Community Center Backers Attend

The Muleshoe City Council met in regular session Tuesday morning, June 5, at 8:30 a.m. in the council chambers of city hall. Present at the meeting were Mayor Alex Williams, Councilmen Lyndal Murray, Kenneth Henry and Max King, and guests Lr. Jerry Gleason and Jesse Leal.

Dr. Jerry Gleason reported to the council that a board of directors has been set up for the interests in the Muleshoe Community Center. The board is seeking financial aid from the city council. The council has met with the bonding company but at this time, the council has not discussed the use of the $60,000 bond.

Gleason pointed out that they now have 13 members on the board who would like to acquire a community building for the community and they would like ideas from the council. Myron Pool III also met with the council and said he would like to make more lots available in Richland Hills. They also discussed paving on the east side of Richland Hills and on 21st Street.

Contracts with General Telephone were reviewed and submitted to the city engineer and city attorney for their examination.

There was a discussion for a youth activities director to coordinate activities for the summer.

City Will Take Applications For Summer Job Program Friday

The City of Muleshoe has been granted federal funds for the Federal Youth Employment Program in Muleshoe.

Applications will be accepted at 9 a.m. Friday, June 8, in Muleshoe City Hall.

People applying must fall into one of the three categories listed below:

First, disadvantaged youth between the ages of 14 and 22; second, Vietnam veterans to the age of 29; and third, other students not right now in school, between the ages of 14 and 22.

Bailey County was funded $1872.00 for the youth program. The county expects to fund three positions, one girl for secretarial work at the courthouse and two men for maintenance at the courthouse.

The program is operated through the South Plains Association of Governments so that disadvantaged youth between the ages of 14 and 22 may not be idle this summer. The program can create 405 part-time temporary jobs in 75 local governments for disadvantaged youngsters between 14 and 22 within the 15 county South Plains region.

SPAG received a grant of $151,836 from the Texas Department of Community Affairs to cover the 15 counties, with the exception of the city of Lubbock that received a direct grant from the Department of Labor. The purpose of the program is to provide funds to local units of governments to pay wages of employees hired under the program for the summer. On May 15 letters were sent to all cities, counties, soil and water conservation districts, hospital districts, and school districts inviting them to apply for funding under the program. Then on May 29, the SPAG executive committee, composed of the seven officers of the association, using 1970 census data by county, allocated proportionately 75 jobs to

County 4-Hers Go To State Roundup

It's Roundup time in Texas once again -- 4-H style that is.

Texas 4-H Roundup, one of the oldest annual statewide 4-H events in the nation, was held June 5-6 at Texas A&M University.

Attending from Bailey County 4-H Clubs were Paul Harbin, Cindy Hall, Belinda Trockmorton, Mrs. Robin Taylor and Spencer Tanksley. The group will return on Thursday.

More than 1,800 4-H boys and girls from throughout the state will be participating and will bring with them a multitude of talents and abilities as they compete in more than 30 contests and demonstrations ranging from livestock judging to public speaking.

In addition to the 4-H'ers, there was some 600 adults, including county Extension agents, 4-H leaders, friends of 4-H, mass media representatives, contest donors and members of the board of directors of the Texas 4-H Youth Development Foundation, were also on hand. T. Louis Austin of Dallas chairs the board.

4-H'ers who attended the Roundup have already been named county and district winners in the various demonstrations and contests. Only first and second place winners in district competition at the senior level (15 years of age or older) are eligible to compete in the state event. There are 13 districts of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the parent organization of 4-H.

This year's Roundup officially began with a general assembly at 5:30 p.m. on June 5 in G. Rillie White Coliseum on the A&M Campus. Special awards were presented to 10 individuals, businesses and mass media representatives who have made outstanding contributions to 4-H. The awards were provided by the 4-H Foundation.

Twenty-six outstanding 4-H adult leaders (two from each Extension district) were recognized at a luncheon on June 6. Contest winners and donors were honored at a special recognition program that evening.

4-H Roundup is the highlight of the 4-H year in Texas. 4-H enrollment continues to increase and now totals more than 120,000 youth between the ages of 9 and 19.

Market Report

COLLEGE STATION--Granny Smith apples from New Zealand will make pie while the sun shines in the United States this summer.

"New Zealand seasons are the reverse of ours, and these apples are crisp and juicy--excellent cooked or eaten fresh," Mrs. Gwendolyn Clyatt said.

"They'll be in the markets soon," the consumer marketing information specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University predicted.

She added that almost-exhausted apple supplied from controlled-atmosphere storage in the U.S. continue costing more as summer approaches.

