STATE MEDALIST - Tahoka High School band member Susan Draper competed in the Texas State Solo and Ensemble Contest Monday, June 1, in Austin. Susan earned a Division II (Excellent) rating on her piano solo, which qualified her for a silver medal. "I'm very excited about Susan's performance," said band director Stephen Morgan. She qualified to compete at the state contest in February at the UIL Region solo and ensemble contest, where she earned a Division I (Superior) rating. At the state level, a Division III rating is equivalent to a Division I at the region contest. Susan is a ninth grade student at THS, and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milt Draper of Tahoka.

Wilson Special Election Set This Saturday

The Wilson Independent School District special runoff election will be held once again this Saturday, June 6, to determine the tie between candidates Dan Cook and Lowen Young for school trustee. The election will determine one place on the board of trustees, a three year term which began in 1991.

The election is a result of a court order from a suit filed following the election in 1991, and which was again held May 2 of this year, but resulted in a tie between the two candidates.

Polls will be open Saturday from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. at the city office building in Wilson. The election results will determine who will fill the remaining two-year spot on the board.

Two Held On Drug Charges

Two persons were arrested in Lynn County Tuesday afternoon after a Dept. of Public Safety officer stopped their vehicle and found more than two pounds of marijuana, an amount which makes possession a felony charge.

The two male suspects, both from Olton, had not been arraigned Wednesday morning, but charges were expected to be filed during the day. The vehicle was stopped by the DPS officer on U.S. 87 north of Tahoka.

Tahoka Police Dept. investigated a collision early Sunday afternoon involving a 1988 Chevrolet pickup driven by Landon Thomas Brewer, 17, and a 1988 Mercury Cougar driven by Veronica Valdez, 19. Both drivers are Tahoka residents. The collision occurred at the intersection of Ave. J and S. 4th St. There were no injuries.

In jail during the week were the two men for possession of marijuana over 4 ounces and less than five pounds, with one also being charged with driving while intoxicated. Also in Lynn County jail during the week were one person each on these charges: theft over $750 but less than $20,000 judgement and sentence; DWI subsequent offense judgement and sentence; DWI subsequent; DWI first offense plus possession of marijuana under two ounces; public intoxication; and assault.

Methodists Set Early Morning Worship Service

SUNSET AFTER THE STORM - The sun was just dipping below the horizon when this picture was made late Monday evening following a thunderstorm and shower dumping about a half inch of rain in Tahoka. Lightning zapped a power line in the alley between North 1st and 2nd streets, and residents along several blocks in that area were without electricity for a period of time while the line was being repaired. Total rainfall in May for Tahoka is reported at 5.13", with 12.14" reported for the year. (LYNN COUNTY NEWS PHOTO)

City To Target Downtown Dilapidated Buildings Here

Tahoka City Council met in regular session Monday night, discussing dilapidated buildings, lease specifications for the Collection Station, and the City-County Library.

The fire marshal submitted a list of dilapidated buildings in downtown Tahoka which the city will target for compliance with city ordinances. City Fire Marshal Jerry Ford listed seven dilapidated buildings in downtown Tahoka which the City Council will address in the near future. Property owners will be contacted and given an opportunity to speak before the Council in a public hearing. The City will have the option of tearing down dilapidated buildings and charging the cost of such measures to property owners who do not comply.

Nell Cotter, a representative for the City-County Library, talked to council members about the need for increased funding to provide for a computer printer, and the group voted to increase the monthly funding by $50 for the library. The library will be receiving a computer through the West Texas Library System, but must pay for the cost of the printer and software with its own funding.

County commissioners recently voted a $50 increase in monthly funds for the library, as well.

Police Chief Jerry Webster gave a monthly report on the department, noting that 220 calls were made during the month of May. Nine arrests were made, 12 tickets were issued, and 15 warning tickets were issued during the month. One accident, two burglaries, and a theft were investigated by department personnel in May.

In other business, council members voted to pay bills, and adjourned after the electricity to City Hall was cut off due to repair of an electrical line downed by lightning during the evening's thunderstorm.

