The World's Pleasures

We all know what a blank, dull place this world would be if it were not for some of the pleasures that we have intermingled with our work and worry.

Some women find no pleasure or comfort at all in their shoes. That is simply because they have not found the right kind.

In the "Quaker" shoe for $3.00 there is a stylish, nobby shoe for every foot, and as Quaker shoes are made by experts, in a specialty factory, over foot-conforming lasts and out of the best and most popular leathers, they are sure to fit well and give satisfaction, which means pleasure.

"Quaker" shoes are made by the Goodyear Welt process, doing away with tacks, wax and thread, found on the inside of so many shoes, that hurt, burn and blister the feet. This means, too, that they are soft and pliable.

All in all, with every item summed up, you will find the "Quaker" shoe the best shoe that can be bought for

Remember to ask for Quaker-"the shoe that does not hurt."

"Necessity Is the Mother of Invention"

Women have suffered with their feet for years because they could never get shoes that would not hurt. "Star Brand" shoe manufacturers saw the necessity for a stylish shoe for women that would not hurt, and they are now making for $3.50 the

"Society" Shoe for Women

Each "Society" shows graceful curves, conforming to the foot with an elegance so simple that there is beauty and comfort in every pair.

Most every woman has bought shoes that looked nice, but they hurt and cramped her feet. That is where the "Society" shoe for women differs from others. Easy to make a nice shoe for women that won't hurt, but very few shoe builders know how.

Try one pair of "Society" shoes and you will know what art in shoe building produces.

Good Cough Medicine for Children.

The season for coughs and colds is now at hand and too much care cannot be used to protect the children. A child is much more likely to contract diptheria or scarlet fever when he has a cold. The quicker you cure his cold the less risk. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the sole reliance of mothers, and few of those who have tried it are willing to use any other. Mrs. F. F. Starcher, of Ripley, W. Va., says: "I have never used anything other than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for my children, and it has always given good satisfaction." At 14 years of age Admiral Sir Peter At 14 years of age Admiral Sir Peter Hawkshaw's nephew fell deeply in love at first sight with Lady Arabella Stor-mont, who spurned his attentions. The lad, an orphan, was given a berth as mid-shipman on the Ajax by his uncle. Giles Vernon, nephew of Sir Thomas Vernon, became the boy's pal.

Now, the peculiar circumstances of my bringing-up had given me a ridiculous haughtiness-for Betty Green had never ceased to implore me to remember my quality-so I replied to this off-hand speech in kind.

"A ship of the line," said I. "Damme, do you think I'd serve in a gun-brig?" He came up a little closer to me, looked at me attentively, and said:

"It's an infant Rodney, sure. Was not Americus Vespucius your grandfather? And was not your grandmother in love with Noah when he was oakum boy at the Portsmouth docks?"

"I considered this very offensive, and, drawing myself up, said:

"My grandfather was a baronet, and my grand-uncle is Admiral Sir Peter Hawkshaw, whose flagship, as you may know, is the Ajax, 74."

"I know him well," responded my new acquaintance. "We were drunk together this night week. He bears for arms Lot's wife after she was turned into a pillar of salt, with this device: 'I thirst.'"

This was an allusion to the drysalter. For I soon found that the young gentlemen in the cockpit were intimately acquainted with all of the antecedents, glorious or otherwise, of their superior officers.

The lie in the early part of this sentence was patent to me, but so great was the power to charm of this souinting, wide-mouthed fellow, that 1 felt myself drawn to him irresistibly. and something in my countenance showed it_for he linked his arm through mine and began again:

"I know your great-aunt, too, Polly Hawkshaw. Dreadful old girl. I hear she can tack ship as well as the admiral; knows to a shilling what his mess bill is, and teaches him trigonometry when he is on leave."

