FROM AUSTIN.

AUSTIN, Tex., March 29, 1894.

To THE COURIER—Since the white wings of peace have hovered over and soothed to rest all the differences in the democratic party...

Gov. Hogg on the Sugar Bounty. Will Lambert, Esq., Commander Dick Dowling Camp, No. 197, United Confederate Veterans, Austin, Texas, Jan. 17, 1894.

Dear Sir: In replying to your letter of the 16th and the memorial and resolutions of the same date contained therein by the Dick Dowling camp, No. 197, United Confederate Veterans, calling on me as governor of Texas to accept from the United States what is known as the "sugar bounty," and place the same at the disposal of the board of managers of the Confederate Home for the use of that institution, I beg to say courteously, respectfully, firmly and finally that under no circumstances, even at the request of every soldier, ex-soldier, citizen, man, woman and child in Texas, would I comply with any such demand. The State of Texas is fully able to support the Confederate Home without accepting any "sugar bounty" or corruption fund; and I am utterly ashamed of any man or set of men claiming to advocate and support the doctrine of State's rights and sovereignty, who would ask their government to cringe its knee before Federal authority and accept a bounty of any kind, especially one which is so vicious in its character, discriminating as it does in favor of the wealthy few against the aggregate poor.

I am not an ex-Confederate, nor have I any kin people who are, for the reason that I was too young to be in the war, and all my adult male relatives either died or were killed in the conflict except one, who died afterwards, no doubt, from exposure during the service. Were I to be a party to the acceptance of this money from the Federal government, appropriated as it has been in violation of the fundamental principles of state sovereignty, I would feel more like a renegade, a traitor to the cause of justice and right, a violator of principle, and unworthy of the trust I hold as governor of a proud state, than I would a patriot and self-respecting citizen.

If the Confederate veterans have any complaint to make against the management of the Home or of lack of means to support it, then I am willing to join them, as I have heretofore, in doing anything, consistent with propriety and public interest to help accomplish the ends and aim in view through the method of appropriation by the legislature. But I repeat to you that under no circumstances can the people of this state, or any set of them, compel me to violate my sense of propriety, my official obligations, nor to sacrifice principles that I have contended for so long and expect to combat for in the future by accepting this polluted, vicious, corrupt, unwholesome, iniquitous, republican sugar bounty bill, aimed at the destruction of the independent autonomy of the state, having as their centralization upon Federal power.

With compliments and kindest regards to yourself and the other members of the association which bears the name of the gallant Irish captain, whose memory I always love to revere and shall continue to honor, I beg to subscribe myself your very obedient servant.

Coxey's Inspiration. It is remarkable to what trivial circumstances great events sometimes owe their origin.

Take for example the inspiration of the army of peace, which the redoubtable Commander Coxey is now moving on to Washington.

This remarkable Napoleon of reform was erstwhile an humble citizen of an Ohio hamlet, unknown to the great majority of the huns which compose his army. Nature had probably designed the thoughtful and progressive Coxey for a great man, but fate had somehow overlooked him. Still he did not despair and finally his opportunity came. The source of his inspiration is thus described by one of his trusted lieutenants and possible future biographer: "One dark and rainy night during the holidays of 1891, while Brother Coxey was driving from Massillon to Pauls Station, four miles north of Massillon, he happened about in the muddy ruts of the road and when about half way home he suddenly had an idea that the only way to get a good road system was for the government to build it and for congress to exercise its constitutional right to make money and pay for it. Thus three birds would be killed with one stone—a good road system, plenty of money and work for the idle."

There is a tide in the affairs of men, which, taken at the flood, leads on to Washington and Coxey was not the man to let such a tide escape him. He courageously grasped the flood and all prepared for the grand march. The rest the world knows. From the Pacific to the Atlantic, from Goose creek to Buffalo bayou, his name is on every tongue; his soldier are at every back door and children are crying for tidings concerning his progress. His hand with magic, stone is poised aloft and the three birds which he proposes to bring down by it are crouching on a low hub in patient anticipation. If they don't take flight and fly away before he has turned loose with well directed aim, Coxey's army will have pie and the good roads problem will have been solved.

Coxey's motto should be "Tall oaks from little acorns grow." Post.

ED. COURIER—Well we have harmonized at last. Hogg stopped down and kissed George Clark then the "Little Giant" crawled upon his bosom and kissed him back and the thing was done. Matlock wept on Baker's neck, the rest of the committee threw up their hats, tore up the earth and tent their clothes in very ecstasy over the "Great Harmony Compromise" and then all took a drink and repeated it and opened up a regular democratic love feast. Logan slipped off down in the Trinity bottom, and secretly threw that knife he had in his sleeve, into the river and said nothing to any one, and now the grand old democratic cohort are ready for the fray. Let them come; lay on Melbourne and dog-gone the march who cries hold out though. Where is Caney and his crowd now? and where, oh, where will the third party rest its head. "How sad, consensim!"

The best laid schemes of mice or men gang oft to a glee."

Mr. J. E. Hollingsworth sold another herd of cattle this week.

Mr. W. H. Campbell has about completed a new residence which will be occupied by Mr. Stevens our R. R. agent. He moved into it this week.

Mrs. R. McLean spent a few days in town last week visiting friends.

Rev. D. L. Cain, pastor of the Methodist church at this place, has arrived and is boarding at Mr. Jas. Owens.

Mrs. Mittie Adams, of Palestine, is in the city visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Harman.

Mrs. C. I. Keen, of Daly, has been quite sick again this week.

Mrs. Lizzie Little, of Pleasant Hill is in the city on a visit.

Mr. Will Tully has sewer works at the New Hotel, and is now putting on a fresh coat of paint.

The health here now is excellent and the doctors are resting.

KEYSTONE.

DALY, March 21, 1894.

ED. COURIER—I wish to offer a few words in memory of a friend, a man who dared to do right because it was right, a man who was true to his convictions and his friends, he never swerved from his love for his friends. Thomas Beazley was always on the side of the poor and oppressed, and right, a man of heart to help the needy, yet so quiet and unassuming was he, that his nearest neighbors knew not of his acts of charity. Although I have known Mr. Beazley only a few years, the love and admiration I have formed for him, because of his loyalty to what he thought to be right, because of his generous disposition, is such that few men merit. Thomas Beazley shall ever live in my memory as one of the truest types of manhood it has ever been my lot to meet.
