Robert Fitzsimmons and party were in Dallas recently and Fitz said: "I believe that the opportunity for Colliery and I to move on is given soon at El Paso, but I don't believe that Corbett will ever fight me. At the same time he will either fight me or go out of the business. He will have to do one or the other. And I don't believe he will fight me had the worst of this thing; all the way through. I got the worst of the affair at Hos Springs, but it was not my fault. If the fight isn't brought off at El Paso, the Olympic club at New Orleans will bring it off. I am touring around through Texas waiting to hear from Van Sturt at El Paso, whether he is ready to move on or to fight." He left Dallas for Galveston.

THE growth of Crockett is exceeding the expectations of the most enthusiastic. The population has doubled in the last few years. Houston county too is filling up rapidly and has a population now of at least 25,000.

A THANKSGIVING proclamation comes with peculiar grace from Grover Cleveland this year. He can survey the field and contemplate with supreme satisfaction the fleeing remnants of a party which he has wrecked by his stubborn and heartless indifference.

We learn that D. A. Nunn Jr. will not be a candidate for re-election to the office of district attorney. In this event the friends of J. W. Madden will present and push his name for district judge, the position now held by James R. Burnett. Early last spring the editor suggested the candidacy of Mr. Madden, in the contingency which now seems probable, and did so in full recognition of his fitness for the place, as well as his availability in the light of prospective embarrassments which, more than likely, will again cloud the situation from a party standpoint.

THERE is no disguising the fact that the democratic party in a national sense is routed and wrecked. Of course they will come together in national convention and go through the solemn and pompous ceremonial of nominating a ticket, but interest in the event will be chiefly spectacular, for no one for a moment seriously entertains the idea that there is the remotest chance of electing such a ticket. It will be years before the jarring elements will have been harmonized and the rough places smoothed away for a union of discordant interests and clashing policies. But the time will come, though it may be years, when the happy consummation shall be realized. The true principles of the party, for the nonce spurned, are as eternal as the everlasting hills, and as all-pervading as time itself. They are as enduring and indestructible as the theory of representative government, and the party which stands for these principles will come again, purged of marplots and demagogues, chastened by adversity, strong in the strength of renewed vigor, and beautiful as sunrise over the mountains.

JUDGE JAMES R. BURNETT, we learn, still embraces the sweet delusion that he will not have to stand for reelection next year. Just how a man of his legal attainments should reach such a conclusion we are at no little loss to discern. Section 27 of the "General Provisions" of the constitution reads thus:

"In all elections to fill vacancies of office in this state, it shall be to fill the unexpired term only." Now this language is plain, unequivocal, and admits of no double construction. Judge Reeves was elected in 1892 for the period of four years. He qualified and occupied the bench for a few months only, when his sad and unfortunate death occurred. Governor Hogg then appointed the Hon. A. B. Watkins, of Athens, Judge, who, under our statutes, could only hold till the general election in 1894. Judge Watkins was then nominated by the democrats, and Judge Burnett by a mongrel combination of republicans and populists. By methods at once sinister and unheard-of in a contest for a place of such exalted character, Judge Burnett was elected. It cannot be successfully contended that Mr. Burnett was elected for a longer term than to fill out the unexpired term of Judge Reeves which will expire on the qualification of Judge Burnett's successor in 1896. These are the facts and the law as we understand them, and we fail to see how a decision in the Fourth Texas on which we are informed Judge Burnett relies for his tenure, can overturn the plain provisions of the constitution.

AN AFFECTIONATE AND LAST FAREWELL.

"The money makes me not On the banks that we have passed In their bloom, And the angels we loved to hear Have been carried for many a year On their tomb."

The following doggerel lines are thrown off on the spur of the moment and are dedicated with sentiments of affectionate and profound respect to the memory of our late friends, The Populists, for "memory" is the only legacy which they have left us:

Tenderly and softly we are put to bed, The remains of the populist party. Not a sigh is heard, not a tear is shed As the dirt falls on our coffin's lid, The wildest-eyed crowd that ever hid For the people's support, by demagogues fed With promises galleons and hearty.

We have trodden the paths that others have trod, Beset with troubles dire and many, We have found a resting place under the sod, With our toes to the daisies and our hope in a God, Beset with doubts and all for our folly In befuddling the people and preaching, by golly, That paper dollars are good as any.

We are buried, we are buried and all forlorn, With not one ray of hope to befriend us; We are out of the pale of resurrection's morn, And the archangel's blast on his winding horn, Will never disturb the remains of this band Which afflicted the people of all the land As none ever afflicted them before us.

