Challenger Explodes

The worst tragedy in NASA history occurred on Tuesday at 10:38 a.m. CST as the Challenger space shuttle disintegrated after what appeared to be a flawless launch. All seven crew members, including New Hampshire school teacher Christa McAuliffe, were killed.

Many of us didn't know what to say or do but feel shocked and stunned. All we could do was watch the replay of the explosion on the newscasts as the networks' coverage of the tragedy lasted nearly five hours. It was a hard moment to believe.

Gov. Mark White has ordered flags on state buildings to be flown at half-staff in memory of the seven-crew members on the shuttle who died in an explosion less than two minutes after lift-off. White also asked that private businesses fly their flags at half-staff.

OUT OF THE WOODS

By Juanell (Wood) Jones

RECENTLY I helped collect for the Mother's March of Dimes effort and while most of the people who answered their doors at my knock were politely curious about my visit, one man reminded me of how I sometimes answer my door to expectant-looking strangers carrying packets or brief-cases.

"What are you selling," he demanded belligerently. I had to hide my grin as I explained to him that I wasn't selling, I was collecting. It really tickled me because I have to say that's about what my attitude is, too. I detest door-to-door salesmen, and if I was a football fan and someone had interrupted the super bowl game (as I did to him Sunday afternoon), then I don't think I would have even bothered to open the door.

My husband, on the other hand, will listen to any sales pitch from anybody who lands on our doorstep. He is just too kindhearted for his own good, I keep telling him. He knows he's not going to buy anything, and I know he's not going to buy anything, but he'll listen to the salespitch regardless.

One afternoon at a shopping center parking lot in Lubbock, we were accosted by a young man waving big paper flowers around in the air. I immediately deduced he was a "flower salesman" and grabbed Gary by the arm to pull him in the other direction at a high rate of speed.

This guy, however, was determined to make a sale and hotfooted it after us. By the time we made it to our car, the guy had managed to make his sales pitch, but I "graciously declined" his offer. After we got in the car, my husband looked after the departing flowers, and said I didn't have to be rude to the poor guy. I know. I have no manners, sometimes. "Get lost" just seemed to be the appropriate thing to say at the moment.

Now if you really want to see some high pressure salesmen, just go to Juarez or Matamoros, those border towns of Old Mexico. Those guys (and women and children) are ready to bargain with just about anything in order to make a sale. Now I get a kick out of this kind of bargaining because that is just what I expect when I go there, and if I didn't get the right "treatment" then I wouldn't appreciate the flavor of Mexico.

I guess if I am ever forced to be a salesperson, I think I would go there instead of door-to-door in my hometown. I don't think I could take the rejection of cold-hearted people like myself!

rear of his business. The compressor was located under a shed south of his residence and is described as green-gray in color with a black two-horsepower motor mounted on two wheels, valued at $500.

Pre-Eminent Architects Design Fantasy Arches For Galveston

GALVESTON, TEXAS (December 15, 1985) . . . Seven of the nation's most distinguished architects have joined together to create a project never before attempted. The architects—Helmut Jahn, Cesar Pelli, Stanley Tigerman, Eugene Aubry, Michael Graves, Charles Moore and Boone Powell—have used their individual creative talents to design GALVESTON ARCHES, seven huge, fantasy structures that will span the streets of a mile-long stretch in Galveston's historic Strand district throughout the city's 1986 Mardi Gras and State Sesquicentennial celebrations.

The arches will include structures by Michael Graves, noted architect of the Humana Corporate Headquarters Building in Louisville, Kentucky, who has worked on several Galveston projects; Helmut Jahn, designer of Chicago's Xerox Centre; Cesar Pelli, former dean of the Yale School of Architecture; Charles Moore, designer of the Piazza D' Italia in New Orleans; Eugene Aubry, architect of the Gus S. Wortham Theatre Center in Houston; now under construction; Boone Powell, restoration architect from San Antonio who designed Galveston's Tremont House; and Stanley Tigerman, of Chicago, who designed the Porter, Indiana, Daisy House and the Illinois Regional Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped in Chicago.

The arches are part of a dramatic renaissance under way in Galveston, where landmark buildings are being lovingly restored and age-old traditions revived. Among those traditions is Mardi Gras, which returned to the island city in 1985, following a 40-year hiatus.

