An Italian cure was about making a journey. Many friends called to say good-bye, and, as had happened be fore, each gave him a paper on which was jotted down a list of things which the writer wished the traveler to purchase for him. Only one of these friends accompanied his memorandum with the necessary money. This one triend's commission the cure carefully executed, and delivered the articles to him. When the others called for their goods, he said: "Soon after I sailed, I thought they were begging pardon for took out all your papers to look them on the deck before me. Suddenly there came a gust of wind and they were all blown away. I could not remember what they contained, and so I could not do your errands." "But," they objected, "you beought what Soand-So asked you to get." "Oh, yes," said the cure; "you see, he enclosed the cash with his memorandum, and that kept it from blowing away."

How Aigrettes Are Obtained. A little pamphlet just issued by the Society for the Protection of Birds in England, it appears that the white Written in One Month to Help's Friend aigrettes, so much worn on bonnets and hats and as ornaments for the hair, are obtained from the egret or the heron. The bird is found in warm climates and are smaller and more graceful in line than the English white, very delicate and spirally curled toward the point. The plumage of the egret is so snowy white that different species of the bird have been by writing the opera in my place culata and candidissima. BATTLE WITH A BEE.

A Greedy Humming Bird Who Wanted All the Honey.

An observer writes us that he is satisfied that there is just as much rivalry between humming birds and bees in their quest for honey as there is between members of the human race in their struggle for the good things of life, and describes a recent quarrel he saw in a Portland garden, where a humming bird with an angry dash expressed its disapproval of the presence of a big bumblebee in the same tree. The usually pugnacious bee incontinently fled, but he did not leave the tree. He dashed back and forth among horned lizard that is believed to have the branches and white blossoms, the been carried in the wind's vortex from humming bird in close pursuit. FOOD AND THE BODY.

That veteran vegetarian, Prof. Alcott, of the school of Concord philosophers, used to say that if a man cuts pork he becomes piggified. This assertion of the old philosopher has been much dispoted and ridiculed, but now The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" comes forward in his recent book, "Over the Teacups," reasserting the same dietectic philosophy in the following paragraph: "Most assuredly believe that body and mind are much ually depended upon.
