It is said that during the childhood of Elizabeth, now Queen of England, when gifts or sweets were presented to her, her first question usually was, "Is there any for my sister?" The finest offering meant nothing to Elizabeth unless it could be shared with Princess Margaret.

Perhaps our leaves are few—not even five—but if our hearts are filled with the love that asks, "Is there any for my sister, my brother, for the 'whosoever' of the world?" that we will place them all in the Master's hands. Only then may we see the miracle which multiplies the bread so that none need be omitted in the breaking of the bread.

How much we have is unimportant; it is what we do with what we have that counts. Jesus said, "Bring them here to me." "Give ye them to eat."

PRAYER
Our Father, may the love of Thy Son so fill our hearts that this day we may be like him. As He gave, so may we give: As He loved, so may we love. Help us to enthrone Him so that today He may walk the earth in us: loving and giving. For the world's sake, and in His name. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY
Today all my leaves are for the Master—and for those for whom He died.

Wasty Cotton Help May Be Possible

Lubbock—Cong. George Mahon has advised officers of the Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. that help on the wasty and barked cotton situation for High Plains cotton producers may not be as impossible as first thought.

Cong. Mahon in a letter to W. O. Fortenberry, PCG President, said after consulting with various other Congressmen and Senators and U. S. Department of Agriculture officials that he had learned that the USDA was going to accept peanuts which did not meet the farmer criteria as to quality and moisture.

"They did this because of unusual and unfavorable weather conditions. A USDA spokesman admitted that the same conditions which justified the action in regard to peanuts seemed to justify comparable action in regard to cotton," Mahon wrote.

Cong. W. R. Poage, Waco, Walter Rogers, Pampa, and Senator Lyndon Johnson have been acquainted with the wasty and barked cotton problem on the High Plains this year and are working with Cong. Mahon.

Cong. Poage sent a copy of the peanut bulletin which states: "The USDA has announced (as of January 7, 1958) a change in the 1957 crop peanut price support program making peanuts showing damage above 7 percent eligible for loan in all producing areas."

"The program was modified to include all areas because severe freezes and heavy rains during the peanut harvest season have resulted in a significant quantity of high damage peanuts in nearly all productions. Most of these high damage peanuts likely will have to be crushed for oil and mean. By making price support available, USDA hopes to be able to protect and aid farmers in obtaining the full value of the high damage peanuts."

Fortenberry said Saturday that the two cases seem to parallel each other and perhaps something can be done to alleviate the High Plains producers' problem on wasty and barked cotton.

"PCG staff members and officers are going to continue to work on this problem with our Congressmen and USDA officials. Any new developments will be announced immediately," Fortenberry concluded.

The PCG President last week explained weather conditions—a late planting, fall rains and an early frost—made a disaster condition beyond the cotton producers control and in view of the situation, the PCG was asking the Commodity Credit Corporation to allow wasty and barked cotton to be allowed to enter the government cotton loan.

It has been estimated there is more than 100,000 bales of wasty and barked cotton on the High Plains this year. Such cotton is ineligible for the government loan, and since there is very little or no immediate market for such cotton, it is working a hardship on many farmers.

No other fiber fills so many needs of so many people. From the time you dry your face in the morning with a cotton towel until you crawl between fresh cotton sheets at night, you use cotton practically everywhere you go and in everything you do. You rise to put on cotton clothes, tie the cotton laces in shoes lined and stitched with cotton, and eat breakfast from a cotton-covered table. As you go about your daily work, cotton is with you at every turn. From where you're sitting now, you can reach out and touch cotton.

Volunteers Help With Educational Program For Negroes

This week about 30 volunteers in Tahoka began work in a project to help the colored people of the town in their educational programs.

Plans are to set up adult education classes, possibly a Colored community choir, and to help the teachers in Dunbar school with the students there.

A project originating in the Wesleyan Service Guild of the First Methodist Church, most of the volunteers aiding in the work are outside the organization and it is hoped that it will become a community project.

Most of the volunteers are serving on telephone committees, keeping study halls in Dunbar school, and keeping records of the project. Some, however, are aiding the Dunbar teachers in their class work.

Those keeping study halls are allowing the teachers, British Daniel and Paralee Sayles, to spend more time with individual classes. Each teacher has five grades from the first through the 10th and teach all subjects offered.

