AS A KID growing up in Jacksboro I did a lot of playing outside, like all kids, and in the summer when school was out, we really played a lot, swimming, hunting birds, playing football and softball and all the things 12-17-yearold youngsters did in those days. Most kids had bicycles; only a few in the entire school had their own cars.

I learned to swim by walking as far out into what we called "water crossing" as I could and then swimming back. This was a creek which probably got about 10 feet deep out in the middle and there was (and still is, I think) a place where it ran across the road on a concrete spillway, usually about 6 inches deep over the road. The bottom was mostly gravel and other sharp things, and the top was mostly water moccasins and turtles, or at least it seemed that way. Sometimes we would throw rocks at the snakes to chase them back upstream so we could go in swimming there.

In those days, snakes didn't bother us; now I would only swim in those waters at gunpoint.

Among the other things peculiar to summer in that area which we considered no problem at all were heat and high humidity, chiggers, blister bugs, centipedes, stinging scorpions, yellow jackets and hand-pushed lawnmowers.

People who still live around there and in places such as Dallas, Sherman and Texarkana still aren't bothered by any of those things, possibly excepting the hand mowers. They are used to the summers with their high humidity and all the other things.

However, when one has lived in a drier climate for many years, such as we have from the Caprock westward, a visit to south or east Texas in the summer is a real challenge.

The other day we took the family to Six Flags and some other places in the Dallas area. According to those who know, it was not especially hot, only about 88 or so, with the humidity probably about the same as the temperature. When one is not acclimated to that sort of combination, he perspires profusely (sweats a lot).

At one point after walking around awhile in the amusement park, I found a bench in the shade and sat down on it. I was drenched with sweat when I first sat down, but I sat there for half an hour, in the shade, and continued to perspire. Finally a park worker made me move, as I was creating little rivers of water in the path and people passing by were slipping down and threatening to sue the park.

We have a getaway place at Lake Brownwood, and the other day a family member who had been by there said the grass in the front yard was higher than a car. We knew it had grown up, but we can't cut it during the summer. It's not the wild pigs and snakes and lions and tigers in the grass that scare us-it's the chiggers. They are camped in the grass by the zillions, ready to swarm all over anyone who approaches. When they eventually die out we plan to offer organized wild game hunts in the front yard for a few weeks; and then we may mow it down.

Of course, another summer hazard which we never had even heard of as youngsters is skin cancer. Our theory was undergone leg lengthening proce-dures at a Shriners Hospital.

For the last 30 years or so, several innovators have been developing new devices and techniques for lengthening the bones of the legs. The greatest contribution has been provided by Professor Ilizarov of Kurgan, Russia. He has refined the ring fixator, a new kind of device attached to the leg bone. This device reduces the risk of infection and improves the results of leg lengthening. According to surgeons at Shriners Hospitals nationwide, the Ilizarov technique lets surgeons achieve greater degrees of engthening, making it a reasonable option for some children who must now undergo amputation and prosthetic fitting.

Complications are reduced, and some can be avoided entirely. The bone also heals better and faster. The new leg lengthening surgery may help many children take a big step forward towards a happier, Restructuring of meats, a process now widely used by industry. nitially was tried on poultry meat in the 1940s by scientists with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

Restructuring adds value to meat by using new techniques of meat processing to convert individual muscles or pieces of of lower value into formulated products of higher value.

In beef, restructured roasts or steaks are popular items made from a variety of lower grade cuts. The trim portions are converted into products that compete with higher-priced originals.

Station scientists have used restructured meat technology to create a number of products of beef, pork and lamb muscle. These include fingers and nuggets as convenience foods, battered-breaded steakettes with glandless cottonseed flour (a natural food antioxidant which deters rancidity), and roasts made from small pieces of muscle. The products can be precooked and subsequently reheated by a microwave oven in the home.

