SIMON COTULLA,

Texas' Largest City, a Busy Manu. facturing Center, Supplying the Great Southwest With a Multitude of High Grade Goods.

When settlements in Texas were few and far between, San Antonio was the great market for the big ranches that dotted the country for 100 and 200 miles in every direction. Freight in those days was brought to San Antonio on ox carts from In-dianola, the nearest seaport, and sent out to the north, northwest and west in great trains of prairie schooners. Rail connection with cities of North Texas and the absence of direct rails from San Antonio has de prived this city of some of the trade of the northwest territory tempora rily, but towns and cities that have for years looked on San Antonio as their chief trading point are still loyal and with rail connection into the northwest, that soon is to come, much of the trade of that part of the state will return to San Antonio. With the new deep water port at Aransas Harbor, soon to 'e connected with San Antonio by veral lines of railway, San Antoni its goods freight rates so low th can meet competitive r s to every point in this southwest territory.

San Antonio ranks oday, as it has for years, as one of the great market centers of Texas and the great market center for the south-west territory. The jobbers in this city handle every known line of merchandise, dry goods, notions, hats, shoes, harness, saddlery and leather goods, groceries and grocers' sundries, liquors, lumber, crockery and house furnishings. Its manufactur-ers include malt liquors, confec-tionery, macaroni, that will compete with any imported article, and chile and chile products that are shipped to every portion of the United States. The foundries and steel works in San Antonio are among the largest in the south, and barrels, crates, doors, windows and other such ar-ticles are shipped to consumers hundreds of miles distant; overalls, cigars, shirts, saddlery, agricultural implements, ice machines, lanterns and many other articles made in San Antonio have received the stamp of approval from hundreds of customers not only in Texas, but in other states and in the Republic of Mexico.

The question has been asked some times by those not acquainted with real conditions here: "What makes San Antonio grow?" Many have wondered how San Antonio continues to keep her place as the metropolis of the State of Texas notwith-standing the slower development of the surrounding country. If those making these inquiries will come to San Antonio and study business consan Antonio and study business conditions here these questions soon will be answered. In addition to the tourists that flock to San Antonio each year and leave thousands of dollars in return for the hospitality extend d to them, the jobbers and antony and the surrounding terri-tory. Their salesmen go from town to town, spreading the good name of this city and obtaining orders for their houses, and the "made in San Antonio" goods, once used, are al-ways afterwards in demand. The jobbers and manufacturers of San Antonio want the people throughout this territory to know wholesale houses and what goods are made in San Antonio and have in preparation a series of articles along these lines. They make no exaggerated claims regarding the goods they handle or the manufactures sent out from here, but want the people to understand that goods handled by the San Antonio jobbers are equal in quality and price to goods that can be bought in any other market in the world, and that the "Made in San Antonio" stamp is a guarantee that no better goods can be obtained anywhere in the world.

The business men of San Antonio are alert for business and they know that if they expect to get the business they must sell and produce the goods. That they have done so in the past is attested by their steadily growing trade and the fact that they have held customers for years and still are holding them, in spite of most flattering offers from other points. They expect the trade of this city will continue to expand, but they also want their customers to know more about them, how they are doing business, what they are making or selling and how it is they can compete successfully with jobbers and manufactures elsewhere.

During the past year the jobbers and manufacturers of San Antonio organized several trade excursions in order to get better acquainted with their customers in several parts of the state and during the coming year other trade excursions probably will be conducted. In the meantime, an invitation is extended to all to come to San Antonio and call on the busi-ness men of the city, see them in their offices and at their factories and let the human interest element in the life of each draw them closer together.

WHERE CLEANLINESS

A Pilgrimage to the Home of the San Antonio Macaroni Factory, One of the Clean Places of San Antonio.

Every great institution is the lengthened shadow of a single man.

—Emerson.

And one of the emen is Ed Dreiss, president of the San Antonio Macaroni Factory. Few Texans are aware of the fact that San Antonio, always known as a health resort, is a busy manufac-turing center, and chief among these industrial plants it has in its midst is one of the largest food product manufacturing concerns in the United States.