About a three-block area either side of N. 1st and N. 2nd streets were without electricity for a period of time while the line was being repaired by SPS personnel. Tahoka Volunteer Fire Dept. personnel were called to the scene around 8:15 p.m., as the line was down in the alley and sparks, flames and smoke continued to emanate from the hot wire for about an hour until the electricity was cut off for repair.

reported lottery ticket sales at approximately 2,000. Allsup's in Tahoka has sold about 5,500 tickets, with a $50 prize the largest instant cash amount won.

Both Fina stations in Tahoka and O'Donnell reported the $50 instant cash prize as the largest amount won through the lottery tickets. The Tahoka Fina sold approximately 4,300 Texas Lottery tickets, and the O'Donnell Fina has sold about 4,000 tickets.

'Tis the season ... for graduates and rain. Congratulations to the area graduates who finally made it, either through high school or college, or in some cases, doctorate degrees. You have my utmost respect, and best wishes for your future, whatever it may be.

The near future, it seems, will be dodging all the mud holes and waterlogged streets in the area, which Mother Nature kindly refills with a daily dose of rainfall. We prayed for rain, right? Of course we did ... way back at the end of last summer when it was hotter than ... well, God heard us. Here it is, just like we asked for. Mother always told me to be careful what I asked for.

So here we are, in the first week of June, and the kids are already bored. It is my estimation that my children have watched approximately 14 video movies we have on hand at the house, and chomped down 112 bags of popcorn. These rainy days and muddy yards are a tough way to start out the summer.

Baseball season is in full swing through the end of June, and the kids will soon be involved in church camps and vacation Bible schools, swimming lessons and sleep-overs with their friends, and then school starts in the middle of August. Somewhere in there we've got to squeeze in a week of vacation, if we can decide where we want to go, and how to get there on $5 a day, which is what I figure we'll have left after paying for all the camps, lessons, and popcorn through the summer.

I told my family I'd like to go somewhere we've never been before ... preferably somewhere fun and inexpensive, if there is such a place. The kids want to go to Disneyland or Disneyworld, but unless we win the lottery between now and then I doubt we'll make it that far.

We have a five-gallon jug which we have been saving nickels, dimes and quarters in for two years now, with a label across the jug which reads "Florida Vacation." We told the kids when that jug gets full we'll take a vacation to wherever they want to go, and use that money for spending on necessary items like souvenir mugs, tee-shirts with "I Did Disneyworld" on the front and other neat stuff that, once you get home, you never see again.

I figure it will take another two to five years before that jug gets full, and then another year or two before we get all that change rolled into those frustrating little paper rolls that the bank likes for you to use.

We have a really accommodating bank, here, however, so I may be able to just roll in my jug of money and dump it out in the middle of the floor. I know several tellers, secretaries and a bank president who would just love to hunker down in the middle of the floor and help me count it, just to get me out of town for a while.

But, in the infamous words of Arnold "Terminator" Schwarzenegger, "I'll be back." I don't know if he actually said that in one of the Terminator movies, but I know he said it somewhere, sometime, striking fear into the hearts of many of his enemies. I know many folks here who feel that way about me - not enemies, mind you, just the people who know that disaster follows me wherever I go.

No one goes with us on vacation anymore. They have learned, through past experience, that the vacation is doomed from the start. Only my husband and children go with me on vacation anymore, and I think that's just because they have to. They're stuck with me, just as this town is. HA HA HA HA HA HA.

Nearly 19,000 Lottery Tickets Sold In County Since Friday

In the five days from Friday through Tuesday, five retailers in Lynn County have sold approximately 18,800 lottery tickets, with the largest instant cash amount won being $100, according to reports from the retailers.

Last week's News reported that only Allsup's and Fina stations in both Tahoka and O'Donnell were authorized to sell the Texas Lottery tickets, but Bill Chancy, who operates Puzzy's Place in Tahoka, began selling tickets late last Friday afternoon.

"I applied for a license to sell the tickets, but was told I didn't have enough traffic through my store," said Chancy, who explained to The News that he was not aware he would be able to sell the tickets until a delivery of lottery tickets was made to his store late Thursday evening. "I didn't begin selling tickets until about 4:30 Friday afternoon," he added.

