TEXT BOOK BILL QUERIES. Peculiarities of Writing and Other

Things Noted. Mr. Feagle

is not Certain. Feagle, whoenrolled the school text book bill, was here to-day and Sunday school every Sunday. Prayer took a look at it. He seems to have some doubt about the first page, or at any rate cannot tell how

He remembers that in enrolling one bill the enacting clause was discovered by one of the senators to have been left off and he was requested to rewrite the first page correctly, which he did, but does not know if it was the text book bill. The impression is growing that in the hurry of enrolling the bill, owing to the number of bills District Attorney, Hon. W. H. Gill. being passed and the limited time in which to do the work, both the enrolling clerk and the committee passed on the bill without close

The bill seems destined to become as celebrated by its untimely demise as if it had become a law and had solved the text book question. Senator Page, the third day of the session, introduced the bill. It had been framed with great care. There was a popular demand for some such measure, and no member of Court convenes the first Monday's in either house of the legislature was better fitted to solve the problem than Senator Page. He had been February, May, August and Novem- a practical educator, he had been a publisher and he had legislative

War upon the bill was inaugur ated from the beginning. Amendments were tacked on it that impaired in a measure the efficiency of the system proposed. But the nembers of both houses were practically unanimous on the project. It was held up two weeks in the senate committee, but when taken up in the senate it passed with unusual expedition. From the print-Precinct No. 6, Porter Springs, 1st ed indorsements, however, it appears to have laid up two weeks in he senate engrossing committee. In the house it met delays and came near death's door by an amendment by Col. Brown of Gravson which provided an appropriation of $100,-000 for state publication in case book publishers should combine and refuse to bid for supplying text books. This amendment held its own in the house, but the senate was opposed to it and it was "conferenced" out. As far as can be learned here the conditions of the contest have not changed within the past few weeks. Mills and Crisp are still the leading men, and the chances are that the contest will eventually narrrw down to them.