This was, of course, a vilification, and Lady Hawkshaw's name was not Polly, but Apollonia; but I blush to say I spoke not one word in defense of either her or her name. It occurred to me that my new friend was a person who could give me much information about my outfit and uniforms, and I candidly stated my case to him. "Come on," he cried. "There's a rascal of a haberdasher here who lives off his majesty's officers, and I'll take you there and fit you out; for Sir Peter's the man to have his young officers smart. A friend of minepoor fellow!-happened to be caught in mufti in the Ajax the other day, and Sir Peter had all hands turned up for an execution. My unhappy friend begged that he might be shot instead of hanged, and Sir Peter, I'll admit, granted him the favor. The poor fellow tied the handkerchief over his eyes himself, forgave all his enemies, and asked his friends to pay his debts. Zounds, 'twas the most affecting scene I ever witnessed." I plainly perceived that my companion was talking to frighten me, and showed it by thrusting my tongue into my cheek, which caused him to burst out laughing. He presently became grave, however, and assured me solemply that a sea-officer had his choice of dressing handsomely, or being court-martialed and shot. "For," said he, "the one hundred and forty-fourth regulation of the service reads: 'All of his majesty's sea-officers are commanded to marry heiresses, and in these cases, the usual penalties for the abduction of heiresses are remitted.' Now, how can we abduct heiresses, or even get them to look at us, without fine clothes? Women, my boy, are caught by the eye alone-and I know 'em, by Gad!"

shopman, suddenly changing his tone, | an offer to fit me out handsomely. cried out to my companion:

"Mr. Giles Vernon, I remember the last reefer you brought here bought near a boatload and paid with the foresail, as you gentlemen of the sea call it. I will not be done this time, I as sure you."

At this, Giles Vernon promptly drew his sword, which did not disturb the shopman in the least, as I found out afterward: young gentlemen of Giles' draw their nurses. But I was very unhappy, not on Giles' account, but on that of the poor shopman, whom I expected to see weltering in his blood. After a wordy war, Giles left the shop, taking me with him, and menacing the shopman, in case the purchases I had ordered did not come aboard the Aiax that night.

This I accepted with the utmost gratitude, and in a day or two I found myself established as one of his majesty's midshipmen in the cockpit of the Ajax, and I began to see life.

CHAPTER II.

My introduction into the cockpit of the Ajax was pretty much that of every other reefer in his majesty's navy. I was, of course, told that I age and rank, in Portsmouth, drew showed the most brazen presumption their swords whenever they could not in daring to wish to enter the naval service: that I ought to be a boy at St. Paul's; that haymaking was my profession by nature, to say nothing of an exchange of black eves and bloody noses with every midshipman of my size in the cockpit. Through all this Giles Vernon was my chief tormentor and best friend. He proclaimed the fact of my drysalting ancestry, and when I impudently reminded him that I was the grandson of a baronet, he gave me one kick for the drysalter and two for the baronet. He showed me a battered old cocked hat hung up on a nail in the steerage country.

trying to induce the money sharks to take his postobits; but as Sir Thomas was not yet 50 years of age, and it was quite possible that he should marry, the only result was to fan the flame of animosity between him and his heir, without Giles' getting a shilling. The next heir to Giles was another cousin, remote from both him and Sir Thomas, one Capt. Philip Overton of the Guards, who was as much disliked by Sir Thomas as was Giles. Giles, who had been at sea since his twelfth year, knew little or nothing of Capt. Overton, although he swore many times in a month that he meant to marry the first woman who would take him, for the purpose of cutting off Overton's hopes; but it occurred to me, young as I was, that Giles was not the man to give up his liberty to the first woman who was willing to accept of it.

We were fitting for the Mediterranean, and the ship lay in the inner harbor at Portsmouth, waiting her turn to go in dry dock to be coppered. There was plenty for the seniors to do, but not much for the midshipmen at that particular time; and we had more runs on shore than usual. The rest of us were satisfied with Portsmouth, but Giles was always raving of London and the London playhouses. Knowing how long I had lived in London, he said to me one day:

"Were you ever at Drury Late theater, my lad?"

I said no, I had never been to the playhouse; and I blushed as I said it, not desiring my messmates to know that I had been brought up by Betty Green, a corporal's widow.