Since that time, Chancy has sold approximately 3,000 lottery tickets, and reported one $100 winner, four $50 winners, and four "entry" tickets to the million dollar grand prize drawing.

Allsup's in O'Donnell also reported the $100 prize as the largest amount won by any customer, and

by M. WADE SCHCKELFORD, CEA-AG

A small insect, lecanium scales, can pose a big threat to live oaks and other area trees, but timely inspection and pesticide application can help protect valuable trees.

Lecanium scales are most prominent on twigs and small branches during the spring and early summer. A single infested twig may have more than 100 scales on it, although fewer scales are more commonly present.

These scales are hemispherical in shape and dark brown. They are about one-eighth to one-fourth inch in diameter.

Lecanium scales damage trees by reducing vitality and causing dieback of infested branches. While they are most damaging to live oaks, they also occur on red oaks, maples, honey locus and crab apples.

Eggs are produced underneath the female in late spring. Hatching takes place in May on the South Plains. The immature insects feed on the underside of leaves during the summer. They migrate to twigs in the fall and overwinter there. There is only one generation a year.

Scale insects are most susceptible to control soon after hatching, Schackelford said. Therefore, insecticidal treatments to control lecanium scales will be most effective if applied now. Heavily infested trees will require two applications two weeks apart.

Insecticides recommended for control include orthene, dursban, sevin, malathion and diazinon. Thorough coverage will improve the effectiveness of sprays. Always read and follow insecticide label instructions carefully.

RE: Dora Turpin Funeral -
February 26, 1992

I am not sure who to address this letter to ... but I just wanted to let you know how much we appreciated all you did for us during our time of sorrow. I had been thinking about sending you a note to let you know how impressed we were with your service.

We have had to attend three funerals, all in our immediate family, within the last three years. I must say White Funeral Home treated us with such respect and kindness. The funeral homes we've dealt with here in Lubbock do not even compare with your service.

Again, let me just say on behalf of myself and my other sisters, say THANK YOU FOR ALL YOU DID! GOD BLESS YOU ALL!

Sincerely,
/s/ Anna Benitez

New Air Conditioning Regulations To Raise Consumer Repair Costs

Protecting the Earth's ozone layer will carry a cost to consumers and businesses alike. New regulations will be enforced beginning July 1 by the Environmental Protection Agency to curb the release of ozone-eating chemicals, affecting air conditioning contractors and other cooling system companies, who will pass the additional cost of new regulation equipment on to consumers.

The EPA says the move is necessary to protect the ozone layer from being further depleted by a family of chemicals known as chlorofluorocarbons—chlorine, fluorine and carbon. These chemicals, also called CFCs, have been released into the atmosphere in the manufacture, use and servicing of a wide assortment of products, including refrigeration equipment.

After July 1, the Clean Air Act will prohibit the release of CFCs during servicing by refrigeration companies on stationary units, such as refrigerators, freezers and cooling systems in homes and businesses.

Under the coming EPA guidelines, cooling contractors and technicians will need certification and CFC recovery equipment costing from $1,200 to $5,000. No longer will a serviceman be able to release the CFCs into the atmosphere by simply pressing a release valve. Technicians must have regulation equipment to capture the CFCs, and that cost will be passed on to the consumer.

The Bush Administration had proposed phasing out CFCs by the year 2000, but alarm over extreme concentrations of CFCs over the Northern Hemisphere prompted the administration to move up the elimination date to 1995.

One owner of a Lubbock air conditioning firm said, "I don't think the public understands what's going to happen and how expensive it's going to be. For instance, if we went out to a customer's home and added one pound of refrigerant, it would cost $50. After July, we have to pump the refrigerant out, fix the leak and have to be careful and put in new or reprocessed certified refrigerant to avoid contamination. The cost will be $100."

Those air conditioning technicians who think they can ignore the new regulations will be in for a rude awakening, because the EPA is considering a bounty of $10,000. The maximum fine is $25,000 a day per occurrence. If someone witnesses it and proves it, then they receive a $10,000 bounty.