The San Antonio Macaroni Factory.

This modern industrial plant, one of San Antonio's proudest boasts, justly lays claim to its well-known slogan, "Where Cleanliness Is Climax," for various and well-founded reasons. Situated on South Flores street, away from the noise and the grime of the business district, there stands a large white brick building, architecturally inviting and pleasing to the eye, within whose confines there are produced those famous edibles of Italian origin, Macaroni, Spa-ghetti, Vermicelli, as well as Egg Noodles of every description, and also the famous "Chilimac," the flavor of which carries one's memory back to the witchery of the Spanish art of cooking wherein they excelled in blending the chili pepper with cereals and meats.

Entering the plant, the cordial invitation, a placard on the wall, urges you to inspect the factory and wit-ness the numerous processes required to produce the finished article. Most forcibly you will be impressed with the immaculate cleanliness of the floors, the white painted walls, the where, and, most agreeably of all, the presence throughout of pure, balmy San Antonio ozone that circulates unrestrained in all parts of the building. Truly, money and science have not been used sparingly and delay. PROMPT shipments guar here to reach the apex of sanitary perfection. Under the guidance of the superintendent of the factory, you are first shown the giant mixing ma-chine, where the finest hard winter wheat, together with pure artesian water, is mixed with other ingredients to make the plastic dough; from this machine the mixture is carried to the kneader, a large circular steel tub in which there revolve immense round triangular discs that knead the mass into shape. These shapes are then transferred to the great steam presses, of which there are two double and two single presses. Through these presses, untouched by human hands, the dough mixture is put in one end and comes forth at the other in the form of delicious Macaroni, Spaghetti, Vermicelli or Noodles as the case may be. After this process, the Macaroni and Spaghetti are strung on four-foot sticks and these sticks are then car-ried out by workmen to the drying racks, where the pure air circulates freely. These racks are out in the open, protected by screens. In case of inclement weather, these racks can be emptied in quick time and the products transferred to any one of the immense dry rooms, of which there are eight. These dry rooms are constantly stored to a capacity of 5600 pounds of Macaroni, Spaghetti Vermicelli and Noodles each. All these products are air-dried, with

All these products are air-dried, with the exception of Vermicelli, which is kiln-dried, and for which purpose there is a special room. One of the modera innovations of this great plant is a narrow-gauge railway system which runs to every part of the building. By it the ma-torials are brought from the stock terials are brought from the stock rooms to the mixing machines, thence from there to the kneading apparatus from where the journey continues to the steam presses. The finished pro-ducts is then carried by rail to the drying rooms and from the drying rooms to the packing department, whence it is finally conveyed by rail to the shipping department and through to the very doors of freight cars on the siding outside the build-ing. This interior railway was installed at a great expense, but it has justified the outlay by reason of the expeditious sanitary manner in which the products are transported from the raw material to the dining tables the raw material to the dining tables of the people in the great Southwest. These products have become universally known, not only in Texas, but in other parts of the United States, as the "Lion Brand" and the fame of their quality and cleanliness has traveled far, and you are buying the best that skill and money can produce when you call for the carton with the lion's head on it. Remember "Lion Head" Macaroni, Spaghetti, Vermicelli, Noodles and Chilimac. This company sends, out free mac. This company sends, out free of cost, a neat little Recipe Book, telling all about delicious dishes that can be prepared from their products. Just send them your address and one will be maded you.

The farmers along the valley in the Rock-Daniel neighborhood appeared before the Commissioners' Court Tuesday and asked for a bridge to be built across the Nueces at that point. THE SCALP LAW.