Besides extending our supply of desirable portions of meat. restructuring has many other advantages. First, compared to its whole-muscle counterpart, a restructured roast, steak, lamb chop. ham, bacon, poultry or fish cut may be between 25 and 40 percent more economical. Second, portions of uniform size, nutritive value, texture, and palatability are feasible and highly desirable, especially for the hotel, restaurant, and institutional trade. Third, restructuring has very wide usage for pork, lamb, poultry and

Lead In Drinking Water?

High contaminations of lead in water can be serious.

Most lead in household water comes from plumbing, not the local water supply. Lead levels in drinking water are likely to be highest if your home has lead pipes or copper pipes with lead solder, if you have a water softener, if water sits in pipes for several hours, or if your home is less than five years old (mineral deposits in water form a protective coating in the pipe after that time.)

You do have some direct control over lead in your water, even though you can't see, taste or smell it when dissolved. One simple precaution, with any faucet that has not been used in six hours or more, is to "flush" the pipe by running cold water about five seconds. Use only water from the cold tap for drinking, cooking and especially making baby formula (hot water is likely to contain higher lead levels).

The only way to be sure of the amount of lead in your water is to have it tested by a certified laboratory. Testing is especially important for apartment dwellers since high-rise buildings often have lead-soldered piping.

Money and Second Marriages

Conflicts of financial interest almost always occur in a second marriage when former spouses and children are involved. The impact is usually felt when children have special needs no provided by the usual child support monies—such as braces, glasses or winter clothing.

Conflict over money in stepfamilies can be expensive and threatening unless obligations are understood and accepted from the outset. Two emotional pitfalls can lead to financial tension in a second marriage: resentment of monthly obligations to make child support payments, and resentment of the high cost of rearing children from birth to 18 years. Whether the children are yours or not, providing for them is part of the responsibility and reality of a second marriage.

Dealing with your spouse's or your own "past life" in a new marriage can be difficult at times. The less you dwell on and resist the expenses stemming from a previous marriage, the better off you'll be.

If you find it hard to put the past in its place, consider joining a self-help group (or a support group) where members are experiencing similar feelings and situations.

The Stepfamily Association of America in Baltimore is one such organization. Many communities have local affiliates or this group.

Because parenting is a lifelong obligation no matter who lives under whose roof, children need money and care. You will want to provide day-to-day care, but don't forget to provide for your children and current spouse in an up-to-date will and adequate insurance. The more complicated the family situation is, the more likely money matters will be complicated too. Families may deal us a measure of pain, but they also provide a bounty of pleasure and

America's 'Other Drug Problem' Overwhelms Thousands

Tens of thousands of older people are living in an "inhuman and needless" stupor induced by misuse or overuse of prescription drugs, medical experts told reporters last month.

⁰ "The problem of over-medication and mis-medication is so widespread that some people are calling this the nation's other drug problem," said Bryant Welch, executive director of professional practice at the American Psychological Association (APA).

Welch and others spoke at a forum convened by the APA to report new findings on this emerging drug problem affecting older people who live both alone and in nursing homes, and for those who receive adult foster care and home health care.

APA's forum came just weeks after the release of a draft government report stating that mis-medication is a "widespread problem" among America's elderly.

The report, released by the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), cited a "series of systematic weaknesses" throughout the drug delivery system. Among them: misdiagnoses by doctors, faulty prescriptions and improper use of drugs by patients.

Speakers at the APA forum said that the over-drugging problem stems in part from nursing home medication practices. Nursing home staffers sometimes use drugs that calm or induce sleep as a "chemical restraint" to keep older patients quiet and manageable.

Some nursing homes administer the wrong kind of drugs. In a study

Q. Why do persons with diabetes need diabetes education?

A. There are many diseases that must be managed using medications, surgeries, or other treatments which can only be performed by a health-care professional. Dia-

Brackenridge at home, self-monitoring of the blood sugar level, and so forth-can only be done by the person with diabetes. No one is born knowing how to do those things. Those skills must be learned. And that requires a purposeful educational effort—the person with diabetes working with a nurse, a dietitian, or other diabetes educator to learn what he or she must know to manage diabetes on a daily basis.