Dave Ryan, a national spokesman for the EPA, said the agency would work with violators of the new regulations.

43% Of County Population Rated Below Poverty Level

In a demographic survey released by the Texas Department of Health, 43.4% of the population in Lynn County was estimated at below poverty levels for the year 1988. That compared with 18.3% for the State of Texas the same year, although the unemployment rate for the state was at a higher percentage than that of Lynn County, with 6.7% compared to the county's 4.2%.

The Bureau of State Health Data and Policy Analysis estimated the population of Lynn County as 7,747 in 1989. Lynn County ranked number 187 in population of Texas' 254 counties. The median age in the county was 30.3 with an estimated 8.7 persons per square mile.

Population distribution in the county was estimated at 50.4% Anglo, 46.3% Hispanic, and 3.3% Black. For the State of Texas, those numbers are estimated at 65.6% Anglo, 23.0 Hispanic, and 11.4% Black. In 1989, the population of Texas was estimated as 17,470,679.

Other figures released included the average number of monthly food stamp participants for Texas (1,627,848) and for Lynn County (1,312), and various other socio-economic indicators.

Other statistics for Lynn County include the following:

- The Bureau of Vital Statistics reported 111 births in Lynn County for 1988, and 84 deaths to residents of all ages.

- In 1988, there was one reported case of syphilis and two reported cases of gonorrhea in Lynn County, according to the Sexually Transmitted Disease Control Division. In Texas, there were 2,613 reported cases of AIDS and 45,369 reported cases of gonorrhea in 1989.

- In fiscal year 1989, the Bureau of Emergency Management licensed five ambulances and certified 36 EMS personnel in Lynn County.

- The Kidney Health Program provided life-sustaining treatments for end-stage renal disease to six residents in fiscal year 1989 at a cost of $12,696.

- The Chronically Ill and Disabled Children's Services Program serves children with severe medical problems in low income families. In fiscal year 1989, 19 children received these services at a cost of $15,934.

- The Immunization Division was responsible for immunizing an estimated 236 county residents against vaccine-preventable diseases in 1988.

- The Bureau of Radiation Control licenses users of radioactive materials and registers users of x-ray equipment to insure their safe and proper use and disposal. In fiscal year 1989, there were 4 locations licensed and registered in this county.

Woodwork...

by Dalton

THE OTHER DAY I read in the Lubbock Lahdslied-Diary this headline, which I assume was in English, although it was mostly Greek to me:

"Enlarged pylorus muscles cause pyloric stenosis."

I never did get to read the story under the headline, and now I have lost that issue, so I may never know what it was all about, except that it was one of those doctor-medical columns, so I assume it refers to something else we can have wrong with us. Too frequently we hear news about some disease or ailment which we never heard of before, and which, of course, we now learn we have all the symptoms.

Woe is me. I did learn in the dictionary that pylorus refers to part of the stomach, and since my midsection is unfortunately enlarged, I'm sure that if I have one of those things inside me, it is enlarged.

I don't know what "stenosis" means. Possibly that means you look like you swallowed your secretary.

Incidentally, the word actually is Greek, according to the dictionary, and means gatekeeper. Pyle means gate, and ouros means watchman.

So now I know three Greek words. The other one is pie which I eat at every opportunity.

KNOTHOLES in the Woodwork: The development of a light bulb which will last 20 years was announced the other day. It's supposed to cost about $20, but it likely would be worth it. It uses radio waves, so there's a warning that it could cause interference if placed near a radio. That would be no problem with me, since radio in this area is lousy anyway. Even KCAS, which for years has aired big band music, recently changed over most of its programming to beer-drinking, dirty boot music, like most of the other stations in Lubbock. . . Since Jay Leno took over for Johnny Carson, the Tonight Show on TV has its problems, too. I was never a great fan of Carson, although I recognized that he was good at what he did, and like most of his fans, I liked the Doc Severinson orchestra. But now the Tonight show, with its black rock music and different guests, appears to be aimed for the younger audiences, and I'd guess they will lose many of the faithful Carson fans. . . Let's see, now. There ought to be something I like this week. How about those eight hours of dry weather?

