Damaging Twister Strikes In City

BAC Discusses Parking Situation

The Muleshoe Businessman's Activities Committee of the Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture met Tuesday morning, May 9, at 10 a.m. in the City Council Chamber.

Approximately 20 members and interested persons were present for the meeting.

The Fourth of July Celebration was discussed and plans made. Chamber manager Glen King reported that his office had written 21 different riding clubs, all of the news media and area Chambers of Commerce to participate in the annual Muleshoe parade and festivities.

The annual sidewalk sale, held just prior to the Fourth of July Celebration, was also discussed by the members.

The main issue discussed at the monthly meeting was the parking problem in Muleshoe and the new parking ordinance. Lindal Murray, chairman of the BAC, reported that men from the Texas Highway Department had been in Muleshoe recently and were happy with the progress on the parking situation and especially happy with the progress at the crossroads. The highway department will be stripping the highway, making it a four lane road all of the way through town when the parking problem on the department's right of ways has been solved. Striping will commence after June 1 when new highway signs are erected.

It was also brought out that at the present time, American Blvd, from the crossroads to Eighth Street is only a two lane highway, even though people try to make it a four lane. Until striping is completed and people cease to park on the highway right of way, it should be considered only a two lane highway.

Murray pointed out that the city must work with the highway department to keep the present highway going through Muleshoe and preventing it from being re-routed around the city.

Tommy Black announced that there will be a carnival in Muleshoe on July 17. The BAC discussed whether to have booths at the carnival this year.

Mayor Irvin St. Clair appeared before the BAC and told the members about his recent trip to an apparel meeting in At-Cont, on Page 3, col. 3

TORNADO STRIKES...Mayor Irvin St. Clair and W.E. (Pappy) Weeks are shown observing some of the damage inflicted at Heathington Lumber Company by a tornado Tuesday night. St. Clair reported that residents of Muleshoe worked together in cleaning up the streets and debris. Members of the Bailey County Civil Defense unit, local law enforcement officers, fire department members and other interested citizens were on the scene immediately to assist in the cleaning up process. The picture shows some of the debris from the building room and a street light that was twisted from the ground during the violent weather. Power lines snapped off by the twister caused the city to be without electrical power for several hours Tuesday night, but Southwestern Public Service employees worked hard at restoring power under difficult circumstances.

Roof Damaged At Heathington's

City Power Off Several Hours

At approximately 7:13 p.m. Tuesday night, a small twister dropped from a menacing looking red thunderhead tearing the roof from Heathington Lumber Company and twisting several power line poles from the ground. Electrical power went off in the city approximately 7:12 p.m., and the townspeople were without lights most of the night.

Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Barry of Muleshoe were driving one block south of Heathington's when the high winds hit. Mrs. Barry reported seeing a "twisting black wind funnel drop down out of the sky to pull debris and drop it in the street."

Barry also reported seeing a black swirl drop down in the rear of Heathington's blowing sheet metal up from a storage building.

Franklin Mann and Homer Redwine were at the Redwine "66" Station on Eighth Street and reported a vibration in the windows and the "bell hoses rose an inch off the driveway and were shaking like snakes." They observed the debris falling in the street and the power line poles snapping off with a twisting motion. They also saw the roof come over Heathington's building along with sheet metal, but did not observe a funnel.

Muleshoe emergency service did an excellent job and were on the scene immediately, under the direction of Civil Defense Coordinator, Corky Green.

Local Civil Defense units, assisted by the Texas Highway Department, members of the local police and fire department, as well as interested citizens and Heathington employees assisted in cleaning up the street and restoring some normalcy to the area.

The twisted debris fell on a car near Heathington's, trapping a local couple in the car for several minutes until they could be helped out. There injuries reported due to the storm.

Other funnels were reported during the evening, one five miles north of Earth and one near Canyon, but no injuries or damage were reported.

Accompanying the tornado was heavy hail and rain in some areas of the county. West of town, where the cloud evidently made up in a very short time, hail, the size of hen eggs and golf balls pounded the area for a short time covering the ground. Heavy rains converted country roads into roaring streams in a matter of minutes and late Wednesday morning, some roads were still running with high water. Other washed out places prevented cars from passing.

Near Progress, a car skidded on the hail covered slick highway ending up on its top in the ditch. No injuries were reported from any of the occupants, a man and woman and their five year old boy.

North and east of town, as much as three inches of rain was reported with large size hail covering the ground.