Each architect agreed to donate his services as part of Galveston's 1986 Mardi Gras celebration, slated for February 1-11.

The arches, reminiscent of four triumphal arches which graced Galveston's Tremont Street in 1881 for a statewide singing festival, will tower over the turn-of-the-century Strand commercial district, through which an expansive, torch-lit Mardi Gras procession will pass on Saturday night, February 8. Last year the parade attracted 250,000 spectators.

Most of the architects relied on the Historical purpose of an arch—a gateway—in their designs.

However, Stanley Tigerman of Chicago added mannequins to his structure, representing legendary heroes from Texas' fight for independence.

Boone Powell, of San Antonio,

GALVESTON, TEXAS (January 17, 1986) . . . This fantasy arch designed by Stanley Tigerman is one of seven arches being built by nationally acclaimed architects across the U.S. for Galveston's Mardi Gras '86 celebration.

combined architectural styles found in historic Galveston as the basis of his creation, along with relying on the area's history as a port city. He used nautical decorations—masts, pennants and rigging—to convey his theme.

DRIED FRUITS
Dried fruits are a favorite for healthful snacks, but take note not all brands are equal. Some dried fruits are sulphured instead of sundried. During the process, chemicals are used to enhance the color of the fruit and also to make it hygroscopic, so they hold more water. You end up paying for more water and additives and less natural fruit. Be sure to check the label for "sun-dried" fruits.

SCRIPTURE: Psalms 23

Would you picture with me the paths of righteousness? These paths in my picture are interwoven, intricate, and winding around throughout the world. No one could find their way in these paths without a guide. "He leadeth me". Herein lies the secret of calm and joyful assurance. The Lord Jesus knows the way through the wilderness or desert, for He has been this way. And with Him leading me, I will find my way by these paths, which go everywhere throughout the world, and then into the straight and narrow way that leads ever upward to God and my eternal Home.

He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness — why? "For His name's sake." I do not have to depend on myself or on my righteousness to find the way. But Jesus, because I am His (for He is mine!) will lead me for "His name's sake." He is righteous, merciful and loving, and He is the Good Shepherd who leads His own sheep. His name must not be dishonored, but given the glory due His name; therefore I am assured that He leadeth me! For I am a child in the family of God, according to His words of promise.

But once I looked down the path — far ahead, going every place round about, and I could not tell where to take my next step. Then up the narrow path I saw a light shine forth; the light some other Christian had left to guide me (or you) on my way.

Still going on, I stopped to eat and rest by the still water. Suddenly I saw something that glittered out among the trees of the wilderness, and I left the path to seek the glittering object. As I reached it, and looked closely at it, I saw it for what it was and then I realized I had lost my way from the righteous paths. I turned my back on the glittering object, repentant and humbly seeking, when I felt the guiding hand clasp mine and lift me back up into the path.

Yes, He leadeth me. Jesus, the Shepherd, leads me in these pilgrim paths throughout this world, ever going before me. If I had looked up before I wandered off the pathway, I would have seen His loving hand held out to guide and lead me on.

Do you know this Shepherd? How is it with you and Jesus? Are you trying to find your way by your righteousness — or, are you being guided by Jesus (who loved you enough to die for you) "for His name's sake." Do you know the joy of belonging to Jesus and claiming His name, and His promises?

Don't miss this joy — for Jesus is the Way!
"He leadeth me, He leadeth me,
By His own hand, He leadeth me;
His faithful follower I would be
For by His hand He leadeth me!"

City-County Library News

Shirley Draper, librarian, announced that the City-County Library will participate in the Texas State Library's statewide Sesquicentennial campaign, "Read-a-Texas-Book-a-Mo." Designed to encourage Texans to hold a personal commemoration of Texas' 150th birthday, the campaign urges citizens to read at least one book about Texas each month. By spotlighting a certain facet about Texas such as wildflowers, rivers, battles, shrines, or heroes, or by choosing one of each, Texans can set their own goals and challenges and choose from a wide array of books available in fiction, folklore, biography, history and poetry.

In addition, readers are encouraged to share with others by donating a Texas book to their local library to enrich materials available for future generations.

Cotton Prices Edge Higher

High Plains cotton growers sold at slightly higher prices this week. Merchant demand remained moderate and selective.

