What the Market Wants

Members of the Rotary Club heard an informative talk at their noon meeting Tuesday. Guest speaker was H. A. (Bob) Poteet, executive secretary and treasurer of the Lubbock Cotton Exchange.

Poteet used "What the Market Wants" as his topic. The following is Poteet's explanation: You will recall that when labor was in abundance in this West Texas area, we were selling cotton, and everything looked rosy. Some sections such as yours here were moving into varieties that provided the market with longer staple cotton, and the High Plains area was developing a reputation of providing and making available to the mills of the world, a wide range of qualities. Some sections of the Plains had gone to once over stripping while other areas were still using bracers in volume and harvesting the mature open bolls early in the season. Unreasonable administrative controls on the bracer program, even before it was finally phased out, discouraged the use of hand labor as we had known it through that program.

Many of you here in this community worked tirelessly and traveled at your own expense to retain the bracer program, but producers began more and more, year by year to convert to the practice of once over stripper type harvesting. This forced the bulk of the ginning late into the season after frost, which along with rapidly increasing acreage yields, contributed to large backlogs at area gins. Gins began to look for ways to get grades comparable to those that were obtained by hand pulling. Drying the fiber with heat and running it through additional machinery was found to be the answer to getting a clean sample. Textile mills in the southeast and abroad were beginning to question the practices of the highly mechanized West Texas cotton farming area.

As once over harvesting and increased yields through expanded irrigation and fertilization continued to create large backlogs at area gins, gin manufacturers came to their aid by

City Council Considers Bond Issue

The discussion of recommendations of the Planning Commission for city capital improvements was the major item on the agenda at the Monday afternoon meeting of the City Council.

Five improvement plans had been submitted to the council by the Planning Commission, to be financed by a bond issue, for their consideration.

1. Water System
2. Sanitary Sewage Improvement
3. Creation of a City Park and Community Center.
4. Construction of a fire station.
5. Street and storm sewer improvements.

Accreditation Team Visits Muleshoe School System

An accreditation team visited Muleshoe school Wednesday. The team was composed of Roy B. Scruggs, consultant of accreditation, Austin; Walter LaBay, area Vocational Agriculture supervisor with headquarters in Plainview and W. A. Mayfield, Consultant in division of program development with the Texas Agency in Austin.

According to Superintendent of school Neal Dillman, accreditation visits to local schools are part of the regular work of the State Department of Education. These visits are made for two purposes; 1. to discharge the legal responsibility of the State Board of Education for setting accreditation standards, and to assist schools in a continuous program of instructional improvement.

Although it is not mandatory that school systems be accredited, but if school officials elect to operate an accredited system, they become responsible for maintaining a program that meets the minimum standards.

Self-evaluation should be a part of the school's day-to-day operation, continuing at all times, whether or not the school is scheduled to be visited by an accreditation team. The thoroughness and accuracy of the school's self-evaluation program is one of the items considered in State evaluation. The program is evaluated by the extent to which problems have been recognized, solutions suggested and available resources identified and used in meeting such problems.

The work of the accreditation team is divided into five areas. They are: 1. Plant facilities, buildings, campus and play areas, classroom furniture and equipment, lighting, gymnasium and auxiliary areas. 2. Instructional aids, materials, supplies,

Freeze Branding Technique Used on 30 Head of Cattle

The unique marking of cattle -- "freeze branding" was introduced in this immediate area Saturday as the iron was put to 30 head of cattle belonging to Pete Jesko. The Jeskos had a two-fold purpose for trying the new type branding. One was the fact that ear tags fade out and after a time the record are not visible and neck chain used often caught in fences, on implements and other objects on the place and the other reason is for the permanent record which the brands carry.

For instance, by using the last numeral of the year the animal was born for the first numeral in the brand (like 1964), the first numeral would be 4 and the next numeral would be for the calf number... thus keeping a record of the productivity of the cow and make it possible for the owner to tell if the cow bore good calves and if not, could be culled from the herd.

