CHRISTMAS has gone, and so has one of my Christmas light bulbs, in one of the strangest incidents related to Christmas that I have experienced.

Elvis used to sing a song which starts out "I'll have a blue Christmas without you..." and someone apparently decided to have a blue Christmas, using my 60-watt blue bulb. This is not so unbelievable, but what is really weird is that they left a regular white incandescent bulb in its place.

The Christmas lights along the roof of our home this year were all blue, and in keeping with this, I put a regular sized blue bulb in our yard light. On a Sunday night, Dec. 17, I noticed the yard light shining in blue just like the others on the house. The next evening as I came home just after dark, I noticed the yard light was a regular white bulb. A little later I asked Lenda, "Did our blue light bulb burn out and you replaced it with a regular bulb?"

"No," she said. "I thought you had replaced it."

There are no other light bulb replacers living in our house, so we puzzled over this awhile and decided that maybe the blue all burned off the bulb or something. So I went out and inspected the bulb. Not a trace of blue on it, including none around the base.

I can imagine someone stealing the blue bulb. But I can't imagine their leaving a regular white bulb in its place, even if we do stress the importance of exchanging gifts at Christmas. Of course, we do have friends who are not above practical jokes, but none of them we talked with would admit any knowledge of how the blue flew or what made the night white.

If anyone can shed any light on this subject, please do so.

KNOTHOLES: Anything you planned to do in 1995 needs to be done quickly. I made no resolutions last January, and probably won't make any next week. . . I looked in my encyclopedia and found a map of Bosnia, because I had only a vague idea of where it is. Looks like it is south of Hungary and southeast of Italy, and all of those surrounding countries (formerly Yugoslavia) have some jaw-breaking names. Bosnia, in fact, apparently has another name, Hercegovina, which sounds like a sexually transmitted disease. . . The other day I ordered an ice cream cone at the Sonic in Slaton, and the girl who brought out the cone also brought me five napkins. I must look more like a slob than I thought.

Today Is Deadline To Return Ballots

Tahoka telephone subscribers should return ballots on proposed Expanded Local Calling (ELC) today (Thursday), if they have not already done so. Ballots must be postmarked by Dec. 28, 1995 in order to be canvassed by the Public Utility Commission.

ELC offers toll-free calling to and from Tahoka to five other area exchanges. The ballot, headed "Tahoka Project No. 14636," was sent by mail two weeks ago to telephone users in Tahoka, who could vote on service allowing toll-free calls to Lubbock, O'Donnell, Brownfield, Lamesa and Post. The service, if approved by 70 percent of those who return ballots, would cost a monthly fee of $3.50 per month per line for residential phone lines, and $7 per month per line for business phones.

City officials here expect to receive notification on the results of the ballot by the end of January, 1996.

SINGING CHRISTMAS CAROLS - Tahoka fourth graders spread Christmas cheer at the Tahoka Care Center last week when they sang Christmas carols for the nursing home residents. After singing at the Care Center, the youth sang carols outside several downtown businesses before heading back to school.

Gym Renovation Bid Approved

Tahoka Independent School District Board of Trustees met in special session Friday morning to look at bids for the proposed renovation for the high school gym, unanimously approving the lowest of five bids, of $163,800 from Quick-silver Construction. The project will include building new restroom facilities, enlarging the foyer and concession stand area, and adding a storage room and laundry facilities, and is expected to be completed by the end of May.

The six trustees present also approved the purchase of some property near the school to be used for alternative education facilities and/or parking, at a cost of $19,000. Budget amendments for both the gym project and real estate purchase were approved also.

Pages From The Past...

The following excerpts were taken from past issues of The Lynn County News.

Wilson Lady Loses Roll of Bills, Finds Them In Slop Bucket

They may not have money to burn up at Wilson but one lady up there seems to have plenty of it for the slop bucket. Any way this is the story they have been telling up and down Main Street in that little city.

Mrs. Pat Campbell, wife of the postmaster, operates a cafe. She is in the habit of taking stale milk, scraps, and what-not home with her from the cafe and consigning it to the slop bucket, giving the slop to a neighbor for his hogs. She also takes home with her the day's earnings.

One day recently, when the husband came home, he casually asked about the money. When she went to get it, it wasn't there. A frantic search followed, for it was no insignificant sum, quite a roll of bills. They finally found it in the bottom of the slop bucket, where she had dumped the other junk from the cafe. It was a lucky find, too, for the neighbor came along a short time afterward and carried the slop off to his hogs.

