SENATOR MILLS' ILLNESS LONG.

Passing of Great Texan Did Not Come as Complete Surprise.

Corsicana, Texas, September 2.—The funeral of former United States Senator Roger Quarles Mills, who died Saturday morning, will take place next Tuesday if it is possible for relatives, including Mrs. C. H. Mills, a daughter-in-law, to reach here by that time from New York.

Hundreds of people called at the Mills' home to-day to extend their sympathies to the family of Senator Mills, and a shadow of gloom has been thrown over the entire city by the death of this famous Texan.

Senator Mills' death was not entirely unexpected as he had been suffering from Bright's disease and hardening of the arteries for many months.

In May of this year, Colonel Mills went to Canada in the hope that a change of climate would be beneficial. He returned home less than one month ago and gradually grew worse until he collapsed following an attack of apoplexy yesterday, and was unconscious until death came this morning.

Of Colonel Mills' family who survive him there are Major Chas. H. Mills, a son; Mrs. Richards and Mrs. J. D. Wood, daughters. Mrs. Richards is now in Europe and it is impossible for her to attend the funeral. Mrs. Woods and Major Mills were at their father's bedside when he died.

Mrs. C. H. Mills has been in New York, having been called there by the serious illness of her own father. It is expected that the funeral of Senator Mills Tuesday will be the most largely attended by prominent Texans of any that has taken place in Navarro county. Already scores of telegrams of condolence have been received from prominent citizens and friends in all parts of the country.

A Great Advantage to Working Men

J. A. Maple, 125 S. 7th St., Stenbenville, O., says: "For years I have suffered from weak kidneys and a severe bladder trouble. I learned of Foley Kidney Pills and their wonderful cures so I began taking them and sure enough I had as good results as any I heard about. My backache left me and to one of my business, expressman, that alone is a great advantage. My kidneys acted freely and normal, and that saved me a lot of misery. It is now a pleasure to work where it used to be a misery. Foley Kidney Pills have cured me and have my highest praise." L. W. Sweet.

MILLS BORN IN KENTUCKY.

Rode Six Miles to School—Was Seventeen Years Old When He Came to Texas.

Elkton, Ky., Sept. 2.—Former Senator Roger Quarles Mills of Texas, who died today, was born March 30, 1832, in the Jessup neighborhood, in the southwestern portion of this (Todd) county, and was a son of Charles H. and Tabitha B. Mills, pioneer settlers of that vicinity. His birth place was only five miles from that of Jefferson Davis, the Southern confederacy's only president.

Senator Mills secured his education in the famous high school conducted here at that time by Dickey and Horner, and from which many men destined to take foremost place in the political, business and religious life of the nation were graduated. Among the members of the class to which Mr. Mills belonged were Benjamin H. Bristow, secretary of the treasury in Grant's cabinet. Rev. Ben Coulter, one of the wealthiest citizens of Los Angeles and a prominent Christian minister of that city, and Rev. J. C. Petrie, pioneer Methodist minister of Kentucky, now residing here.

Young Mills rode six miles horseback into town every day and back again in attending school. He was known as a level-headed, sensible young man, although at the time displaying in no marked degree any of the talents which so signally distinguished him in later years.

At the age of 17 years he left Todd County for Texas. A feature of the school conducted by Dickey and Horner was the debating society, and it was here that the distinguished Texan received his early training as an orator.

A sore throat can be treated best from the outside. The throat should be rubbed gently with Ballard's Snow Liniment. Apply at night and cover with a cotton cloth bandage; by morning the soreness will disappear. Price 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Sold by Murchison-Beasley Drug Co.

He Won.

"Before you kiss me, Horace, let me tell you that Fred has given Kitty a diamond ring. You have never given me one."

"Dearest, it is only girls who are not precious in themselves who require the aid of precious stones."

"Oh, you may kiss me twice, Horace."

Pen and Sword.

"Do you believe the pen is mightier than the sword?"

"Of course it is. Who ever had to pay $25,000 damages in a breach of promise case on account of the sword he carried?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

YEGGMEN SERVE "SOUP."

Its Queer Recipe Is in Possession of the Secret Service.

Here is a recipe for soup served only after nightfall, preferably in the early morning hours.

"First take about ten or a dozen impwri hz xug, crumble it up fine and put it in a pan or washbowl, then pour over it enough uswhohs (either chbx or laky) to cover it well. Stir it up with your hands, being careful to break all the lumps; leave it set a few minutes; then get a few yards of cheesecloth and tear it in pieces and strain the mixture through the cloth into another vessel, wring the sawdust dry and throw it away. The remains will be the lhai ugx uswhohs mixed. Next take the same amount of water as you used of uswhohs and pour it in; leave the whole set for a few minutes."

This is the "soup" employed by yeggmen, and a single portion of it is guaranteed to open the door of the stoutest safe, provided an aperture can be made sufficiently large to pour in the stuff. The names of the ingredients are written in a crude sort of cipher commonly used for preserving such secrets. This and dozens more of the same transparency of meaning are in the possession of the United States secret service men, the police, detective agencies and others who deal with the cooks of such dishes. By a substitution of letter for letter—the first six for the last six of the alphabet, the second six for the third six, with G and N taken out of turn and made interchangeable—the cipher is easily read: "Impwri hz xug," translated, is "sticks of dynamite." "Uswhohs, either chbx or laky"—alcohol, either wood or pure—may be used.

