Lynn County Area Gins BALE COUNT

Area gins begin processing cotton

Lynn County area gins began processing cotton in October, as harvest season gets underway. Texas Star Gin, with plants in Wilson and Union, reported the first bale ginned on Oct. 2, from Lynn County producer Richard Bednarz, and this week reported a total bale count of 3,344 bales from the two plants. The News will begin reporting the weekly bale count this week, from eight area gins.

Serving Lynn County since 1903

New Home Coop-Lakeview gin officials reported their first bale on Oct. 10, from cotton brought in by the Clem Family, and a bale count this week of 479. Wells Coop Gin reported their first bale processed on Oct. 11, from cotton produced by Manuel Macias in Terry County, and on Oct. 12 Matt Taylor of Lynn County brought in cotton for the first bale processed at Farmers Coop Assn. #1 in Tahoka.

Last Thursday, Oct. 17, Close City Gin near Post and Grassland Coop

Gin processed their first bales of cotton. Ty Stark, a Lynn County producer, brought in the cotton to Grassland Coop Gin, and Garza County producer Ronnie Dunn was Close City Gin's first customer.

Evnn County News

In O'Donnell, Woolam Gin reported Craig Taylor brought in cotton for the first bale processed on Oct. 18. Farmers Coop Gin in O'Donnell expects to begin ginning next week.

Lynn County growers planted over 334,000 acres of cotton this year, which would rank among the largest acreage of cotton for any county in the U.S. However, more than 153,000 acres were failed due to the drought and storms. With that large number of failed acres, many producers replanted to grain sorghum. This year there are more than 67,000 acres of grain sorghum in Lynn County, according to county agent Bryan Reynolds with Texas AgriLife Extension Service.

Last Saturday, October 19, at Lubbock Lowrey Field at the Region 16 UIL 1A Marching Contest, the Tahoka 3-D Band earned its twelfth consecutive Superior marching trophy and now advances to the Area Marching Contest for the sixth consecutive time. Receiving all I's from all three judges, the Tahoka 3-D Band entertained the crowd that was loaded with Tahoka band supporters.

"As proud as we are of these

Joe Clark and Cotton-Eyed Joe, the 3-D Band quickly changed meters with its rendition of "Waltz." This was followed by the toe-tapping "Line Dance Boogie" and concluded with the popular "Jitterbug."

This coming Saturday, October 26, the Tahoka 3-D Band will be competing at the Area 1A UIL Marching Contest at Ratliff Stadium in Odessa at 10:15 a.m. as the second band in 1A. The results of the preliminaries will be at 3:30 p.m. Finals will start at 6:00 p.m. with the results at 8:15 p.m. "With there only being 17 1A's competing, only three bands will advance to State, which means our work is cut out for us," stated Rhodes, "but I believe these young people are definitely capable of pulling off a big upset. Please come support your Tahoka 3-D Band - it's a drive that is just under two hours," he added.

Robbie Gill was one of 70 veterans who flew from Lubbock to Washington, D.C. on the Texas South Plains Honor Flight last week. It was a trip that undoubtedly brought a flood of memories from his days of service in the Army Air Corps in World War II, and allowed him to see that his service to his country was - and is - appreciated.

The South Plains Honor Flight is an opportunity for South Plains veterans to fly to Washington DC and see first hand the memorials built in their honor; some of them for the first time and sadly, some of them for the last time. Robbie Gill, a former longtime New Home area resident, now lives in Lubbock with his wife Wanda. His family encouraged him to join the Honor Flight for the opportunity to join with other veterans in ceremonies honoring their service to their country.

Gill's sons, Stan and Stacy, flew on a separate flight to accompany their father in the nation's capitol for the Oct. 16-18 event honoring veterans and their families who attended. They took part in wreath-laying ceremonies, including at the State of Texas station at the Atlantic Theatre of the WWII War Memorial, shortly following the wreath laying ceremony on Oct. 16. Robbie was among Veterans who assisted in the ceremony honoring those who died serving in the Western European theatre.

Congressman Randy Neugebauer welcomed the Texas veterans, with his wife, Dana, and staff hosting the group in a tour of the Capitol building.

