STATE CAPITAL Highlights AND Sidelights

by Bill Boykin

AUSTIN, TEX.--Gulf Coast and South Texas newspaper publishers kicked off an investigation into the "newsprint crisis" last week that could become a nation-wide issue.

Last week in San Antonio a probe was launched into the causes of the current newsprint shortage in the United States.

A resolution requesting a "Congressional investigation" of the current newsprint crisis was adopted at the joint board meeting of the Texas Gulf Coast Press Association and the South Texas Press Association.

Publishers speaking for the resolution asked the Texas Press Association and National Newspaper Association to "investigate the problem at all levels" including "price fixing" and the "reported nationwide newsprint shortage."

The resolution asked the press associations to report their findings to their memberships so that "publishers can make necessary plans and adjustments for the future months and years."

Several weekly newspapers recently have converted to daily publication because of the growth of their cities, and are having problems getting more newsprint for their publications.

The regional press associations also asked that the Texas Congressional delegation be alerted to the problem and requested "assistance in working toward solutions for an adequate supply of this resource which is so vital to our industry."

Other state press associations in the southwest and midwest have received copies of the resolution, and have received requests for action by their officers at future board of directors meetings.

The newsprint manufacturers in the United States have told publishers that shortages have been caused by paper mill closings in some states because of "environmental problems." Wet weather has kept timber in the forests and away from the mills, newsprint officials have said.

Canadian mills--another big source of newsprint in this country--have not been contacted by the publishers, but will be asked to report the reasons for current shortages, the press association officials said.

Some publishers have inquired about newsprint supplies in other countries, and "pool purchases" of newsprint from overseas markets.

Recent price increases by the newsprint companies have sparked part of the controversy also.

"We cannot understand why the price of newsprint is the same in the states with newsprint mills--close to the source of supply--and in areas hundreds of miles from the manufacturing plants," one publisher pointed out.

GOVERNOR SUPPORTS SCHOOL FINANCE AID -- Gov. Dolph Briscoe threw his support behind a stopgap school finance aid measure to provide $39.7 million in enrichment grants to the state's 113 poorest districts.

He spelled out his recommendations at a rally arranged here by San Antonio and Crystal City residents to dramatize the case for overhaul of inequities in educational funding.

Briscoe pledged additional legislation will "set into action a process of altering our entire funding system so that state funds will be allocated to all school districts... based on the financial resources of each."

While the governor didn't say exactly what he meant by the latter, aides said a "complete review" of tax capabilities of districts across the state will be ordered.

Briscoe, committed to avoiding a tax bill this year, found it difficult to accept far-reaching overhauls of the school finance system which will cost $500 million to $800 million for implementation.

The legislation he backs, with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's and House Speaker Price Daniel Jr.'s support, would require each district to report its taxable assets to the state comptroller on specified forms by January 1, 1975.

Data will aid in fixing true market value of the property for school tax purposes, aides said.

The governor's office would also be made responsible for coordinating work of legislative committees and other official agencies in working out a plan for overhauling the school finance system by 1975.

Briscoe told the demonstrators a court case from San Antonio's Edgewood district pointed up inequities and "we must move to correct them." MAJOR BILLS ADVANCE -- Texas' first state-supported adult basic education program received final legislative approval and was sent to the governor.

Meanwhile, a bilingual education plan for the first six grades of public schools also cleared both houses.

House and Senate adopted a conference committee report on legislation (HB 185) to extend collective bargaining rights to Texas policemen and firemen.

Rival House and Senate versions of the 1974-75 appropriations act wound up in the hands of a conference committee for adjustment after the House finally completed action on its bill in seven days of debate.

The House launched into another long debate over drug law reform, including lowering of the penalty for first offense possession of marijuana to a misdemeanor.

SPEAKER CANDIDATES EMERGE -- Candidates for House Speaker have begun to emerge, meeting deadlines fixed by state law for reporting their campaign expenses. (Few have any expenses to report.)

Reps. Carl Parker of Port Arther, James Nugent of Kerrville and Fred Head of Troup joined Reps. Bill Clayton of Springlake and DeWitt Hale of Corpus Christi as officially declared candidates. Head issued the most optimistic announcement, claiming he has 67 supporters.