The directions for serving this soup require considerable attention and the best of trained service. After the "gay cat," or advance agent of the band, has learned all that can be found out about the bank, store or post-office, its lighting, protection and the means of escape by freight train, vehicle or on foot, his companion or companions come on, avoiding notice as far as possible. "Stickups," or look-outs, guard the place while the "inside men" break into the safe. Sealing the cracks about the safe or vault door with soap, the yeggmen pour in the soup through a small hole left open at the top. The liquid flows down by locks, hinges and bolts and is set off by fuse or detonator. Blankets and covers of any kind are used to muffle the sound of the explosion and the fall of the door. Perhaps the "stickups" are forced to create a diversion outside and to frighten the citizens or mislead them while the "inside men" pick out the valuable papers escape. Who pays the check for the soup then depends upon the ingenuity of detectives.—New York Post.

Grim Follies.

A prison sale is held annually in Paris. The articles offered for sale are the clothes of murdered people, the instruments with which the crimes have been committed and the effects which have belonged to the deceased prisoners. Articles which have been taken to the prefecture of police and have not been claimed are also sold. The proceeds go to the Paris almshouse. Unclaimed jewelry is usually bought by ordinary brokers, but the articles which have belonged to criminals, especially those who are notorious, are bought at high prices.

Dodging a Difficulty.

"Are you going to send the Sparkler girl a wedding present?"

"No, old Sparkler and I had a squabble yesterday."

"That's too bad. What was the cause?"

"I really can't afford his friendship. He has five marriageable daughters."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Crockett, Texas, September 7, 1911.

Dear Amy:

I've been to see Laura. You remember she and her husband stayed with us one night. She and Billy both liked my home so well that Billy "loosened up" and told Laura to go down town and buy all the furniture she wanted.

Laura has just fitted out her house from the front door of the hall to the back door of the kitchen. She is the happiest woman in town.

Always your friend,

Lou.

P. S.—Laura asked me where to buy. Knowing she would get good, strong, stylish furniture at lowest prices, I, of course, sent her to

EYE STRAIN.

It Has Many Symptoms and May Affect the Whole System.

Chief among the symptoms of eye strain are watering of the eye, a gluing together of the eyelids on awakening in the morning, headache, the position and character of which vary with each individual. It may be neuralgic or it may be deeply seated, as was the case with Wagner, the musician, who was complaining constantly of "the nerves of his eyes."

The headache is often replaced by an inflammation of the eyelids, especially in young and healthy persons, who also have a little conjunctivitis, with a feeling of tension or fullness in the eyes which may become real pain of a dull aching character, the eyeballs being very tender on pressure.

Sometimes there are vertigo and sickness, with dyspepsia, palpitation and even difficulty in breathing. Sleeplessness is a very frequent symptom, due in part to the excessive flow of blood to the brain and in part to the low tone of the whole nervous system.

The symptoms of eye-strain appear sooner in those who lead a confined and sedentary life, who follow occupations which need a constant use of the eyes in bad or unsuitable light and in those who are debilitated from any cause. The symptoms appear later in those of coarser fiber, who pass much of their time in the open air or who follow occupations which do not need a prolonged use of the eyes for close work.—London Lancet.

Odd Bargain of Dumas.

The library of Carpentras possesses among its treasures a curious collection of autographs. One is the signature of Alexandre Dumas pere to an old bargain which he proposed and which was accepted. This strange contract was that the author should present to the library of Cavallion copies of all his works, those already published and others which he "might write in return for a supply of melons to be sent to him as long as he lived.—Westminster Gazette.

The Sperm Whale's Oil Tank.

Professor R. C. Andrews believes that the oil tank in the head of the sperm whale is a provision of nature to save the monster from starvation when food is scarce. He says that his experiments show that the oil from the tank is absorbed by the whale's body at times when adequate food is unobtainable.—London Telegraph.

Costly Privacy.

Although a waiter, he was very human, so when he perceived that the young couple who had been assigned to his table had many matters tender and confidential under consideration he retreated to a respectful distance and stared at the opposite wall. The restaurant proprietor disapproved of that humanitarian attitude.

"Don't stand away back there," he said. "Go up and hang over that fellow's chair back for awhile." "Oh, no," expostulated the human waiter. "They want to talk." "Of course they do," the proprietor retorted. "That is why I want you to butt in. Every time you come near they will send you to the kitchen for a fresh order to get you out of the way."—New York Times.

Iron in Plants.

Iron is the substance which gives the green appearance to foliage. It forms a constituent part of chlorophyll and is the green coloring matter which stains the bodies inside the cells of leaves, called plastids. When the first organized food is being formed in the leaves from water and carbonic acid gas a certain amount of energy is required. This is obtained from the sun's rays, but the work of absorbing it is carried out by the chlorophyll. It requires very little iron for the production of all the chlorophyll found in a crop, and nearly all soils contain an abundant supply.

The Human Clock.

