Tahoka Teenager Spends Year In Adelaide, Australia

BY JUANELL JONES

Tiffany Huffaker, 18 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Huffaker of Tahoka, returned to Tahoka High School this week for the first time since last January, to finish her senior year and graduate with her friends. She spent almost a year in Australia as an exchange student, living with a family there and attending school.

Tiffany said it all began about two years ago, when she saw an advertisement on television which hooked her interest in the student exchange program. She called the number listed on the advertisement and thought about it for quite some time before she approached her parents about the idea. "Dad didn't think I would do it," she recalls, "and I don't think Mom really thought I would go through with it, either."

But Tiffany remained adamant about her intentions, and she and her parents contacted Youth For Understanding, which is a national youth exchange agency, and filled out the necessary forms to initiate Tiffany into the program. The agency conducted interviews with Tiffany, and began searching for a family who would take the blonde American teenager into their home.

Tiffany knew from the first that she wanted to go to Australia. "It's just a place I always wanted to visit, and our family never got the opportunity to go," she said. "I thought it would be fun to go there, plus the fact that Australia is an English-speaking country appealed to me."

Tiffany left Lubbock on Jan. 16, 1990 with a group of 56 exchange students on their way to Australia and New Zealand. They flew to Dallas, and then made stopovers at El Paso, Phoenix, Los Angeles and Hawaii before crossing the ocean to Sydney, Australia, then to Melbourne, and finally to Tiffany's destination, Adelaide, Australia. There, she met the family with whom she would be staying for the next 11 months, Gary and Tanya Plane and their three-month-old daughter, Samantha.

She says she really enjoyed the family she lived with, noting that the couple was "really young, more like a big brother and sister to me, than living with parents."

Tiffany was enrolled in school, entering what the Australians term "Year 11", as she was a junior at Tahoka High School that year. "School was extremely hard," she said. "I really hated going to school there. They age much more advanced in their studies, and there are no school sports or team sports, no coaches or cheerleaders or other such activities. Any sports that were conducted were strictly after school, and not in connection with the school like it is here," she explained.

The school did have classes such as home economics, and offered activities such as the debating club, and the "bush walking" club, which Tiffany was a member of. "The bush walking club was fun, kind of like a nature club. We went bush walking (like hiking), camping and canoeing and other activities," she said. "I had to wear a uniform to go to school, but the school I went to was pretty lenient. As long as we wore something navy blue, and black shoes, we were okay. Lots of other schools had a much stricter dress code," she recalled.

School in Australia is conducted year-round, with students attending for ten weeks, followed by two weeks off, and then repeating the schedule. "The only real break is about a month off at Christmas," Tiffany said. When students finish their twelfth year of school, there is no cap and gown ceremony to commemorate the accomplishment. "They don't make a big deal of it, nothing like what we do here," said Tiffany. "The students just graduate and leave school," she added.

Tiffany made many friends during her stay in Australia. "Australians love Americans," she said. "Everything there is basically American - the music, the clothes and fashions - except that they drive on the wrong side of the road." She said she will probably keep in touch with a couple of her friends there, and that her best friend was another exchange student from Canada which she met there.

Currency in Australia is in dollars and cents, but the exchange rate from American dollars to Australian dollars, is high. "A U.S. dollar is worth more than an Australian dollar, maybe about $1.10 or so," said Tiffany. "The $1 and $2 currency are in coins, and the paper money that I saw - $5, $10, $20 and $50 - are in rainbow colors, with no particular color assigned to one bill. A $5 and a $10 could be the same color, and come in several different colors," she explained. "I thought something that was neat was that some of the $10 bills are plastic," she added. She also thought that items were more expensive there than in the United States.

Tiffany's parents and sister, Gerald, Linda and Christy, came to visit her in Australia during the middle of the year. "We went to Cairns, an area of tropical forest, and went scuba diving, sailing and snorkeling on the Great Barrier Reef," said Tiffany. She said the weather was hot and humid, with the hottest month in February, and during the summer months it is cold and rainy, "a lot like England."

Tiffany returned to the United States on Dec. 18, 1990, and was met at the Lubbock airport by her family and several of her friends. She waited until the new semester began at school this week before taking up her studies again. She said her credits would transfer from Australia, and that she will graduate this year, and that her schooling had been discussed and planned before she ever left for Australia.

If she had the chance, would she do it all over again? "Yes, I would," came the definite answer. "I'm glad I took the opportunity," she concluded.