Other possibilities included Reps. George Preston of Paris, Dave Finney of Fort Worth and Chris Miller of Fort Worth. AUTO INSURANCE HEARING SET--The State Board of Insurance will hold public hearings on auto insurance rates here July 10.

Hearing, starting at 9 a.m. on that date, will cover rating plans, manual rules and endorsement forms for both voluntary and assigned risk policies. Written statements were requested by June 11 from witnesses. New rates would be effective September 1.

AG OPINIONS --Gov. Briscoe had to withdraw appointment of Houston City Councilman Judson Robinson to the State Board of Corrections after Atty. Gen. John Hill said one man can't hold both jobs.

In other recent opinions, Hill concluded:

* A public school teacher can serve as a county commissioner (if he isn't paid for county duty); a legislative aide can serve as committee consultant; and a state university professor can be paid for consulting services to a property tax committee but a county judge can't serve on a school board.

* Hemphill County commissioners cannot be elected countywide at large to avoid re-districting.

* Private college students in part-time work-study programs are covered under workmen's compensation.

* A beer-wine sale for on- and off-premise consumption election should be submitted as a single question rather than as two separate issues.

* Bowie County commissioners can determine compensation and expenses paid justices of the peace and their assistants, but they have no powers of removal over the J.P.'s.

* A bill allowing county commissioners to employ private counsel to represent public officials or employees in suits brought by a non-political entity is constitutional (as long as duties and acts in question are official).

COURTS SPEAK --A man who was partially negligent cannot collect damages due to a collision with an Abilene Christian College school bus which ran a red light, the State Supreme Court held.

The High Court upheld a lower court opinion invalidating a Howard County resident's attack on constitutionality of county hospital district laws.

Seizure of an obscene film from a Dallas theater was approved by the Supreme Court. APPOINTMENTS --Retired Air Force Brigadier General James U. Cross is new executive director of the Texas Offshore Terminal Commission.

Governor Briscoe named Dr. Robert J. Bacon of Houston to the State Board of Corrections. Briscoe also announced these new appointments: * Judson Robinson of Houston to the Texas Southern University board of regents.

* Glenn W. Justice of Dallas, Mrs. George P. Cullum Jr. of Dallas and Ernest Powers of Carthage to the Stephen F. Austin State University board of regents.

* Mrs. Johnnie M. Benson of Fort Worth and Francis A. Flynn of Austin (reappointment) to the Texas Board of Licensure for Nursing Home Administrators.

* James H. Milam of Lubbock was selected new chairman of the State Securities Board shortly after David D. Allen of Houston was sworn in as a member.

GA'S RATE HEARING BEGINS--A significant Railroad Commission Examiner's hearing into whether or not Lo-Vaca Gathering Company should be allowed to raise rates charged cities under contracts began here last week. Opponents will state their case at a future date.

Regardless of the facts, when asked about conditions on the Marble Brothers Farm in Floyd County the standard reply from Don Marble of South Plains for years has been "Never saw it better."

Now, at the start of the 1973 planting season the answer rings true, not only on the Marble farm but all across the Texas High Plains.

Seldom if ever has the area been in better shape to start a crop. The same rain and snow that stretched a six week harvest period into almost six months and caused untold losses on the 1972 crop has left the Plains with the best underground moisture conditions in many years. And a high le-

At the same two shows, Dickie Hunter showed two horses. His horse Patchett Bars placed first in the barrels and first in the poles. He also placed second in Youth Western Pleasure, second in all age mares and fourth in showmanship, at the Big Spring show.

At Post the mare placed first in the barrels, first in the poles, third in Youth Western Pleasure and third in all age mares.

Hunter also showed Hy Copper who placed fourth in the "72" stallions in Big Springs, and second in the "72" stallions at Post. This horse belongs to his father, H.D. Hunter.

vel of subsoil moisture historically has foretold bumper crops.

Moreover, supplies of major farm commodities grown on the Plains are not out of line with demand nor does it appear they will get out of line, so there are excellent prospects for good prices this Fall on cotton, feed grains, wheat, soybeans and livestock.

All of which is prompting Marble, who is Secretary-Treasurer of Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. to supplement his usual reply with "It looks now like this may be the year to be farming on the Plains."