Purpose of the project is to give teachers more teaching time and to provide sewing, hygiene, and other type classes to those adults who wish to enroll in them.

Those participating in the project are working on a strictly voluntary basis, and anyone who has not been contacted who wishes to serve may call any member of the Wesleyan Service Guild.

Housing

Dwellings can be built with as many as five bedrooms to take care of larger families, and some can be built for small families. This is largely decided by the local Authority, as is the location of the houses, although both must be approved by the Public Housing Administration.

Who will live in the dwellings, the collection of rent, the inspection of the buildings, and other such overseeing, is left up to the local Authority.

The project also allows a part-time job for an Executive Director or secretary, probably to be chosen by the local Authority.

Strict rules must be maintained as to the care given the dwellings by the tenants, as well as the paying of rent. Those who lag behind in rent payment are liable for eviction.

The project is for those families who are trying to better their standards and not for charity cases, unless individuals or organizations wish to pay the rent for such cases, Parker pointed out.

"New homes with plumbing, modern conveniences, and a high standard of living gives these people new hope, and it isn't long before one sees a change in their attitudes, personal hygiene, and ambitions for the future," Parker said.

All of the citizens present at the hearing were in favor of the project beginning soon and backed the Council in its decision to pass a resolution declaring a need for a housing program here.

Crop Estimate Climb Continues

Lubbock — Production figures from the 23 member counties of the Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. 1957-'58 cotton crop continues to climb upward as scrapping and clean-up harvesting enters the final stages.

Total production from the 23 counties has already passed the 1 1/2 million bale mark. The U. S. Department of Agriculture classifying office here has already classified 1,461,808 bales, W. E. Franklin, chairman, reports. This includes 1,276,919 bales in the Lubbock office and 184,889 in the Lamesa office. Franklin estimates there is another 50,000 to 75,000 bales yet to be classed.

The average quality of the 1957 crop shows a drop from figures compiled in 1956, according to George W. Pfeiffenberger, Executive Vice President of the PCG.

Pfeiffenberger explained that the PCG has conducted a quality survey the last two seasons on High Plains cotton.

"Figures on the 1957 crop show that 40 percent of the crop was white cotton, while light spots accounted for approximately 44 percent and spotted 14 percent with about 2 percent tinges and below grade.

"Last year, 1956, 50 percent of the crop was white, 47.1 percent light spotted and about 2.5 percent spotted.

"Staple length on the 1957 crop, however, has held up well, running 1/32nds of an inch, compared with 30.6/32nd of the preceding year.

"The average micronaire for 1957 averages 3.3 while it was 3.9. Tensile strength for 1957 is 73,000 pounds per square inch compared to a 1956 average of 78,000 pounds," Pfeiffenberger said.

Tech Athletics Rotary Subject

Bill Holmes, publicity director of the Texas Tech Athletic Department, spoke at Tahoka Rotary Club Thursday noon of last week on the current program for building up athletics in the college.

With basketball in the spotlight right now, he spent most of his time discussing the current team of Coach Polk Robinson which is creating somewhat of a surprise in Southwestern Conference circles.

Two home games of better than 10,000 spectators each have set new crowd records for the Conference. Basketball is now paying its own way at Tech, and together with football, will pay the expense of the non-revenue producing sports such as baseball, track, fencing, swimming, tennis and golf.

The current team is made up mostly of South Plains products, and the college hopes to continue on this basis. In football, emphasis is also placed on securing the basis of the team from area high schools.

Some people said the new 10,000-seat coliseum would never be filled, and the same people are saying the proposed new 55,000-seat stadium will not be filled, he declared. Holmes thinks both will be filled many times in the future.

He said that Coach Robinson is "jazzing up" the basketball by having the "Star Spangled Banner" played and sung by a soloist at each home game while the spotlight is on the performers, and also the boys of each team are introduced at each game while the spotlight plays on them. Furthermore, the good visibility and cushioned opera chairs in the coliseum also contribute to increasing the crowd.

He thinks Texas Tech's athletic future is very bright, and that fans will now support the pro-

Reduce Delinquency CORRECTION PUNISHMENT III.

(A distinguished Texas judge offers pointers on combating our rapidly increasing juvenile delinquency problem.)