Other class winners included Carrie Taylor's light Hampshire; Jason Belew O.P.B.s; Curtis Erickson, light Cross; and Clay Taylor, heavy Cross.

Contract Of Tahoka Supt. Carter Extended

Dr. Duane Carter, superintendent of Tahoka schools, was voted a three-year extension on his contract in the top job of Tahoka Independent School District, as the school board met last Thursday evening.

Dr. Carter, who moved into the superintendent's job in 1987, was granted a 4 per cent increase in salary in January 1989 when he was given a two-year contract extension. Last Thursday's vote showing support for the superintendent was unanimous by the school board, and also included another 4 per cent raise. This brings Dr. Carter's annual salary to $45,427.

School board president Delbert McCleskey presided, and board members attending were Thalia Burks, Clint Gardner, Brad Hammonds, Richard Lopez, Gary McCord and Nedra Young.

Dr. Ed Flathouse and Leigh Miers of the Education Service Center in Lubbock were present to tell the board about a grant which has been approved and which will allow the ESC to present programs in six rural school districts, "targeting the at-risk students and their families."

Repair of the elementary school gymnasium ceiling and new lighting for the gym was authorized by the board.

Two school policies, including one related to use of school facilities, were approved. Also approved were substitute teachers Beth Askew, Della Swartz and Karen Sue Diggs and a letter of commendation from the board to the junior and senior high teaching staff for recent achievements by students on tests. Kimberly Mercer was employed as a second grade teacher for three months, for a new section intended to alleviate crowded conditions in the second grade.

Bookkeeper Loretta Tekell reported that the 1990 tax roll collection was 64.4 per cent complete.

Dr. Carter announced that a set of guidelines to be used in teaching sex education in Tahoka schools would be formulated by the administration and teachers. He also reported on a recent break-in at the school, that enrollment totaled 693, and that one bad weather day had been used because of recent icy conditions.

The wayward thoughts of Juanell (Wood) Jones

It was a routine, everyday thing. I was just trying to do my Christian duty by performing a very small task ... well, what was supposed to have been a very small task. But it turned out to be one of those tiny little problems that mushroom and grow into this horrendous conglomeration of a mess - you know, that kind that God periodically throws my way just to keep me humble and to keep his angels entertained.

My task was this: pick up the church van, drive it to school and wait for the kids to board, drive them to their 'Kids for Christ' (KCs) program at someone's home, then return the van to the church. It was such a simple little task, that I didn't really give it much thought. God, however, seemed to want my attention that day.

It was a cold and dreary day, with a misty rain falling in occasional spurts. I left the office 30 minutes before I was due to pick up the kids, so as to allow myself plenty of time to coax the contrary church van into starting. I was in good humor at the time. Following is a time lapse of the events which reduced me to a pathetic, mumbling mass of semi-active cells:

2:30 p.m.: I approached the church, humming a catchy little tune, and went to the church office to ask for the van keys. I gave a cheerful hello to the secretary, who was expecting me, but she immediately started shaking her head. "I already tried to start the van," she said, "but I'm pretty sure the battery is down. I can't get it started." Oh. I asked for the keys anyway, and said I would try. She gave me a look that said, "Yeah. Sure. This is the girl who is so mechanically inclined that she works on her refrigerator by giving it dirty looks."

2:35 p.m.: I am seated in the church van. I pump the gas and turn on the key. "Rur rur rur ... rur rur ... rur." The battery is dead. I look up at the secretary, who is standing at the door and looking out at me, shaking her head and grinning. I jump out, shut the door, and stroll nonchalantly back to the church. "The battery is dead," I tell her.

2:40 p.m.: We call another church in town, and ask to borrow their van. "Sure, no problem," we're told. "Just come pick up the key." I give a jaunty wave to the secretary and head outside. It has started to drizzle a cold misty rain. I turn up my collar and dash for the car.

2:45 p.m.: The mist has turned into a slow rain. I dash into the other church secretary's office, and she has the van keys ready for me. "Just go in the side door of the garage, it's not locked," she instructs me. I dash back to my car, and drive around to the garage. The slow rain has increased to a full-fledged freezing fallout. "Great," I mutter to myself. Hurrying now, I run to the side door, grasp the doorknob, and turn ... try to turn ... "Oh, wonderful," I said through gritted teeth. The door was locked. I could feel my hair starting to plaster to the sides of my face and cold water trickling down my collar. I turned and ran for the back door of the church parsonage, where I pounded none too gently until the preacher's wife came hurrying back. "I need the keys to the garage," I tell her, hoping she doesn't notice my hairdo. "Oh, I'm sorry, I don't have them. You'll have to go back to the church office and get them. I'm sorry," she said. She's very apologetic. "Okay," I said, trying to smile but feeling like it came off as a grimace instead. She watched me pityingly as I ran through the rain back to my car.