Postmaster Pat swears that he didn't tell NOBODY about this absent-minded stunt his wife pulled off, but some how or other it got out any way.

But those hogs don't know yet what they barely missed.

Land Changes Hands First Time in 50 Years

A.E. Leverett has recently bought the south half of the section lying immediately south of T-Bar school, according to Ben Moore of O'Donnell.

One of the shortest of abstracts was required in the deal, since the land had been held by a doctor in Ohio since the 1870's, who had acquired it through the Lone Star Colonization outfit for $1.50 per acre, and the Lone Star had acquired the land from the state.

Landmark Razed

One of O'Donnell's landmarks, the old original hotel built in that city in the summer of 1910, is being torn down.

Joe McLaurin recently bought the building and will use the material therein to build summer cabins at the mountain resort at Ruidosa, New Mexico.

The hotel was the first building erected at O'Donnell, according to Ben Moore, of that city.

FRIENDSHIP
 How does friendship grow? Do you know? What is it builds a base so strong That friendships often last so long? Is it the caring that is shown, Is it the sharing of joys known? What is it makes a friendship grow? Maybe it is how you show, Through little things you say or do, When sunshine fills the whole day through, That you are glad that life's so fine. Or yet again, when times are bad, Perhaps it's sympathy you have had -- A hand in need, a tender heart, Forgiveness shown upon your part. Whate'er it be, here are thanks again For being you, and you're Our friends.

Lynn County Bingo Players Win Almost $1,700

"Bingo players continue to be big winners," Nora Linares, Executive Director of the Texas Lottery Commission, said recently, "and I'm pleased to report that the total prize amounts being won statewide are on the rise."

"During the third quarter of 1995, players in Lynn County collected their share of prizes playing Charitable Bingo games," she added.

Charitable Bingo players who frequented the two Bingo halls in Lynn County won $1,698.91 in July, August and September of this year, Linares reported.

The charitable organizations in Lynn County, and the attendance they reported for the quarter, were: St. Pius X Catholic Church 2,373 and St. Judes Church 1,890.

The $1,698.91 won locally is part of the $108 million in prizes that Bingo halls across the state paid to winners. That includes $86.6 million for regular Bingo prizes and $21.5 million in prizes for pull tab Bingo games.

The third-quarter figure represents a 0.75 percent increase from the April-May-June period.

TEXAS SNOWMAN - This tumbled snowman depicts a Texas winter scene at 1810 N. 8th Street in Tahoka, and is a unique way of building a snowman using whatever "comes to hand" when snow is unavailable. And in this area, if one waits long enough outside, a tumbleweed will come tumbling by in the wind a lot sooner than a snowflake. (LCN PHOTO)

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor:
 You helped me out several years ago. I could not find you to help me. I am interested in helping neglected and abused children located in a home near Las Vegas. They have a project which helps them earn a little pocket money. It's recycling used greeting cards. Can you alert your readers to send the fronts of attractive greeting cards to St. Jude's Ranch for Children.

100 St. Jude's St., Boulder City, NV 89005? Donations of cards have dropped in the last several years, and I feel that a mention in your publication would once again get the word out about this worthwhile recycling program.

For additional information about St. Jude's Ranch for Children, your readers can write to the Rev. Herbert A. Ward Jr., SSC.

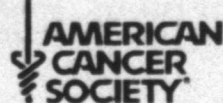

And if your readers would like to throw in a few bucks for the kids, I'm sure they'll love you for it. Thank you for any help you can give us.

Sincerely,
 Ed McMahon

COUCH POTATO JOINED BY THE PET POTATO

COLLEGE STATION — You think you've got problems because you've gotten lazy and put on a few pounds?

Guess what? You've got company. It's your four-legged friend, the pet potato.

"Feeding too many calories is much more prevalent in the pet population of Western societies than all other nutrient deficiencies combined," says Dr. William Burkholder of the Texas A&M University College of Veterinary Medicine's Veterinary Teaching Hospital in College Station, Texas. Burkholder is one of only a handful of board-certified veterinary clinical nutritionists in the United States.

Nationwide surveys suggest that as many as one dog or cat in four seen by practicing veterinarians is overweight or clinically obese.

Overweight pets are of more than academic interest to veterinarians, Burkholder says. Dogs and cats that are overweight are more likely to suffer from other diseases — much like overweight humans.