"Then, child," he cried, whacking me on the back, "you have yet to live. Have you not seen Mistress Trenchard -the divine Sylvia-as Roxana, as Lady Percy, as Violetta? Oh, what a galaxy of parts! Oh, the divine creature!"

He threw himself across the messtable at that, for we were in the cockpit at the time. I laughed, boylike, at his raptures, and he groaned loudly. "Such a face and figure! Such a oot and ankle! Such a melting eye! Such a luscious voice!"

I own that this outburst did more to make me realize that Giles, after all, was but 19 than anything that had gone before; for I knew that older men did not so rave.

"And," he cried, wildly, "I can not see her before we sail. By heaven, I will see her! 'Tis 74 miles between me and her angel face. It can be done in 7 hours and 20 minutes. I can get 24 hours' leave-but not a word of this, you haymaking son of a farmer.' (TO BE CONTINUED.)

It's easy enough to recognize the symptoms of poor paint, after it has been on awhile-after its inherent tendency to crack and peel and scale and blister, etc., has developed into trouble. You know these paint "diseases" usually indicate adulteration or substitution in the paint materials.-And you know the only remedy is repainting.

A little knowledge of paint and painting requirements, and how to made sure of the purity and quality of materials, would prevent all trouble, and save the big extra expense of re-painting; just as a proper knowledge of simple health-laws, and observance of them, prevents sickness.

A complete painting guide, including a book of color schemes, specifications for all kinds of painting work. and an instrument for detecting adulteration in paint materials, with directions for using it, can be had free by writing National Lead Co., 1902 Trinity Bldg., New York, and asking for Houseowner's Painting Outfit No. 49.

PROSAIC ENDING OF DREAM.

Nevertheless, Editor Belleves It Portends Some Good Luck.

The dream of an unknown Kansas editor:

She was dressed in green, and a serpent of old gold and with red eyes encircled her arm. Her hair was very black and loose. Her eyes, black and deep, seemed to search me through as she held my hand in hers and looked up from the palm she had been reading.

"Your death will come suddenly," she said.

"Will it be a railroad collision or a hotel fire?" we inquired.

"I cannot say," she said, "but it will be so sudden as to be painless."

Just then we awoke, because somebody was punching us in the ribs and saying: "Get on your side of the bed and let me have my share of the quilts."

But we have been thinking about it since, and we believe somebody is going to pay his subscription in advance. -Kansas City Journal.

This trifling speech remained in my memory, and the day came when I recalled the idle talk of us two laughing midshipmen as prophetic.

We went together to a shop, where, under his direction and that of an oily tongued shopman, I ordered one of the handsomest outfits any midshipman could possibly have, including two dozen of silk stockings, as my new-found friend informed me that every man on board his majesty's ships, from the admiral down to the jack-o'-the-dust, always wore silk stockings, because in the event of being struck by a ball or a pike or a cutlass in action, the danger from inflammation was much less with silk than with cotton or wool.

time to pay for the things. Then, I in ordering things with no money to acknowledge. I was at a loss. The pay for them, and followed it up with mortal hatred subsisted between him set the thread in its aye at all.

I thought it wise to suggest that I should now go aboard, as it was well on to three o'clock. Giles agreed with me. I had forgotten to ask him what ship he was attached to, but it sud denly occurred to me that he, too, might be in the Ajax, and I asked him. Imagine my delight when he said yes. "But if the admiral does not behave himself better," he added, "and if the captain does not ask me to dinner oftener than he has been doing lately, I shall prefer charges against both of them. I have been assured by the lord in admiralty that any request of mine will be regarded as an order by them, and I shall request that Admiral Hawkshaw and Capt. Giul ford be relieved of their commands."

By that time we had reached the water and there, stepping into a splendid, eight-oared barge, I saw Sir Peter Hawkshaw. He caught sight of us at the same moment, and the change in Giles Vernon's manner was what might have been expected. He was even more modest and deferential than I. as we advanced.

"Here you are!" pleasantly cried the admiral to me. "You ran away so fast t'other day, that I had no chance to give you any directions, and I scarcely expected you to turn up today. However, I shall now take you to the ship. Mr. Vernon, I have room for you."