The Spanish painter Ribera, Mr. Hal-dane Macfall recalls in his "History of Painting," worked with such fervor that all count of time was lost to him. "He made a living clock to check the passing hours. His servant came every hour to the studio to say in a loud and stately voice, 'Another hour has gone, Signor Cavaliere!'"

Anecdotes.

What is an anecdote? An anecdote is a story of extremely uncertain age that is founded on fiction and embellished by fancy. After lying dormant for years it is dug up and credited to an entirely innocent and unsuspecting United States senator.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

She Knew.

"But do you think I could deceive my own little wife?" "No, I know you could not, but I believe you are silly enough to try."

CRAZY KING LOUIS

His Part in the Pitiful Tragedy at Lake Stranberg.

SLEW HIS FRIEND AND DIED.

The Mad Bavarian Monarch Beat Faithful Dr. von Gudden to Death Before Heart Disease Stopped His Own Dash For Liberty.

For months preceding the tragedy on June 13, 1886, that ended his life King Louis II. of Bavaria had revealed many unmistakable signs of mental derangement. He heard mysterious voices in the air around him and believed that he was constantly pursued by dangerous enemies. He withdrew entirely from the world, his cabinet ministers were unable to obtain access to him, and his domestic servants were forbidden to look at his face, being compelled to approach him with averted eyes. The old valet Meier was obliged to don a mask to cover his features whenever he went near the king, and many other strange things happened at the magnificent palace which Louis had built for himself with reckless extravagance.

Wearing his crown and purple royal mantle, with the scepter of sovereignty in his hand, King Louis would wander through the rooms of his castles at night, conversing with imaginary guests, for the most part with the ghosts of King Louis XIV. of France and Queen Marie Antoinette. Frequently places were laid at his table for their disembodied spirits.

The king's debts brought matters to a crisis and necessitated the intervention of the Bavarian government. Most of the royal liabilities had been contracted through the construction and decoration of the famous three castles, and several creditors threatened to initiate proceedings to recover their money. King Louis requested the government to introduce a bill in the Bavarian legislature granting his property immunity from seizure for debts, and when his ministers refused this unreasonable demand he tried to borrow money from all sorts and conditions of people.

In April, 1886, the Bavarian chamber refused to sanction the payment of the king's debts from the public treasury, and a few days later the cabinet addressed a respectful petition to Louis to curtail his expenditures. King Louis responded by dismissing the whole cabinet and nominating a new ministry, at the head of which he placed his own barber.

This irresponsible act brought matters to a head. A commission of medical experts, under the presidency of Dr. von Gudden, pronounced the king to be incurably insane and incapable of ruling, and a deputation under Baron von Crailsheim was dispatched from Munich to the castle where Louis was in residence to inform his majesty of his dethronement. The king had Baron von Crailsheim and all the members of the deputation arrested.

Then Dr. von Gudden proceeded to Neuschwanstein castle, where to all outward appearances he succeeded in persuading the king to submit to his dethronement and to retire to Berg castle, near the shores of Lake Stranberg, where the final tragedy was enacted. The king was escorted to Berg castle by Dr. von Gudden, another medical man, Dr. Mueller, and several trained attendants, and he seemed to acquiesce in the arrangement that he should remain there for a year under close supervision.

Dr. von Gudden, misled by appearances, telegraphed to Munich that his royal patient was "as obedient as a child," and at dinner that evening he promised to take the king for a walk in the park. His assistant, Dr. Mueller, warned him that it would be dangerous to go alone with the king and urged him to allow an attendant to accompany them, or at least to follow them at a discreet distance, but Dr. von Gudden disregarded the younger man's advice and paid the penalty with his life. It was a Sunday evening, and a general feeling of uneasiness prevailed among those who had remained at the castle when the king and Dr. von Gudden failed to reappear after an hour had elapsed. Search parties were organized, and during the night one of the royal footmen found the king's hat, coat and overcoat close to the bank of the lake and Dr. von Gudden's umbrella close by on the ground. The bodies of the king and his physician were found not far from the shore of the lake, in shallow water, both heads projecting above the surface. Dr. von Gudden's face and head bore the marks of heavy blows, which the king, a man of immensely powerful build, had showered upon him.

The position of the bodies and the articles of clothing found near them made it possible to surmise, with probable accuracy, the details of the tragedy. It is likely that the king intended to escape from his prison—for as such he regarded the castle in which he was kept as a madman—and that he divested himself of overcoat and coat to swim across the lake. Dr. von Gudden, it appears, closed with him at the water's edge and tried to prevent his flight, but the king killed him and died from heart disease at the moment when he was on the point of beginning his swim for liberty. The post-mortem examination revealed that neither had died from drowning, but the king from heart failure and Dr. von Gudden from the injuries inflicted on him in the struggle.—Berlin Cor. St. James' Gazette.

FEATHERED POLICE.

Birds Do a Wonderful Amount of Work For the Farmer.

Birds work more in conjunction with man to help him than does any other form of outdoor life, according to an article in Success Magazine. They police the earth and air, and without their services the farmer would be helpless. Larks, wrens and thrushes search the ground for grubs and insects. The food of the meadow lark consists of 75 per cent of injurious insects and 12 per cent of weed seed, showing it to be a bird of great economic value. Sparrows, finches and quail eat a large amount of weed seed.