John Agee, nine miles north of town, reported close to three inches of rain with lots of small hail and high winds.

Carl Ogelbee at the Lazbuddie Methodist Church reported "lots of everything-about three inches of rain and plenty of hail."

Harlen Reese reported to the Journal Wednesday morning that "lots of hail and probably no wheat left." He also reported that he got about one and a half inches of rain and hail of all sizes.

Troy Thomas, eight miles northeast of Muleshoe, reported that he had three inches of golf ball size hail on the ground and over three inches of rain. He reported some flooding and that his wheat and hay were beat into the ground. Also, there was some roof damage to his house and several windows were broken out by the hail.

Joe Harbin, north of town, reported "about two inches" of rain and "a lot" of hail and wind. He also stated that "the cotton will have to be planted over and I can't get around to see about the corn."

Market Report

COLLEGE STATION--"Save a place on this week's shopping list for chicken," advised Mrs. Gwendolyn Clyatt, Houston consumer marketing specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at Texas A&M University.

Whole chickens are almost a better buy than chicken pieces. For example, the price per pound of chicken breasts almost doubles the price per pound for whole chickens. Chicken breasts yield only slightly more meat than a whole chicken of the same weight. However, chicken pieces suit a variety of family preferences and are easy to serve.

Eggs continue to be a source of nutritious protein at bargain prices. Grade A large eggs currently offer the best value.

"You'll find pork specials at many stores this week," the specialist added. "The demand's usually smaller for pork shoulder cuts than for other more popular cuts such as chops, loins and hams. As a result, they're more plentiful than the hindquarter cuts, meaning that they're usually lower priced."

Progress Club Hears Program On Safety

Melinda Presley Named Picnic Queen

Mary Melinda Presley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Presley of Muleshoe was crowned Doans May Picnic Queen at the 89th annual Doans May Picnic held Saturday, May 6, at Watts Grove on the Red River. The event, one of the oldest continually observed celebrations in Texas, is held annually on the first Saturday in May. Doans Crossing is the site of a historic river crossing for cattle drives to northern markets almost a century ago.

The 1972 Picnic King is Stephen Castlebury Brown, son of Leon Hart Brown Jr. of Vernon, and the late Josephine Halstead Brown. Stephen's twin brother, Hart Halstead Brown was named Lord High Chancellor. The Brown twins are second grade students at Hawkins School in Vernon.

Queen Melinda is a second grade student at Richland Hills school in the Box Community. The maternal grandparents are Mrs. Sherman Sweatmon of Muleshoe and the late Sherman Sweatmon, both formerly of the Fargo Community. Her maternal great-grandparents are the late Mr. and Mrs. A.J. Wall, and the late Mr. and Mrs. F.M. Sweatmon. The late Mr. and Mrs. Wall came by wagon from Parker County in 1915 and settled in the Odell Community. In 1920, they moved to Fargo Community where Wall owned the Fargo Gin and was a rancher. The Sweatmons moved their family to the Fargo Community in 1900 where he was a farmer and rancher. The F.M. Sweatmons, C.S. (Uncle Charlie) Smiths and James Staffords organized and established the First Methodist Church in Fargo, on the C.S. Smith farm.

The queen's scepter is an exact replica of the one her mother carried when she was Queen of the Doans May Picnic 32 years ago. It represents the cattle brand of her late great-great-grandfather, A.J. Wall.

Mr. and Mrs. Presley are former residents of Wiltberger County. Jimmy is a former Odell resident and Laura Jean is a former Fargo resident.

Queen Melinda's paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Bert Presley of the Odell Community. The paternal great-grandparents are the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Presley and the late Mr. and Mrs. John Box. The Presley family moved to Five-In-One Community where he was a farmer and rancher. Mr. and Mrs. John Box moved to the Box Community in 1900 where he was a farmer. Feb Rowland Box built the first

In speaking of beans, why do people always say "green" beans?

There also are yellow beans (more commonly known as "wax" beans) and purple-podded beans which turn green when cooked.

Over 300 cotton farmers, ginners, merchants, bankers and others heard four speakers and joined in an hour-long question-and-answer period April 20 in Lubbock at a "Cotton Contracting Seminar" sponsored by Plains Cotton Growers, Inc.