By improving the herd, in this manner, at weaning time, when the calf is 9 months old, the animal weighs as much as previous animals weighed at 18 months.

New Organization Meeting Planned

Representative Jesse T. George has asked for an organizational meeting to be held at L. B.'s Cafe here at 10 a.m. Saturday.

This organization is to be known as The Bailey County Legislative Community Council for which Harvey Bass has been appointed chairman and Mrs. James Jennings, secretary. Bass said "This will not be a partisan organization, but will serve as a 'grass roots' sounding board for public opinion.

Representative George asks that at least 30 to 40 persons attend this organizational meeting and each business and farm operation establishment representative be present. Ministers of the community are also asked to attend. Muleshoe schools are to be represented as well as each of the mens and womens clubs.

All who plan to attend are asked to contact Bass or Mrs. Jennings.

Ambassador Club Takes To Air

The newly organized Muleshoe Ambassadors Club, a membership and visitation organization of the Muleshoe Chamber of Commerce hit the ground at a running clip this week. Vic Benedict has accumulated 120 points so far. These points were received for visiting the Plainview Chambers Annual Banquet last week and for signing up a new member.

The new member is the Maytag Laundrette at 403 S. Main operated by Mr. and Mrs. Lester Baker.

Robert Hooten has earned 30 points when he and his wife attended the Plainview banquet with Mr. and Mrs. Benedict. Dues increases were reported by M. D. Gunstream giving him 165 points toward his red blazer. Increases came from Chapman Supply, Lindsey Jewelry and John Millier.

Frank Ellis and Chamber Manager Bob Janca attended the Friona Chamber banquet last week giving Mr. Ellis 25 points for his attendance at the event.

Another meeting of the Ambassadors Club will be held on February 23 at 7 a.m. at L. B.'s Cafe to discuss possible dues increases, visitations and prospective chamber members.

the alcohol and the alcohol chills the copper branding irons. Methyl alcohol, Isopropyl alcohol, Ethyl alcohol and Acetone work as well.

Mrs. Jesko said the branding cost about 9 cents per digit and for the 30 head, one and one-half gallons of de-natured alcohol and 20 pounds of dry ice was used. R. Keith Farrell, D. V. M. W. S. U. Research Veterinarian explains the freeze-branding technique.

A hot branding iron has been used as a means of identification of animal and man since our earliest recorded history. The need for a technique which is less painful, less injurious and more legible has probably been on the minds of everyone who has used the hot branding method since the time of Cleopatra. Many means of animal identification have been tried to circumvent the disadvantages involved with the hot iron brand. Techniques such as ear tags, collars, and tattoos, have left much to be desired. Legibility from a distance is a problem in most all techniques except the hot-iron brand; and even the hot-iron brand is dramatically legible only under the best of circumstances. In the winter, branded animals have to be clipped to make the brand legible. Tags and collars cause problems by catching on objects and tearing free or causing damage to the animal. Tattooing has been a very successful technique when used on sparsely haired anatomical areas, but again it necessitates catching each animal for identification.

The extreme pain associated with the hot branding iron has long concerned everyone who has had anything to do with this technique. The dilemma has been complicated by the need of the livestock industry for animal identification; as opposed to the concern of the tanning industry which reports a $20 million yearly loss from hide damage brought about by the use of the hot branding iron. The livestock industry has been concerned about the damage done to the animal by excessive branding.