The Rifle Team consisting of Larry Vinson, Tim Sooter, Danny Jones and Ruth Ramm also placed second in the contest.

ama have greatly reduced chances for high production in an area that earlier was expected to produce around 6 million bales of cotton. Latest estimates say production in these states may be cut by 20 percent or more.

On the other side of the cotton picture there are indications of increased cotton acreage and good production forecasts coming from California and Arizona. And, given ideal weather, the cotton crop in the Mid-South and Southeast could still reach the 6 million bale mark.

"But should the total U.S. crop fall significantly below 12.5 million bales, as now seems entirely possible," Marble notes "we could be well paid for our efforts to achieve maximum yields and the highest possible quality from our 1973 crops."

Six "real cotton farmers" and a cotton research scientist from Israel, traveling at their own expense, visited the High Plains May 3 and 4 as guests of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., Lubbock-based cotton producer organization.

And according to PCG's Cotton Fanning, who acted as guide for the group, "Never have we had visitors who showed keener, more perceptive interest in the machinery and production techniques used in Plains cotton production."

The group first visited at the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center and USDA's ginning laboratory North of Lubbock. But it was "down on the farm" where they really became serious.

Ronnie Dulin and Jim Bob Smith spent some five hours showing the Israelis their farming operations South of Lubbock on May 3, then Roy Forkner of the Canyon Community gave them another 5-hour tour on May 4. "And it is my guess they will profit from everything they saw and heard," Fanning said.

Each of the six farmers is in charge of cotton production in an Israeli "Kibutz", which might best be described in English as a "commune". Each "Kibutz" has from 100 to 200 families with each member of every family assigned to a specific phase of communal life. One man in charge of cotton production, another handles corn, another wheat. Some women do the cooking, another group is charged with child care and others wash dishes, do laundry, mend clothing, etc.

Each Kibutz member is supplied food in a common dining hall and is given clothing from the common Kibutz store. If a member wants to take his wife on a week-end trip he "checks out" a Kibutz-owned car, draws money from the Kibutz treasury, leaves his children with the Kibutz nursery, and off he goes without a care in the world.

According to Eleazar Kletter,

the cotton research scientist and leader of the group, Kibutz members share equally in all proceeds from crop production and other enterprises without regard for individual contributions. He explained that these cotton farmers were sent to the U. S. by their respective Kibutzes as an investment in future productivity, as a means to retain their interest in cotton production and as a "reward" for past performance.

Israel has only about 75,000 acres in cotton production, Kletter said, from which they average about two bales per acre.

The best reducing exercise consists in placing both hands against the table and pushing back.

Seventh Grade Achievement Tests Given

Friday, May 4, the seventh graders took the California Achievement Tests. These tests are given annually to the seventh graders. The tests lasted almost all day. The tests all dealt with English, Math, Science, and Social Studies. The Students needed at least two pencils and scrap paper. They were to bring a library book or something to study if they finished a test before time. The tests will tell the teachers if the students are on the right level of each subject. Mr. Gramling was the conductor of the tests.

Secret Atheist

"I am a believing, God-fearing Christian," George assured Kathy repeatedly during their courtship. But after the wedding, he confessed that he had been lying. He had been an atheist all the time. To Kathy, a devoutly religious woman, the situation was unbearable. As soon as possible she went to court for an annulment, and the judge granted her a decree. The judge said the marriage lacked the "meeting of the minds" that was essential to make any contract binding.

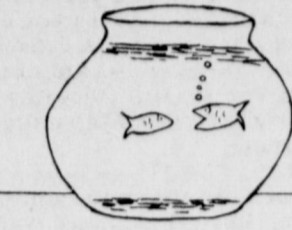

While the law will tolerate a reasonable amount of "salesmanship" in courting, it will not tolerate deception that strikes at the heart of the marriage relation.

However, not every statement connected with religious matters is considered to be that vital. Take another case in which the bridegroom, having promised to go through a church wedding after the civil ceremony, failed to carry out his promise. For five months he managed to find one excuse after another for staying away from the church.