PCG President Ray Joe Riley of Hart, who commented on cotton's supply-demand-price relationships and served as general chairman for the seminar, said forward contracting of cotton is an arrangement in which the producer guarantees a supply of cotton to a merchant or mill in exchange for a guaranteed price at harvest time. "Forward contracting is with us, it appears to be here for quite a stay, and our objective here today is to inform ourselves as best we can on how it works and how it can work better," he said.

Lubbock Attorney Bill Blackledge addressed the group on the subject of contract provisions and contract performance. Noting that cotton sales contracts, as all contracts, are only as good as the parties that sign the, Blackledge went on to say "Most of the problems with contract performance can be avoided if contracts are complete enough that each party has a clear understanding of what is expected of him."

Contracts should contain provisions, he stated, to cover all foreseeable areas in which misunderstanding might arise. According to Blackledge these would include, but not be limited to, language clearly defining the farm and acreage covered, deliverable quantities, delivery deadlines, crop care during the growing season, harvesting and ginning requirements, payment specifications, liens and encumbrances, when title to the crop is to be passed, and whether or not the contract applies to shares of the crop that may be owned by landlord, tenant or spouse.

Possible means to guarantee contract performance were listed by Blackledge as an escrow fund of earnest money, performance bonds, third party guarantees and letters of credit. "However," he stated, "there are problems with each of these methods, and each will result in additional expense. But in my opinion, when a performance guarantee is thought to be necessary, the best of the lot may be letters of credit."

Later, in the question and answer period, Jerry Boothe of Boothe Cotton Company commented that his firm in 1971 had in some instances used performance bonds. The cost, he said, for a bond in the amount of $20 per acre was about 30 cents, "which I would not consider to be prohibitive."

Riley, in his remarks on world cotton supplies and prices, pointed out that the world supply of cotton in 1971-72 is up by more than 1.5 million bales from 1970-71, and that world production in 1972-73 is expected to be up about 2.5 million bales while worldwide consumption is increasing only 800,000 bales.

Services For Shelia Kyles Soybean Research

Shelia Anise Kyles, 16, was killed Saturday night in North Ridgeville, Ohio, when she was struck by a car while crossing the street. She had lived at North Ridgeville for six years, moving from Lazbuddie.

She was born May 13, 1955 in Clovis. She was a junior student at North Ridgeville High School and was a member of the Lazbuddie Baptist Church.

Funeral services were held Wednesday at 4 p.m. in the Lazbuddie Baptist Church with Rev. Johnny Timms, Baptist minister from Casper, Wyo., and Rev. Dale Cain, of the First Baptist Church of Rails, officiating. Interment was in the Lazbuddie Cemetery under the direction of Singleton-Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers were Mark Barnes, Mike Winders, Doyle Weir, Wesley Barnes, Jr., and Robert Barber and Jerry Barber.

Survivors include her stepfather and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Schleich of North Ridgeville; her father, James Kyle of Big Springs; grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. R.J. Steinbock of Lazbuddie and Jim Kyle of Clovis; a sister, Tonya Schleich of North Ridgeville; two brothers, Jimmy Kyle of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Byron Schleich of North Ridgeville.

ton futures contract, which at the present time is the only one active, is no alternative at all for West Texas producers." He explained that deliverable qualities of cotton on the Number 2 relationship between West Texas cotton and futures is scant at best. So there is really no way at the present time for our producers in this area to use the futures market as a hedge against spot market prices.

Stevens went on to comment that PCG and a lot of other people are trying to get changes made in the Number 1 futures contract which would make it usable for cotton in this area. The Number 1 contract is based on 15/16 inch cotton, as opposed to 1-1/16 inch cotton which is the base deliverable staple on the Number 2 contract. Both contracts now call for delivery cotton either Low Middling White or above, Middling Light Spot or above, and with micronaire above 3.5.

The high micronaire and grade requirements, Stevens said, plus the fact that Lubbock is not specified as a delivery point, are the principal reasons for inactivity in the Number 1 contract. He added "I have high hopes that some of these requirements can be changed and that Lubbock can be named as a delivery point."

Inserting ordinary absorbent cotton into the ear canals does little to protect the user from the possible serious effects of exposure to sound levels. Officials point out that ear plugs made of soft rubber or similar materials usually offer far greater protection when properly fitted.

LUBBOCK...The perennial problem of soybean yield due to shattering and lodging may be on the way to a solution on the High Plains.

Research by Texas A&M University scientists at Lubbock has resulted in the development of lines resistant to shattering and free of lodging.