Water District Board Of Directors To Decide Upon Lynn County Annexation

Two public hearings were held on May 26, so that the Board of Directors of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 could receive testimony for and against the annexation of the southern portion of Lynn County into the Water District.

At their next regular meeting on June 9, the Board will consider issuing an annexation order and calling an election to ratify the annexation.

The Water District currently includes the northern portion of Lynn County, including New Home and Wilson.

The Board of Directors heard testimony from residents of the area proposed for annexation at a May 26 hearing in Tahoka. Later that afternoon, a second hearing was held at the Water District office in Lubbock to allow the Board to hear testimony from residents of the existing District regarding the proposed annexation.

"There was an excellent turnout for the public hearing in Tahoka, and many landowners within the proposed annexation territory gave good testimony as to why the southern portion of Lynn County should be annexed into the existing Water District," James P. Mitchell, Water District Board President.

Lynn County landowners wishing to comment on the proposed annexation should send their letters before June 5, 1992, to Becca Williams, High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1, 2930 Ave. Q, Lubbock, TX 79405.

Congratulations to the '92 Wilson Graduates!

CRP Plays Role In Wildlife Benefits

When most people think of the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP), they think of erosion control on highly erodible land. However, CRP also plays an important role in wildlife benefit and management.

The grass cover of CRP fields provides food and cover for many wildlife species, including game birds, such as bobwhite quail. Certain grass species, like plains bristleglass and kleingrass, produce seed that makes a good food supply for these small birds. Some CRP producers include annual plant species, such as German millet, in their grass mixtures, to enhance the diet of local wildlife populations. Annual food plots of grain crops can also be planted on CRP contracts.

CRP fields also provide good cover for wildlife. Quail require different types of cover, which must be located in close proximity to each other and to food sources. CRP can provide just such an environment. Nesting cover can usually be found around clump grasses, such as kleingrass or some species of bluestems. Loafing, or escape cover is where the birds stay between feeding periods. Cover should be thick enough to hide birds from predators and to shade them on hot summer days. Feeding cover should be sparse enough to allow quail to walk around, but thick enough to protect them from predators. Roosting cover is the last type of cover required. Roosting cover should have low, sparse vegetation, so that birds have room to flush straight up when disturbed.

In addition to quail, mourning dove and ringneck pheasant receive great benefit from CRP. CRP can provide desirable nesting and roosting habitat for dove populations. Installation of shallow watering facilities will greatly enhance dove populations as well as other wildlife species. Ringneck pheasant used to be scarce in Lynn County. Now, with the establishment of CRP fields, pheasant populations are found in all parts of the county. Annual food plots and watering facilities are key factors in pheasant management. Pheasant must have a constant water supply. Although there is no hunting season for pheasant in Lynn County, many producers appreciate the aesthetic value of these beautiful birds. CRP also has proven to be beneficial to the more than 1,000,000 ducks and geese that migrate through our area each year.

CRP producers cannot graze or hay their fields during the life of the contract. They can, however, lease CRP land for hunting purposes. Therefore, good wildlife management, including annual food plots and watering facilities, could mean additional profits for these producers during hunting season.

There will be another CRP sign-up soon. The 12th CRP sign-up will begin on Monday, June 15 and will continue through Friday, June 26. If you have any questions, or would like additional information, please contact your local Soil Conservation Service office at 998-4622, or call the Lynn County ASCS office at 998-4501.

Cotton Producers Can Expect Bad Year For Boll Weevils

Two mild, wet winters in a row may seem like heaven for Texas ranchers, but the state's cotton farmers likely will play havoc with the boll weevil this summer.

An entomologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service says the boll weevil problem is shaping up to be at least two or three times worse this growing season than last year.

It's not just here, but everywhere in Texas south of Lubbock," said Dr. Tom Fuchs of San Angelo, who monitored weevil numbers since 1979.

Considered cotton's worst enemy, boll weevils in such high numbers could ruin millions of dollars worth of cotton and cost millions more to control.