By JUDGE SARAH T. HUGHES

Juvenile delinquency is a new problem. But our attitude toward children who commit offenses has changed materially in the last 50 years.

Formerly a child of 7 was considered responsible for his offenses and was punished as an adult. The object of society was to punish the offender, regardless of his age if he was over 6, and revenge the crime as well as to protect society.

Double Object

Today we no longer try to revenge ourselves, as was done as late as 1828—when a 13-year-old New Jersey boy was hanged for stealing a pair of shoes. We try now to rescue the child as well as to protect society.

We try to find out the causes of the individual child's delinquency so that we can remove them. We are not so concerned with handing out punishment as we are with trying to save the offender for good citizenship.

Training Program

The sentence may be probation or an institution, both involving a positive program to prepare the boy or girl for wholesome community life, including vocational training.

Whatever the punishment, the object is the same—to protect society, remove the causes of delinquency, and make the youngster a good citizen.

My article next week will continue this discussion.

gram as never before since the college is in the Southwestern Conference.

The program was arranged by Otis Spears, and special guests were Coaches Jake Jacobs and Deane Wright.

The name of Rev. W. A. (Bill) Brooks, new First Baptist Church pastor, was presented for membership in the club by Secretary Dub Kenley.

Marlin Hawthorne, junior Rotarian for the month, was introduced by Dr. K. R. Durham. The other Junior Rotarian, Jackie Applewhite, was not able to attend this meeting.

J. Fred Bucy Jr. Sent To Europe

Brownfield—J. Fred Bucy, III, nine years old, has been a visitor in the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Bucy, Sr. and his aunt and her family, Mrs. Robert W. Baumgardner, all of Brownfield for the seventeen days following the New Year's week. The Junior Mrs. Bucy left Christmas night by airplane for Paris, France, for a two week's visit with her husband who is there on business. Freddie's two little sisters stayed in Slaton with their other grand mother, Mrs. W. R. Greer.

J. Fred, Jr., is in Paris supervising the installation of a geophysical recording machine called "Seismac," that his employer company sold. ## Methodist Church Joins In Crusade

"Tell Texas About Christ in 1958" is the crusade to be made by Methodists churches over the state during the year, and various programs and plans are being made by the local church, according to the pastor, Rev. J. B. Thompson.

Church attendance emphasis began Jan. 5 and will continue through Easter. Visitations are being planned by the church here during this time, and the spring revival will also probably be held before Easter, Thompson said.

During the efforts of the crusade, both for attendance, and for the year's work, special observances are suggested for churches over the state.

CARD OF THANKS

I sincerely appreciate all of your many kind deeds and your thoughtfulness during my stay in the hospital. I especially want to thank the doctors and nurses for their wonderful care, and my many friends who made my stay more pleasant. God bless you all.—Mrs. L. N. Nordyke.

was still in Paris, so Texas Instruments offered Mrs. J. F. Jr., a round trip airline ticket, super deluxe, to Paris with expenses paid for a two-weeks stay with her husband.

Mrs. Bucy returned last week end. She and the three children drove home to Houston by automobile on Monday. It will probably be another two weeks before their husband and father will return to the U. S. A. and home.

Bovell Honored By Muleshoe C-C

Mayor W. T. Bovell of Muleshoe, who was reared in Tahoka, last Friday night was honored as that city's "man of the year" at the annual Muleshoe Chamber of Commerce banquet.

Jimmy Crawford, another Lynn county boy, was named Muleshoe's "junior man of the year."

Last year, also, the Muleshoe "man of the year" was a former Tahokan, Gilbert Lamb, now manager of a radio station at Muleshoe.

In presenting the award to Bovell Jerry Kirk of the C. of C. said Bovell, who operates an auto parts store as well as serving as mayor, devotes a great part of his time to city work, including sewer system extensions, street paving, extension of the area telephone service, promotion of the four lane highway through the county, city park expansion, cooperation with the schools, and church activities.

W. T. is the only son of Mrs. T. J. Bovell of Tahoka. His wife is the former Juarene Edwards, also reared in Tahoka.

Odds and Ends

(By R. I. The Elder)

Having been confined to my home for the past three weeks by a painful physical ailment and by the inclement weather, I have taken advantage of the opportunity to do some reading of a number of most informative and interesting articles and stories which I had allowed to accumulate in my "den" and to its dormant untouched and unread for months.

