2005 Cotton Harvest Getting Underway

by BRYAN REYNOLDS CEA, Lynn County, Agriculture

The 2005 cotton harvest is gearing up in Lynn County during this last week of October, with some sporadic activity in fields for about the last 10 days, weather permitting, and many fields now ready for stripping. "This week should really see activity picking up as we start harvesting this cotton crop," said Bryan Reynolds, Lynn County Extension Agent. "Producers are diligently using harvest aid materials to get this crop finished and out of the field," said Reynolds. Harvest aids include chemicals that will help defoliate the leaves from the plant and open bolls to expose lint for harvesting.

"The 2004 crop was exposed to the wet weather which resulted in poorer quality, so producers are going to get this crop out as fast as possible," he predicted.

Early reports of yields are very good across Lynn County. Dryland acres are yielding anywhere from 3/4 of a bale up to 2 bales per acre, and irrigated yields are coming in at 1-1/2 bales to 3 bales per acre.

"Overall, this crop looks good in terms of the yield," said Reynolds. "Plants are not as tall and rank as last year but there is still a good boll load. It is still too early to tell, but the 2005 cotton crop has to rank up there with one of the best ever for Lynn County,"

"The 2004 crop ranks as the best crop ever for Lynn County, with 354,500 bales of cotton produced, which ranked fifth in Texas counties that produce cotton. The irrigated counties to the north usually beat us because they have more irrigated acres, however, Lynn County ranked first in the United States for dryland production with 227,500 bales produced on non-irrigated acres," said Reynolds.

Cotton that has been to the gin thus far is turning out to be very high quality with producers receiving premiums instead of discounts like last year. "Good, dry weather will help our quality hold up there," said Reynolds. "As the 2005 crop starts coming out of the field, producers will hopefully have back-to-back years of good production.'

One of the biggest issues this harvest season is the cost of fuel to harvest the crop. Farm diesel prices at this time last year were around $1.75 per gallon, whereas this year it is close to $3.00 per gallon. "This is certainly a huge strain on farm budgets as many did not have this kind of fuel cost budgeted," said the county agent.

"We need to see good yields to help offset the ever-increasing costs of raising cotton on the South Plains," Reynolds added.

The Lynn County News will begin reporting bale counts from area gins next week.

A COUPLE of things we really don't need are about to occur this weekend, namely, Halloween and the semi-annual Messing With The Clocks.

Halloween is a holiday which doesn't do anybody any good, except the people who sell Halloween costumes and decorations, and pumpkins and trick-or-treat candy which is mostly inedible anyway. It's okay for little kids to come around for treats, but when they come in groups of 8 or 10, and half of them are somewhere between the age of 12 and 25, it's not okay. And it's not too cool when a mother carrying an infant in her arms comes to the door and asks for treats which the baby obviously won't eat.

(Certain female members of our family read the above and promptly labeled me a "grumpy old man," and suggested that I really didn't need to spook out...er, speak out, on the subject. That just ghost to show you can't even depend on your own family for support).

Before I get into any more trouble talking about Halloween, which is Monday, let's take a look at Sunday, when most of the nation goes back on standard time, after six months of "Daylight Savings Time," although I never have figured out just what has been saved. I didn't save anything in the last six months, or in the six months before that.

I'm about to give up on my campaign to get the state of Texas, or at least Lynn County, to just turn back the clocks a half hour in October and leave it that way forever. Or even pick one time or the other (daylight or standard) and leave it alone, like Arizona, which doesn't go on daylight

I'd just as soon leave it like it is now, because it already is getting dark a lot earlier than it did during the summer. Once we're back on standard time, it will be dark by 5:30 or so in the afternoon. (I don't know what will happen in the mornings, because I don't do mornings).

HALF PRICE CAR WASH - Or maybe this should be headed "Half Car Wash Price." A few weeks ago, our oldest daughter was in Lamesa and decided to run her car through a car wash. She saw one with a sign which read "Half Price," so she tried that, figuring a wash for just $3 would be a good deal.

She put in the money and drove into the car wash. The nozzle thingy moved to the center of the car and then started up, soaping the back half of the car, then coming back with a rinse, then stopping again at the center of the car and re-washing the back part. The car wash never did do the front of the car. So for half price, she got half of her car washed.

Question: Has God changed His mind about certain things?

You know, whatever God hated before, He still hates. This brings me back to something I once wrote about that was somewhat controversial. It was about magic, and witchcraft, sorcery, soothsaying and necromancy or wizardry; diviners and observers of time. These were all abominations to God. Abomination is something God hates or detests. Just because Jesus has given His blood, resurrected and bought grace for us, doesn't mean that God likes what He used to hate. As you know, Jesus is waiting for repentance and through Him we can break free of our sin. The media, television, Hollywood, movies and internet promote the notion of good witches and people talking to dead people. It promotes magic, wizardry and witchcraft as all fun and games. Our little ones are being bombarded and conditioned not to reject these things as evil. There is at no time in history, present or future that God will change His mind about this. I met with a small amount of resistance on this subject, but that doesn't change God's mind on the subject. Sometimes we have to go against the flow, stand up straight and just say what God says. Sometimes it's hard or sometimes it means losing some popularity. What good is it if we gain the whole world and lose our soul? God is truth. He never lies; and if He says something is evil, then it is., If He hates it, then He does. Pray over this subject. Pray over what we expose ourselves to; and pray over what we expose our children to. Those who practice these things, repent and leave it, please.

of Tahoka, Lupe Resendez of Seagraves, Bud Todd of Lamesa, Gary Cartwright, Branch Manager at

Crews went to work before daybreak, getting up about 5:30 a.m. each morning and grabbing a breakfast of eggs and sausage provided at the gym before heading out with a journeyman from the local coop who would lead them to their work area for the day. The days were long and hard, with crews working 14 hours to take advantage of all the daylight

"It was hot and sticky - the heat index was about 110 to 115 degrees it was hard for us because we weren't used to that kind of humidity," said DeLeon. "And the mosquitoes and the chiggers were bad too - we weren't all that far from some of the swamp areas bordering Louisiana," he explained.

says Abel with a grin. "I had brought some potted meat and crackers with me from home, and I ate that for three days I think," he added.

The people they met while working in the area were very appreciative, he said, and offered assistance of all kinds. "We were clearing debris near this one house north of Jasper, and it turned out to be the district attorney's home. He came out and said he had a generator and offered us shower facilities and invited us to eat," said DeLeon. "And during the second week we were there people began providing food, bringing us a barbeque meal one night, and we had catfish once."

The crew left after working 12 straight days, each with well over 100 hours of work logged in, and the second crew arrived for their twoweek stint on Oct. 7. "When we left there was still no electricity, but it was getting up and running by the time the second crew came back," said DeLeon

"When the second Lyntegar crew came back here on Oct. 21, the Jasper-Newton Coop had about 40 percent of power restored," said Greg Hepley. The second crew had four Tahoka employees, including Ricky Don Meeks, Justin Harvey, Tim Stice and Jake Terrell; Johnny Antu and Brent Fowler from the Lamesa branch; and Derek Sellers and David Engle from the Seagraves office.

"It was very hard - much harder than we expected it to be because of the heat and humidity - but I would do it again," said DeLeon. "The way I see it, we might need help from other coops if we have an ice storm, so I will do my part and volunteer when I can," he said.