"This can mean an extra five to 20 per cent yield," says Dr. Raymond Brigham, associate professor of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station. Shattering of seed has often been a problem on the Plains because low relative humidity in the fall encourages pod separation. But breeding work at Lubbock has resulted in selections that can be left in the field until the first of January with only a slight loss in yield.

Brigham reports that selections from maturity group V (Hill) and group VI (Lee 68) stood undamaged for 60-70 days past maturity in 1971, in spite of snow, freezing rain and several days of high winds. "In addition, the oil and protein content of the selections were above most varieties adapted to the South Plains," the researcher says.

If these lines are found to be comparable in yield to current varieties, time of harvest will become much less critical, and less seed will be lost prior to harvest.

"Also, the excellent standability of these selections will result in reduced harvest losses in comparison with varieties that tend to lodge and fall," Brigham reports.

The Sandhills Philosopher

Editor's note: The Sandhill Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm seems to be fighting a headache, his letter this week indicates.

Dear editor: As everybody knows, the best spot on television to advertise a headache remedy is about two-thirds way through the evening's newscast. By that time the demand for it naturally skyrockets and I have a notion that the manufacturers of the tablets know the worse the news is the higher their sales go and they're bound to smile a little, like the gas and oil people rubbing their hands in anticipation when the first cold wave of the year hits.

In this connection, the Federal Communications Commission doesn't object to pushing the sale of headache remedies right at the time when anybody who is paying attention to the news needs them the most, but it does object to one company's claiming its remedy is stronger or better than another when tests indicate they're all about the same.

Therefore it is considering adopting a rule forbidding the practice, and is even considering requiring the companies to spend 25 per cent of their advertising budget over the past two years to correct all claims of superiority.

I guess this is all right, but I hope the Commission doesn't go any further.

For example, you don't suppose it's considering a rule forbidding one candidate from claiming his remedies for the nation's ills are stronger and better than another's? It isn't going to stop a candidate's saying if you'll take two of his remedies that are fast, fast, fast you'll feel better immediately and greet inflation with a smile? He can't say, take two planks from the platform at bedtime and sleep, sleep, sleep? He can't ask you to vote for him and end that nagging tax ache? He can't say his time-released policies will get you through the next four years faster than anybody else's and you'll wake up feeling great? The Commission had better think about this. It's fixing to take all the fun out of politics, J.A.

Elliot L. Richardson, Secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare: "We must downgrade our reliance on the busing of students as our principle tool to achieve equal education."

CONGRESSMAN

Bob Price

18th Congressional District

The House of Representatives last week tabled one of the most dangerous resolutions I have seen since coming to Congress, and I was very pleased to be one of those voting to table it.

New York Congresswoman Bella Abzug introduced a "resolution of inquiry" which would have had the President and Secretary of Defense furnishing the House of Representatives within 10 days with full and complete information concerning the specifics of various military operations in Southeast Asia. Among other things itemized for disclosure by the President was the target date for total withdrawal of American forces in Vietnam.

Making this kind of information public would have greatly aided the enemy and weakened our own position as well. Even though the House voted to table the resolution--and by a decisive vote of 270-113 at that -- I am distressed that there are those in Congress who fail to see the genuine danger into which they would be putting our own fighting men if that resolution were to have been adopted. Again let me say I am glad it was tabled.

In other action, we considered and passed an important bill which was reported to the House favorably by the Science and Astronautics Committee of which I am a member. I voted for it.

It authorizes appropriations to the National Science Foundation which was established in 1950 for the promotion of basic research and education in the sciences. I supported the bill because I feel that applied research and technology development as related to national defense and needs is of utmost importance to our nation.

Among other scientific experiments presently going on is one involving the injection of 10 times the dose of strontium 90 necessary to kill a human being into a shark's brain and which we have discovered the shark is able to throw off. If we are able to develop a vaccine which could be administered to humans, we could withstand a nuclear attack and be immune from radioactive fallout which could render nuclear warfare obsolete.

Another scientific experiment involves placing electrodes in animals in the sea which have already demonstrated their inherent, God-Given ability to detect pollution in whatever their environment in parts per billion instead of parts per million as do the detecting devices developed by scientists. We hope that eventually an earth-circling satellite could monitor these sea animals and transmit this information back to our computers on earth. In this way action could be taken to prevent pollution of our vital resources instantly at any point on the planet.