A diabetes educator who can help you plan and implement a comfortable and realistic program for managing your diabetes can be located of one nursing home it was found that only 36 of the 221 residents receiving drugs to treat psychosis actually had a diagnosis of psychosis.

The episode was by no means unique, as a study of residents in 12 Massachusetts nursing homes illustrated. Almost 20 percent of the residents were using two or more mind-affecting medications simultaneously, said Dr. Jerry Gurwitz, of Harvard Medical School's Division on Aging.

New federal regulations that tighten up on the use of drugs will ease the over-drugging in nursing homes somewhat. But the over-drugging problem is getting worse in situations where an older person lives at home and gets little or no medical supervision. Still other patients go from doctor to doctor demanding medicines they mistakenly think they need.

Experts at the APA forum said doctors don't conspire to drug older people. The problem is lack of knowledge. Many doctors don't realize that as people age they become more sensitive to medicines and are more subject to over-drugging, drug interactions and adverse reactions.

Doctors may also misdiagnose drug-induced confusion or depression as a symptom of "old age," and prescribe yet another drug to treat a problem caused by drugs, Gurwitz

"While 75 percent of medical schools now have courses in geriatric medicine, less than 10 percent of medical students take them," Gurwitz estimated. And less than 2 percent of practicing doctors take continuing education courses in geriatric medicine.

The consequences can be deadly. According to the HHS report, 51 percent of deaths from drug reactions in the U.S. involve people 60 or older, even though they account for only 17 percent of the population.

To remedy the national crisis of over-drugged elderly, the American Psychological Association recommended:

- Better education of doctors in geriatric medicine and the proper use of drugs for the elderly;
- use of drugs for the elderly;
 Improved regulation and supervision of drug use in nursing homes;
- A change in the Medicare system to reimburse older patients for nondrug psychological treatment such as counseling, thereby encouraging alternatives to drugs;
- Strategies to foster better understanding of drugs, health and the elderly among general practitioners, since most older patients see doctors in general practice—not psychiatrists—for mental health complaints.

1990 Conservation Plan Deadline Is Approaching, Says SCS Office

visions of the Food Security Act of 1985, discourages the production of crops on highly erodible cropland, which is not carefully protected from erosion. Farmers who continue to produce crops on such fields without an approval conservation plan, may lose eligibility for certain USDA program benefits.

To remain eligible for USDA program, benefits, farmers must develop and be actively applying a locally approved conservation plan for those highly erodible fields by Jan. 1, 1990. These plans must be fully implemented by Jan. 1, 1995.

The local SCS office can develop a plan using either the basic conservation systems or the less restrictive alternative conservation systems. The alternative conservation systems which had been available in Dawson and Terry Counties for sometime, were recently made available to Lynn County farmers.

The goal of the local SCS office is

South Plains Regional Review Committee To Meet July 12

The South Plains Regional Committee will hold an organizational meeting Wednesday, July 12 at 9 a.m. in the Board Room at South Plains Association of Governments, 1323 58th Street, Lubbock.

The purpose of the meeting is to discuss the role of the Regional Review Committee in its review of applications for community development funds, and to establish scoring criteria for that review.

The conservation compliance pro- to have contacted every producer in the county by Sept. 30, 1989, to give them an opportunity to develop a plan or decline the opportunity. The time frame between Oct. 1 and Dec. 31, 1989 will be used to rewrite plans on farms which have been reconstituted. This time will also be used to rewrite plans for producers desiring to change from the basic conservation systems to the alternative conservation systems.

With approximately 6 months left before Jan. 1, 1990 deadline there are more than 200 farm numbers which still do not have a conservation plan. Farmers who have not done so already, are encouraged to call (998-4622) or come the local SCS office to make an appointment, to have an erodibility determination made on their farms. An appointment may also be scheduled for a field visit and development of a conservation plan.