The ultimate goal of freeze branding will be the selective destruction of the melanocyte, by using extreme cold. The melanocyte can be best described as a one-celled pigment-secreting gland which is responsible for both hair and skin color. We have used extreme cold for years in an attempt to preserve the cells in the living state. Sometimes we were unsuccessful in these attempts and destroyed the cells. When this happened we considered the

Once nematodes get at your cotton, yields go down and so do profits. But with FUMAZONE® 86 soil fumigant applied at only 1 to 2 gallons over-all an acre, you can take care of root-knot, sting, meadow and other nematodes—those tiny soil pests that attack plant roots, suck away profits. FUMAZONE 86 soil fumigant increases yields up to $200 an acre. Many High Plains ranchers just like yourself tell us that's exactly what happened to their yields after their soils were treated with FUMAZONE 86. It can be applied right from the drum. No mixing, no diluting, no nozzles clogged with foreign material. You can use the chisel method, the plowsole method or inject FUMAZONE 86 into your irrigation water. Could you ask for greater flexibility? Sure you could. So here it is: Apply FUMAZONE 86 before planting, at planting or after planting. It's the only type of soil fumigant that can be used on living plants. Ask your Dow Farm Chemicals supplier about it. It was the consensus of opinion of the council that Mulshoe did need the city improvements as suggested by the commission and the bond issue proposed as a means of financing the plans.

The council will discuss the subject further at a later date.

Other business handled at the council meeting was the approved authorization of a premium increase on hospital insurance for city employees, effective April 1 and the coverage on renewal of city fire insurance policy was reconsidered.

The preliminary proposed 1967-68 budget for the City of Mulshoe was also on the agenda for the meeting.

developing high speed gins. The bracer program was terminated and the Plains area converted almost 100% to short staple stripper type varieties, and farmers urged the gins to get their trailers unloaded as soon as possible. The high support Government loan encouraged a disregard for quality.

While all of this was happening on the South Plains of Texas, our customers, the mills, were having a labor problem also. As the cost of their labor increased, they had to look for ways to cut their cost. Although the quality of their end product was to remain the same, the quality of their raw cotton requirements was raised. This was done so they could speed up their machinery and reduce their labor cost. Mills throughout this country and abroad have been doing this for several years now. At the same time they were increasing their quality requirements, we were disregarding their demands here on the South Plains. Why? Because we had the protection of the narrow differences that were provided in the Government loan program. The premiums that the mills were prepared to pay were inadequate incentives to us to start converting to a better quality longer staple cotton.

In 1962 and 1963, twenty-two cotton buying offices on Texas Avenue in Lubbock closed their doors and moved out. Mills were quitting this area in droves. Foreign mills were beginning to specify in their orders "No West Texas Cotton." There was plenty of cotton being produced and they could find qualities that would best fit their needs in other areas that were probably not quiet so progressive as is our area, and didn't make the fast change to once over harvesting and to fast high speed ginning as was done in this area.

The United States Government loan became a major out-

Some mills are threatening to switch to synthetics rather than switch to shorter staples. The crisis is real. Premiums being paid in California for the scarce 1 1/16 inch staple exceed those winning the contest and the 1 1/16 inch short to mills last summer and are forced to pay through the nose to the farmer in order to get the cotton.

Some mills are threatening to switch to synthetics rather than switch to shorter staples. The crisis is real. Premiums being paid in California for the scarce 1 1/16 inch staple exceed those paid for 1 1/32 inch by 600-700 points. An artificial price structure no doubt has been established due to the shortage. Shippers sold 1 1/16 inch short to mills last summer and are forced to pay through the nose to the farmer in order to get the cotton.

Recent catalogue sales of CCC Government cotton indicate that mills can spin short-cotton. With the supply of 1 1/16 inch cotton in the Government catalogue now exhausted, shippers and mills are bidding heavily on 1 1/32 inch cotton. Whether or not bidders will go on down to 1 inch staple after 2.3 million bale supply of 1 1/32's is exhausted is yet to be determined. There are only 670,000 bales of 1 inch and 500,000 bales of 1 1/32 inch currently in CCC stocks. But there are 3,400,000 bales of 15/16 inch and shorter. We know that the bulk of the mills are demanding by what they are doing in California and the way they are buying out of the Government catalogue. We also know that what they are demanding is in short supply. Don't forget the law of supply and demand. You know the price of sound staple cotton will be good because of this. What you need to determine most is - can you grow it and can you grow it as profitable as you can grow fiber that sells for several cents a pound less?