"Each of us as a citizen has an obligation to build and sustain our Nation," Congressman Bob Price told students and local residents at a Clarendon College Assembly today in the Fine Arts Building.

"It is easy to talk about rights--and there many in public office who talk about what society owes the individual," Price said, "but that kind of attitude is self-defeating in the long run and is certainly not in keeping with the traditions which have made this Nation great."

The Congressman emphasized that students as citizens and newly enfranchised voters are living in an age which may chart the course of this Nation for decades to come. "You can sit back and let the government take over--you can elect men to public office who will put 'floors' under you so you cannot fall down. But these same people will also put ceilings over you, to curb and limit your dreams and ambitions. And as the floors are raised and the ceilings are lowered, your options, your freedoms, and your rights will gradually be diminished and lost in a sea of government controls," Price said.

"The alternative to a paternalistic patronizing government is to follow the Jeffersonian philosophy that 'the least government is the best government.' Government closest to the people works best because it is more responsive to your needs and desires as an individual, and you are able to influence its actions."

Congressman Price observed that America is built on four cornerstones--the home, the church, the schools and government. "If we are not able to have peace and harmony in our homes, in our communities, how can we expect peace in the world?" Price asked. "In all cases, a happy home, an active church, an enthusiastic school or a progressive community is directly affected by the contribution and efforts of each member of the group. If your church or home is a failure--ask yourself, what have I contributed to make it better?"

Congressman Price urged students to, "Roll up your sleeves and get involved. Competition is healthy--it gives us a reason to try hard and the opportunity to choose among alternatives. I hope that while you are at school that you will learn not only a profession, but also the importance of your great birthright as an American citizen. Don't be fooled by the chro-

Economic Stabilization Questions and Answers

Q. Do you have any publications that explain the posting requirements for retailers?

A. Yes, IRS Publication S-3, "Retailers' Price Posting Requirements," explains which retailers are and which are not required to post and describes the rules governing accessibility and content of posted information and availability of non-posted prices. It can be obtained free by dropping a postcard to your IRS district office.

Q. I rented a brand new apartment on Nov. 1, 1971 for $200 per month on a month-to-month lease. The construction of the apartments was completed after Aug. 15, 1971. Now my landlord wants to increase rent to $250. Is this a violation of stabilization regulations?

A. Since the construction of the apartment was completed after Aug. 15, 1971 and the unit was offered for rent for the first time after that date, rent for that unit is exempt from controls and an increase does not violate stabilization regulations.

Q. My employer deposited a agreed-upon wage increases held up by the freeze in an interest-bearing account until the question of retroactivity was decided by the Pay Board. Now that we're able to receive our retroactive pay, can we also receive the accrued interest on the wages?

A. Yes, Your employer may pay the accrued interest to his employees. The fund is similar to a "forced savings" program and interest in such a program accrues to and is payable to employees. In addition, the cost to the employer is not increased beyond the amount of the retroactive increase.

Q. Is there a booklet available that contains all the regulations issued under the stabilization program?

A. Yes, A new booklet, entitled "Title 6-Economic Stabilization" of the code of Federal Regulations, is a handy reference for all aspects of the stabilization program. In addition to the regulations issued by the Cost of Living Council, the Pay Board and the Price Commission through Feb. 29, 1972, the volume contains implementing regulations and rulings of the Internal Revenue Service.

The booklet can be purchased for 75 cents from the Superintendent of Documents, the Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402, or from the Regional GPO Book Stores located in ten major cities throughout the country.

Q. Are deposits on soft drink bottles subject to the Economic Stabilization regulations?

A. No. Bottle deposits are not prices. They're amounts exacted to insure the safe return of property. If the property is returned, the full deposit is returned and there is no price paid.

WASHINGTON REPORT BY Lloyd Bentsen, United States Senator

On any given day, a United States Senator has an extensive variety of topics and problems on which to focus his attention. A Senator representing the State of Texas has a broader and more varied constituency than does, say, a Senator from Vermont. Both Senators, of course, have the same concerns about the broader issues such as national defense, social issues, economic issues, and so forth. But the Texas Senator has a larger number of particular problems confronting him.

There is currently one particular problem which is of intense interest to a large segment of our Texas citizens and which has generated a large volume of mail to my office. And that is control of the predators which prey on other wildlife and on domestic animals on the great ranches and farms of our state.