2:48 p.m.: I stand dripping inside the door of the church office, and the secretary is apologizing. "That door is not supposed to be locked," she says, looking at me guiltily as she hands me the key. "That's quite alright, I understand how these things happen," I mutter. She can hear me squishing hurriedly down the hall.

2:50 p.m.: I am inside the garage. It's pitch dark in there, and I feel my way around the van until I get to the driver's side. By way of feel, I find the garage door opener and punch it until the door raises. "Well, finally," I say to myself. "With a little light, I can get this thing started and still get to the school before 3:00." I turn the key, and the engine catches. I almost ... but not quite ... smile, and then put the van in reverse. The engine dies. "Oh, please oh please oh please," I beg the engine (that's how I fix automotive things). It starts up again, and I sit there a couple of minutes letting the engine run.

2:53 p.m.: I'm on my way to school. I am shivering uncontrollably from cold wet hair and damp clothes, but the van seems to be running okay. I notice the rain has diminished into a fine mist.

2:57 p.m.: I am at the last stop sign a block away from the school, waiting for the car in front of me to turn. As it turns, I pull up to the sign and stop ... and stay. The engine has died. "Oooh ... you ... you ... don't do this to me," I wall softly. The cars are stacking up behind me impatiently. I roll down my window and motion for them to go around. They do so, giving me piteous looks (I don't know if it's because the van has stalled, or because I look so awful). "Oh God, please don't do this to me," I pray. "I need to get to the school so the kids won't think I've forgotten them." God takes pity on me, and the van starts.

2:59 p.m.: I pull into a parking space at the school, and slump back in relief. The bell rings and I collect about 20 fifth and sixth grade students, plus my two children. I try to be nice to them all, and hope the girls don't say anything about the way I look. Once more, God takes pity on me, and no one says anything about my spiky blond hair sticking out all over my head. My six year old daughter, however, is looking at me strangely.

3:10 p.m.: After we're sure no one else is wanting to get on the van, I back out and head for our destination about eight blocks away. After four blocks, the engine sputters and dies. "Great. We're dead," I say. At this point, I am thinking some very un-Christian thoughts. Twenty back-seat drivers clamor to have my attention, each one telling me how I should drive the van, ranging from "You got to gun it after you stop" to "gee, don't you know how to drive". My lip curls and my hands clench on the steering wheel. My son, who doesn't understand car lingo, wants to know who died.

3:12 p.m.: God in heaven, who must be having a high ol' time with his angels at my expense, finally gives me pardon and the van starts. I deliver the kids to their destination, and tell them to "have fun". "We will," they holler as they climb all over each other trying to get out.

3:13 p.m.: I am alone in the van with my two children, trying to gather my wits to leave the driveway. "Who died, Mom?" my son is still asking. "Nobody, yet," I said in disgust. I am about to leave the driveway to return the van to the church, when one of the kids comes running back out of the house with refreshments for the three of us to take with us. "She just wanted you to have this, and say thanks for driving the van," he said, speaking of the woman who has the KCs program. I tell him thanks.

3:30 p.m.: I am at home, after delivering the van back to the garage, and the keys back to the church office. I munch on the refreshments we were given, and consider my day. "How long til we do this again?" asked my son. "Two weeks," I reply. I have two weeks to recover. My spirits, however, are rising. After all, it couldn't possibly get any worse than this ... could it?

FISH OIL vs. CANCER

Fish oil is known to reduce blood cholesterol levels, thereby reducing the risks of coronary heart attack and stroke; also it may benefit rheumatoid arthritis patients. New tests indicate fish oil also inhibits the growth of cancer of the pancreas, and may stop the growth of secondary tumors which have spread to other body parts. These tests are preliminary, but encouraging.

One Burglary Is Reported

One burglary was investigated by the Lynn County Sheriff's Dept. during the last week. Bobbie June Kreger reported that her home about a mile and three-quarters southwest of New Home had been burglarized Monday. Stolen were two videocassette recorders, one a Sanyo and one Panasonic. Total value of the recorders was estimated at $450.