Traps monitoring the emergence of boll weevils from diapause, their overwintering state, this spring are finding huge populations. For example, the 177 traps monitoring boll weevil activity in 15 counties south of Lubbock found 21,152 weevils in the last six weeks compared to only 123 during the same period a year ago.

"If population growth continues on this plane, we will see an extremely serious problem by fall," said Roger Haldenby of Lubbock, coordinator for the Texas High Plains Boll Weevil Diapause Control Program for Plains Cotton Growers Inc.

Haldenby, however, does not expect the High Plains above Lubbock, where half of the state's cotton is grown, to be hit by the boll weevil. The diapause control program, which carefully sets planting dates late enough to avoid the boll weevil, has been effective in preventing the spread of the insect into that area for the past 28 years.

Fuchs said the last winter that knocked weevils back hard was in 1990. The coldest weather last winter came in early November after a disastrous October freeze. The icy blast stopped development on a crop already hampered by unseasonable rains.

"The good news about the freeze was that many weevils went into diapause early," said Extension Service entomologist Rick Minzenmayer of Ballinger, who monitors weevil numbers with Fuchs. "Those that didn't were left with little to survive on. Weevils entering diapause early usually emerged early this spring, when there was nothing to eat. Those that made the winter should survive for only a short time if cotton squares are not available."

Minzenmayer said the bad news is that huge numbers of weevils moved from cotton fields to pastures and other overwintering areas last fall, which grew lush with the rains.

The two entomologists are the only ones in the state who annually conduct leaf litter surveys for weevils. These are done to compare likely overwintering boll weevil populations to previous years. The counts and weather data are computerized to help cotton farmers decide how much land to plant, budget control expenses and establish a uniform planting date.

Overwintering areas remain a prime concern of the entomologists. These include fence rows and native pasture, but some of the worst culprits are old abandoned farmsteads. These three-to-five-acre sites usually grow rank with weeds and create excellent overwintering areas. Weevils that survive in one of these small areas can infest from 100 to 500 acres of cotton, Fuchs said.

"Farmers in this area averaged $17 per acre for weevil control in 1989, a year comparable so far with this one. That amounted to $3.4 million expense over a nine-county cotton producing area (around San Angelo)."

"The only economical defense in breaking the cycle at this point is to plant Rolling Plains cotton uniformly after mid-May and pray that most weevils emerge early and die of starvation," Fuchs said.

The prime attack for boll weevils is 40-45 days after the cotton is planted - or around July 1 in West Central Texas, he said.

"If this strategy doesn't work, then we can expect a repeat of 1989," Fuchs said. "That year, according to the National Cotton Council, the Rolling Plains lost an estimated 40,000 bales of cotton to the boll weevil alone. At just 50 cents per pound that's roughly $250 per bale or a $10 million loss to Texas farmers."

Americans give about $120 billion to charity a year.

Rural Land Values Should Increase According To A&M Economist

Rural land values in Texas should rise gradually throughout the 1990s after decreases in the previous decade, according to a Texas A&M University agricultural economist.

"Baring some unforeseen economic problems, it would appear that between now and the year 2000, we're going to have appreciation generally in farm land values across Texas," said Dr. Ivan Schmedemann, a professor of agricultural economics at Texas A&M and a researcher with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

Much of that increase will be caused by improved net returns to the land. That, Schmedemann said, in turn depends on what happens to demand for agricultural products.

"Indications are that demand will increase somewhat during the 1990s," he said.

Farm subsidies also have a positive impact on net returns and land value, Schmedemann said, although they will be reviewed by the federal government during the 1990s.

"I'm assuming that energy costs and other production costs, inflation and rising interest rates all contributed to falling land prices, he said. The statewide average cost per acre by 1991, figures at the Real Estate Center at Texas A&M indicate.

"The only thing that could give was land values," he said.

Some regions began bottoming out by 1988, he said. While the center's 1991 figures are not yet complete, indications are that the statewide average price per acre will not rise for the year.

This means that over the long term, investors could find the rural land market attractive, he said.

"Prices have fallen to the extent that net returns are competitive with many alternative conservative investments, such as certificates of deposit and treasury bills," Schmedemann said. "Land is one of the few virtually indestructible assets available to balance a portfolio."