Practically all the food of the tree sparrow consists of seed. Examinations by Professor F. E. L. Beal of the biological survey of the department of agriculture show that a single tree sparrow will eat a quarter of an ounce of weed seed daily. In a state the size of Iowa tree sparrows alone will consume more than 800 tons of weed seed annually. This, with the work of other seed eating birds, saves the farmer an immense amount of work.

Nuthatches and chickadees scan every part of the trunks and limbs of trees for insect eggs. In a day's time a chickadee has been known to eat hundreds of insect eggs and worms that are very harmful to our trees and vegetables. Warblers and vireos hunt the leaves and buds for moths and millers. Flycatchers, swallows and night hawks are busy day and night catching flies that bother man and beast. Hawks and owls are working silently in daylight and darkness to catch moles, mice, gophers and squirrels.

Insulted.

A traveler relates a story illustrative of life in Spain. Alighting at the door of an inn, a man extended his hand, and, naturally supposing him to be a porter, the traveler offered him his valise.

The man stepped back, tossed his head and frowned scornfully.

"Do you take me for a porter?" he demanded. "I would have you understand that I am no porter."

"Indeed!" said the traveler apologetically. "Then may I ask, sir, what you are?"

"I am a beggar, sir, and asked you for alms!"

Making Sure.

An electric wire had fallen under its heavy weight of snow. The linemen found a crowd around the grounded copper and an inquisitive Irishman lifting one end from the ground.

"Man, alive, don't you know what a risk you're taking? That might be a live wire!" he ejaculated.

"Sure an' Oi thought of that meself, an' Oi flit of the wire good before Oi picked it up at all."—Everybody's.

Anecdotes.

"What is an anecdote, pa?" "An anecdote, my son, is a short and funny tale which at once reminds the other fellow of a tale which is neither short nor funny."—Puck.

"You sold me that horse as free from faults. Why, it's blind." "Blind? Well, that's not a fault, that's a cruel misfortune."

"My daughter's piano lessons have been a great expense to me."

"That so? Did some neighbor sue you?"

A True Line on Bailey.

Recently a Greenville paper, in an effort to find an explanation of the conduct of Senator Bailey in deserting his party associates in congress and voting with the republicans so often, stated in substance, that it was because Bailey, unlike other public men of this day, is honest and always fights in the open; that he boldly champions what he thinks is right, regardless of consequences, and that for this reason he is not "understood;" that the people expect him to be like other public men—to be time servers, to play the demagogue and favor anything that may seem popular; that the other public men have done that way so long and so often that the people expect it in all public men, and as the senator always acts honestly and boldly the people largely misunderstand him.

This explanation has been adopted by other Bailey organs and is now going the rounds. It is a remarkable statement. Boiled down, it simply means that Bailey, the one man from this state in national politics, whose conduct has been most questionable, and whose political record most variable, is the only honest public servant we have, and the people, being a set of fools and idiots, have not the sense to understand him. This we repeat is a remarkable excuse for his checkered record, to say nothing of his personal conduct in serving the enemies of the people.

In 1887 he stumped the state for statewide prohibition and made the reputation which put him in congress. He continued to favor statewide prohibition until after 1906. Suddenly and without an apparent reason, he became an anti. Was this because the public men who favored prohibition were time servers and demagogues? If so, had he up to that time been a time server and a demagogue and suddenly decided to become honest and bold?

Again, in 1894, he voted side by side with W. J. Bryan for free raw material such as free lumber, free iron ore, free coal and free hides, and in 1909 he voted against these things, and in doing so, as to some of them, repudiated the express demands of the national platform of his own party. Was he a demagogue and a time server when he voted with his party in 1894 and a scholar and statesman when he reversed himself and repudiated his party in 1909?

Again in his race for delegate to the democratic convention, he ran on a platform of his own making, which denounced as embezzler of power any democratic official who refused to obey the expressed will of his party on any proposition. On this platform he was elected. Within less than a year we find him announcing the doctrine that a platform is not binding on either the conscience or judgment of a democratic official. Was he a demagogue and time server when he ran for delegate to Denver? and, if so, did his association with Aldrich in making the tariff bill make him honest and bold enough to denounce and repudiate the platform of his party and announce the new doctrine that the official is greater than those who elected him?

Again, in 1907, he had no words bitter enough to describe those democrats who would refuse to support a nominee for United States senator. In 1910 we find him justifying the action of the republicans in the Illinois legislature who repudiated the senatorial nominee of their party and elected Lorimer, the briber, to the United States senate. Was he a demagogue and a time server when he insisted that the nominee should be supported?

They say that in voting against Canadian reciprocity and in joining the republicans in voting against the free list bill passed by a democratic house and supported by all the other democrats in the senate he was serving the farmers. Are all the democrats in the house and in the senate, save him, demagogues and time servers? and are he and the republicans alone honest and bold statesmen who are "not understood?" If so, it is time to disband and let the republican party continue to "save the farmers" as it did in the same way without the help of a democratic senator.

It seems to us that the time has arrived when the people should no longer be charged with having little enough sense to be continually misled and with having no better sense than to have all their officials except one senator time servers and demagogues.—Greenville Herald.

Population Center of United States.