No other group of farmers and ginners are more capable of making changes than you and your neighbors. This section of the South Plains is noted for its progressive and knowledgeable farmers. You are very capable of making changes. You know from experience whether you can produce the qualities that are most in demand, because you or your neighbor have probably tried it before. Keep in mind that along with a longer staple, we must have fiber strength, fiber uniformity, and fiber maturity. In other words, along with length, the fiber should pressly 90,000 P. S. I. and mike 3.5 and be regular or uniform.

We recognize that all sections in the Plains area of Texas can not, under present conditions change to longer varieties. But, there will remain markets available for 7/8 to 1 inch type cottons of character that is properly harvested and ginned. The supply has simply exceeded the demand, as most mills have gone to longer staples while producers have moved to shorter staples.

If some area producers who can, because of their cultural practices, financial abilities, and the climatic conditions of their area, move to longer staple varieties and take advantage of premiums being offered, this will tend to take the market pressure off the shorter staple cottons. The Department of Agriculture has announced they're intentions of making a study of price differentials and that they may arbitrarily widen loan differences (lower) of cotton which has a tendency of moving into Government loan rather than selling. They are talking about us. They probably will do just that and lower prices on shorter staples next spring when they announce the quality differentials for the 1967 loan.

Some of you changed from spindle pickers to strippers several years ago because of narrow differences. Now we are facing prospects of wider differences with premiums for good character longer staples. Recognizing that mixing top immature bolls with the good lower bolls will jeopardize the premium on longer staple cotton, many of you will probably consider changing to spindle type pickers.

Many of you have made recent individual efforts to upgrade the quality of the cotton you produce. You have done this on a limited scale of say 10 to 30 % of your acreage allotment and you have been disappointed, upon learning that after you have successfully produced and ginned good quality cotton that it was hard to market and in many cases not salable at all, and went into the Government loan. At the same time, similar qualities at other locations were selling. Textile mills are big business -- they buy cotton where the supply is dependable -- they can't afford to experiment.

These qualities must be produced in volume and in such a volume that the cotton buying world knows that it is here and available. This contributes to competition and competition contributes to premium prices. An area producing quality cotton must establish a reputation. Bear in mind that our reputation here on the Plains as to our ability to produce quality cotton is probably at its lowest ebb in history.

Without some organized effort, it will be hard and slow for farmers to switch to higher quality cottons and sell it at a significant premium. It will do easier and faster if farmers who desire to produce higher quality, do it together and the more that choose to join in these efforts, the easier and faster you will enjoy top premiums for your cotton.

It is recognized that varieties alone can not fill our quality needs, that cultural practices in the production process, harvesting methods, and ginning practices are all vitally important in providing the mills with the kind of fiber they want.

Perhaps we need to establish a system of licensing gins that will enter into an agreement to produce certified quality lint. If a system could be developed whereby the Plains area could produce several hundred thousand bales of cotton under a quality controlled system it would no doubt hasten re-establishment of our reputation as producers of quality cotton. It is recognized that the many climatic conditions under which we produce cotton on the Plains would not lend itself to a one variety or even a two variety area. But the number of varieties produced on the Plains under this certified quality lint program could probably be limited to less than 1/2 dozen. Gins that enter into these agreements would settle on a single variety at their gin point and would agree to gin it under certain specifications as set out by an industry wide committee that would establish the standards. Established standards would include gin saw speeds, the moisture content of the seed cotton at the gin stand, and the number of lint cleaners being used.

