RETIRED FROM FIRST NATIONAL BANK – Margaret Stone retired at the end of December, 1992, after 24 years of service with the First National Bank of Tahoka. She will be honored with a reception tomorrow (Friday) from 1-3 p.m. in the Bank Community Room. Mrs. Stone says that after she spends a little time adjusting to being retired and getting her house in order, then she would like to do some volunteer work and try her hand at ceramics. She also enjoys cooking. "I'm not one to just sit," she says. "I've got to be doing something all the time." She is the wife of T.A. Stone of Tahoka. (LYNN COUNTY NEWS PHOTO)

It's a well-known fact that, in four out of five couples, the husband and wife's body temperatures will vary so much from one extreme to the other that four out of five arguments will more than likely stem from disagreements over the thermostat temperature in the house.

I have conducted 14 years of research on this subject in our home, and have come to the unbiased conclusion that men don't know diddly-squat about correct in-home temperatures. And I have a massive contingent of females to back me on this theory, so you men just sit back and listen, now. Especially you, Rush Limbaugh, who is unarguably mankind's most longwinded, hurry-up-and-get-to-the-point speaker I've ever been forced to listen to. Even my preacher gets to the point faster than he does ... (sorry, Mary, I couldn't resist).

The correct in-home temperature, as we all know, is whatever the wife wants it to be, and depends upon certain factors such as: (a) is she slaving over a hot stove; (b) did she want to cook dinner in the first place; and (c) who is going to do the dishes afterwards. Believe me, the answers to these questions makes a world of difference in a female's bodily temperature.

Being a hot-natured person anyway, if I answered "yes" to (a), "of course not" to (b) and "it better not be me" to (c), then I would be perfectly content, temperature-wise, to cook supper while in my birthday suit with the thermostat on 60 when the snow is flying outside. Fortunately, my husband understands my "nature" and allows me to set the temperature in the house to whatever I like.

My husband, however, is extremely cold-natured, and usually has several layers of clothing on during the evenings, invariably topped with a sweat shirt of some kind. And I can always tell when he gets into bed, because I can hear his toes sizzling from the next room.

We have an electric mattress pad, with dual controls (invented by a woman trying to save her marriage, I'm sure), and my husband keeps his side of the bed so hot that if he were to spit he'd probably electrocute himself. This man would not last 40 seconds in Alaska or Minnesota or one of those other Eskimo-inhabited places.

When I first put on this electric mattress pad, I inadvertently switched the controls where his unit controlled my side of the bed. Whew! After a few nights of pure torture sleeping in a pool of sweat, I came to the conclusion that either (a) I was having heat flashes of 8-hour durations, (b) I had come down with some horrible tropical climate disease, or (c) there was something wrong with the heating controls on the mattress pad.

The answer, of course, was "none of the above". The culprit was actually the heat maniac I'm married to, and after switching the controls to the proper sides he can now sleep on his side on a glowing red-hot mattress sizzling with temperatures upwards of what would compare with the flames escaping from the space shuttle during take-off. We could bake potatoes at the foot of the bed.

Fortunately for us, we have learned to put up with each other's temperature deficiencies. If it's too cold in the house, he simply adds more layers of clothing until he looks like the abominable snowman, so weighed down with clothing he can barely move. If I'm too hot, I simply go shopping. It works for me.

WHO NEEDS IT?-I'm sure this is a minority opinion, but I think all the big push for anti-lock brakes on cars is dumb, since this is just another way for the auto manufacturers to charge us more money for their vehicles. I realize that this is like opposing motherhood and apple pie in the eyes of those who sell such cars, and especially in the eyes of Consumer Reports, a publication I usually agree with.

The carmakers have some justification on their side of the issue because, so far as I know, anti-lock brakes still are optional on those models which offer them, so if you don't want to pay that extra money, you don't have to. But Consumer Reports sneers at automakers who don't offer that option, and they just go bananas praising the virtues of anti-lock brakes because they will stop a little sooner on ice or slick surfaces, and they imply that you are going to die at the next intersection if you depend on the old-fashioned brakes.

I have been driving for more years than I care to say, and most of the time when I wanted to stop, the car stopped just fine when I stepped on the brake, even in what might be classified as emergency stops.