In jail during the week were 7 persons, including two for driving while intoxicated; another was charged with DWI plus resisting arrest. One suspect was jailed for theft by check, one for DWI second offense and one for driving while license suspended.

No reports of activity by the Tahoka Police Dept. were available from the department Wednesday morning.

Deadline Extended For Stories For Lynn County History Book

Deadline for submitting stories for the Lynn County Family History Book has been extended to Feb. 1. Due to the many requests from persons wanting to write stories during the holidays when families are together, the committee and publisher agreed to the later deadline.

More people are needed - New and Old- in Lynn County to participate by writing their stories so that there will be a full and comprehensive history book. That means each and every family has a vital part to play in making the history book a project a success.

Several hundred stories have been submitted, but more are needed. If you are thinking because you are a newcomer to the county this project excludes you, you are mistaken. The most recent newcomer has something unique to contribute to the book.

1991 will be the "olden days" in just a few short years. Young families of today are very much a necessary part of the Lynn County History, if it is to be complete.

One does not need professional help to write a family story. The one that is of the most interest now and in generations to come is the story told in simple style—the way parents tell their children of their life.

If possible, type stories, double space, and limit each to 500 words or less. One picture may accompany each story. There is a small charge for additional words or pictures.

The book project, sponsored by the Phebe K. Warner Club, is not a money making project. The purpose of the project is simply to document and preserve the heritage and family histories of Lynn County.

Emergency Farm Loan Applications Being Accepted

Applications for emergency farm loans for losses caused by drought and excessive heat during 1990 crop year are being accepted at the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) office located in Tahoka, County Supervisor Curtis Barlow said.

Lynn County is one of 60 in Texas recently named by Sec. of Agriculture Clayton Yeutter as eligible for loans to cover part of actual production losses resulting from the drought and excessive heat during 1990.

Barlow said farmers may be eligible for loans of up to 80 percent of their actual losses or the operating loan needed to continue in business or $500,000, whichever is less. For farmers unable to obtain credit from private commercial lenders, the interest is 4.5 percent.

"As a general rule, a farmer must have suffered at least 30 percent loss of production to be eligible for an FmHA emergency loan," Barlow said. Farmers participating in the PIK or Federal Crop Insurance program will have to figure in proceeds from those programs in determining their loss.

"Applications for loans under this emergency designation will be accepted until Aug. 26, 1991, but farmers should apply as soon as possible. Delays in applying could create backlogs in processing and possibly over into the new farming season," Barlow said.

The FmHA office in Tahoka is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Irrigation Conference Tackles Issues Of Water, Chemical Use

Agricultural producers will hear about the political issues concerning irrigation water use as well as the newest irrigation technologies at the South Plains Irrigation and Water Management Conference and Trade Show in Lubbock today (Thursday, Jan. 17).

The general session held in the morning will focus on the effects of federal and state policies on agricultural water and chemical use. Afternoon sessions will concern increasing efficiency of water use and farm profitability with appropriate irrigation techniques and practices.

The Conference and Trade Show will open at 9 a.m. at the Lubbock Plaza Hotel on South Loop 289. The cost of the conference will be $15 which includes lunch.

Environmental issues in the 1991 Farm Bill, the new Texas Water Plan, underground water conservation districts' powers and affecting public perception of agricultural chemical use are the topics concerning policy making. Leon New, an agricultural engineer and irrigation specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service will present an overview of advances in irrigation technology.

An afternoon session will consist of four professionals and several farmers discussing LEPA irrigation and chemigation with center pivots. A concurrent session will discuss irrigation technologies affecting farm profitability. This session will deal with other forms of irrigation such as surge irrigation and drip irrigation for field crops.

The conference is being sponsored by the High Plains, Sandy Land and Mesa Underground Water Conservation Districts as well as the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Speakers at the conference include Joe Pat Henson, with the Soil Conservation Service; Bob Thurman, with American Cyanamid; Wayne Wyatt, manager of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District; Jerry Funck, agricultural engineer for the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District and others with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

It seems that almost everybody is eager to practice medicine. Mention having an ailment of any kind and everyone from helpful friends to advertising medicine men offer a treatment. They are like the blind leading the blind.