Texas Wind Power Project Is Ambitious Energy Plan

by GARRY MAURO
 Texas Land Commissioner

As students of Texas history know, Jan. 10, 1901, is a red-letter day for the Lone Star State. That's the day the Spindletop oil well blew in, ushering in a century-long era of world energy leadership for Texas.

A hundred years from now, our children's grandchildren may look back on Nov. 14, 1995 as a date of equal significance. Not as dramatic as a gushing, spewing Spindletop, perhaps, but certainly a red-letter day. That's the day that Texas officially ushered in a new energy era.

On Nov. 14, the state General Land Office and the Lower Colorado River Authority (LCRA) inaugurated a $40-million 35-megawatt (MW) wind plant in the Delaware Mountains of far West Texas. Called the Texas Wind Power Project, this orchard of 80-foot turbines is coaxing energy out of the air for the people of Texas. It is the state's most ambitious wind energy project to date.

The Wind Power Project has been on line since September. One-hundred-twelve wind turbines in the remote ranching area of Culberson County, near Van Horn, have been harnessing the wind's energy in an area where breezes whistle through the mountains at a 20 miles per hour on average, with gusts up to 80 miles per hour.

The West Texas winds, the second strongest in the nation for wind turbines, will be providing electricity for LCRA customers in Austin and dozens of Central Texas communities, including Seguin, New Braunfels, San Marcos and Bandera. This wind-generated energy will be provided at a fixed price of less than five cents per kWh over a 25-year period.

By committing itself to this clean, abundant sustainable energy source, Texas is committing itself to the most cost-effective, readily available energy source we have. The Lone Star State has come to recognize what other states already have discovered about wind power's potential. California, for example, is producing two percent of its electricity using modern wind turbines; as a result, the price of wind power has dropped to about three cents per kWh. With our abundance of high-quality winds in the Panhandle, in far West Texas and along the Gulf Coast, we have the potential to meet this state's growing energy needs in ways unimagined just a few decades ago. In fact, we have enough accessible wind energy to produce more than half again as much energy as we use annually. An unlike fossil fuels, we won't be running out of wind.

The exciting thing about wind power, in addition to its abundance, is the fact that it's environmentally benign. It doesn't pollute the air, it doesn't produce radioactive waste, it doesn't spew out carbon emissions. It hardly produces any noise. The rancher who owns the land where the wind project is located is still grazing cattle within the shadows of the turbines. The turbines, all 112 of them, take up only about 5 percent of the 65,000-acre site.

The Wind Power Project is a prime example of government working with the private sector - for the benefit of the people of Texas. LCRA was looking for ways to diversify its energy sources, while we at the GLO were seeking new revenue sources for the Permanent School Fund, the fund we administer that helps finance public education. Although the wind project is on private land, the GLO receives royalties from the "wind rights." I expect the project to generate $3 million to $4 million during the 25-year contract. That's money that "energizes" the state in another very important way; it helps educate our children.

The project is particularly good for rural Texas. As Culberson County residents are well aware, their part of the state has been offered up in recent years as a dumping ground for sludge and nuclear waste; a wind plant, in contrast, looks like a godsend. The people of Culberson County, knowing that as the project expands it means employment for the region, accepted a one-time fee payment in exchange for tax abatements. That employment potential helps explain why the people of Van Horn, the county seat, gave their annual Frontier Days festival a wind theme: "Blowing and Growing."

It's not only Van Horn that benefits economically. Kenetech Windpower, Inc., the manufacturer of the wind turbines used in the Texas Wind Power Project, is providing 300 jobs at its plant in Waco, more than 800 jobs, direct and indirect, across the state. Kenetech's Waco plant is the largest dedicated wind turbine manufacturing and assembly facility in the world; Kenetech expects it to be a primary export center for the worldwide market.

One more point about this public/private collaboration: The Texas Wind Power Project, Central and Southwest Corporation's wind farm in Fort Davis and Texas Utilities' planned wind farm in Big Spring would not have happened had it not been for the wind energy tax credit at the federal level. The federal government has a long, honorable history of encouraging innovation - from railroads in the 19th century to supercomputers in the 20th - and this tax credit follows in that worthy tradition. It is a valuable incentive for developing renewable energy, helping diversify the Texas economy and ensuring adequate energy supplies for this nation. This tax credit makes sense and should remain intact.

The Texas Wind Power Project is just the beginning, as Texas moves enthusiastically into other sustainable energy projects. Here at the General Land Office, we are working to develop prudent, economically feasible projects on state land, both wind and solar, and we are encouraging other private ventures. We are well aware that Texas is one of the top two or three states nationwide in terms of wind and solar potential.