Growers sold mixed lots of mostly grades 42 and 52, staples 31 and 32, mike 35-49 at around 150 to 200 points over 1985 loan rates. This was slightly above last week's prices, said Mack Bennett, Area Director for USDA's Marketing Services Office at Lubbock. Higher grades and longer staples traded near loan levels. Abundant available supplies were reduced sharply around January 1 when Commodity Credit loan entries accelerated. Many growers, discouraged with current market prices, chose the loan rather than sell, Bennett continued.

Meanwhile, with harvesting virtually completed and ginning finished at most gin locations, the Lubbock office classed 15,000 samples during the week ended Thursday, Jan. 16. This brought the season's total to 1,167,000 and compares with 1,393,000 classed by the same date last year.

The week's predominant grades were grade 42 at 47 percent and grade 52 at 29 percent. About 31 percent was reduced one grade because of bark.

Predominant staples were staple 31 at 38 percent followed by staple 32 at 28 percent and staple 33 at 16 percent. The average was 31.66 thirty-seconds of an inch.

Mike 35-49 accounted for 59 percent, 33-34 was 20 percent, 30-32 amounted to 14 percent and 27-29 was 4 percent. The average was 3.5.

WAGON TRAIN ALLOWS PARTICIPATION IN TEXAS HISTORY

O.C. Garza, Media Chief, Texas Tourist Development Agency

To those who want to experience what Texas was like 150 years ago, the Sesquicentennial Wagon Train will be the event during 1986. One of the first "kick-off" events scheduled for the Sesquicentennial, the historic appeal of a six-month, 3,000 mile horse-drawn journey makes the effort unique. The entourage will be the largest train ever assembled, with 23 states represented, and this adds to its glamour. Its greatest appeal, however, is that the wagon train allows the public to participate in a reincarnation of Texas history.

They came from England and Germany and Ireland; they came from the hills of Tennessee and the streets of Boston and New York. They came from Alabama as slaves and from south of the Rio Bravo as Spanish and Mestizos. Many of them came in wagons, sharing the dust-and-leather odyssey common to all wagon trains. Traversing Comanche grounds, dodging flooded rivers and streams, and passing through Mexican territory, the wagons rolled on. They were impervious to horrible weather conditions, rugged terrain and the dangers of the Texas landscape. With all their possessions in the rear of their wagons, those settlers headed toward a new home; perhaps a plot of blackland soil or some hallowed rangeland in western Texas. Nothing was going to stand between them and their new life.

Some of that pioneer determination is evident on the Sesquicentennial Wagon Train. Wagons roll at 8:00 a.m. sharp until the days get longer, then the wagons will depart at 7:30 a.m. and later the time will move to 7:00. Delays will not be allowed. According to the rules set down by the Texas Wagon Train Association (TWTA), the caravan will move at 4 m.p.h. come "rain, sleet or snow." There is a lot of pioneer in 78-year-old Hazel Bowman. The parents of this Antelope native came to Texas in the 1800's on such a wagon train, and Hazel, a fourth generation Texan, wouldn't miss this one for the world. She plans to ride the entire 3,028 miles on an iron-tired Conestoga wagon.

The threats from unseen dangers are not what they were a century-and-a-half ago. Still, a wagon train is not your ordinary mode of transportation. With the stars for a ceiling at night, the wooden wagon for absorbing bumps and a horse for propulsion, partakers of the wagon train will get a view of Texas unique to 4 m.p.h. vehicles and open-air camps.

Fourteen official sponsors will have wagons in the train, including a coach donated by the maker of Winchester arms. Many of the wagons are authentic Conestogas and even an original Studebaker wagon will traverse the entire route. A motorized trailer resembling an old-fashioned, one-room schoolhouse is also part of the chain. In it 25 children from families on the train will be taught a modern curriculum by a teacher and two aides.

Farriers and blacksmiths will be for hire to anyone needing to shoe horses. A water wagon, chuck wagon and a port-a-can wagon should make the trip a little more comfortable.

Public participation is invited — from a single day to the entire trip. Keep in mind we're talking primitive transportation here. While thousands of hardy settlers came to Texas in this manner, few were accustomed to the plush seats of Cadillacs. Either on wagon, surrey, buggy, horse or mule the journey can be made. To insure comfort, mammal riders are advised to bring extra girths, reins, saddle pads and lots of pillows.

