Goodbye, 2008 ... It's the end of 2008, and shown here are just a few of the faces from the pages of The Lynn County News issues during the past year. We hope the past year was a good one for you, and wish peace and prosperity for you in 2009.

Drunk Drivers Beware - Blood Tests Now Being Taken In Lynn County

By JUANELL JONES

Drivers suspected of drunk driving may get more than they bargained for if they choose to refuse a breathalyzer test when stopped by law officers in Lynn County. Beginning New Year's Eve, law enforcement offices may have a suspected drunk driver submit to a blood test.

"This is something that is already being done for felony cases (third DWI or more), but now we are incorporating the practice for misdemeanor cases as well," said Donnis Scott, Lynn County Attorney. "Anyone who refuses a breathalyzer test may, at the officer's discretion, have a blood sample taken as evidence," she said. "We want drivers to be aware that beginning New Year's Eve, blood tests will be an option that law enforcement offices in Lynn County will have for testing drivers suspected of driving under the influence of alcohol," she added.

Scott says the state provides the blood test kits, but that Lynn County Hospital District is providing the service to local law enforcement agencies free of charge.

"I want to thank Lynn County Hospital for their cooperation in providing this service free to the county, and also want to thank the Lynn County Commissioners' Court for providing fax machines in the homes of all county magistrates so that law enforcement officers can fax their warrant requests when a magistrate is home, saving time so that whichever magistrate is on-call during the night can quickly consider the request and fax back a response to the officer." Once a warrant has been issued by a magistrate, law officers can transport the suspected drunk driver to Lynn County Hospital where blood will be drawn.

"It is our hope that this will be a deterrent to those considering drinking and driving, and also this procedure is expected to bring additional money in fines, as the blood test results will be used as evidence in bolstering the state's case against drunk drivers," Scott explained.

"All of the law enforcement agencies in Lynn County are cooperating in this effort, and the magistrates are fully behind it as well," Scott added. "Any additional tool we can use to stop drunk driving is beneficial to the county and its residents."

Forsythe To Speak About Pentagon Years

Phebe K. Warner Club in Tahoka invites the community to a program, Thursday, January 8, at 6:00 p.m. at the First Baptist Church fellowship room.

Larry Forsythe, a 1960 graduate of Tahoka High School, will present a program telling of his years working in Washington D.C. as Deputy Director of Nuclear Weapons and serving on the NEST team, Nuclear Emergency Search Team, stationed in the Pentagon.

"In the past Phebe K. members have enjoyed Mr. Forsythe's informative talks and wanted the community to have an opportunity to hear Forsythe's interesting presentation," said a club member.

ANOTHER YEAR has passed, or inched by slowly, depending on your age, and depending, too, on what day this week you are reading this. Anyway, a new year is starting, and since most people in my family eat black-eyed peas every New Year's Day, I started wondering why.

Not that I'm against it; I like black-eyed peas, so long as they have been shelled and dried, and I love the cornbread that goes with them. But I wondered why eating black-eyed peas on Jan. 1 is supposed to bring good luck and prosperity all year (in some years, this hasn't worked out really well, but most years have been good to us).

According to a couple of internet sources, eating black-eyed peas on Jan. 1 is mostly a Southern tradition believed to date back to the Civil War. Fields of peas were ignored as Gen. Sherman's troops destroyed or stole other crops in the South, so the black-eyed pea served an important role as a major food source for surviving Confederates. Those dumb Yankees thought peas were unfit for humans to eat.

According to About.com, peas now are often served with turnip greens (speaking of unfit to eat); with the peas representing coins and the greens representing paper money. Cornbread, often served with black-eyed peas and greens, represents gold.

For the best chance of luck every day in the year ahead, said About.com, one must eat at least 365 black-eyed peas on New Year's Day.

Well, gee, I never counted the peas I ate. That sounds like a lot of peas to eat at once. Guess I will count them this year.

The websites suggest that whether you choose to follow the Southern tradition on Jan. 1 or not, black-eyed peas are a good source of nutrition, low in fat and sodium and containing no cholesterol. I am surprised, since I like peas and generally speaking, nothing tastes better than a big plateful of cholesterol.

One website also mentions that the year hasn't always started on Jan. 1, but was set up that way when the Romans developed a calendar in 46 B.C. (the first year the yellow traffic cones and barrels were set up in Lubbock). The Romans named the first month of the year after Janus, the god of beginnings, who was always depicted with two faces, one on the front of his head and one on the back, "thus he could look forward and backward at the same time."

Janus probably would have made a really good NFL quarterback. But he had nothing to do with black-eyed peas, so far as I know.

Peas be with you in the coming year.

Christmas For Kids Donation... The Lynn County Coalition for Families donated $100 to the Lynn County Christmas for Kids program this week, to help them get a head start on funds for next Christmas. The Coalition is represented here by Julia Allen (left), and Donnie Henry (right), presenting a check to Janet Porterfield, director of Christmas for Kids.

40 In Jail As Year Winds Down

Forty persons were in Lynn County jail early this week, with eight persons added to the list during the last week. Of the 40, 12 were held for Lubbock County, seven for Gaines and one for Garza County.

Those most recently jailed were held on a grand jury indictment for failure to appear and a second indictment for possession of a controlled substance, driving while intoxicated second offense, two others for DWI first offense, and one each on warrants for seven misdemeanors, warrants for three misdemeanors, public intoxication and driving while license invalid.

New Home Annual FFA Auction, Cookout Set Jan. 8

The annual New Home FFA Auction and Hamburger Cookout will be held Thursday, January 8, at 6:30 pm at the New Home Community Center. Proceeds from the auction will benefit the New Home FFA Chapter. If you would like to donate items for the auction, please contact Mr. James Tabor at 924-7724 ext. 31.

The local New Home Stock Show will be held Saturday, January 17, 2009 at the New Home Community Center. A meal will be available for lunch, as well as other homemade snacks. The New Home FFA Students will be exhibiting their animal projects for the 2009 Stock Show Season. The Lynn County Stock Show will be January 22-24, 2009 at the Lynn County Show Barn in Tahoka.

Card of Thanks

My brothers and I would like to take this time to thank our family and friends for helping us get through this difficult time with the loss of our mother, Susimaye (SuSu) Inman.

Your prayers meant so much, the foods, cards and visits were very much appreciated.

Mama touched many lives and she will be greatly missed.

A heartfelt thanks to Lynnwood Assisted Living and NursCare Home Health and Hospice.

Also a very special thank you to Robert for making our mother's last year of life so happy.

Sincerely,
The family of Sue Inman