Just as our predecessors "saw their chance and took it" when Spindletop roared in, we too have an opportunity to provide the energy - sustainable energy - that powers a new century. We see our chance. Now is the time to take it.

Security Means 1,000 Pounds Of Holding Strength

(NAPS)—When it comes to computers accessories, an anti-theft security device could be the best investment you'll make. Very little time or cost is now required to deter thieves, because of a bonding system that can secure equipment to work stations without damaging the case or voiding the computer warranty. Information about such protection is provided through a toll-free helpline: 1-800-628-4413 ext. 52. Pictured is a cable-and-bonding-plate combination with a thousand pounds of holding strength, developed by Qualtec Data Products, a leading manufacturer of computer anti-theft devices.

Your HEALTH TIP

A simple deficiency of folic acid could trigger 30% to 40% of heart attacks and strokes suffered by U.S. men, according to a study by the U. of British Columbia. Folic acid is found in green, leafy vegetables such as Brussels sprouts, spinach, and lettuce, and in fruits, including apples and oranges. It is also available in most common multiple vitamin supplements. "This is so new there aren't recommendations. About 400 micrograms per day seems to be enough to lower homocysteine to a safe level," Dr. Hall said, "protecting against heart attacks and strokes." Adequate folic acid will not protect against an unhealthy diet.

DNA STRUCTURES SEARCHED FOR DISEASE CAUSES

HOUSTON—Researchers from Texas A&M University, Baylor College of Medicine and the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston have won a $2.6 million research grant from the National Institutes of Health (NIH) to discover how unusual DNA structures cause human disease.

The National Institute of General Medical Studies of the NIH gave a program project grant to Texas A&M's Institute of Biosciences and Technology to conduct a five-year study on triplet repeats in human chromosomes. Twelve human genetic diseases recently have been traced to genetic variation in the length of triplet repeats in DNA. Leading the research team is Dr. Robert D. Wells, director of the Center for Genome Research at Texas A&M's Institute of Biosciences and Technology in Houston.

IT PAYS TO ATTEND SCHOOL! - These Tahoka Elementary students, second grader Corey Jolly (left) and first grader Fidel Garcia, were happily surprised just before school let out for Christmas holidays to win these two bicycles from the school. A drawing was held from the 654 names of students who had perfect attendance in the three six weeks periods in the first semester. Students in grades K-6 had a chance to enter their names three times in the drawing (one for each six weeks period in which they had perfect attendance). Principal Ronald Roberts said that with a total enrollment of 468 students, the bicycles proved to be good incentives for students to have perfect attendance, and that a similar drawing would be held for the second semester.

Hospital Directors Vote Again On Salary Issue

Lynn County Hospital District Board of Directors voted again on the hospital administrator's salary, approved contracting for CAT scan services, and approved several other issues in their regular monthly meeting held last Thursday evening.

Directors had voted previously at last month's meeting on a salary increase for Hospital Administrator Louise Landers, but had voted by secret ballot, an action which does not comply with requirements of the Texas Open Meetings Act. To comply, the motion of increasing the salary by $3500 was made and seconded again at Thursday's meeting, and was defeated by a vote of 4-2, with Harold Barrett and Billy Tomlinson voting for the increase, and Norman Ledbetter, Jimmy Dorman, Mike Rivas and Boyd Barnes voting against. The vote count was the same as last month's results by secret ballot.

Tomlinson stated that Board President Virginia Griffing had spoken with the hospital's auditors, who reportedly audit several hospital districts, who said that $60,000 was the "norm" salary for a hospital administrators with similar experience of a hospital this size, and that $50-55,000 annual salary was the average. Currently, Mrs. Landers' salary is $46,500.

In other business, directors approved a year-end settlement to comply with contractual agreements with Dr. Griffith Thomas, at a cost of $11,151. Directors also approved purchasing physician's managed practice computer software, amounting to $22,000, at the request of hospital physicians.

After some discussion, directors also approved contracting for CAT scan services with Shared Imaging Services. The contract is for a 120 day trial period at a minimum 20 scans per month contract fee, and means that patients here may have CAT scans performed at Lynn County Hospital instead of requiring a trip to facilities elsewhere.

Other routine business was approved as presented, including a revised bank signature card, updating the personnel policy manual, and monthly bills and financial statement.

All directors were present for the meeting, as well as Mrs. Landers.