Anyone interested in riding aboard a wagon must be at a designated campsite and find someone who has space in the coach. Those interested in just looking at this giant train are advised to meet the procession at one of the campsites or along the scheduled route.

The wagon train began its journey at Sulphur Springs on Jan. 2 with 83 wagons and 253 riders on horseback. The train will end at the Fort Worth Stockyards on July 4th. In between, the train will visit Houston, Kingsville, San Antonio, San Angelo, Ft. Stockton, El Paso, Odessa, Midland, Lubbock, Amarillo, Abilene, Wichita Falls and most small towns along the route. Many towns and cities are honoring the train with barbecues, dances and celebrations. For a schedule of the Sesquicentennial Wagon Train or more information, contact the Texas Wagon Train Association at P.O. Box 167217, Irving, Texas, 75016 or call 1-800-441-1986.

PLANT PECAN TREES PROPERLY--Much of the success of growing pecans begins with proper tree planting, emphasizes a horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Dig a hole only as big as the tree's root system. The taproot should sit in the bottom of the hole or else cut it back some. Pack original soil around roots as tightly as possible. Use adjacent soil to fill the remainder of the hole, not light soil, sand or potting soil.

Plant the tree at the same depth it grew in the nursery row. Cut off the top half at planting and make sure the tree does not go without water longer than 14 days.

Social Security ... Out West

By Bill West
Social Security Field Representative

A new Social Security continuing review process is beginning, Laura Purcell, Social Security manager in Lubbock, said recently. The old process stopped in April 1984 while new rules were developed.

"The Social Security Disability Benefits Reform Act of 1984 and later regulations will make the process more effective, fair, and easily understood," Mrs. Purcell said. "Cases will be carefully and completely developed, and decisions to stop benefits will be well supported and uniform at all levels nationwide."

Mrs. Purcell said that the biggest change is the new medical improvement review standard. "Benefits generally will continue unless there is substantial evidence of both medical improvement and ability to work. Before, only ability to work had to be shown."

There are some limited exceptions where benefits may stop without medical improvement, but they will apply in relatively few cases. For example, entitlement can end if a person is gainfully employed or has clearly benefited from medical advances or vocational therapy related to ability to work.

"Another important change provides revised rules for more realistically judging a mentally impaired person's ability to work," Mrs. Purcell said. "They were developed in cooperation with public and private professional experts who work with mentally impaired people."

"Also, a beneficiary who appeals a decision that he or she is no longer disabled can have checks continue through a decision by an administrative law judge. If the appeal is unsuccessful, though, benefits must be repaid unless a waiver is granted."

The law requires everyone who receives disability benefits to be reviewed regularly. How often a person's case is reviewed will depend on the severity of the impairment, how likely it is to improve, and other factors.

A person getting Social Security or supplemental security income (SSI) disability checks can have his or her case reviewed from as soon as 6 months to as long as 7 years after entitlement.

Among the first cases to be reviewed under the new process are those where medical improvement was considered likely when benefits were awarded. Many of these reviews were previously scheduled but delayed while the new rules were being prepared.

Also scheduled for early review will be cases where a cessation decision was appealed. They include those returned by Federal courts which will be re-evaluated under the new medical improvement review standard.

Mrs. Purcell encouraged anyone in the Lubbock area who wants to know more about disability reviews to contact the Lubbock office. It is located at 1611 10th Street, Suite 100, and the phone number is 743-7381.

PART OF SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS MAY BE TAXABLE

Up to half of the Social Security benefits received by people in 1985 may be subject to Federal income tax, but mainly only for those who had substantial income in addition to their benefits.

In fact, it is expected that only one person in ten will actually have to pay any tax on any part of his or her Social Security benefits.

Every person who received or repaid any Social Security benefits in 1985 will receive Form-1099, Social Security Benefit Statement, before the end of January. The form will show the net amount of Social Security benefits received in 1985 and this is the figure a person should use to figure if any of his or her benefits are subject to tax.

IRS Notice 703 will be included with Form-1099, and this work sheet can be used to Questions about figuring taxable income or figuring taxing should be directed to nearest Internal Revenue Service office. The telephone number of the nearest IRS office is shown on the back of the IRS worksheet.

A free publication 915--explains the entries on form SSA-1099 and how to figure if benefits are taxable. A free copy can be obtained at any Social Security office.

The Lubbock Social Security office is located at 1611-10th Street and the telephone number is 743-7381.