"I was honored last week to welcome over 70 veterans to our nation's capitol," said Congressman Neugebauer. "The South Plains Honor Flight brought these veterans to Washington, D.C. to commemorate their service and thank them for their sacrifice for our freedoms. The group of 150, which included the veterans' family and friends, came to the Capitol Building on Thursday morning for a visit to the House Floor and a tour of the building. I was inspired to hear some of their stories, spanning from the battles of World War II to the more recent raids in Afghanistan. We must never forget (See HONOR FLIGHT, page 6)

Bulldogs Get Ruffled By Eagles

By Kirstin Stice Middle School team lost 30-0 to Sundown on Oct. 17. "Eric Saldana had a big night on both offense and defense with impressive runs and tackles and Aleman also had a great night on defense and made a huge tackle in the late 4th quarter," said Coach Overstreet. "Every single one of these kids played great the entire night."

The middle school team will play Smyer at home at 5 p.m.

Bulldogs Defeat Eagles By Mia Saldana

JV won against Sundown 28-8 on Oct. 17. Scoring touchdowns were Isaac Arriazola, Luke Fleenor, and Britt Lockaby. Hadley Reynolds ran in the 2 pt. conversion.

The Bulldogs will play Smyer at home Thursday following the middle school game.

AST WEEK I saved thousands of dollars, and here is how I did it:

I didn't buy any new vehicles, go on any trips to Europe, nor did I go fishing.

How did fishing get in there? Well, I realized fishing isn't as expensive as those other things, but it does cost a little money, and besides I just happened to re-read a column written 16 years ago about how I never had caught a fish large enough to take home.

I still haven't, maybe because I haven't gone fishing at all in these last 16 years, having learned early in life that I am not a fisherman. Years ago, I would occasionally go fishing because I had friends who insisted it was a lot of fun. And I usually went with one of them, to some place well known for good fishing, but I never caught anything, and neither did any of my companions on those days. I was just bad luck for everybody.

Once at Lake Stamford, a heavy rain kept me and two other guys inside a camper all weekend. We couldn't fish, had no playing cards, but I did have my banjo. I taught Joe Crabtree of Slaton how to play "Little Brown Jug," and he drove me and the other guy nuts playing it about 300 times. Finally we cooked and ate the pieces of liver we had brought to use as bait.

And most of my other fishing efforts were about that much fun, too.

Friends who are real fisherpeople used to tell me that impatience was my problem. They would tell me how much they enjoy going out and spending the whole day just fishing and communing with nature, regardless of how few or how many fish they caught. (They lied about some other things, too. I know they had more fun when they caught lots of big fish.)

I admit to being impatient at fishing, though. If I hadn't caught anything in 30 minutes, I was ready to go do something else. Of course, it may not have helped that since I was bored, I spent 29 of those minutes singing the old song, "Three Little Fishes."

That was one of those neat, sensible songs from my youth that told about the three little fishes "in an itty bitty pool," and progressed to words like "Boop, boop dittum dottum whattum chew." No wonder the fish stayed away from my boat.

Anyway, I am glad someone likes to fish, because I like to eat fish, boneless on a bun.

At one time there was a craze in some colleges where idiot guys who must have barely made it out of high school would see who could eat the most live goldfish, which are fairly easy to catch when they live in bowls.

Leopards outlast O'Donnell 43-35

The O'Donnell Eagles traveled to New Home for an exciting six-man football game last week, with each team taking the lead or managing a tie several times before the Leopards finally prevailed 43-35

After a scoreless first quarter, the Eagles opened scoring when A.J. Rivas ran 2 yards, but a few minutes later, Jonathan Flores went 8 yards for New Home to tie the game at 6. O'Donnell regained the lead on a pass from Sterlyn Wilkie to Rivas, and went ahead 22-6 on a 10-yard run by had just one touchdown in the third, on a 13-yard pass from Rivas to Jerrod Jaquess.

In the fourth, the Leopards had two touchdowns by Clayton Walden, one on a 51-yard run and the other a 26-yard pass from Blaine Watts.

