Recently a Chicago boy thought it would be a great scheme to tie himself on to a dray by rope that was LATEST DEVELOPMENTS fastened to the vehicle, and trailing behind it. A policeman warned him to let it alone, but he made a running noose, and, slipping it over his head, let it fall around his waist. Presently he found that the dray was going at a pace which made it hard to follow. and he strove to get a loose. He slackened the noose and let it fall, trying to step out of it. It caught him by the ankle, and before he knew what was the matter he was jerked off his feet and dragging over the pavement. His screams called the the attention of passers-by, and the dray was stopped, but not until he was seriously injured.

The Effect of Canal Drainage

For some years there has been a great deal of speculation on the effect of priety of such a measure. It was claimed to surround their front page with a interfere with the navigation of the De- expeditious manner. troit and St. Clair rivers. The channels are not very deep, especially at certain points, and it was stated that this heavy drainage would shut out vessels of heavy tonnage, especially in the water in the great lakes is always much navigators-notably those connected favor of it-have insisted that this was Men old at thirty. Chew and smoke, eat little all humbug. There has been so rauch discussion on this point that disinterested experts have been looking the matter up. It is found that this canal will require ten per cent of the volume of water that goes over Niagara Falls. After a certain number of years this amount will be double. It is not difficult to see that to draw off a quantity of water equal to twenty per cent of Niagara's flow might seriously interfere with the navigation of the rivers aforementioned. It is said that the water of the lakes will be lowered from twelve to eighteen inches, and as seasons of excessive drouth are not uncommon, a good deal more than this must be allowed for. Then, the only They are colored plates of weeds in way to insure a successful transit through these rivers would be extensive and deep dredging. This would necessarily entail enormous expense. If the canal project goes through, it would be no more than fair to incorporate in the contract an agreement to make the channels of the St. Clair and Detroit rivers perfectly free, even in the driest