Animal Sciences Teach 4-H'ers Responsibility, Caring.

Helping young people to develop a sense of responsibility and caring is basic to 4-H animal science programs—programs in agriculture, beef, sheep, swine, commodity marketing, dairy, dog care and training, horse and veterinary science.

These programs give young people a chance to explore many areas of the animal industry and to place special emphasis on areas of individual interest, points out Stanley Young, county 4-H program coordinator with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System. The programs offer opportunities to 4-H members whether they live in rural areas or in major metropolitan areas.

4-H'ers in animal science programs are exposed to everything from simple pet care and training to marketing, breeding, research, nutrition and careers. These programs can be an integral part of their learning and living experiences and can offer young people an almost limitless array of opportunities for education and exploration.

Objectives common to programs in animal sciences are these:

1. To develop leadership activities, build character and assume citizenship responsibilities.

2. To explore career opportunities.

3. To develop skills, knowledge and attitudes for lifelong use.

4. To share knowledge gained with others.

4-H members who excel in animal science programs can reap a host of awards, including some scholarships and trips to the National 4-H Congress in Chicago awarded each fall.

Projects in animal science can open an exciting world to 4-H members, says Stanley Young. To find out more about these programs, contact the Extension office.

Fire For Range Management

Ranchers may want to consider prescribed burning during early 1986 to improve their rangeland.

Although prescribed burning is not a cure-all, it can be used effectively for several purposes.

Fire may be used as a brush management tool, to improve forage quality, to improve livestock distribution, to improve wildlife habitat and to suppress parasites.

Each of these uses may require a different type of fire. Thus, a prescription for the fire must be developed. This requires that objectives of the burn be clearly established.

A burn to suppress brush would require different environmental conditions than a burn to remove old grass to improve forage quality.

Most prescribed burns in Texas are conducted during the cool season—January and February.

Planning for a prescribed burn should begin at least one year before the anticipated burn. Often pre-burn treatments are necessary to improve the grass cover. Grass provides the fine fuel to carry the burn.

After the purpose or objective of the burn has been established, a fire plan is developed. This includes the purpose of the burn, the prescription, the location, the time and how to install the burn.

The fire plan also includes a checklist of items to be completed before the burn. Neighbors and appropriate authorities such as the local sheriff, fire department and department of public safety should be notified before a prescribed burn.

The burn should be conducted in a manner to contain the fire on the area to be burned. This includes proper installation of firelanes and proper use of firing techniques. Firelanes should be constructed several weeks prior to the burn and should not have any flammable material that would allow a fire escape.

Prescribed burning can be an effective range management tool, but it requires good management. A rancher should follow three basic steps to conduct a successful burn program:

1. Thorough planning, which includes total ranch evaluation, training for conducting a safe burn, and preparations for the burn.

2. Safe and effective execution of the burn on the specified area.

3. Sound range, livestock and wildlife management prior to and following the burn.

PEANUT OUTLOOK STABLE

The best thing that could happen to peanut growers this year would be a major decline in the value of the U.S. dollar, says an economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The demand for peanuts has been stable in recent months, and a 20 percent reduction in the dollar's value would be a major breakthrough in boosting peanut exports. Peanut demand and prices have remained under pressure due to abundant world supplies of oilseed crops. The 1985 Texas peanut crop was a good one, with yields about 14 percent above average due to timely rains.

NEW PRODUCTS CAN KEEP WOOD LOOKING NATURAL

Wood siding and decorative trims are once again becoming popular in Texas, but their natural beauty and color usually fade quickly. Most natural wood stains, water repellents and preservatives don't contain the necessary combination of chemicals to control both weathering and mildew which are major problems in Texas. However, two products tested at the Texas Forest Service's Forest Products Laboratory at Lufkin are showing excellent results, says a wood products specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

SAUCES ADD UP ON LOW-SODIUM DIET

You can carefully avoid the salt shaker and still be getting significant amounts of sodium from the sauces you use to flavor food, says nutritionist Mary K. Sweeten. For example, soy sauce contains about 1,029 milligrams of sodium per tablespoon, one tablespoon of Teriyaki sauce contains 690 milligrams, chili sauce 227, Worcestershire sauce 206 and barbecue sauce 130 milligrams. Those people on a physician-prescribed low-sodium diet of 1,000 to 2,000 milligrams per day, should carefully select from sauces and other condiments to avoid exceeding their sodium allotment, she says.