Washington, Aug. 30.—The center of population of the United States was announced by Director of the Census Durand today to be in the western part of the city of Bloomington, Monroe County, Ind.

The change in the location of the center of population since July 17 is due to the discovery of an error made in the census office. Two clerks worked separately in computing the geographical location, but both made the same error and the wrong result was published as the census office's determination of the spot.

The movement of the center of population thirty-nine miles westward is due to the increase of population on the Pacific coast.

"The great increase in the population of New York, Pennsylvania and certain other states north of thirty-nine parallel has balanced the increase in Texas, Oklahoma, Indian Territory and Southern California," said Director Durand. "The greater advance toward the west is due to a large extent to the increase in population of the Pacific coast, its distance from the center giving it much greater weight than the populous east of the center."

"For instance, San Francisco, Seattle, Portland and Sacramento, with a population of 906,016, have as great an influence on the center of population as Philadelphia, Boston and Baltimore, with a population of 2,778,078. The total western movement of the center of population since 1790 is 558 miles."

Coffin Promised Each Negro.

A few days ago, a strange man told some negroes in Mt. Pleasant that he had been sent out by the government to deliver to each negro a coffin, and that he would deliver it soon, leaving one at such houses as he visited for each member of the family, and would give the negroes twelve months in which to pay for them. He said he would come around once each month and collect a monthly installment for each coffin.

Several negro families have been considerably excited over the matter. In the first place, they do not care to have a lot of coffins piled up in their houses, and in the second place, they do not care to be bound up to meet the regular monthly payments.

One negro interviewed stated that the man said he would be in Mount Pleasant to-day or tomorrow, but would make all deliveries in the night time. For this reason, the negro who told the Times Review of the strange visitor and his strange proposal, said that he and his family intended to sleep in the woods on the night the coffin distributor is expected. This negro has ten or eleven children and he considers that if a coffin is left for each child as well as himself and wife, he will be pretty well stocked up in the undertaking line, and that the total monthly payments he will have to meet will consume about all he can make. It was suggested to him that he might dispose of the lot to one of the local undertaking establishments, but he said: "Lordy, man, don't you know they'd put dis nigger in de pen, if I sells dem coffins 'fore I gets 'em paid for? No sir, man, I don't try sell um. Guess I'll have to work 'an pay dat white man for um."—Mount Pleasant Times Review.

IN MEMORIAM.

A Tribute to D. A. Nunn.

(By a Friend.)

*Justum et tenacem propositi virum
Non clivum ardor praeva jubentum,
Non collus instantis tyranni
Mente quatit solido—*

The lines above are from that noble ode of Horace's, addressed to Augustus Caesar. They are not inserted here in a spirit of display. They express a sentiment, lofty in itself and clothed in language terser and more pointed than we can find in our limited vocabulary. These lines, chaste and elegant, represent an attribute eminently true in the character of our distinguished friend. In all our command of language we could not, if we so desired, put together in expressive English, lines which portray, as by the stroke of a brush in the hands of genius, that splendid trait of manhood which the Latin poet brings out in language beautiful and inimitable.

*"The man just and steadfast of purpose
The wild passions of a howling mob
Nor the countenance of a threatening tyrant
Can shake from his fixed resolution."*

In thus illustrating by quotation a salient feature in the moral groundwork of our friend's many virtues, we have no apology to make, more especially to those who, like the writer, have known for a third of a century the distinguished subject of this sketch—Colonel D. A. Nunn.

The details of his life such as the date and place of his birth, etc., we shall leave to others, preferring to address ourselves to those traits of character and acts in his history which shine forth with such signal brightness as to arrest attention and challenge the admiration of all who love true manhood and scorn sham. Colonel Nunn was not cast in any ordinary mould. He was of a type so rare that few of his class are met in the run of a century. Richly endowed in mental and moral worth, he moved on a plane beyond the reach of the great throng, and his commanding individuality of character was such as to inspire feelings of jealousy and envy in the ranks of mediocrity. He was unique in that he was rivalled by few and surpassed by none in his aspirations to fulfil the sovereign duties of good citizenship. With him patriotism was a religion, and he was ever ready and prompt to tender his services at the call of his country.