At last his wife filed suit for an annulment. But this time, the court turned her down. The court reasoned that if she was willing to put up with her husband's excuses for five months, the religious ceremony could not have been so important to her after all.

Of course, the more firmly the marriage is established, the more reluctant the courts are to annul. A number of cases have been based on the premarital consent by one spouse to have the children raised in the religion of the other spouse. In this situation, even if the consent turns out to be fraudulent, courts have generally refused to find enough grounds for an annulment.

Reason: with the couple having dwelt together for years as husband and wife, and with children already in existence, it is very late indeed to declare that the marriage had been invalid from the start.

MJHS Campaign Posters Shown

Prior to recent Student Council Officer elections, candidates and some of their supporters put up various campaign posters, signs, and paintings in the halls of M.J.H.S. to advertise their candidacy. Containing many different slogans, the posters were multi-colored and of several different sizes and shapes. Hardly any section of the halls was left uncovered. As in all campaigns, though, elections were soon held, and the signs no longer had any significance. The clean-up job was a big one because of the number of posters and because of the huge amount of tape used to put them up. Soon the halls were back to normal, the excitement was gone, and Muleshoe Junior High was back to its regular pattern.

There are many small things that come our way to make us happy. Also doing little things each day which might mean happiness and comfort to those around us can bring us happiness.

The Sandhills Philosopher

Editor's note: The Sandhill Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm thinks he has discovered a new idea for newspapers, then changes his mind, his letter this week reveals.

Located where it is, naturally The Journal had no chance to get in on the big Watergate doings, thus missing getting first denounced and then apologized to by some of those around the center of power in Washington, but still there are lessons it seems to me you might profit by if you study some of the sidelights close enough.

For example, a Washington newspaper back there during the re-election scramble published a questionnaire sounding out the public on what it thought of President Nixon's decision to mine North Vietnam harbors. Without the President's knowledge, I feel sure, some of his re-election promoters with plenty of cash lying around went out and bought an extra 1,000 copies of the newspaper and had everybody in the office fall to and clip out the questionnaire and vote in favor, producing a lop-sided majority.

Now on the new policy some people now practice, "ask not what your government can do for you, figure out for yourself what it can do for you and get in on it, the same as some big shots do," it seems to me there's an opportunity here for alert newspapers.

I don't know what it'd be, but stir up some hot issue around here, run a questionnaire in the paper, and sell an extra thousand copies to people trying to swing the public opinion.

This will take some doing however because first nobody around here has any un-reported slush funds to spend on such an operation, and second there aren't enough issues.

On the whole, I'd say that the difference between Muleshoe and Washington is that while in Washington they have more problems than they have answers, in Muleshoe you have more answers than you have problems. Maybe it'd be sounder to just let your circulation grow, as I understand it is, at the standard rate of $5.50 a year. These people who buy up big wads of extra copies are here today and gone tomorrow. Yours faithfully, J.A.

Pest Management Program For Grain Sorghum Under Study

COLLEGE STATION -- The Texas Agricultural Extension Service has launched a three-year study on grain sorghum pest management. The study will be centered in the Edmondson Community of Hale County on the South Plains.

The effort is part of an expanded educational thrust by the Extension Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the grain sorghum producers Board which has headquarters at Lubbock. Participating producers will also help fund the program.

Hale County Extension Agent Ollie Liner will supervise the program which will involve a newly appointed county entomologist, Gene Latham of Paducah, Latham, a Texas A&M University graduate, will supervise the scouting phase of the program which concerns checking fields for insect populations and determining the need for insecticide applications. Extension Area Entomologist Dr. Robert C. McIntyre of Lubbock is the project leader and coordinator.

The project will encompass 20,000 acres of grain sorghum within a three to five-mile radius of Edmondson. The site was selected for its heavy production record and its ideal location near large cotton acreage, necessitated to assure the use of beneficial insects found in cotton fields.

According to Liner and McIntyre, "The new program is designed to provide producers with an effective advisory service and to help them take advantage of available control methods that would increase grain yields without upsetting the environment."

The project is designed to utilize natural populations of beneficial insects which actually help keep plant-destroying insects at a minimum. "We know we've been overspraying in some instances in recent years," Liner said. "This has been demonstrated by research of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and by demonstration plots in Hale County. These studies have shown that greenbugs, major grain sorghum pests, can be controlled effectively with minimum amounts of insecticides. The studies have also determined how many greenbugs that sorghum plants can tolerate without suffering yield loss."

