City To Seek Grant For Police Computer Setup

The City of Tahoka will seek a grant from the State Justice Dept. for funding of a computer network setup with two work stations for the Tahoka Police Dept., it was voted by the city council at Monday night's regular meeting:

About $12,000 would be needed for the setup which would be primarily for record-keeping purposes in the department, according to City Manager Barry Pittman.

In other action Monday evening, the council voted to reject the only bid received for purchase of five city lots just west of the old cemetery.

County History Book To Have Special Pages

Lynn County organizations are invited to share their history with the Lynn County History Book being compiled as a non-profit project of the Phebe K. Warner Club.

"You are justly proud of your organization, of the public good it has done and of the service it has rendered in improving the quality oflife in Lynn County," said a club representative. "Your fellow townspeople are also proud of you. Tell about your work. Make a permanent record of the date and circumstances of the founding of your club, of the club's purpose and of its achievements. You may want to memorialize a former member or honor a living member."

The church history section is open to all churches in the county. The book has been described as an economical way to document and preserve the history, record the growth, note the many activities and opportunities provided by the membership.

All church histories will be featured in a special section of the book. Pictures of former and present buildings add interest to any history.

Every business in the county is urged to reserve space now to tell their history in the forthcoming book. "New and old businesses have a story to tell because they all are important to the county's growth," said the club spokeswoman. Stories may include how, when and why a business was started. Other interesting ideas include charges experi> and family involvement. City governments will also be featured in the special section. Three of the four towns in Lynn County already have purchased space and will receive recognition, she said.

Clubs, churches, organizations, government agencies and businesses who have not submitted their material may still do so. Space may be purchased at $245 for a full page, $160 for a half page, or $90 for a quarter page.

More information is available from Mary Belew, 998-4046; Betsy Pridmore at 998-4640; or Loretta Tekell, 998-5040. Material may be mailed to Lynn County History Book, Box 296, Tahoka, Texas 79373.

local lodge, said an open invitation is extended to anyone interested in learning more about Masonry and what Masons do.

He noted that Fred E. Allen of Mt. Pleasant, Grand Master of the 180.000-member Masonic Grand Lodge of Texas, has defined the intent of the "showcase" open house event as being "to put Masonry on display so anyone interested can see for themselves what Masons do and have a better understanding of what Masonry is all about.'

Printed cards will give brief explanations of more significant points of interest about the lodge room, including some of the more prominent symbols utilized in Masonry to teach Masonic philosophy. Best known of these symbols are the square and compasses, which identify members of the craft, together with other tools of the medieval stonemasons..builders of the great Gothic Cathedrals.

Allen explained that to the three and one half million Masons in the U.S., these symbols are reminders of a Mason's duty to live by highest moral standards, to practice brotherly love, and to affirm loyalty to his country. He said Masons believe that the quality of a man's life should reflect his faith in God and his ethical ideals. . .

Style Show Set For Next Thursday

Tahoka Chamberettes will sponsor a Spring Style Show next Thursday, March 14 in the fellowship hall of the First United Methodist Church of Tahoka. The show and luncheon will be held from 12:00-1:00 p.m. and admission will be $5 per person.

Chamberettes will prepare and serve a salad luncheon, and door prizes will be given.

Clothing and accessories will be shown from Jennings of Tahoka, Tahoka Daisy, and The Mirror. Jewelry from Parker Pharmacy and Jewelry will be displayed, also.

Theme of the show will be "Hats, Hats, Hats!" with hat collections displayed on tables.

BOARD TO MEET Wilson School board will meet in regular session at 8 p.m. next Thursday, March 14.

Allen declared an overall objective is to help dispel the misconception many people have that Masonry is a secret society. He pointed out "Masonry does not canceal its existence, principles or aims. Members proudly we'd the square and com-. passes and other Masonic insignia, and Lodge buildings are well identified and often made available for appropriate community activities."

Masons collectively provide over S2 million a day and thousands of hours of service donated to worthy causes, including over $750 million every year for charitable activities.

It was further pointed out, that while Masons do not solicit members, men of good character may ask to become members.

Members of Tahoka Masonic Lodge and other associated Masonic bodies will be on hand to answer questions during the public open house. Lodge 1041 has about 100 members, Williams said, and meets on the first Tuesday of each month.

Woodwork... by Dalton

A GROUP of volunteer painters met in "work nights" at a home last week, and I was one of the volunteers, having been volunteered by my wife. Ability to paint was not a prerequisite for the volunteer team, which puts more emphasis on willingness.

It was not the first time I have attempted indoor painting, but I don't seem to be getting a lot better at it. I don't really get a big bang out of the actual painting, but I do enjoy standing back and looking over the finished project, and admiring how much better it looks than it did before.