Gins would be evaluated and spot checked by persons duly authorized and provided with the proper credentials, possibly from Texas A & M University or from the Texas Department of Agriculture. Gins would be free to drop out of the plan any time they desired but then would become ineligible to use the special tag used by the approved gins. A system such as this would tell the world and put them on notice that we are doing something about our quality problem on the Plains -- that we are in business to stay, and that we are in business to have all the answers to how a system like this would function. The state of South Carolina set up a plan similar to this last year. Mississippi is introducing a similar plan for 1967 and I understand there is some talk of initiating the system in Georgia. Perhaps one of these plans or systems could be used as a guide, South Carolina, for example, produces about the same amount of cotton that is classed at the Brownfield and Lamesa classing offices. It is recognized that a system such as this would be a major undertaking but it is also recognized that a system is needed to reinstate our reputation as quality cotton producers here in West Texas.

In Fashion

Striking colors and bold designs are seen on some of the newest garments. There are geometric figures, stripes or huge flowers covering all kinds of fabric.

Some style trends that continue to be popular this season are first-sleeveless frocks. We find this evident in wool dresses as well as in those of lighter weight fabrics.

experiment a failure. In the freeze-branding experiments our role is reversed, if the melanocytes survive after freezing, the experiment is a failure. The problem is complicated by the fact that we want to destroy the melanocytes selectively without destroying the other cells of the skin. The destruction of this cell by freezing results in the growth of pure white hair from the frozen area, as well as a lack of color in the skin itself.

The application of extreme cold to the skin has been used as a local anesthetic by physicians. To determine if pain was involved in the freeze branding, a small copper branding iron was chilled at liquid nitrogen temperatures and placed in contact with the skin of my arm. I felt a distinct tingling sensation momentarily as the skin was frozen. Surprisingly there was no sensation of itching as the skin thawed. The skin subsequently became inflamed and swollen over the brand site with no sensation of pain. We have not, as yet, completed an evaluation of pain with dry ice and alcohol temperatures. Some of the cows have a tendency to move around at the time the skin is frozen, and we don't know if this is a manifestation of some sensation that they are getting from the extreme cold or whether they object to pressure from the iron. However, we have observed no tail wringing or padding of the feet which would be an indication of extreme pain.

The series of events seen after the skin is frozen are: (1) the frozen skin is indented in the form of the cold object, (2) as the skin thaws there is a marked reddening of the skin over the branded area, which is followed shortly by edema, and (3) the hair is usually lost over the brand site over a period of days and will remain bare until the next hair cycle.

If sufficient cold is transferred to the skin, one of several things occur. Melanocytes are destroyed without damage to the hair follicles in which case the hair will continue to grow but all subsequent hair produced will be white. This hair grows much more rapidly than the hair from the unbranded skin and will appear much longer. This hair stimulation is seen in some cases where there has not been sufficient freezing to destroy the melanocyte. The hair will remain colored but will grow more rapidly.

Strangest of all, some of these animals insufficiently frozen will show a marked darkening of the hair coat and skin as well. In other words, it appears that if we do not kill the melanocytes we may stimulate them to produce excessive amounts of pigment. This phenomenon has been seen with a variety of other irritants, including ultra-violet radiation as well as certain chemicals. Some animals are very sensitive in this regard and will grow dark hair even after the hair is clipped very close.

Of major concern to us is the question of permanence. We believe that once an animal is branded by the freezing technique all subsequent hair growth will be white. We are not yet willing to hazard a guess as to the effect on melanocytes of the skin. However, we have observed one adult dog for over one year in which the skin has also remained white. Adult cows have also maintained the depigmented skin condition for over one year.

However, many more experiments should be conducted over long periods of time, particularly in very young animals, before we speculate on the permanence of skin depigmentation by the freeze-branding technique. We do feel, however, that the destruction of the melanocyte in the hair follicle will result in a lack of pigment in all succeeding hair growth cycles.

We feel there is strong evidence to indicate that the freeze brand will result in permanent white hair growth. There have been studies on other techniques of melanocyte destruction which resulted in permanent growth of white hair. The best known natural occurring effects are the so-called "saddle sores" on horses. Further, the use of X-ray radiation has frequently resulted in the destruction of melanocytes within the hair follicle. After such destruction the hair growth is white in all succeeding hair growth generations.