Drivers Urged To Use Caution During July 4th

The Director of the Department of Public Safety has challenged Texas drivers to show that the DPS traffic death estimate for the long July 4th period is far too high.

"The DPS Statistical Services bureau has indicated that as many as 52 persons could be killed on Texas roadways during these hours," Colonel Joe Milner said. "But the number will be lower if more drivers will slow down, avoid drinking alcohol and use a well-known safety precaution-seat belts."

Col. Milner mentioned that the

'Carelessness' Leads To Lawn Mower Accidents

"Carelessness" is the main factor in the more than 50,000 people injured each year in accidents involving power lawn mowers.

Proper mower servicing, observing standard operating precautions, and picking up rocks and other objects from the lawn prior to mowing will help eliminate most accidents. The lawn mower should be routinely serviced before each use. A properly operating mower is safer to use and performs better than one in poor shape.

Routine service includes sharpening the blade, checking the blade to be sure if is securely attached to the shaft, and checking the crankcase oil level in 4-cycle engines.

Always disconnect the spark plug wire before examining the blade. The condition of the blade is critical to the mower's operation and safety. Remove, sharpen and balance the blade several times during the mowing season. Replace damaged blades.

Service the caburetor air cleaner and change the crackcase oil after every 25 hours of operation, or the manufacturer's recommendation. Also, clean the mower after each use to reduce rust and corrosion and to prevent overheating, both of which reduced the life of the mower. Cleaning the mower regularly will extend its life and will also aid in detecting worn or broken parts before they cause extensive damage.

Also, remember that safety devices such as engine cut-offs and discharge shields are there for your protection. Do Not remove or bypass these devices. If they are broken, get them fixed. Your safety and the safety of bystanders depend on

Before mowing, scout the lawn closely and remove any objects that might be picked up by the mower

While operating the mower, follow these precautions:

-Never allow children to play in the area where you are mowing since the blade can pick up and throw rocks and other objects.

-Avoid mowing up and down slopes-always mow across the slope to prevent slipping under the mower housing.

-Always push rather than pull the

-Never leave a mower running while unattended.

-When starting the mower, put your foot on its housing to pull the starter cord. Caution and common sense will prevent most lawn mower-related accidents. That means keeping your lawn mower in good condition and using good judgment.

Counterfeit Coupons Bring Indictments

On June 21, a Federal Grand Jury at Lubbock handed down a twentyfour count Indictment charging ten individuals with mail fraud and/or conspiracy to commit mail fraud. This multi-state conspiracy involved the counterfeiting of manufacturers' rebates and coupons in San Antonio and the sale of them in the States of California, Michigan, Arkansas, Tennessee, Pennsylvania, Florida and Texas.

The scheme was described as the handiwork of David George Rackmill of Stamford, Tx., dba C&D, 281 Judge Ely Blvd., Suite 7000 Abilene, Tx. It involved 90 different coupons valued between $1 and $10.89 each, issued by 47 separate manufacturers. Over 600,000 coupons were counterfeit, with a potential loss of more than $2 million. A spokesperson from the Coupon Information Center (an organization of the 13 largest companies using coupons) stated that this scheme impacts the public since manufacturers pass these additional costs on to the consumer via higher prices. David Rackmill was advertising the sale of these manufacturers' coupons in his monthly business flyers which he mailed to over 600 people nationwide. Those coupons would then be sold, traded or redeemed for food, health and household products. Assistant U.S. Attorney Steven Sucsy of Lubbock who is handling the case, stated that the scheme has been in effect since June,

On June 8, 1989, six search warrants and two consent searches were executed by Postal Inspectors in the above-mentioned states, and evidence was seized relating to this nationwide scheme to defraud 48 manufacturers.

Milner also indicated that his agency offers competitive salaries. "The Texas Legislature recently authorized a five percent increase in salaries for state employees, including the commissioned and noncommissioned personnel of the DPS. This action will increase the pay for trooper-trainees to $1,622.00 per month.