I say most of the time, because I remember once I stepped on the pedal of an old model car and the pedal wouldn't go in. It was just like it was welded to the floor. Something had broken, obviously, and there I was, going about 50 mph, headed for a busy intersection, and saying out loud, "Gee, I think there may be something wrong with these brakes," or words to that effect.

What happened that time? I downshifted very rapidly, cut the engine, dragged my foot, swerved onto the shoulder, got out and cleaned out the car.

Anyway, it wouldn't have mattered if I had had anti-lock brakes, since the pedal wouldn't activate them. And I think the standard brakes on new cars are very good these days, so I have personally put anti-locks in the same category as sun roofs-a total waste of money for me, perhaps a very good buy for somebody else.

For some folks, I admit, anti-locks are a good idea. I have a friend named Tom, who used to work with me at the Slaton newspaper, and now lives in Plainview, I think. Unless he has toned it down in the last 10 or 15 years, he needs to be able to stop as quickly as possible, because he drives 97 mph just going to the grocery store. Riding with Tom used to be an uplifting experience, because the passenger tended to re-think his priorities after his life passed before his eyes almost every block.

KNOTHOLES in the Woodwork: I noticed on the cover of some magazine the other day that an article inside would describe how a "New Treatment Reverses Memory Loss!" I haven't read it yet; unfortunately I can't recall where I saw it. Davy Barry, my favorite humor columnist, suggests that "The best way to clean a frying pan that has burned food cemented to the bottom is to let it soak in soapy water for several days and then, when nobody is looking, throw it in the garbage."

Annual Pre-Plant Soil Moisture Survey Now In Progress

High Plains Water District and USDA-Soil Conservation Service (USDA-SCS) personnel are now collecting data for the annual pre-plant soil moisture survey.

The purpose of the survey is to determine the general soil moisture availability and deficit trends across the 15-county High Plains Water District service area.

Review of the pre-plant soil moisture survey information helps agricultural producers determine the amount of water they need to apply to bring their five-foot root zone soil profile to field capacity without overirrigating or under-irrigating.

Historical data shows that there is a better likelihood of producing above-average crop yields when the plant root zone of the soil is at or near field capacity prior to planting.

"The soil moisture was low at the start of the 1993 survey. Even through the 1992 growing season started out with the five-foot root zone soil profile at/or near field capacity, rainfall during late summer was below normal, leaving very dry soil conditions," said Willie Crenwelge, USDA-SCS Soil Scientist. He added that recent snow and rainfall have helped reduce soil moisture deficits in some portions of the District.

Soil moisture data collection began in Armstrong, Potter and Randall

Counties and is moving southward. Soil moisture sites are selected based upon soil types, the local saturated thickness of the Ogallala Aquifer which indicates possible well yields, and crop water requirements in the area. Each site represents typical dryland or irrigated farming conditions in the area.

Water District and USDA-SCS personnel use neutron moisture meters to gather soil moisture data.

Readings are taken at six-inch intervals throughout the five-foot soil profile by lowering a neutron probe into a previously-installed aluminum access tube.

Data collected during the pre-plant soil moisture survey is then used to construct maps illustrating the soil moisture available for plant use within the five-foot root zone soil profile and the amount of water needed to bring the soil profile to field capacity.

These maps, as well as the results of the pre-plant soil moisture survey, will be published in the district's monthly newsletter before planting

Depth-To-Water Measurements Underway To Determine Annual Change In Water Levels

High Plains Underground Water recorded and a vinyl sticker showing Conservation District No. 1 Technical Division staff are making annual depth-to-water measurements to determine the effect of 1992 pumpage on ground water levels of the Ogalfala Aguifer within the 15-county Water District service area.

Measurements are taken in the District's network of more than 1,000 privately-owned observation well network. These wells are spaced at a density of about one well per nine square miles throughout the District.

Water District staff take the measurement by lowering a steel tape to the depth of the current static water level inside the observation well. The lower ten to fifteen feet of the tape is coated with blue carpenters' chalk. When the chalked tape comes in contact with the ground water, it turns a darker shade of blue. This section of wetted tape is subtracted from the total amount of tape lowered into the well to determine the depth-to-water from land surface.