General Telephone Expands Long-Distance Service In Wilson

General Telephone customers in Wilson will have access to several new and expanded special long-distance services beginning Feb. 5, 1986 as the result of the company's continuing network modernization program in the South Plains.

O.D. Hearn, Brownfield Operations Manger for General Telephone, said beginning as of 12:01 a.m. Feb 5, Wilson customers will have the capability to dial their own operator assisted calls, such as collect, third number billing and person-to-person, long-distance calls from coin telephones and long-distance credit card calls using GTE or AT&T credit cards.

The first step in upgrading the long-distance network for Wilson and several neighboring cities in the South Plains became a reality in early to mid-1985, Hearn explained. "At that time, General Telephone placed a state of the art digital switching center in Brownfield, the hub of General Telephone telecommunications services for the area.

"This sophisticated and versatile digital system gave customers faster, more accurate and reliable direct dialed long-distance services as calls were routed through the Brownfield switching center to destinations over the most efficient and direct route", Hearn said.

"The switching center provided modernization and enhancement of direct dialed services. However, under the U.S. District Court approved Final Judgment, or consent decree, we are not permitted to expand or modernize long-distance facilities or operator offices except where plans had been made and expenditures budgeted prior to Jan. 1, 1983," Hearn pointed out. "As a result of the decree, we were not able to modernize and offer the faster and more convenient special services from our operator center. To provide our customers with the latest and most convenient long-distance service, the Brownfield operator services functions are being transferred to the AT&T center in Lubbock," he explained.

The change will give our customers access to the latest technologies in long-distance services while also providing the capability for making available the special services of the future," Hearn said.

Hearn said Wilson customers will be able to dial their own operator assisted calls such as collect, third number billed and person-to-person by dialing 0 (zero) plus the area code if different from (806) plus the seven digit number of the distant city. The operator will come on the line temporarily to determine and perform the special assistance required. For credit card calls, the customer dials 0 plus the area code if different from (806) plus the distant number, and the operator will complete the call. Customers using credit card numbers can complete their billing procedure with the operator.

"These new service upgrades give our customer the ability to improve the speed and convenience of special service calls when those services are required," Hearn said.

PLANTING A TREE — Catherine Barham, left, director of the Tahoka Senior Citizens Center, watches Stanley Young, center, county extension agent, and at right the manager of Wolfe Nursery in Lubbock as they finish planting the pecan tree in the front lawn of the Center. Clifford Tankersley, president of the Garden Club, made a presentation to the senior citizens who were gathered. Garden clubs throughout Texas are planting a pecan tree (Texas' state tree) in observance of the Sesquicentennial, and Tahoka's Garden Club wished to donate their tree to the senior citizens. The tree was planted on Tuesday in observance of Arbor Day last Friday.

ODE TO A TREE — Mrs. Pete Smith, standing in front, read the poem "Trees" by Joyce Kilmer as the Lynn County Pioneer Club watched a pecan tree planted in the front lawn of the Sr. Citizens Center. The tree was donated by the Garden Club in commemoration of Texas' Sesquicentennial and Arbor Day.

Silver Haired Legislature Forms Available

South Plains senior citizens interested in running for the Silver Haired Legislature can pick up candidacy forms, petitions and guidelines at the South Plains Association of Governments office, 3424 Ave. H, Lubbock.

The Texas Silver Haired Legislature, established by the 69th Texas Legislature, is an elected representative non-partisan body of senior citizens elected by the senior citizens. The first Texas Silver Haired Legislature will be elected May 30 for the purpose of considering and voting on legislation that concerns the needs of older Texans.

The mock legislative session will closely resemble that of the Texas Legislature. At the close of the session the Silver Haired Legislature will select several issues which it feels are priority issues. These issues will be presented to Texas Legislators.

Four representatives to the Silver Haired Legislature will be elected from the South Plains. Interested candidates must be at least 60 years of age prior to Jan. 1, reside in the South Plains and be a registered voter in Texas.

SPAG is coordinating all Silver Haired Legislature election activities for the South Plains. The filing deadline is Feb. 28, and there is a $5 filing fee. Interested candidates can file for office by contacting Carey May, Program Specialist at SPAG, 1-800-858-1809.