"Thank you, sir," responded Giles very gratefully, "but I have a pressing engagement on shore-a matter of important business-" at which I saw the suspicion of a grin on the admiral's homely old face. He said little to me until we were in the great cabin of the Ajax. For myself, I can only say that I was so awed by the beauty, the majesty, the splendor of one of the finest ships of the line in the world. that I was dumb with delight and amazement. Once in the cabin, the admiral asked me about my means and my outfit. I burst out with the whole story of what occurred in the haberdasher's shop, at which Sir Peter looked very solemn, and lectured me All went swimmingly, until it was upon the recklessness of my conduct

"Do you see that hat, you young rapscallion?" he asked. I replied that I did, and a shocking bad hat it was, too. "That hat was once the property of that old pirate and buccaneer, Sir Peter Hawkshaw, vice-admiral of the White. It is named after him, and whenever his conduct displeases the junior officers on this ship-which it generally does-that hat, dear boy, is kicked and cursed as a proxy for your respected non was undoubtedly the smartest officer among them and cock of the walk between decks. He had innumerable good qualities, but the beggarly virtue of prudence was not among great-uncle. Now understand: Your position in the cockpit is that of this hat. In fact, you will take the hat's place"-which I found to be true, and I was called to account every day for some part of the conduct of Admiral Hawkshaw, although I did not see him twice in the week.

Mr. Buxton, our first lieutenant, was a fine officer, and celebrated for licking midshipmen into shape; and if I learned my duty quickly he, rather than I, deserves the credit.

My experience of other ships convinces me that the juniors in the Ajax were clever fellows; but Giles Verthem. He had, however, another virtue in a high degree-a daring and invincible courage. That, and his smartness as an officer, made Mr. Buxton his friend, and caused many of his peccadilloes to be overlooked. The fact that at 19 Giles Vernon was still only a midshipman made me think that he was without fortune or influence; but I was soon enlightened on the subject, though not by him. He was the distant cousin and heir of Sir Thomas Vernon of Vernon court, near York, and of Grosvenor square, London. This man was generally spoken of as the wicked Sir Thomas, and a needle must be asleep. I just can't

As may be inferred, each profession has its stock jokes-its stories innumerable-each of which having a flavor of its own. That the point of a joke or jest lies not in the tongue of him who makes it, but in the ear that hears, is the testimony of the great dramatist.

The doctor on his rounds and the judge upon the bench have both an audience ready and willing to accept as the highest wit the bon mots of the speakers; and there is no club or gathering of men that does not acclaim one of its members as supreme in this respect, and are ready to yield due recognition of the gift.

It must be admitted that the blunders and jests clerical stand for some reason pre-eminent both in number and in mirth producing qualities. The reason, of course, is not far to seekthe very surroundings, in which they occur-the very upsetting of one's preconceived notions of reverence, all tend to cause a reaction in the ordinary mental equilibrium, and the simplest mistake or accident under such circumstances assumes the proportions of a huge comedy.

Recently a divine, in drawing the attention of his congregation to a special communion service on the following Sunday informed them that "the Lord is with us in the forenoon and the bishop in the evening."

Formerly people thought meat nee essary for strength and muscular vigor.

EX-PRESIDENT SAILS AWAY TO DARK CONTINENT.

TO BE IN AFRICA A YEAR

Then He Will Travel and Speak in Europe-Three Skilled Naturalists and His Son Kermit Accompany Him.

New York .- Theodore Roosevelt, expresident of the United States, salled out of New York harbor Tuesday on the steamer Hamburg of the Hamburg-American line on the way to his muchheralded hunting trip in British East Africa.

The distinguished travelers occupy the "imperial suite" on the upper promenade deck, which was used by the nan emperor in the winter of 1905-'06

On the dock was a large assemblage of Mr. Roosevelt's friends, who had rathered to bid him God-speed, and who cheered him as he stand at the rall of the steamer waving his hand and smiling with delight. Beside him stood the three men selected from hundreds of applicants to accompany him and assist him in collecting the specimens of African fauna which he hopes to send back for the enrichment of the Smithsonian institution. These fortunate individuals were Maj. Edgar A. Mearns, J. Loring Alden and Edmund Heller. They comprise the Smithsonian's expedition. The fifth member of the little party, and not to be considered of least importance, was the ex-president's second son, Kermit, who will be the official photographer of the expedition and, next to his father, the chief hunter.