The fallacy of amateurs is that they only treat symptoms of sickness, not the cause. Only a physician has the knowledge to diagnose what is causing the trouble. The physician prescribes the particular medicine his long studies and experience decides is best. That is why prescriptions are more effective than over the counter medicines. Klaus Trains For Retirement System

Carolyn Klaus of Wilson recently attended the Professional Services Group of America, Inc. (PSG) school in Allentown, Pennsylvania for the Aegis retirement system. Klaus, associated with Dominion, an investment and insurance practice in Lubbock, is now one of only two people in the West Texas area qualified and contracted to involve people in the Aegis retirement system.

PSG is currently working with the Internal Revenue Service to acquire even more favorable tax rulings relating to the Aegis retirement system. Alexander Hamilton Life Insurance Company has enthusiastically endorsed the system and is promoting it nationwide. The system permits substantial tax breaks for the involved individual.

The Texas State Board of Insurance requires continuing education hours for each life insurance agent but the Aegis school was education above those requirements for Klaus.

GRADY L. THOMPSON Tahoka Man Competes In Field Meet

BY JOY CALDWELL
SAN DIEGO—Seaman Recruit Grady L. Thompson of Tahoka helped lead his team to victory in a recent field meet between Navy and Marine recruits.

Navy outscored the Marines in the majority of the events, clearly winning the meet.

The field meet was the first interservice event between the Naval Training Center San Diego and the Marine Corps Recruit Depot San Diego, and was designed to encourage teamwork between the services.

Thompson, the 18-year-old son of Fred and Linda Chesley also of Tahoka, competed in the stretcher relay event. According to Thompson, it's important for the sailors and Marines to interact with each other.

"It's important for us to interact with each other now, because we'll be working together in the fleet," said Thompson.

During the field meet, teams competed in tugs-of-war, relay races and other athletic events.

While Navy and Marine Corps jobs differ, each complements the other. Aboard aircraft carriers and amphibious assault ships, sailors and Marines routinely work side-by-side. Ashore, Navy medical personnel are frequently assigned to Marine Corps units.

"Young sailors and Marines learn teamwork from competitions like this," said Thompson. "In the Middle East, both branches will be relying on each other. In this crisis, without teamwork, we could do more harm than good."

EH Council Meets In Quarterly Session

The Extension Homemaker Council met for one of their quarterly meetings on Jan. 9 in the SPS Reddy Room. Carolyn Botkin, president, guided the members through the business session.

Members reported on yearbook committees, club reports, and on the Christmas party. Extension Homemakers agreed to pay the $2 entry fee for all 4-H, FFA, and FHA members who enter the Baked Goods Division at the Lynn County Junior Livestock Show. A cash prize will also be donated to the Grand and Reserve Champion baked items in that contest. Two tours will be planned by County Extension Agent, Donna M. Peters, for Extension Homemaker participation. Tours will be in the spring and late summer. New business also included arrangements for the concession stand to be conducted during the Livestock Show.

Vicki Ashbrook, TEHA Chairman (Texas Extension Homemakers Assn.), conducted the TEHA meeting. Reports were given from the state meeting which was held in Amarillo. Vicki reminded members to prepare reports about club activities for other reports to the state officers. New business included the District TEHA Training Meeting to be held in Lubbock on Jan. 29. Vicki Ashbrook and Alicia Curry will represent Lynn County at this meeting.

Members were adjourned for the leader training session conducted by Donna Peters. Topic of the leader training was "What is Your G.Q. (geography quotient)." 100 percent of the council members were in attendance for the meeting. Members include: Sheri Gickhorn, Carolyn Botkin, Alicia Curry, Winnie Spruiell, Sherri Craig, Vicki Ashbrook, Pat Park, Charlsie Tekell, Clifford Tankersley, Lahru Tippi. Chris Ashbrook was at the meeting. The next meeting will be held on March 6 in the SPS Reddy Room.

West Point HE Club Has Meeting

Lahru Tippi hosted members of the West Point Extension Homemakers at their monthly meeting on Thursday, Jan. 10. Business conducted included assignments for the approaching concession stand held at the Lynn County Junior Livestock Show. Hostesses were selected for the 1991 meetings. Dues of $2 were paid for the year.

The program, "Surviving The New Year" was presented by Lynn County Extension Agent, Donna M. Peters. The main topic was defining depression, causes of depression and different treatment alternatives. Donna is available to present this or another program to other groups within the county.

Members attending the meeting included: Lura May Gaither, Jean Pate, Pat Park, Winnie Spruiell, Clifford Tankersley, and Lahru Tippi. The next meeting of the West Point Extension Homemakers Club will be Feb. 7 with Winnie Spruiell as hostess.