His love of the Old South, its history, its traditions, its associations and the Old Cause became a fetish with him. He reached the estate of young manhood at a time when the Union was electrified with political discussion, torn asunder by sectional animosities, and the very fabric itself seemed to be rocking in the throes of an upheaval. The times were indeed critical, especially for a young man who had assumed a responsibility which usually comes to most young men at his period of life. Just then he was united in wedlock to Miss Helen Williams of his native state, Mississippi, and left at once for Texas. Having chosen the law for a profession, he was assiduously and energetically applying himself to its study, and thus laying the foundation for a bright and successful career. There burst on the country then, with direful portent, like a fire-bell at night, the cry "To Arms." The dark, ominous cloud which had been impending for years broke, and all those glowing plans for the future, which in the ardor of sanguine young manhood seemed assured, dissolved as in a dream. It was war now and the most discerning could see no limit. The supreme test of the sincere patriot had come. There were those who had been thundering in eloquent appeals to the people to disrupt the Union and set up an independent Confederacy. And now that the crisis was at hand and the call urgent and imperative for volunteers to go to the front, many of those who had been shouting from house-tops found pleasing and profitable employment far from the danger line. The crucial test was now up to every man. No one was more prompt to respond to the call of his country than D. A. Nunn. Of the first to volunteer and go to the front, he was of the last to return. He organized several commands and led them to the field of active military operations. He had never had the advantages of a military education, but he knew the incalculable value of discipline and insisted sternly on its observance in camp, on the march and on the field of battle. He recognized that the first and highest lesson for a soldier to learn was obedience. Without it there was no organization, no discipline and an army was simply a mob. He was resolved to bring order out of this chaos and set severely to work to do so. There were those in his command who looked on campaigning as a frolic and resented any effort at reducing the body to discipline as a personal affront. But however much they may have grumbled at the rigorous measures used to make them effective military units, when the order was given to storm some parapet or to charge a battery and D. A. Nunn was in the van with flashing sword and calling to his men to follow him, all those measures, harsh as they thought, were forgotten, and only a thunderous volume of acclamation greeted him. A man who could lead men thus through a storm of hissing, hurtling missiles without a quaver was no martinet but a soldier of the highest order, whom no danger could daunt or dismay.

The war over, he returned to the practice of his profession. There was about to descend upon the South an organized system of horrors, a fate more galling than war. And there was no way of averting or combatting it.

These old soldiers like Colonel Nunn could not appeal to force or arms to avert the record of humiliation and shame which had been organized with systematic malignity. These old soldiers would gladly have died to shield their beloved country from the policy of Reconstruction, which was being made ready for it. The cry now with those put over us was "vae victis," woe to the conquered! And woe unspeakable it was! The first act in the drama of infamy was a horde of rapacious vultures, unclean birds of prey, harpies in human form—seeking like Satan whom they could devour. Trooping in the wake of the military and protected by them they installed themselves and made ready for a riotous time of it. Carpet-baggers they were called. They came for pillage and plunder and had the military to back them. Our people could do little more within the law than fret and gnash and glower. To supinely endure all these infamies was too much to expect of these old veterans. They had faced all the unseen terrors and perils of the battlefield, the shrieking shell, the gleaming steel, the spit and spud of minies, the nameless woes of prison, but here was one not dreamt of. What was to be done? Then it was that the people turned to men like D. A. Nunn for help and relief and they got it. It was treason for a few old soldiers to congregate and a crime almost for one man to whisper to another. Then it was that D. A. Nunn towered aloft in the true grandeur of his character. Then it was we had our illustration of the full force and meaning of that trait which the lines at the head of this sketch represent. All these indignities were met by the real patriots who had gone to the front in war, while those who had slunk in the rear were paralyzed with fear or pursuing a policy of compromise and shame.

During these dark days of Reconstruction when all hope even had taken flight and there was nothing left but the bitter cup to be drained; when the lowest and most ignorant element in the social scale was being supported in power by bayonets; when a large percentage of the white citizenry had been disfranchised and their former slaves invested with the full right of suffrage—then it was that our friend showed the mettle in his composition. The crisis called for a spirit of fortitude and of forbearance, and at the same time for a nerve that would not quail. The man thus equipped was the man for the hour and he was present in the distinguished subject of this sketch.

As a lawyer Colonel Nunn rose to the highest rank in his profession. His practice was co-extensive with the large territory in which his ability and skill as an attorney were known. Wherever his qualifications were recognized, he rarely failed to be retained on one or the other side of every case of any magnitude. And the client who was so fortunate as to engage his services could trust all his interests to him in the profound confidence and assurance that, as long as there was any ground on which to stand or an iota of evidence to support the case, he would be found fighting for the triumph of his cause. He would hold on with "steadfast resolution" and grim purpose as long as there was anything to hold to. And again we refer to those fine lines at the head of this tribute.

The subject of this sketch was a profound student of the political events of the day and took a keen interest in all developments in the political arena. He was a democrat, but not in the sense and application of the word current these days. He was of the Old School of democracy and had not been in accord with the party on national issues for years. The nomination of Bryan at Chicago on a platform revolutionary in its purport and scope caused him and thousands of others to cut loose from the party as then led. And since then he has closely followed the drift of political affairs and he has felt at times and so expressed himself that the country had gotten into the rapids and was heading for a radical upheaval in the government. He regarded all this swinging around the country by prospective candidates for the presidency, proclaiming from the hustings dogmas revolutionary in word and spirit, as a wild debauch, a carnival, which the demagogues and other madcaps seized as an opportunity to exploit their own interests by appealing to the passions of the rabble, assailing the rights of property or arraying one class of citizen against another. All this he looked on as a repudiation of the past glorious history of the party.

It is a day when the demagogue by adroit appeals to prejudice rides in triumph into office. It is a day, too, when it is incumbent on every man who believes in property rights and good government to spurn, to spew out all such leaders who, to win notoriety, to achieve success in office, would gladly see the government overthrown.

There are few official positions which Colonel Nunn sought to fill. There are those who are known as chronic office-seekers. He was not of this class. There was not an office in the State from Governor down which he would not have adorned and filled with signal ability. In these piping days of the demagogue, men of his intellectual girth and stature must get out of the way for the men of small calibre, who proclaim from high places their formulas for banishing poverty and bringing on the Millennium.