In some naturally occurring situations, such as are seen in old age of animals and man there is a tendency for the melanocyte to become exhausted or in some way inactivated so that white hair is produced and even though we cannot say that the melanocyte is dead these changes also result in permanent white hair.

The two techniques of greatest interest to us now are the use of a copper branding iron chilled in either liquid nitrogen or Dry Ice and alcohol, and the direct application of liquids that boil at very low temperatures to the skin itself. The latter is the so-called "stencil" or "cookie-cutter" technique and involves liquified gas, under pressure, sprayed onto the skin in a pattern controlled by the stencil or so-called "cookie cutter."

We have great hopes for the "cookie-cutter" technique. We are wrestling with a few engineering problems before subjecting it to a more extensive evaluation. Most work, so far accomplished, has utilized the copper branding iron. This is a copper metal stamp (chilled in Dry Ice and alcohol, or liquid nitrogen) and then placed in contact with a shaved area of the skin after the skin has been wet with a suitable refrigerant. This technique is not fancy but does result in legible brands.

Evaluation of copper, aluminum, and steel branding irons has shown that copper is the most efficient for heat transfer. The irons are simply placed in the refrigerant (Dry Ice-alcohol or nitrogen) until the rapid boiling ceases at which time it has reached the temperature of the surrounding liquid. The ratio of Dry Ice to alcohol is not critical. You simply need enough alcohol to cover your metal branding irons and enough Dry Ice to chill the alcohol. An insulated container is a necessity.

To acquire a legible brand it is necessary to shave the hair as closely as possible. We use an Oster, Number 40 shaving head clipper to achieve this. Cordless, self-powered clippers are of great advantage to this technique. Understand that such clippers will eventually be on the market. After clipping, the skin of the animal is wet with a suitable refrigerant to prevent the iron's sticking to the animal. The iron is placed firmly in contact with skin for desired length of time.

Mrs. Little was born in Wise County, north of Fort Worth to a large family and met and married Ed in 1948. For a year the couple operated a laundry in Muleshoe and then leased some farm land. At the present time they own the land which consists of 460 acres of irrigated land and 1030 acres of dry land. They rent 720 acres of irrigated land in addition. The couple with 2 boys, Gary 16 and Greg, 14, make their home 8 miles west of Muleshoe. Major crops on the farm are corn, cotton, alfalfa, castor beans, milo and wheat. Mrs. Little tells of the hardships of beginning their farm life and the small amount of equipment they had in the beginning.

vegetables for the freezer and pantry to use during the winter months. During a summer approximately 100 quarts peas, beans, corn, okra, tomatoes, pickles and relishes are prepared. This she puts into jars and saves her freezer for beef and pork which they raise on the farm and have processed. She also cans jelly, preserves and juices. She does her own laundry and ironing and her own housekeeping. Mrs. Little helps with cancer, heart and United Furd drives and is a big worker in the First Baptist Church. She has taught Sunday School for 16 years and is currently working with the 8th grade girls. Ed works with the 14 year-old-boys. Mrs. Little is the Training Union Director and helps with Vacation Bible School and assists when she can with shampooing and setting the women's hair in the Muleshoe Nursing Home. She was president of the Progress Home Demonstration Club in 1951 but due to extra work in the church, she is not a member of the club now.

The 1967 homemaker tells of the rainy season in 1951 and how their land was improved by barrow ditches for overflow and many other hard times during their years of farming. The outlook brightened somewhat in 1957 when they built a brick home on their land. Mrs. Little made all the draperies with the exception of the living room. She refurnished a lot of furniture to add to the decor. Since that time, natural gas and REA has reached to their farmland in which they had a great hand in promoting. Mr. and Mrs. Little are quite interested in politics and have letter writing coffees and other political activities when needed. The couple had a great hand in promoting and securing a vegetable shed which was located on the Clovis highway. They have also participated in test plots during the years.