Is the wild animal bounty law a good law? That is a question we have heard discussed considerably this week. It is costing the state many thousands of dollars to kill out the coyotes and wild cats and in this particular section we believe these animals are a benefit rather than a detriment. They live most entirely on rabbits, rodents, etc., and when they are extermined, rabbits will multiply into untold thousands. As it stands today to believe one rabbit does more injury to the stockman and farmer than two coyotes. It is said that one jack rabbit will destroy enough grass to pasture a steer, but unlike the steer which simply bites it off, the rabbit destroys its roots. The farmer must surround his field with rabbit proof wire, if he would prevent his garden and truck crops from being destroy-

The Commissioner's Court of LaSalle county in session this paid out on rabbit scalps at five or ten cents each, the country would have been benefited, but as it is the money has been expended in exterminating animals that are really a benefit to the farmer and the stockman from the fact that they are destroyers of their worst enemy-the rabbit. We understand that not only in this county, but also in other counties of this section the bounty law on coyotes especially is unpopular and there is a possibility that the present legislature will be asked to repeal it.

What is actully needed is a The Representative of the 80th bounty on rabbit scalps. The country literally swarms with will run into the thousands each

> The special demonstration Northern Railway is now on its tour of the system and will reach Cotulla March 5th. Our people do not want to let this date slip from their minds. If we can get as good a turnout to this as is usually had at a tent show, everybody will be there. Good crowds are meeting the train at every stop. As Cotulla is to be one of the only two stops between San Antonio and Laredo, we must make good.

With the season that is now in the ground our cotton crop this year should be a bumper and barring any unforseen events it will be. Everybody has an optimistic feeling. More land is being cleared over the country and the acreage put in the fleecy staple this year will larger than ever. With our truck crop being marketed now, our onion and cattle a couple of months later, and then a good cotton crop in the fall, who will say that we won't be going some?

Did you ever see as much cloudy weather in Southwest Texas? It appears that the weather man has got all balled up and is dishing out the wrong brand to us. At any rate he is giving us a different kind to what we have been used to, and while we don't mind a little of this brand once in awhile, we do object to taking it in unbroken doses. La Salle County Commissioners Favor Repeal of Scalp Law.

The Commissioners Court of La Salle county, in session this week adopted a resolution favororing a repeal of the bounty law on coyotes and wild cats. Copies were sent to the Senator and Representative of this district with the request that they take the matter up. Over six hundred scalps were paid for at this term, and the feeling generally is that the extermination of the coyote will do more harm than good, as the rabbits, the worst enemy of the stockman and farm er, will then literally take the Following is the resolution as February 12. - To the Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives of the State of

The undersigned, composing the Commissioners Court of La-Salle County, Texas, would most respectfully represent and show as follows:

That on account of the desruction of the coyotes and wild cats in this section of the country the rabbits are increasing rapidly and a serious condition confronts us: that in addition to the filthy work imposed upon the Court by the law requiring us to pay bounties on the said animals when killed this is costing the State and the Counties considerable money which is worse than wasted for the reason that said coyotes and wild cats do the people practically damage but do a great deal of good by keeping down the number of rabbits, which said rabbits are ruining the farms by eating the produce and ruining the ranges by eating the grass.

We believe we represent the sentiment of nine-tenths of the taxpaying citizens of this county respectfully but es setly questing that you at once repeal so much of the bounty law as requires payment for the killing of cayotes and wild cats.

Respectfully Submitted.

THE "AUTO" FOR BEEKEEPERS, the motion is continued. I have County Beekeepers' Club at Redlands, Cal. (By Gec. L. Emerson.)

The first cost will be from $500 up. The operating expense varies from 1-2 to 1 1-2 cents a mile, and the mechanical expense should not exceed $20 a year for the first five years, to which must be added the price of a new set of tires, for the average man will about use up a set a year.

It is practical to buy a secondhand machine and rebuild it to sait the beeman's needs. It is necessary if you are not posted in automobile to get the services of an expert e imine the machine and pass on worth and suitability for rebuilding for your needs. Do not he sitate get a machine because you do n know anything about one, for the that it will soon be a very great convenience not to understand handling and ordinary care of a m chine. As fast as the auto is adapted to certain uses, it is found much more satisfactory than the horse that usually the horse is never used again.