Because of the secondary poisoning of eagles on lands in the western states, there was a great outpouring of emotion--as there should have been--resulting from the careless and indiscriminate use of poisons to kill coyotes. Bald eagles ate from the carcasses of the coyotes killed by the poisons, and the eagles subsequently died. The bald eagle, as we all know, is the symbol of our Nation, and the incident aroused special emotions, and rightfully so.

Because of the outcry--which, as I said, was properly motivated in this case--the President issued an Executive Order to eliminate the use of certain poisons on public lands. No one could quarrel too much with the principle of trying to stop the indiscriminate and abusive use of those poisons, and certainly poisons that pass through the food chain to endanger people, birds and other animals ought to be eliminated.

And I think those children who want to save the coyote also want to save the deer, and the rabbits, and other wildlife, if they understand the need for a balanced wildlife control, and the need to protect baby lambs and baby calves from these predators.

Further, I wonder how many gutted lambs, how many ripped open fawns, how many maimed rabbits the Washington bureaucrats have ever seen.

One wildlife expert has said that for every coyote, there will be three less deer. If he is correct, then it is easy to see that an uncontrolled coyote population can soon decimate the Texas deer population on our ranches, to say nothing of the threat to livestock.

Certainly we ought to have a program of balanced wildlife, and we ought to preserve and maintain threatened species. But I know of no one who contends that the predators such as coyotes and bobcats are an endangered species.

Like so many other problems, this one arouses emotions, and emotional responses. And like so many other approaches devised by those who see the problem only from Washington, the proffered solution may be worse than the problem itself. We need to look at the problem logically and critically, and to strike a balanced solution. We can maintain our wildlife, and we can prevent extermination of endangered species while protecting domestic livestock if we will take the sensible approach.

I realize the subject I have covered today may not be of intense interest to many of you who live in the cities; nevertheless, such problems are important to you, just as they are important to the farmer and the rancher. This one, like so many others, deserves a rational approach, based on rational dialogue and rational consideration. That is the way I intend to approach it.

However, as in so many instances among the bureaucracy in Washington, the administrative people who had to respond to the President's order went well beyond its intent, and have taken action that will not serve the purpose of the order, nor protect wildlife.

These Washington policy makers have, for example, taken steps to stop the use of needed control poisons--not only those that extend through the food chain, but also those that have proven to be non-damaging to a life in the food chain other than the predator at which it is aimed. The federal bureaucracy, over-reacting, moved to stop use of even those useful control methods.

My office has received a flood of letters including many from school children who wrote pleading for help to save coyotes. I also received many from sheep and cattle producers pointing out their problems in permitting an uncontrolled predator population.

Let there be some misconception about the point I am trying to make, let me say again that I oppose the indiscriminate use of poisons, and I oppose the use of those dangerous poisons which have been proven to extend through the food chain.

But I do not approve of going so far to save the coyotes and bobcats that we can endanger other wildlife, such as our deer and rabbits, or force adoption of inhumane methods of trappings. Nor do I favor going so far that we add unnecessary burdens to our farmers and ranchers.

Johnson Grass On Cotton Land

LUBBOCK...The unseasonably early spring and warm temperatures have allowed Johnsongrass to get a running start on the 1972 High Plains cotton crop.

"Early control of this weed is essential to make planting easier and avoid cotton yield losses," says Dr. Bob Metzger, area cotton specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at Lubbock.

A good weed control program can prevent establishment of new seedlings by incorporating chemicals such as Treflan or Planavin before planting. But the most common problem this spring is that Johnsongrass has already become established in South Plains fields. Metzger says that Dowpon and MSMA or DSMA may be applied to emerged Johnsongrass plants before the cotton crop is planted. Dowpon gives better kill than MSMA if the air temperature is below 70 degrees; but planting should be delayed three to 10 controlling Johnsongrass. Planavin or Treflan can be used as a preplant treatment and Dowpon or MSMA can be used either before or after cotton planting when the weeds have emerged.

In non-crop areas such as fence rows and ditches, Johnsongrass can be controlled with Hyar, Pramitol, or sodium chlorate. "But regardless of the method or chemical used, the herbicide label should be carefully studied and followed," Metzger concludes.

Eighth Grade Party Set

By Trent Stewart-
The Eighth Grade will get to have a party close to the end of the year. This party will take the place of the field trip the Eighth grade usually has every year. This year the Eighth Grade will get to wear anything they want to just this one day.