He was a member of the Constitutional Convention which framed the present State Constitution. He was among his peers there and his fitness for important committee assignments was promptly recognized. In that body of strong lawyers he took rank with the ablest.

A few years gone, Colonel Nunn offered for Congress from this district. He made a splendid canvass, outspoken and frank. The public knew his position on every question of national import. His friends, as did he, felt confident of his success, and by the use of a limited sum of money for legitimate campaign purposes he would probably have won. He declined to sanction such use of funds and when appealed to to allow his friends to do so and told that it was the custom, he spurned the idea with indignation, observing: "If I have to do that to succeed, let me go down in defeat." A saying worthy of Old Cato and the best days of Rome, but out of joint in these days of graft and practical politics.

Our friend was a man of strong, rugged individuality, with a nature essentially warm, noble and true. Figuratively, the shadow cast by a towering type of manhood like his would sometimes overshadow the nobler elements of his nature. Like all strong men of high ideals he had his enemies, but they were few, and they were persons, too, who had been thwarted in their selfish, dishonest schemes by his stern, sturdy stand against them.

In all movements for developing the resources of the county or upbuilding the town, his counsel and his money were ever ready. He was a leader in all such enterprises and to him more than to anyone else must credit be given for inaugurating that vast industrial development in the eastern part of this county which has brought fortune to scores and made thousands comfortable and happy.

There are many more happenings in his active and, in many respects, dramatic life of which we should like to write, but the length of this warns us that there is a limit of space beyond which we cannot go.

An episode on the day of the obsequies we cannot fail to chronicle. It was the unbidden presence in numbers of the colored people. It was a noble tribute to the sterling worth of the subject of this sketch—a testimonial of the highest significance. Their attendance was not for any theatrical or spectacular effect, but came from the honest promptings of souls who looked on him as a friend, many of whom, from the writer's personal knowledge, had reason to so regard him.

But the most precious stone in the casket, the crowning grace in the coronet of graces, was the one bright particular jewel which, like the name from the angel's visit to Ben Adhem's room, led and out-shone all the rest, was his love for that noble type of womanhood, the wife of his bosom, his companion for more than fifty years. His love for her and hers for him were the rose and flower of all that was pure and ennobling. The holy flame kindled at the nuptial altar never waned or flickered, but grew brighter and stronger with the lapse of years. The sentiment with him was one of almost worshipful devotion, and the weight of years and the ravages which time works seemed but to intensify the pure, sacred passion. In his eyes his wife never grew old, she was the same as when a beautiful, blushing bride he led her to the marriage shrine more than a half-century gone.

"His chaste soul employed her heaven-taught lyre,
None but the noblest passions to inspire;
Not one immoral, one unclean thought,
One phrase, which dying he could wish to blot."

The sweet savor of such a life as this devoted couple led cannot be lost, but must go on during the years to come, bestowing a benign, refining influence, a benediction in itself to all who have known and seen it. Their home was the abode of an abounding hospitality and wide-swinging doors, and a warm hand-clasp greeted all who came. All who ever visited this model home can bear testimony to all we have said as to the relations between this couple. It was refreshing to witness his home-coming after a short absence—this type of stalwart manhood which could stand before kings without blanch or tremor. When imperatively demanded he could be austere to the degree of asceticism, but on entering the sacred precincts of his home, where the divinity of his soul presided, and where her presence diffused a gentle, gracious influence, all the harassing cares and irritating incidents of the day dissolved into bright sunshine and cheer. Within our knowledge we can recall no parallel where the current of conjugal life flowed as sweetly and as harmoniously as theirs, of whom it may be said, as of President and Mrs. Cleveland, that "their married life was one grand, sweet song."

Plaintiffs specially plead the five and ten years Statutes of Limitation in bar of any title asserted adversely to plaintiffs' title, alleging actual, continuous, peaceable and adverse possession of said land, cultivating, using and enjoying the same under deeds duly registered, and paying all taxes thereon for more than five years before the filing of this suit, and also such possession, use and enjoyment of same for more than ten years before the filing of this suit; that said McLean league was partitioned between Charles L. Wall, William McLean and James McLean, sole heirs of said Daniel McLean, and that said land on said league owned by plaintiffs is a part of that set apart in said partition to William McLean; that there is now no deed on record from said William McLean or his heirs conveying said land on said McLean league, which casts a cloud on plaintiffs' title; that W. D. Taylor and others on April 16, 1880, conveyed to T. T. & C. H. Beazley a part of said land, and said grantees executed to said W. D. Taylor three notes dated October 7, 1879, due January 1st, 1881, 1882 and 1883, the first being for $800, and the other two for $850 each, for the purchase price of said land, and that same have been fully paid but no release of said lien has been executed, which casts a cloud on plaintiffs' title; that the claims of defendants are unknown to plaintiffs, and they pray for judgment removing all cloud from their title, substituting all missing deeds, cancelling all outstanding liens and for such other and further relief as they may be entitled to in law and in equity.

The Houston County Fair catalogue has been completed by the Courier's job department and is ready for distribution. The typographical neatness of the catalogue is pronounced by capable critics to be far above the average.