Sundown hands Tahoka second district loss, 33-12

The visiting Sundown Roughnecks roughed up Tahoka last Friday, 33-12, the second straight loss in district play for the Bulldogs, who now are 3-5 for the year and 0-2 in district, with this week off before heading to Hale Center next week.

Sundown opened scoring last Friday in the second quarter when Chad Hodge ran 68 yards, but that feat was more than matched about 3 minutes later when Bulldog QB Trystan Hilger and receiver Isiah Vega teamed up on a sparkling 84-yard touchdown pass play.

There were three more touchdowns in the last 2 minutes of the wild second quarter as Sundown built a 20-6 lead and the Hilger-Vega combination clicked again for a 10-yard touchdown with just 4 seconds left in the half.

Tahoka did not score in the second half, and Sundown added two touchdowns in the fourth period to win the game.

Hilger completed 6 of 20 passes for two touchdowns, both to Vega, and 179 yards. He also was Tahoka's leading rusher, with 60 yards on 15 carries. Ke'Shawn Hood gained 43 yards on 12 carries.

SPECIAL GOOD THROUGH NOVEMBER 30, 2013!

Zachry Publications and Permian Basin Oil and Gas magazine have designed and launched an online interactive map (at pbogmap. com) showing the latest crude oil and natural gas drilling permits issued in West Texas by the Texas

Railroad Commission. The new map, which is updated weekly, shows locations by county of drilling permits issued in the region to exploration companies with data collected from the Texas Railroad Commission, the state agency that regulates the industry. It plots on a map of each county the location of wells being drilled.

Basic data such as company name, permit number, issue date and depth of well to be drilled are available to online users first by selecting the county on the map and then by clicking on the icon for each permit.

Access to the new map is free. Online users may access the map from the website of Permian Basin Oil and Gas monthly magazine, from Zachry Publications' new biweekly online newsletter PBOG Blast, and from pbogmap.com.

Robbie Gill of Lubbock never forgets a World War II B-17 bomber and the mission date of July 28, 1944. It is still vivid in his memory.

"We inherited the plane after we got over there," he remembers of the four-engine bomber that took off from England seven weeks after D-Day as part of the 8th Air Force Division's 350th Squadron.

Gill was the nine-man crew's

The first had been a milk run, meaning there was no anti-aircraft fire and no enemy fighters. Even the second mission had seemed to be going unusually well. "Most of the 8th Air Force planes started home with very few casualties. But our route back was across Holland, and then the North Sea," Gill said.

'We began our descent and had reached 10,000 feet," he remembers.

The pilots, flying the bombers in formation, were ordered to reduce speed. The danger of enemy territory was behind.

He was told later by a crewman who was watching from another plane that his B-17 overflew the plane that was ahead and to the right. When they collided, the lower plane rolled, striking Gill's craft in the midsection with a devastating blow, and he was knocked unconscious.

"When I came to, there was absolutely no noise. No plane noise. It was deadly quiet," he recalls. Struggling to regain his senses, he removed himself from a pile of ammunition belts.

"I found my parachute, put it on and opened the escape hatch in the tail section." Gill looked down and could see a large fire on the water below. It was his plane's wreckage and that of the other plane they had collided with

The Tahoka ISD Board of Trustees met in regular session on Tuesday, October 15, approving a tentative change in the school calendar and the purchase of sewing machines for the Family and Consumer Science program.

The board voted to change a holiday in the school calendar if the 3-D Band qualifies for the State Marching contest. They would march on Monday, November 4, and the Board voted to move the Monday, February 17 holiday to the Monday, November 4 date only if the band is going to the State Marching contest, in order to allow more of the fans to be able to attend the contest. The 3-D Band competes in Area contest this weekend in Odessa, which will determine their eligibility for the state contest.

Trustees approved the purchase of 10 new Bernina sewing machines for the Family and Consumer Science program. These new sewing machines will replace the over-30-year-old machines that are in use at this time. Family and Consumer Science teacher Donna Stone presented the proposal by comparing the different quality of sewing machines that could be purchased.

School principals Jeff Perez. Jason Powell and Jeff Fleenor were recognized at the meeting. as Governor Perry had declared