Liner and McIntyre emphasized that the new program will help producers, through their own personal involvement, demonstrate their interest in maintaining the balance of the environment.

Jack King, research director of the Grain Sorghum Producers Board which is co-sponsoring the pilot project with Texas A & M's Agricultural Extension Service, described the program as a "serious effort of producers to meet growing demands of the market without upsetting the natural environment."

"The Grain Sorghum Producers Board is enthusiastic about supporting the project on a regional basis as well as statewide," he said. "We would like to see a balanced, integrated pest control program used throughout the Great Plains."

McIntyre noted, "Looking beyond the three-year project, we hope the pest management concept and the integrated control techniques involved will become an accepted practice throughout the grain sorghum producing areas of the U.S. Hale County, we believe, will play an important role in accomplishing this goal."

PEKING-NEW YORK LINK

NEW YORK--Soon a direct telegraph link between Peking and New York will be implemented as the result of an agreement between Western Union International, Inc. and the People's Republic of China, according to the president of Western Union International.

Loan Program Opened

Protest petitions, court action, and political pressure paid off for farmers this week when the Farmers Home Administration announced the reopening of the Disaster Loan Program. Hundreds of farmers in over two hundred Texas counties who suffered crop losses as a result of drought between January 1 and June 19 of 1972 are now eligible to apply for the $5,000 Disaster Loan at a low interest rate with a forgiveness provision.

Texas Farmers Union president Jay Naman of Waco hailed the announcement of the program reopening as a "great victory for farmers." Naman said that farmers were successful in accomplishing the reopening of the important program because of their organized efforts using political pressure and court action. "Hundreds of family farmers who were stricken by disaster last year will now have a new lease on life and will be able to get the financing that they need to continue farming," Naman said. "Farmers Union never gave up when President Nixon announced the cancellation of the Disaster Loan Program. Texas farmers organized petition campaigns to show the Administration and members of Congress the need to restore the program. Minnesota Farmers Union coordinated successful legal action that was brought by a group of farmers in that state against the Secretary of Agriculture and Farmers Home Administration officials. The court action plus the organized political effort of farmers was responsible for the restoration of the Disaster Loan Program. "We urge that all farmers eligible for a disaster loan make application at their county Farmers Home Administration office before the May 8 deadline. We want to be sure that all farmers who suffered losses from disaster circumstances take advantage of the program," Naman said.

Who? Why all this talk about getting back to normal? Who would recognize himself? -Piedmont, Greenville, S.C.

COMMITTEE ON ARMED SERVICES

DOCTOR SHORTAGE

One of the great paradoxes of our day is the ever-increasing critical shortage of health manpower in the midst of the most affluent society in history. The simple fact is that there are not enough physicians, dentists or optometrists to meet our country's demand for health care. It is conservatively estimated that there currently is a shortage of 48,000 physicians, 20,000 dentists, and over 10,000 optometrists nationwide.

This shortage is especially felt in hard-pressed rural and urban - core areas, including many Texas counties, which do not normally attract medical personnel. For this reason, I have introduced a bill in the Senate to provide a special tax incentive for health professionals to locate in these doctor-short regions.

Congress passed the Comprehensive Health Manpower Training Act some 18 months ago. This legislation was designed to increase the number of health professionals, and to develop more efficient methods of utilizing their services. While this program has helped to increase the number of health professionals, it has done little to alleviate the great disparity in the geographic distribution of health manpower. While the nation as a whole still has a shortage, some areas such as rural and urban low-income areas often have few, if any, health personnel to provide essential services.

A good example of shortages in rural areas is found in a recent study in the eight-county region surrounding San Angelo. The study found that this area of Texas, which is larger in size than the states of Massachusetts and Connecticut combined, has only 83 doctors of all kinds, with 76 of them located in the single county of Tom Green. There were no doctors at all in Concho or Irion County which have a combined population of nearly 4,000. The report states further that the isolated locations of many of the smaller towns in West Texas mean that too many people lack convenient access to the services of physicians.