Mr. W. N. Mills, representing Thos. Goggan & Bros. of Galveston, is in the city to open a piano house for his firm. Mr. Mills is having some trouble in securing a suitable location, but expects to get located in a few days.

The Houston County Fair Association has employed Mr. Hand from San Saba as superintendent and Mr. Hand is now on the ground and looking after the work. The association is leaving nothing undone to make the fair a success.

B. B. Warfield, who is fishing in Minnesota, writes home that he is having a big time and catching some fine fish. He and his wife and daughter have been in Minnesota for four or five weeks. Their home was in that state before coming to Crockett.

The headquarters of the Houston County Fair Association have been established in the back room of the Crockett State Bank building. Mr. S. B. Hand, recently of San Saba, is in charge and will be glad to see all having business with the fair association.

Collectors are at work collecting up subscriptions for the fair. When they call on you don't put them off by telling them to come around to-morrow or some other time, but remember that their time, like yours, is valuable and that they are giving it free to the fair association. Pay them and save them another trip.

Many of our people will be glad to note the return to Crockett from the Panhandle of Judge Sam Denny. After a residence of many years in Northwest Texas, Judge Denny has decided that Houston county is the best place on earth and, consequently, has decided to again make it his home. The judge arrived last week and is being warmly welcomed back to the county of his nativity.

Monday, Labor Day, was celebrated at Elkhart by the trades' unions of Palestine and was the occasion of a ball game between Crockett and Palestine, which, of course, took a good crowd from Crockett. But Crockett took the ball game from Palestine by a score of seven against nothing. Crockett has the ball team. A special train was run from Palestine for the celebration.

Opportunities for the Laborer.

Will Thompson, a colored man from Crockett and an employee of the Houston county Coal & Mfg. Co., mined 201 pit cars of lignite in eighteen days during the month of August, for which he was paid $60.30. Will only weighs 145 lbs. If he had put in the full month he would have made nearly $100. This shows what opportunities there are in this country for the ordinary laborer to make money.

The coal company reports shipments from their two mines during the month of August of 474 cars of lignite.

TALK UP THE FAIR.

It is now only about four weeks until the beginning of the Houston county fair. The catalogues have been printed and are being distributed. The race track is being graded. Plans are taking shape for the erection of the grand stand, the exhibit hall and the other necessary buildings. The fair is a thing that every citizen of Houston county should feel a pride in and it is a thing in which every citizen should feel a working pride. Let's all get down to work and boost the Houston county fair—not the Crockett fair, but the Houston county fair. Let's talk it up among our neighbors and ask our neighbors to talk it up among their neighbors. The Houston county fair is going to be a great big surprise—a surprise to many of our home people. Fifteen hundred dollars in premiums have been offered. The fair must be a success. The races promise to be good. You will make no mistake by talking up the Houston county fair.

HELP THE BAND BOYS.

The band boys are endeavoring to raise money to buy more instruments to improve the band. They have plenty of new material, but are short on instruments. It takes money to buy musical instruments of the kind used by the Crockett band and the band boys have spent all of their money. Consequently, they are now engaged in the laudable effort to raise more money with which to improve their band.

To this end an entertainment was given by the band Wednesday evening. We do not know what other means the boys have in mind for raising money, but we do know that the band ought to be encouraged by the business men and encouraged most liberally. The band will be worth much to the city. It is worth something already, although young and with little practice. The boys are devoting two nights out of each week to practice and have a considerable investment in instruments. Besides, they have an instructor employed and that costs them money. Any aid extended them will in the end benefit the town.

Daughters of the Confederacy.

The D. A. Nunn Chapter met on the afternoon of the 6th of August with Mrs. Tom Self. This meeting being a memorial service held in honor of Colonel Nunn, after the secretary's reports were read, no business was transacted, except the appointment of a committee to canvass the town in regard to the reorganization of the cemetery association. The president read an earnest plea from Mrs. Nunn in reference to this work, and the chapter endorsing her views, the following committee was appointed: Mesdames D. F. Arledge, J. P. Hall, D. Woodson, G. King, C. Kennedy, Johnson Arledge, Julia Barbee.

Our memorial services were then opened by the president reading a letter Colonel Nunn had recently received from one of the members of his old company, suggesting a reunion of the few survivors to celebrate the 50th anniversary of their organization, with Colonel Nunn's answer to same.

A paper telling of the reason why and the manner in which the chapter came to be named for Colonel Nunn was read by Mrs. D. F. Arledge, after which the sextette, assisted by Mesdames DeCuir and Barbee, sang "One Sweetly Solemn Thought."

Mrs. Self then read a beautiful sketch of Colonel Nunn's life, followed by Miss Bella Lipscomb, who read a paper written by Mrs. Nunn some time since, giving a most interesting account of Colonel Nunn's life.

Resolutions on the death of Colonel Nunn were read and motion made and adopted that copies of the same be sent to each of the city papers, also to the official organ of the division, also a copy spread on our memorial page, the original paper being sent to Mrs. Nunn.

The sextette then sang "Abide With Me," which closed a very beautiful tho' sad service.

The chapter will hold its next meeting with Mrs. John H. Wooters on Saturday the 30th of September.

Mrs. D. F. Arledge,
Secretary D. A. Nunn Chapter.