To Mombasa Via Naples.

Mr. Roosevelt will go via Gibraltar to Naples, where he will board a exmer of the German East African line for Kilindini harbor, the port of Mombasa. At the latter place the party will be joined by R. J. Cunninghame, an Englishman of long experience in Africa, who has been engaged as general manager and guide. The party will spend a short time in Mombasa and then proceed by train on the Uganda railway to Nairobi, headquarters of the administration of British East Africa Protectorate, a city of 13,514 inhabitants, of whom 579 are Europeans.

On MacMillan's Ranch

This animal is the same as the squaremouthed-rhinoceros and is the nearest living ally to the type of the extinct Tichorine or woolly rhinoceros which lived in England at the close of the Glacial period.

Journey Across Uganda.

Leaving Nairobi in October, the party will proceed by the Uganda railway to Port Florence, on the shores of Lake Victoria Nyanza, where a short stop will be made; then a steamer will be taken to Entebbe, 150 miles away. There a caravan will be formed and the journey across Uganda to the Nile will be begun. It is expected that the White Nile will be reached about the first of the year 1910. Lake Albert Nyanza will be touched at Kibira.

In a general way the course of the Nile will be followed to Gondokoro, and thence to Khartoum. At this city Mr. Roosevelt and Kermit will be joined by Mrs. Roosevelt and they will continue down the Nile slowly to Cairo, visiting many points of interest. on the way.

To Speak in European Capitals.

Plans for the remainder of the expresident's two years' tour have not been decided upon definitely, but the time will be spent in Europe, and several matters of importance have been announced. He will visit Berlin at the speak German in his address before the students of the University of Berlin, French in his lecture at the Sorbonne, and English in delivering the Romanes lecture at Oxford. Pays His Own Expenses.

Mr. Roosevelt will defray the expenses of himself and his son on the African trip, but those of the scientists and the cost of preparing the specimens and shipping them to America will be paid out of a fund secured for the purpose by the Smithsonian institution.

One of the objects of Mr. Roosevelt in taking this trip is for the purpose of collecting material for writing several books regarding his experiences. During last summer he contracted with Charles Scribner's Sons, of New York, giving that firm all the rights for the serial and book-form publication of whatever he might write on his visit to Africa. It is said that the contract price agreed upon is $1 per word, but this never has been verified.

Even if the British colonial government should offer to throw open to Mr. Roosevelt and his companions the African game preserves under its control, the ex-president will refuse to take advantage of this opportunity. The demand for our Davy Crockett brands of fertilizer has grown to such proportions until on February 1st we were behind with our shipments twenty-one cars. We are taking care of our home trade, however, and will continue to do so. Remember you make no mistake when you buy your home product. Why send GOOD CASH away from home when you can get the very best goods to be had and always at from $4.00 to $6.00 per ton less money? THIS IS NO JOKE.

Remember, too, we have a variety of fertilizers and can supply what the different land and plant need. The great trouble with fertflizer users, and sellers sometimes, is that they will buy a cotton fertilizer for potatoes or potato fertilizer for cotton, etc., when the user will be dissatisfied and perhaps say that fertilizers are no good. Be sure to get the kind most suited. Take great care in selecting something you need. Give us all the information you have about your land and crops, and we will furnish the fertilizer needed.

Mr. Charles Stokes says: "I have tried the fertilizer made at Crockett for two years and in both instances was satisfied with the result. One year I was induced to use another fertilizer for a change and made a complete failure. We know what we get at home. My estimate is that half the cotton seed will pay for fertilizer for cotton."

We have customers who grew 48 bushels of corn with fertilizer and without fertilizing only twelve. You will double your yield by using Davy Crockett brands.