Among the articles involving the "race problem" which is now being discussed, pro and con, almost daily, in the newspapers, over the radio, and the TV, is the story of two little Negro girls who were born and grew up to womanhood in the Negro section of the little town of Alachua, Florida, a town of little more than 1,000 population. The title of the story is "Our Miss Rossie," the name of the good and kind white woman, who took these little colored waifs under her angelic wings, so to speak, and lifted them up morally and spiritually out of the slums of degradation, poverty, hunger, filth, and dirt, gradually and unceasingly but ever upward to respectable and honorable positions in which they are highly esteemed and happy.

In fact, I think this is the most amazing and thrilling story of its kind that has been written in modern times. To be accurate, I think that it is the only one of its kind. Charles Dickens of England wrote numbers of novels in his day, each one of which was designed to correct some dire evil or injustice, which they did; but not even the Death of Little Nell was more pathetic than was the struggle of little Mingie and her twin sister little Veanie to surmount multitudes of difficulties that were constantly rising up before them and multitudes of cases of persecution and insult and even threats of death that they were sometimes compelled to face.

This is not saying that all of the white people of the little town of Alachua were hostile to them.

Many white people became acquainted with their heroic struggles and sympathized with them deeply. But there are a few rowdies in almost every little town, and Alachua seems to have had its full share of them.

The most politically influential book ever written outside of the Bible, no doubt, was "Uncle Tom's Cabin," written by Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe in 1852, when she was forty-one years of age. It was designed to stir up opposition to slavery in the North and East, and it did that very thing in a great way. It was dramatic in the extreme and obviously hastened the advent of the so-called Civil War. But it was not altogether accurate nor fair in its discussion of the Slavery issue. Part of it was fiction, some of it exaggerated the cruelties heaped upon the slaves by the people of the South, and it said little about the real affection that often existed between the master and the slave. But it was a great book and hastened the destruction of the institution of slavery.

But this book—for it has been published in book form—is a different kind of book altogether. Right here it is necessary that we make a few introductory explanations. These two little Negro girls lived in a small practically unfurnished house with their paralyzed old father and took care of him as best they could. They had an aged aunt who was able to help them a little and was able occasionally to get a small donation from her Church. But they lived by marauding the neighbors' gardens, most of whom were almost as destitute of money or support as they were themselves. Most of the time they were on the very verge of starvation down there in the Negro slums, if their surroundings may be so described. One morning, after having eaten no breakfast whatever and having had almost nothing to eat on the preceding day, filthy, hungry, ragged little Mingie stepped outside the cabin door and said to her twin sister—and here I quote—"Veanie, 'um gosh' up town an' fin us a job an' make some money so we can buy papa more to eat—and maybe buy us some shoes.

"Don't go out in that hot sun, Mingie," Veanie pleaded, "Don't leave me here by myself with Papa," saying that he was having one of his "bad days," for he had been unable to move or to speak or to do anything for the past two or three months.

Though accosted with a number of slurs and insults as she trotted up the street and then broke into a run as she hurried on up to that part of town where Mingie thought she might find somebody that would give her a job. Out of breath, she finally stopped in front of a house with a nice covered trellis shading its beautiful porch. Mingie stopped rested a moment, and then tip-toed quietly to the steps, when she heard a voice from the inside cry out, "Mother, there's a little nigger in our yard!" And an angry blond woman hurried out and told Mingie to "go away and not come back." Mingie fled, disappointed, frightened, and remorseful, but not ready to give up.

In the very next block she met two small white boys on bicycles, who cried out "Nigger! Nigger!" and bumped Mingie's bare legs with the front wheels of their bicycle no further. When she stopped, a run and ran until she could cycle. Again she struck out in she found herself standing in front of a low picket fence. On the lawn behind the fence, an elderly white woman was taking up scattered bits of palm leaves.

"Lady," Mingie said as politely as she knew how. Startled, the lady looked up. Then she said, not unkindly, "What do you want, little girl?" "Lady, do you want me to work for you? I can rake yo' yard, an' clean them leafs off yo' porch, an'—"

The woman smiled. "You're too small to be out looking for a job, and I've nothing you can do. I'm sorry, little girl, you go on home."