After the depth-to-water level measurement is taken, the date is the well number, the depth-to-water measurement, and the date the well was measured is affixed to equipment at the well site.

Water District staff are currently taking water level measurements in the northern portion of the District and will work their way south. Blue and white District vehicles are easily identified, and personnel will be glad to discuss the water level measurement with landowners and/or opera-

The observation wells are measured each year, and the date collected is compared with that of previous years to determine any changes in the ground water levels of the Ogallala Aquifer. This data is used to construct maps showing changes in water levels and the saturated thickness of the aquifer within the Water

Maps showing the location and well number of observation wells in each county or portion of a county served by the District are traditionally published in the April issue of the Districts' monthly newsletter, The Cross Section. Along with the maps, tables listing the observation wells in each county and the depth-to-water measurements for one year, five year and ten years intervals are also printed.

Stenholm Promises Review Of USDA Field Office Closures

Congressman Charles Stenholm, Chairman of the House Agriculture Subcommittee on Department Operations and Nutrition, has promised prompt and in-depth review of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's tentative proposals to streamline USDA's field offices operations.

"While Secretary Madigan has made some preliminary recommendations, no official decisions have been made to close any particular USDA field office," said Congressman Stenholm. "It will be up to the Clinton Administration to implement any changes in the USDA field office network, and the Department Operations Subcommittee will carefully review the entire situation before any significant changes are made."

The USDA, in conjunction with the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), has been reviewing all USDA operations with an eye toward streamlining, increasing efficiency, improving service and saving money.

The Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS), Soil Conservation Service (SCS), Farmers Home Administration (FmHA), Extension Service (ES), and Federal Crop Insurance Corporation (FCIC) were evaluated on the basis of the following factors: program delivery costs; number of producers served; complexity of programs administered; geographic service area; whether local offices were scattered or located under one roof; and intensity of workload at local offices.

The Wilson News

by Buster Abbe • 628-6368 ***

The Wilson PTO will hold its first meeting of 1993 on Monday, Jan. 18, at 7 p.m. in the High School Auditorium. All the officers are asked to meet one hour earlier, or at 6 p.m. in the auditorium. All parents, grandparents and others are invited to the regular meeting at 7 p.m.

Thursday, Jan. 14 is an early dismissal day, and Friday Jan. 15 is a school holiday for students. The faculty will use both of these times for teacher work days to complete end of the semester and end of the third six weeks reports and other work.

Report Cards go out on Wednesday,

All band students need to review last weeks column or check with Mr. Gregory about the Upcoming band contests and the related concert on Saturday afternoon, Jan. 30 at Monterey High School in Lubbock.

Lynn County Livestock Show is Jan. 27-29 with the final judging and sale on Saturday, Jan. 30 in the Lynn Co. Livestock barn in Tahoka. All FFA, Jr. FFA, and 4-H members who are participating, need to check with their teachers or leaders to make sure that all project records, entry fees and whatever else is necessary for a proper entry is completed and sent in by the deadlines.

There will be a noon meal served at the showbarn prior to the sale on Saturday. This year the Tahoka group is preparing and serving the meal which will be served from 11:30 a.m. until 12:30 and the sale begins at 1 p.m.

In addition to the livestock show and sale, there is also a baked goods show and sale, which is held at the same time the rest of the livestock show is going on. The kids that participate in this event and the various sections of this event really go all out with the breads, rolls, cakes and cookies that they prepare. Then those who placed their entries, in the show, participate in the sale just like the ones who participate in the livestock events.

One of the better items about bidding on the baked goods is that the buyer actually receives a duplicated of the baked goods that they purchase, while the livestock sale is a premium sale, which just adds on to the floor price paid for the animals by the stock broker.

All area people are invited to come out and watch these kids "Strut their stuff" as they show their projects and then as the winners run their projects through

The Wilson Livestock Association is sponsoring a BBO dinner on Sunday, Jan. 17 from 11 a.m.-1:30 p.m. in the school cafeteria. This dinner is a fundraiser for the sale to be held after the Lynn Co. Stock Show. Plates are $5.50 for adults and $3 for kids 12 and under.