This is typical of many rural areas across the nation. Although the nationwide physician-population ratio is improving, the number of physicians serving rural areas has declined six times faster than the population has decreased in those areas. There still are 134 counties in the United States without a practicing physician, and unfortunately, 24 of these counties are located in Texas. The latest census figures for those counties show a population, one to 2,100, is less favorable than it was 15 years ago. Generally, urban centers have a lower ratio than do rural areas. But there are some shortages, too, in some of the more congested regions.

In Texas alone, there are 42 counties which do not have the services of even one dentist. The total population of these counties exceeds 150,000 persons. There are 90 Texas counties in which the dentist-population ratio is almost double the national average.

The nation's need for adequate vision care is just as acute as these for medical and dental care. A recent study found that nearly all school children who fail the first and second grades do so because of reading difficulties, mostly associated with impaired vision. Most of the 700,000 students who drop out of school each year are two or three years behind their age group in reading skills.

While the entire nation has a shortage of optometrists and other vision care specialists, the geographic distribution is even more acute in some regions. In Texas, there are over 65 counties that have no optometrists, and another 165 where shortages exist.

Some 38 persons from the First United Methodist Church and the First Baptist Church were members of the choir presenting the Easter Cantata "Hallelujah For the Cross", directed by Raymond Harper, at the Baptist Church Sunday night. Rev. Aubrey White, pastor of the Methodist Church, gave the invocation with Homer Morris giving the benediction.

Randy Pierce, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Pierce, fell from a horse last week splintering his wrist.

Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Cate and Mr. and Mrs. Nolan Parrish attended a banquet Saturday night honoring a former pastor of the First Baptist Church, Rev. Walter L. Brian, of Calvary Baptist Church, Alamo, N.M. He is retiring after 38 years pastoring.

Newsletter From Rep. Bill Clayton

When the Texas House of Representatives adjourned for the Easter weekend more than 60 amendments had been considered to House Bill 139, the general appropriations bill. Representative Clayton said, "When the House convened Tuesday morning there were still over 120 amendments to be considered."

Debate on the bill could consume the larger part of the week's activities in the House of Representatives. One of the amendments adopted last week to the bill would provide that every able bodied person over the age of 18 and who is not blind or disabled must present themselves for work and accept what work might be offered before they can be eligible for welfare payments. The amendment also provided that this same category of people could not be eligible for welfare payments if they participated in a work stoppage or strike.

Rep. Clayton's Subcommittee on Water will be recommending passage of a number of water bills this week. Clayton stated there were some 35 bills his committee would be working on this week. Most of these bills are ones recommended by the Governor and the Interim Water District Committee. One or two of the bills are related to water use and priority with three or four bills relating to river authorities and ground water. "Hopefully these bills can be ready for full committee action within the week," Clayton stated.

No Pesticides, Less Cotton?

COLLEGE STATION -- Cotton production in the United States may someday drop by 10 percent. Producing an acre of cotton could cost almost $10 more than it does now.

It's hard to believe, but it could happen. The figures result from a study by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station on the effects of withdrawal of different pesticides currently used in cotton production.

Jim Casey and Dr. Ronald Lacewell, two TAES economists, arrived at the results by using a computer program to compile and "average" the opinions of more than 100 entomologists, agronomists and economists.

Cotton was chosen for study because out of the 140 million pounds of pesticides used on croplands annually in the U.S., most are used on cotton.

The withdrawals, they said, had a significant effect on yield and costs.

For example, when the organochlorine pesticides family, which includes DDT, was withdrawn, per acre yields in non-irrigated farms dropped by 10 percent in Louisiana, Arkansas and all of the southern states east of the Mississippi River.

Yields declined by three percent or less in Texas and Oklahoma. Arizona, California and New Mexico were not affected at all.

In terms of yield, most irrigated farms were affected least of all. For irrigated farms, the yield decline due to withdrawal of organochlorine was usually 2.5 percent. However, the Rio Grande Valley of Texas and Southern Panhandle area, both heavily irrigated, did suffer losses of seven to 10 percent.

Costs to irrigated farms were another matter. When organochlorines were withdrawn, Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas felt cost increases of $7.50.