Never, no never, will the foghorn bawol Of Granddads again delight us, Nor the tiresome humming of Jim Beasley's kazoo Awake the sad echoes as he bores it through you, While Rencher and Bennett and Tustant and all Stand by with a check all aflame with galls, And greet Jim with applause as he spits us.

Here in peace let us rest! Arouse us no more, For no earthly use is there for us; We have humbugged the people as you all well know, And they are shipping all crookes to the "zygian shore, And the people are happy to know that such "loons" As the Ashbys, the Tracys, Weavers, McCunes Will never again defend us.

It's Good-Bye, boys, 'tis a last, long farewell, And never again will you see us, The republicans and democrats have both played — We are bound for Salt River by way of — Ah! well, You must imagine the route, for it grieves us to tell, So sad are our hearts onee late for the bowdler, As we row for the haunts of the whining whangedoodle, And not a soul left to lament us.

Indiana Populists to Disband. Indianapolis, Nov. 8.—The indications are that within the next month the Populist party organization in this State will disband. E. B. Cummings, the Secretary of the State Committee, has tendered his resignation. It has not yet been accepted by Chairman Butts, but it will be. The other officers and members of the State Committee will, it is said, follow the example set by the Secretary. The men who have been leading the party here have information that members of the Executive Committee of the National Committee have decided to resign.

The party received its first severe blow three weeks ago, when the Farmers Mutual Benefit Association of the State cut loose from it. The men who are at the head of the Mutual Benefit Association have been foremost in advocating the principles of the Populists. Soon after the action of the benefit association Edgar A. Perkins, the Chairman of the committee of this city, announced that he would go back to the Democratic party. The City Committee of the party here has ceased to exist. The party organizations have been abandoned at Lafayette, Fort Wayne, Logansport, New Albany, Richmond and Muncie. There is some talk of organizing a labor party which shall take up and advocate the principles for which the Populists have been standing.

Hubbard's Lecture. (Continued.) On the 14th inst., Gov. R. B. Hubbard delivered at the opera house in this place, his lecture on "The South—past, present and future."

Gov. Hubbard's fame as an orator makes it unnecessary to say he was entertaining in the highest degree. On account of threatened rain and muddy streets the crowd was not as large as expected, but a fair crowd, for the weather, was out, and without exception the lecture was enjoyed, not only for its humor and anecdote, but also for the information it contained, and the reminiscences so dear to the southern heart. No community can hear this lecture without being benefitted. It will gladden the hearts of the patriotic old soldiers and the mothers and daughters of the Confederacy, and will impress the rising generation with the fact that their ancestors have a history worthy of their careful study, and memories and traditions that deserve to be guarded as they would guard their own honor.

The speaker traced the history of the South in the struggle for independence of 1776 and pointed to the fact that a majority of the soldiers that fought to achieve our independence were from the South, and that the armies of the struggling colonies were led by southern generals. He also pointed to the fact that the controlling spirits in the councils of state that formed our constitution and especially that, by construction, gave our government the genius of democracy, were southern men, and that under this guidance our country prospered as no country had ever before, up to 1860. He then adverted to the period of the war, its causes and its varying fortunes, with glowing tributes to its leaders and its soldiers, and finally its termination in disaster and ruin. But how proudly the South had

BILL MCCONNELL SAYS Was the Like Ever Heard Of! The City Council talking about passing an Ordinance to prohibit the further use of our green paper. The town was full of people last Saturday—a horse to every man, and it seems that by accident or otherwise, their owners had neglected to feed them before leaving home for every horse showed up to be "show enuf hungry". From the first bright smiles of the beautiful mares until the sun's last ray had faded away there was one prolonged, victorious, conglomerationed horse neighing until I must admit myself that it was both annoying and disturbing. And What Caused All This? Why, it was the innumerable green bundles afloat that day—people passing and repassing with great armfuls of green bundles, making as it were, a panorama of green forests, and the poor animals thinking them something green to eat kept up the importuning neigh until it became a general disturbance and complaints went in to the City Council from all parts of the city. Yes we are selling the goods, have ever sold them and shall continue to sell them. We Carry The Stock, Treat the people right, and sell them goods at a figure that no other merchant can come under and why should we not do the leading business of the place? Get on your noddies, canvass the county and you will soon return convinced that no man yet here of combination or men can down Bill McConnell in Crockett, therefore it is useless to further exhaust your lungs in telling the people that we do not carry anything but second class goods, for no sooner than these words leave your lips the people know that they are misrepresentations through malice, prejudice and envy.