To the Lynn County Stock Show Association:
How pleased and honored we were to have the 1986 Livestock Show dedicated in memory of Ray Adams. The lovely plaque will be a lasting reminder of your kindness and thoughtfulness.

This organization and the youth of this county were very special to Ray. He was truly proud of the success of the show and sale in recent years.

Thank you for sharing our joys and our sorrows through the years, and for letting a part of Ray Adams live on in Lynn County.

Dear Editor:

When they announced at the Lynn Co. Stock Show Auction that this was going to be Billy Miller's last time to be the regular auctioneer — made us stop and think.

Billy and Arnette are always willing to give of themselves to help the youth of Tahoka. They have stepped down from some of their positions in 4-H, but they are still going to give the same help, hard work, and friendship to all the kids. When you don't have kids involved anymore this takes something special and that's what Billy and Arnette are — special.

We would like to express our Thanks for all their help and hard work, and glad they are still willing to give to the youth of Tahoka.

History Of Lynn County Nears Completion

"Grassroots Upside Down," a history of Lynn County by Frank P. Hill and Pat Hill Jacobs, is nearing completion.

However, pictures are needed of settlers who came to this county 1910 and before. All three county museums are co-operating in supplying pictures, but many settlers are not represented in their collections.

If family members have such pictures are preferred that also depict their "way of life."

Pictures may be brought to Mrs. Jacobs at the home of Mrs. Frank Hill or mailed to Rt. 5, Box 162, Tahoka, 79373.

Contributors are asked to identify people in the pictures, left to right, back row first. They are also asked to write their names and addresses on backs so the pictures can be returned as soon as possible.

Advanced sale of the publication will begin in the near future.

Horace Busby.

At the general session beginning Jan. 27, J.S. Stephens, Litchfield Park, Ariz., producer, will give the invocation and Claude Buchanan, host committee chairman, New Marker, Ala; and entertainer Paul Ott will welcome member and guests to the Southeast. President Samuel B. Hollis will deliver the keynote address followed by the Council's annual report from a staff leader panel chaired by Executive Vice President Earl Sears. Sen. Thad Cochran (R-Miss.), chairman of Agricultural Appropriations subcommittee, will address the convention, and the 1985-86 Cotton Leadership Class and the 1986 Maid of Cotton Sherri Moegle will be presented to the delegates.

In the afternoon, Treasurer James H. Sanford, Prattville, Ala., will report and Cotton Research and Cotton Extension Education awards will be presented. Featured speakers will be John A Borden, executive vice president of marketing, Case IH, Racine, Wisc.; Rudi E. Scheidt, Cotton Council International president and Memphis cotton merchant; and Rep. Jerry Huckaby (D-La.), chairman of the House Cotton, Rice, and Sugar subcommittee.

The final session Jan. 28 opens with a presentation, "Building Market Share via Research and Promotion", by Tommy Funk, Cotton Board chairman, Harlingen, Tex., and Robert J. Boslet, Cotton Incorporated president, New York. Textile executive Roger Milliken will report on the Crafted With Pride/Made in U.S.A. campaign. A business session for the adoption of 1986 recommendations will close out the meeting.

LSU Researcher Wins Cotton Award: Jack E. Jones, Louisiana State University, has won the 1985 Cotton Genetics Research Award for his work to improve pest-resistant cottons, including development of varieties resistant to reinform and root-knot nematodes and nematode fungal disease complex. Jones' 34-year career at LSU has been devoted to cotton breeding and genetics. The award, presented at recent Beltwide Cotton Conferences, was established by commercial breeders in 1961 to recognize and encourage basic research in cotton genetics.

Cotton Today

Council To Convene: National Cotton Council's 48th annual meeting will kick off under the theme "Spirit of '86--American Grown, American Made" in Orlando, Fla., Jan. 26-28. Preceding the general sessions will be a series of committee meetings starting Jan. 24 at the Contemporary Resort Hotel.

Council program committees convene jointly at 8:30 a.m. Jan. 25 to hear cotton's economic outlook and then meet separately to review programs and draft 1986 recommendations. On the agenda Jan. 26 is a prayer breakfast with the Rev. James Sanford Jones, pastor of First United Methodist Church, Orlando, as speaker. In the afternoon, convention-goers are invited to attend the annual meeting of the Committee for the Advancement of Cotton and hear a report from Washington political analyst