As a team member, I volunteered for the job of standing back and looking over the work that the others did, but they wouldn't let me do that.

We all got a lot of paint on ourselves, some of which probably will be there for a week or two. I suggested that we may have created a new race of people: there are white people, black people and brown people, and now there are spotted people. Our first order of business is to create a NAASP.

I also dropped some paint on the carpet, despite having it covered with a drop cloth most of the time. It was then I was reminded that no matter how lousy a job you do, you can't get fired if you're an unpaid volunteer. You can get a lot of verbal abuse, however.

One secret of volunteer work is to do the worst job you can, so nobody will want you to volunteer next time.

FOR LENT, I have decided to give up cigarettes, whiskey, cross-country running and broccoli (another area of agreement for me and President Bush).

The wayward thoughts of Juanell (Wood) Jones

It was a Saturday afternoon. I was on my knees with my head bowed and hands held out, muttering softly. My friend leaned over to hear what I was saying ... "Hiyaya hiyayaya" I was repeating in soft singsong voice. I looked up and grinned at her.

"What on earth are you doing?" she asked me. "I'm part of the ancient bathtub worshipping tribe," I told her with a serious face. "This is what we do."

We were both kneeling, as a matter of fact, in her bathroom. She was squashed in between the toilet and the wall, and I was squatting in the tub (fully dressed in tattered sweat pants and paintspattered t-shirt). She had her back to the wall, and I had my hands and head to the wall, both of us leaning for all we were worth. We were putting up new wallboard in her bathroom, which seemed like a good idea until we actually got into the project.

We had spread glue on the wall and were trying to get the wallboard to adhere, pressing the wall to make it nice and flat, like it was supposed to be. Supposed to, that is. We were feeling slightly silly. partly due to the aroma of the glue in the small enclosed area, partly due to the fact that we had been working all afternoon on the project, and partly because we're kind of silly in the first place. I bet if you squatted in your tub, and a friend of yours crawled around between the toilet and the wall, and you looked at each other, you'd laugh too. Also, we looked a fright - we had painted the upper portion of the wall first, and had blue paint splattered here and there and yonder. Some of the glue we had used was stuck on our hands and various other portions of our anatomy. Our hair stuck out in every direction; and we were streaked with dirt from the wallboard, which we had laid on her driveway to cut on that windy, dusty day. We were gorgeous, all right. I don't think our husbands would have recognized us at the end of the day, except for the fact that our children unerringly picked out their mothers behind the mess.

It was truly a day to forget uh, remember. Our children were running wild, enjoying the freedom they had while their mothers were stuck in the bathroom. Our husbands checked on us occasionally, I guess just to see if we had asphyxiated from the glue (or maybe they were astounded at how truly awful we looked).

In all fairness, I must say that my husband did help us some. I asked him to come help get the faucets off the wall over the bathtub, not mentioning that we also needed him to take the sink and the toilet off the other wall. We thought we'd surprise him with that. My friend, who claimed that this was actually her husband's bathroom, and not hers, was very grateful to my husband. She said she didn't mind making me work all day, but hated to ask him to. Her husband, by the way, was working all day. Sure. Very convenient.

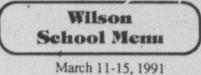

Well, we worked and worked. We measured and sawed and into a nice warm bubblebath, and eventually hobbled into bed. Everything on my body hurt. My hands ached, my head hurt, my feet hurt, and I'm pretty sure even my teeth, eyes, ears, elbows and belly button hurt. I hoped I would never have to get up again.

However, God in His ultimate wisdom let the next day dawn as usual and I was forced to get up. After a while, I worked up enough courage to call my friend and ask her when she wanted to start working on her project again. "Come over anytime," she replied cheerily. She bribed me with the promise of an ice cream sundae when we finished. So I went. She knows my soft spot. (Actually, after eating millions of ice cream sundaes throughout the years, I have lots of soft spots).

To end this story - Yes, we did finish it. It looks wonderful. I told her we should have a bathroom party, but she didn't go for it. I thought it was a great idea ... we could make everybody kneel in the tub and chant "Hiyayaya hiyayayaya." It would be the talk of the town. Call for party reserva-glued and leaned and giggled the day away, and when our husbands came to the house at 8 o'clock that night, we were really dragging. Also, we weren't finished. They decided (with a little persuasion from us) to take us all to the Dairy Queen for a bite to eat.

So we all drove out there, and the two husbands ushered in a very motley crew ... the four kids bounded out of the car, each looking like he or she hadn't seen soap or water in at least four days, shoe laces dragging, dirty tee-shirts sagging over even dirtier shorts and jeans ... and two very tired, disheveled, and let's face it, just downright awful-looking mothers. I'm surprised they let us in. We hoped we wouldn't see anyone we knew.