In 1965 Mr. and Mrs. Little went on a trip to Europe which was sponsored by the Texas Farm Bureau. This was a market building tour and helped expand markets in Europe. The conclusion of the story reads as follows: "I cannot keep from bowing in prayer of thanksgiving when I look out our window upon the crops that truly show the handy work of God".

Other women entered in the contest were Mrs. Robert Hunt, Mrs. Bill Harmon and Mrs. Lloyd Dan Throckmorton. Last years conservation homemaker winner was Jaquita White.

Farming Will Cost More in 1967

COLLEGE STATION—The cost of farming and ranching will be higher in 1967, according to John McHaney, Extension economist at Texas A & M University. Farm production expenses will increase again in 1967 but at a slower rate than in 1966, said McHaney.

The 1966 cost of farming—as measured by overall farm production expenses—was up a whopping 8 percent over 1965, he said. It cost farmers about $3 billion for overall production expenses in 1966.

McHaney said the increase in expenses results in part from higher prices for certain production inputs — particularly feeder livestock and feed. Prices paid by farmers moved up slightly for motor and other supplies, and building and fencing materials. Then too, he said, more purchased inputs were used in 1966, contributing to the increase in total farm expenses.

The A & M economist said farm production expenses will likely rise again in 1967 though not quite as much as the 1966 increase. Increases are highly probable in 1967 for taxes, interest, and insurance. Higher expenditures for several production items, including fertilizer and pesticides, are likely because of increased use of these items.

Part of the increase in the cost of farm inputs in recent years can be attributed to increasing use of services that were formerly done by the farmer or were not even available, said McHaney. Farmers now may have feed delivered directly into their beef, poultry or hog feeders. They may have buildings constructed, fences built or fertilizer applied rather than doing the work themselves.

These extra services, as well as the supplies themselves, are often financed by the supplier, who will normally add a financing charge — all contributing to higher input costs, said McHaney.

Labor Laws In Spotlight At TSCRA Convention

The effect of the minimum wage law on cattlemen will be in the spotlight at a Conference on the Agricultural Minimum Wage in Houston, Mar. 13.

The Conference is scheduled at 4 p.m. and will be conducted by the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association's Agricultural Employers Committee, according to Don C. King, TSCRA secretary-general manager.

King said representatives of the U. S. Department of Labor will be present to answer questions concerning the administration of the "Fair Standards Act as Amended in 1966".

The conference will be during the 90th Annual TSCRA Convention in the Shamrock Hilton Hotel. Registration for the convention will begin Sunday, Mar. 12.

The first general session will be a board of directors' meeting at 2 p.m., Monday, March 13, with Ben H. Carpenter of Dallas, TSCRA president, presiding. The board meeting and convention is open to the public.

Price Fares Well On Ag Assignment

Congressman Bob Price fared well in Agriculture Subcommittee assignments announced today by Representative Page Belcher of Oklahoma, ranking Republican member of the committee.

Price had asked for subcommittees on livestock and grains, cotton, and got both. In addition he was named to a third, the subcommittee on departmental oversight which looks after implementation of Agriculture bills passed before the Congress.

Two former subcommittees, wheat and the subcommittee on livestock and grains, were combined into one committee will be Representative Graham Purcell of Texas.

"These are the most important subcommittees of the Agriculture Committee, especially to the 18th District of Texas," Price stated.

"The cotton export situation is in deplorable shape as this country continues to lose its world market," Price declared. "The cost of the cotton program is rising but cotton farmers are not sharing in the benefits as they should."

"Actually, I believe the decline of the cotton export markets is largely the result of State Department policies that have forced the American taxpayer to assume heavy losses by the Commodity Credit Corporation for carrying a huge and growing surplus of unwanted cotton," Price added.

"This is one of the problems I will be working on as a member of the cotton subcommittee," he stated.

"I intend to ask for early hearings on the question of whether the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965 has been properly administered and also what can be done about State Department policies that have crippled our cotton export program," the Panhandle Congressman concluded.