Among all the commercial needs I know of none to which the "gas wagon" is so necessary as to the production of honey. There are two points of advantage that sind out prominently in our calling that ne not be considered in other lin First, stings won't hurt it and ma it run away, kick your head off of lie down and die; consequently, yo an haul all your supplies right to the honey house and unload the at your pleasure and move the away with the same ease. The ond is, that it saves so much the rush season. In a busin like ours, where we harvest our en tire crop in the course of a fe weeks, any convenience of equipment that will help us to save time will often mean more who of us is there that has not had considerable loss at one time or another by not being able to keep up with the pace that the bees set? The

The auto is of special value in moving bees; in fact, it removes the saved as the bees keep themselves we can eat ourselves. gorged with honey only plong as Los Angeles, Cal.

Delivered Before the San Bernardino ed them twelve miles, and put them in the apiary on the new stands in one hour and fifteen minutes. It was all done in the cool of the morning, there being not much chance of the combs melting down. Where horses are used about bees, it is a two-man job; this is not necessarily so with the auto.

One man, with an auto carrying ten cases of honey at a time, will haul more honey to the station than two men with a 4-horse team. If at night, the machine has not snowed the horses under too far, put on a night shift and keep it going, as it is not tired out. It may also be sent to town at night for a load of provisions, or cases and cans. With us, the auto with four men now does the same work that required eight men and five horses, and the work is better done. We have 1300 colonies in eight apiaries.

It is practical to use your motor to drive your hive-making machin-ery, pump water, saw wood, or any other power use, and in this way make it earn something while the bees are idle, but if you want to lay it aside, how much cheaper it is to run it in the shed and give it no more attention than to take care of and feed the horses!

Few people have grasped the idea that the gasoline power is the horse of tomorrow. Two men with a large tractor can do more ploying than a number of men with 30 heads of horses. The small orchardist with 5 to 20 acres of land must have a team, but there is not enough work to been it have more than half of to keep it busy more than half of the time, and the rest of the time they are eating their heads off. This is not so with the gas tractor, the expense stops when you put it in the shed. Besides, the machine has no will of its own; it will not reach up to browse on a tree, or perhaps run the cultivator into another tree and knock of fthe bark. While cultivating it does not get tired and have to rest every other round.

On a small farm or orchard small machine can do anything that a horse can, and do it better and cheaper, but this machine should be was gathered in four days, and it was capped solid (black sage).

The auto is of small solutions and it frame which is controlled to a suboperator's seat. A machine may take the place of all other farming immost disagreeable features, and is very much easier on the bees. The jolting does not last so long, and a Growing hay for horses is a waste; corresponding amount of honey is let us use that ground for something

STORING FRUIT IN WINTER.

For years we stored in pits, using straw for bottoms and sides. Then cellars and fruit houses came into Shallow bins were used to admit of picking over when necessary We tried packing in barrels and storing them away, but these were too inconvenient to inspect and assort. Now we store apples and pears in bins, using dry forest leaves for botbins, using dry forest leaves for bottoms and between layers, first a layer of leaves than of apples and so on till bin is filled, says J. H. Haynes dition.

Angered When Her Son Is Denounced She Clears the Big Tent in a Hurry.

Bluefield, W. Va., Feb. 11.-Mrs. William Street, wife of a mountaineer, has been freed after trial on a charge of disturbing the worship of a "Holy Roller" meeting near her home. According to witnesses, Mrs. Street turned the meeting into a real roller affair.
"Jim" Street, her son, who has been a regular attendant at the meetings, stolidly refused to become a "Roller," and finally the leaders of the revival denounced him in unmeasured terms. Mrs. Street heard of the incident and proceed to the meeting place. By the time she had reached the platform from which the exhorters plead the big tent was empty, except-ing for a few "Rollers" who were having trouble with their hands and legs. Mrs. Street was arrested and taken before Squire Murphy. who told her she had done well and might keep the good work up so far as his office was concerned.