We were wrong. Several people came in whom we knew. They had just been to a wedding. A wedding. Yeah ... they looked very nice. They asked discreetly if we had been working hard. My friend and I tried to smile at them before we sank down in the booth, hiding behind our husbands, who looked like they couldn't decide whether to act like they knew us or not.

After we ate, we went home, deciding to finish the wallboard job Sunday afternoon. I crawled of the essential elements of plant growth. Below average precipitation years, has led to a renewed interest in supplemental irrigation. Supplemental Irrigation to be effective, should be applied in a planned manner. Applying irrigation water in a planned manner is what irrigation water management is all about.

The key to high crop yields is to begin the crop year with the root zone (top four-foot zone) of the soil profile at field capacity. Then replacing the amounts utilized by the plants though supplemental irrigations, as the profile is depleted throughout the growing season.

At this time of the year, irrigation water management entails determining the quantity of water in storage in the four-foot-zone and the number of inches of water which will need to be added to fill the plant root zone. This can be done by augering several holes in the field and observing the

It is recognized that water is one soil moisture content at one-foot intervals. The local SCS office has a Water Management Note, "Estimaton the South Plains, the last three ing Soil Moisture By Feel and Appearance", available to help producers estimate the percentage of moisture in the soil.

> Once a producer determines how much water must be applied to bring all four-foot root zone of the soil profile to field capacity, it is not recommended that he apply all of the. water needed in one irrigation. It is recommended instead that about half of the water be applied. This will leave some storage capacity in the soil profile for any precipitation which might occur, prior to planting time. After the first irrigation is made, the producer should wait a few days and then go back and do the auger soil moisture test. This will determine the depth of soil moisture and its uniformity. If planting time nears without precipitation, then a second irrigation is recommended to finish filing the soil profile. The second irrigation-should be applied allowing ample time for the top few inches, to dry out enough to allow planting the crop.

After the crop emerges, irrigation water management comes down to five basic questions: How much moisture can be utilized by the plants (is available to the plants)? How much moisture is being used by the crop? When should I irrigate? How much should I irrigate? and How much am I usually putting down? To help answer these questions irrigators should visit the local SCS office to get assistance with their water management.

The local SCS office can provide locally developed Fact Sheets, Water, Management Notes, and Crop Coefficient to help irrigators arrive at estimates of how much water a particular soil profile holds, how much of the soil is available to the plant's roots and how much water the crop is using. Information is also available on the different irrigation management schemes which irrigators can use, to obtain maximum benefit from limited water supplies.

Regardless of the management schemes used, the irrigator needs a reliable means of determining how much water is being applied and how much is present in the profile. The local SCS personnel will be available as much as possible to assist irrigators perform well evaluations, measure well outputs, and install soil moisture monitoring devices. Visit your local SCS office to obtain more information on irrigation water management.

Cotton Belles EH Have Meeting

The Cotton Belles Extension Homemakers Club met Tuesday, March 5, at First Baptist Church, Tahoka. Sheri Craig, president, reported the Fabric Sale was very successful and took care of general business.

Vicki Ashbrook brought the program on "Cultural Arts". Many of the club members will be entering their art in the exhibit for the District Meet, April 20. These items will also be judged.

The purpose of the Cultural Arts program is to establish a broader understanding and awareness of the arts. The program also helps to keep the heritage of the arts alive. Some of the skills are in danger of being lost.

Carolyn Botkin, hostess, provided refreshments. Members present were Vicki Ashbrook, Jo Ella Rash, Sherri Gicklhorn, Kathy Grant, Alecia Curry, Carolyn Botkin, Sheri Craig, Diana Hawthorne and Donna Peters, home extension agent. One new member, Julie Martin, was welcomed to the club.

Next meeting will be Tuesday, April 2, in the Tahoka First Baptist Church parlor. The program will be "A Look at Rural Health Care".

New Provisions On CRP Given

America's farmers and ranchers will be given numerous incentives to tackle environmental concerns when this year's Conservation Reserve Program opens up for bids in March.

"The new program has many opportunities for producers as a result of changes in the 1990 Farm Bill", said Secretary of Agriculture Clayton Yeutter. "There are some exciting conservation ideas in addition to some expanded criteria for enrollment".

The 1985 Farm Bill authorized the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) primarily to protect highly erodible lands. Nearly 34 million acres were enrolled under the program in past sign-ups.

The 1990 Farm Bill extends the old legislation but shifts the primary focus away from erosion reduction toward new multiple environmental objectives.

The program has changed to the point that lands, with greater frequency, will not necessarily have to be eroding to be accepted into the new CRP. Other environmental concerns such as water quality have become as important as erosion.

More information may be obtained at the Tahoka ASCS office.