There will be a silent auction held during the meal with all types of merchandise and services offered to the highest bidder. At this time there are farm chemicals, craft items, computer lessons, ladies beauty supplies and equipment, toy tractors and baseball cards as well as other items which have been donated for the sale. All area people are invited to come and eat a good BBQ dinner and at the same time bid on these items. All the profits from these events will be used by the Wilson Livestock Association at the Lynn County Livestock Sale, following the Lynn County Stock Show on Satur-

The Wilson Livestock Association is also giving away, in exchange for a $10 donation per ticket, tickets for a $1000 drawing. In addition to the $1000 drawing, there will be additional drawings for $50 prizes every time there are 25 tickets turned in to the association. See any Wilson Livestock Association member or go by the Cotton Boll for more information or to leave your donations and pick up

Wilson Lions Club met on Thursday, Jan. 7 for a regular meeting. After the evening meal they were treated to a program by a group from Lubbock called "Sojourner." This group of men, who were dressed in uniforms duplicating those worn by the men during the Revolutionary War, gave a very informative and inspirational program concerning the history and development of various flags that have been used to represent our country or groups involved in the Revolution. This group was so well received, that they have been asked to come back and present another program. They will be returning on the first Thursday of February and they will present a program entitled, "The Face of Lincoln."

The City of Wilson has finalized its arrangements and entered into an intergovernmental agreement with the City of Lubbock for the disposal of Wilson's trash. This will be a five year program with Waste Management Systems of Lubbock providing the dumpsters and trucks for emptying the dumpsters.

City water superintendent Roy Isham attended a meeting along with representatives of other governmental units to finalize the program plans and to get the program in operation.

Wilson ISD Elementary PE teacher, Kim Oglesby, has formed a jump rope club for those interested students who are in the 1st - 6th grades. This is not just a free time, play time club but is only for those students who may have a serious interest in improving their jump rope skills, even to the extent of forming a team to compete with other teams from this area. This group meets on Mondays, after school, from 3:15-4 p.m. in the little

These students will learn to develop their skills in various areas of rope jumping such as, single rope skills, partner rope skills, long ropes, and double dutch jumping. For further information, contact Ms. Oglesby at the Elementary

I would like to receive information from the Methodist Church and the Catholic Church on any events that they might be planning so that we can let people know about them. Would some responsible person in both of these congregations contact me on an ongoing basis so that we can make arrangements to get your congregation's information out to the community. Thanks.

"PEOPLE Group" will meet on Sat. Jan. 16 at 9 a.m. in the Mercantile.

Consumers Warned Of Mail Order Scam Offering 2-Cent Postage

The Postal Inspection Service is warning consumers today not to fall prey to a nationwide mail order scam that is encouraging the underpayment of first-class postage. Promoters of the mail order scam are selling an information package at a cost ranging from $5 to $100 that describes how to mail first-class letters for $.02, rather than the current rate of $.29. The scheme is designed to bilk the postal customer out of their money using inaccurate and out-of-date information, says Inspector in Charge D.C. Strader.

The information packages cite Title 39, United States Code, Section 4253, as a legal basis for the 2 cent first-class rate. Inspector Strader advises that this section was eliminated in August 1970 under the Postal Reorganization Act. The current firstclass rate is $.29 for the first ounce or fraction of an ounce.

Unfortunately, some letters bearing only a 2 cent stamp have been delivered without collection of the deficient postage, and that has given credence to the claims made by the promoters of this fraudulent scheme. This is because most mail is processed through automated equipment, and not because it is legal to mail at the 2 cent rate. Postal Inspectors investigating this scheme have filed administrative and criminal complaints against the promoters. "It is our goal to protect the Postal Service from loss of revenue and to stop this fraudulent promotion," says Inspector Strader.

Postal employees have been alerted to the scam and are being instructed to check first-class mail for appropriate postage. Any mail: carrying less than $.29 will be delivered with a charge for the amount due as required by postal regulations.

Inspector Strader advises postal customers not to fall victim to this illegal scam. The penalty for mail fraud is a fine of not more than $250,000 or imprisonment for not more than five years, or both. Postal customers who receive this package are asked to forward all material to their local postmaster or to the Postal Inspector in Charge, Fort Worth Division, P.O. Box 162929, Fort Worth, TX 76161-2929.