The Eighth Grade class will get to put on some skits over at the High School Auditorium. These skits will just be for the fun of the classes. After the skits they will have their lunches all ready at school and they will eat on the school's campus. Then at 4 p.m., that evening, they will go swimming. The class will go over to the Junior High Gym and the Eighth grade class teachers will serve them with hot dogs, cookies, and drinks for everybody. After everybody gets through eating they will all play games in the gym.

We've got a few opinions from some Eighth graders and they think it sounds great!!

A History Of Bailey County Pioneer Families

Mr. and Mrs. A.W. Coker

Alton Wilbanks Coker came to Bailey County by train from Roswell, New Mexico in 1916. Two years before, Coker had married Lora Mae Morris in Saint Jo, Texas.

The Cokers used to laugh and tell their children about coming through Muleshoe in 1914 on their way to New Mexico. They were amused by the city limit sign because it actually had a little mule shoe on it. Mrs. Coker said it never dawned on her that a great part of her life would be spent in that little town with the unusual name.

Coker was a deacon in the First Baptist Church in Muleshoe. He taught a Junior Boys' Sunday school class for many years and was fond of writing poetry. Mrs. Coker was WMU president of the First Baptist Church, Sunday school teacher, active in Training Union, a Sunbeam and GA Leader.

One of the Cokers' daughters Sibyl Coker Brown is currently head librarian for California Baptist College in Riverside, California, what follows are several of memories of her childhood in Bailey County.

Not long after I was born the terrible flu epidemic of 1918 almost killed my parents.

One of the first things I remember was our life at East Camp, about twelve miles from Muleshoe. We lived in a two-room house which I remember as being weather-beaten, but sturdy. There was a windmill with white sails tipped with red and a large watering tank and a covered wooden milk trough where the milk, cream, butter and eggs were kept.

One day my mother saw a snake between the windmill and the house. She jumped up in the milk trough with her shoes on and screamed until one of the cowboys killed it.

Another thing I remember was one day in winter when my daddy came in with small ice particles on his sheepskin coat. His hands were so cold he couldn't straighten them out. I couldn't understand why he put them in cold water instead of hot water.

At East Camp, Mother had chickens and turkeys and she was constantly afraid coyotes would get her poultry.

Occasionally we would go out to the chuck wagon and eat when the round-up was near our house.

A few years later, Mother and Daddy decided to move into Muleshoe. Daddy bought a two-room house for us on the east side of town. Daddy had secured a job as a filling station attendant. We had a barn, a small corral for our Jersey cow, chickens and outdoor privy and a pump for water. Soon after we moved there, the Fry family, their daughter Susie and her half brothers Jack and Jim Cox became our neighbors.

Daddy bought the White Front Garage and secured the agency for the Chevrolets. He bought one and taught Mother to drive it. She went with him when he sold cars and taught the women to drive.

Mother was among the first married women to bob their hair. Daddy encouraged her to cut it. He thought it would stop her headaches.

Muleshoe had a Chatauga Season each year and Daddy always bought a season ticket. I heard my first good music on one of these programs. I loved to go. We also enjoyed a chalk talk artist, a magician, lectures and other entertainment. There was no theater in Muleshoe, but the school sponsored a movie every Friday night. There was a serial feature they used to show about a young man named "Speed". A favorite pastime of the young children was pretending that they were engaged in Speed's hair-raising adventures. I remember that the late L. S. Barron once broke his arm trying to jump over a fence "just like Speed". Houston Hart decapitated an expensive teddy bear while on a Speed hunting adventure.

When Muleshoe grew larger, the Allerita Loomis shows came to town every year. Everyone griped about all the money the shows took away with them. But there was something about one of those tent shows that made them too fascinating to miss.

Every Fourth of July there was a big picnic at the country home of the E. R. Harts. They had a beautiful grove of trees and big dirt tank. When I was Girl Scout this tank was where I learned to float and swim a little.

When daddy had the White Front Garage, he kept the children of his customers entertained with a large squirrel cage. There was a tree limb through the middle of the cage. The squirrels became quite famous.

Daddy was very frank in expressing his political choices. When a candidate left Daddy, he usually knew whether Daddy would vote for him. Calmly, he would say to those he did not favor, "If you are the best man for the place, I hope you get it; however, I plan to vote for your opponent." Sometimes Mother and Daddy did not agree on a candidate. Each voted according to his own conviction.