"Yessum," said Mingie. The woman went on talking, but soon she looked again at Mingie; "I said, run on home."

A person must obey, but Mingie just stood there. She could not move. Here on the other side of the fence was kindness. It offered nothing. It told one to go away. . . . But to turn on's back on kindness, that is hard—too hard.

"You're awfully small," the woman said at last, "but my granddaughter may find something for you to do." She beckoned Mingie into the yard, and told her to wait while she went inside. Sitting on the front steps, Mingie could hear the lady talking on the telephone. She heard the lady address "Rossie" and tell her that there was a little colored girl there looking for work and heard her ask "Rossie" to come over and talk with the girl. By that time the sweat on Mingie's face had run down and was leaving muddy streaks. Her matted hair was crookedly parted in the middle, and was tied in a knot on one side and brushed out on the other. Her feet and legs were scratched up, and her dress was so dirty that it looked as if it had never been new or clean. But Mingie didn't know how she looked, for doubtless she had never thought about it. She just sat there quietly and stoically, neither thinking nor hoping, apparently, just waiting.

Presently a blue sedan rolled up and a young woman stepped out. Then she turned and lifted a chubby baby to her shoulder. Mingie thought that she had never seen so beautiful a woman. Tall and graceful, she was wearing a light summer dress and white slippers. She walked jauntily toward Mingie, saying, "Hello, little girl, are you looking for a job?"

"Yessum."

"My name is Mrs. Lee—but her folks called her Rossie—and this is my little girl, Edie. What's your name?"

"Mingie."

"That's a pretty name. How old are you, Mingie?"

"I think um nine—I think."

"Well, honey, I'm afraid you're not old enough or big enough for me to hire you. Don't you go to school?"

"No'm, been a lil' bit, but I ain't goin' to school no Mo."

"Does your mother know you're out looking for a job?"

"No'm I ain't got no mother. She died when I was one minute ol'—or two minutes ol'—I think. I had a stepmama one time, but she done went an' took everything outa the house and runned away. An' she ain't comin' back no mo. I guess she don't like me an' Veanie. She beat us."

"Who is Veanie?"

"She my sister. She home with my papa. But he sick. He can't walk."

"Oh, I'm awfully sorry your papa is sick, Mingie—"

"How much do you want for working for me?"

"Oh, 'bout fifty cents a week, I spect."

"What will you do with the monee, Mingie?"

"Um gonna buy me an' Veanie some shiny black slippers and rose-colored socks. We ain't got none now."

Countless times through the years my twin sister and I, Veanie, have wondered what our lives would have been if Mrs. Lee, when she looked down on Mingie, had made a different decision. She only said, "You come along and go with me over to my house."

When Mingie entered Mrs. Lee's sweetly cool, good-smelling home, she fairly gasped. She had not even dreamed of anything like this when, only a short time ago, she had been an outcast. Struck with wonder, she began moving about, inspecting, feeling of the soft upholstered armchair with her grimy hands. Mrs. Lee set the baby down on a pink blanket in the living room and said to Mingie, "Come with me, honey, I've got something I bet will fit you." She opened a cedar chest and drew out a dainty blue dress with matching bloomers. "Here you are, honey," Mrs. Lee said, "I wore this little (Cont'd on Next Page) dress when I was about your size—only I was six.”

Mingie snatched the clothes from her. “O-o-ee” she said. “They’re pretty. Can I put ‘em on now?” She didn’t wait for Mrs. Lee’s answer. Her single filthy garment—her old too-long dress—fell in a tattered heap around her feet.

How could Mrs. Lee have shown no shock or distaste as she saw the unwashed state of Mingie’s body? She betrayed none.

“Mingie,” she said, “wouldn’t you like to have a nice bath? So you’ll be cool for your new things.” That was the way Mrs. Lee always spoke, instinctively choosing the right words. It would not have been the same if she had said, “So you’ll be clean.” She led Mingie into the bathroom and showed her how to turn on and turn off the water, and she was amazed at the gleaming white porcelain bath-tub, enchanted by the sweet smell of toilet soap—a wholly unexpected and unimagined experience for her, for she had never before had such a bath, if any at all. And then Mrs. Lee helped Mingie into the pretty new dress; and Mingie asked, “Now can I go in there an’ mine the baby fo’ you? I love babies.”