Dryland, or non-irrigated farms, felt increases of 30 cents to $6.00 an acre in their production costs.

The increased costs were due to substituting other pesticides for the organochlorines.

Overall, when organophosphates and organochlorines were withdrawn, output of cotton changed the greatest in the region from Central Texas to the Atlantic. It amounted to a drop of about 10 percent for withdrawal of organochlorines, eight to 23 percent for organophosphates and up to 40 percent for both.

The withdrawal of aniline, a weed killer, had the greatest effect in the Rio Grande Valley, reducing yields by 34 percent. The remaining areas of Arizona, New Mexico, California and the Texas Panhandle were affected only slightly by the bans.

To extend the analysis, Casey and Lacewell included shifts in crop patterns caused by the withdrawals. To do this they assumed that there were no government programs to affect cropping patterns.

Their results indicated that even before any pesticide withdrawals were assumed, without support programs, cotton would shift completely out of North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia and Florida. Farmer net returns would increase when cotton was replaced by crops such as soybeans or corn.

The Sandhills Philosopher

Editor's note: The Sandhill Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm discusses economics this week, more or less, Dear editor:

Although I didn't have to read it to find out, still according to an article I read in a newspaper last night inflation is getting more serious all the time, not only are prices going up but the rate they're going up is faster than it's been in two decades.

Accordingly, the articles said, the chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors said economists are considering a tax increase as one way of cooling off the current inflationary boom. The argument is, if you increase taxes, people will have less money to spend on goods and therefore prices naturally have to come down or at least slow down.

I don't think I understand this, isn't there some other way? I mean, what's the difference between spending too much money for groceries and spending too much for taxes?

This looks like a choice between curbing inflation and curbing me.

If something is going to take all you make, I believe I'd just as soon groceries got it as taxes, I ain't all that mad at inflation.

I've long contended that economists are like weather forecasters. They're a lot better at telling you what happened yesterday than what's going to happen tomorrow.

Solving the high cost of living by increasing the high cost of taxes reminds me of the farmer who was faced with a crop failure and a note at the bank he wasn't going to be able to pay. The nearer the note came due the more he worried and fretted. On the final day he went into the bank and by some tall talking got the banker to renew the note for another year.

"Well," he sighed with relief as he came out, "I'm sure glad I got that debt settled." Yours faithfully, J.A.

Cotton Variety Yield Test

Despite bad weather throughout the past cotton growing and harvesting season, the 1972 cotton variety yield test with an average 811 pounds of lint per acre at the High Plains Research Foundation was the best since 1964's average of 822 pounds per acre.

Yields ranged from 1053 pounds lint per acre to a low of 615 pounds and marks the first time since 1961 that a variety averaged more than 1000 pounds. Two-thirds of the tested varieties averaged more than 1 1/2 bales per acre and all of the varieties averaged more than 600 pounds per acre.

According to Dr. Douglas Owen, senior agronomist, there was no significant difference among the 10 highest yielding varieties but differences in grade, staple and micronaire contributed to a wide range in loan values and consequently large differences in gross returns.

The early planting date (May 4) was the most significant factor in this year's test. Although rain and cool weather immediately after planting delayed emergence and caused some seedling disease, a stand was established by May 20.

The next two weeks of growth enabled the seedlings to attain enough size to withstand the record cold-temperatures and wet weather during the week of July 4. Blowing dust and wind-driven rain on July 9 damaged some plants in the test, reducing stands, increasing verticillium wilt, thus lowering yields," Dr. Owen said.

"After these storms, cotton had fairly good growing conditions with the exception of unusually cool temperatures during the fruiting and boll development period in late July and the first three weeks in August. These cool temperatures resulted in lower micronaire readings and especially were detrimental to cotton that was planted in late May," Dr. Owen said.

Crop returns ranged from $181 per acre to $75 per acre, depending on yield, grade, staple, and micronaire. The 35 varieties tested had an average micronaire of 3.3, ranging from 4.1 to 2.8. Staple lengths ranged from one inch to 1 3/32 inches.

Full details from 1973 cotton variety tests are among those included in the annual research report available to Foundation members shortly.

The things taught in schools and colleges are not an education but the means of education. -R.W. Emerson.