“Yes, honey but don’t try to lift her. Just hand her back the toys she keeps throwing out of reach.

She’s probably sleepy, so if she starts to nod, call me.” Mrs. Lee went out to the kitchen to prepare lunch, and Mingie hurried to the parlor, where the baby, tired of playing, was fretting for her nap. Soon Mrs. Lee heard a thud and then a scream from the baby. She rushed into the parlor and found Mingie astraddle of the baby’s back and holding her around the stomach. Mrs. Lee took possession of her child, and Mingie backed away.

“Did you pick her up?” Mrs. Lee asked.

“No—ma’am,” Mingie denied, trembling.

Mrs. Lee took the baby into the bedroom and closed the door.

Mingie, filled with remorse, stood there in the parlor for a few moments, and then was suddenly filled with the desire to run back home. But Veanie and Papa were there, hungry and with nothing to eat. What could she tell them? She had hesitantly taken just one step in flight. Then she heard Mrs. Lee coming from the bedroom and looked back. Mrs. Lee’s face was grave but it showed no anger. Mingie was terribly frustrated. Tears ran down her cheeks.

“Mingie,” Mrs. Lee said quietly, “Nobody likes little girls who tell lies. You did take the baby fo’ you, didn’t you?”

“No—yessum. She went to sleep, an’ I—”

But I told you to call me. It's always best to tell the truth, Mingie.”

“Y—yessum. Did I hurt yo’ baby?”

“No, honey, she was just frightened a little. She’s asleep now.” And she smiled at Mingie. “Come on, we’ll go out to the kitchen.”

This was the first crisis in Mingie’s new world, but she was to have another one that very afternoon, and others were to follow.

Now, this Columnist will not undertake to mention all of them—just a few. We have given the above string of facts just to show the depths of depravity and apparent hopelessness in which those two little Negro sisters, Mingie and Veanie, were born over in Florida; how they were gradually lifted out of the depths by a white lady of their little town, one of them Veanie, having become a teacher and having written this story of their climb to success, and the other, Mingie, having become a trained nurse in one of the large hospitals in California. As I said in the beginning it is one of the most marvelous stories I have ever read, and it is just another illustration of the fact that Truth is often stranger than fiction.

Bible Topics

By Leroy Cowan
ACTIVITY . . . The activity of a person may be either good or bad. The Bible has a lot to say about the work of sinners. That the acts are first conceived in the mind and turned into action is shown by Prov. 6:18. People can be involved in many evil activities. Peter was giving good advice when he said “But let none of you suffer as a murderer, or as a thief, or as an evildoer, or as a busy-body in other men's matters.” 1 Pet. 5:14. Even though one has committed such sins, he can still be forgiven. Read Ro. 6:1-7, 17-18.

How much better are activities that need not be repented off! Christians are urged to maintain good works for necessary uses. Titus 3:14. Jesus was one that went about doing good. His purpose was to do the will of his Father. His activity was always good for he learned obedience. Heb. 5:8. Man cannot direct his own step, therefore he must submit to the will of God, which is revealed in the Scriptures, so as to be good and profitable servants. Faith without works is dead. We all need to be working in the Lord's vineyard.

A FREE PRESS . . . and CENSORSHIP

America is at peace. While we have men in uniform stationed over the world, we are not at war. In every way, we are working to preserve our peaceful relations with other peoples whose ideologies and aspirations differ from ours.

Figuring largely in that huge undertaking is America's Free Press. Even during the peaceful years, it has become necessary that certain information regarding discoveries and inventions be protected. Security has become big business.

“Keep this out of the newspaper,” are fighting words to any newspaper editor who is a conscientious craftsman. Yet editors of all newspapers, large and small, realize the responsibilities facing them, to help preserve the securities that are so important to all of us.

Government, the military, and the scientific fields, receive full cooperation from the men and women who, by training, are accustomed to dig out and know the news . . . and who, by instinct, strive to keep the people fully informed.

Americans have a right to expect that full freedom of the press be preserved, within the bounds drawn by these securities.

For a completely free press is the only safe foundation on which government of the people can build all other freedoms.