Texas' grapefruit crop shows an increase of 20 per cent over the 1971-72 season, resulting in more fruit available at attractive prices.

"And oranges, bananas, pineapples, avocados and strawberries are worthy of consideration, price-wise."

"Most economical vegetable choices include cabbage, carrots, celery, potatoes, corn, mustard, collards, turnip greens, radishes and green onions."

Special at egg counters, poultry and beef sections fit into the "casual eating" pattern of the picnic season now that it's official.

"Fryer chickens remain about the same with a few retailers offering whole birds and parts at lower prices.

"Best beef values appear on round steaks and roasts, ground beef, chuck roasts, calf and beef liver."

Best pork values generally include shoulder roasts and steaks, end-cut loin roasts and chops, smoked hams, picnics and pork liver, Mrs. Clyatt concluded.

COLLEGE STATION-- Fryer prices may slim down in the next few weeks.

According to Mrs. Gwendolyn Clyatt, consumer marketing specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A & M University, supplies of fryer chickens on the rise will allow more stores to offer them as specials.

"Frozen turkeys are available in some stores at prices you can't afford to overlook," she added.

"Pork is a bit more available--in general, best values include quarter loins sliced, shoulder roasts and steaks, and liver."

"Meat prices continue at about the same level as for the past couple of weeks, with some stores featuring mature and baby beef cuts at special prices."

"Other best beef values appear in chuck steaks and roasts, round steaks, ground beef and stew meat."

The specialist pointed to adverse weather conditions for interrupting the usual, orderly market of some crops, adding that most produce counters "offer a wide variety of good quality products" in spite of this.

"Generally onion prices are 'way high'. However, a few stores feature them at very attractive prices."

Items in best supply at the most reasonable prices are grapefruit, oranges, apples, bananas, strawberries and pineapple.

Also potatoes, collards, mustard and turnip greens, carrots, cabbage, corn, radishes and green onions.

"Frozen turkeys are available in some stores at prices

Starring in this evening of family entertainment is the baritone, Steve Dolan as Michael, and the talented Sheila Farmer as Agnes. The popular play was set to music by the famous team of Tom Jones and Harvey Schmitt, who also wrote the "Fantastics" and "Celebration".

"I Do! I Do!" is based upon the well loved play "Fourposter" by Jan de Hartog. In the musical version the first team to star in the two character Broadway hit was Mary Martin and Robert Preston. The heart warming, delightful romp into the lives of a married couple covers fifty years, and is a real laugh riot for the young and old, married and unmarried, child and adult.

Directing Sheila Farmer and Steve Dolan is Alice French, who has a rich background as a violinist, in addition to her directing ability. She recently directed "Celebration", another Jones and Schmitt musical. Miss French is known to Lubbock audiences, having played roles in three recent Hayloft plays. She is a participating member of the New Repertory Company of New York City. She also includes writing among her many talents. She is the author of the prize winning play, "The Music Box."

Steve Dolan, who was reared in St. Louis, now headquarters in Los Angeles. Among the roles Dolan has sung is Don Quixote in "Man from La Mancha", his favorite. Also among his credits are other musicals such as "Celebration" and "Can-Can". Steve looks forward to performing as Michael in "I Do! I Do!" because it portrays a man through fifty years of married life. Steve Dolan is a confirmed bachelor. Stanley Wood, well know Lubbock pianist, will round out the performing group, accompanying Miss Farmer and Mr. Dolan. Among Wood's many appearances, he may well be best remembered as the Soloist in concert with the Monterey High School Band playing Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

WASHINGTON REPORT BY
Lloyd Bentsen,
United States Senator

REGULATIONS POORLY DRAWN -- New regulations, proposed by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare for allocating social services funds would discriminate against Texas and would encourage people to stay on welfare rather than help them find work.

It is another example of Washington bureaucrats writing rules with out knowing their impact on the nation. As a member of the Senate Finance Committee I have raised several serious questions during hearings on the regulations in recent weeks. And I will continue to give close scrutiny to testimony before the Committee.

The new rules, which are to go into effect July 1st, are complicated and confusing. They are narrowly drawn and will require state agencies to spend unnecessary time and money on administration.

They discriminate against states with lower welfare payments. Texas, of course has a constitutional limitation on expenditures for welfare. Yet, H.E.W. has ignored that by offering rules which favor New York, California and other states.

Another objection I have raised is that the regulations would encourage individuals to stay on welfare rolls even though the purpose of social services is to help people get on their feet and off welfare rolls.

Our country has shown a compassionate desire to help those who need welfare; the aged, the blind, the physically disabled, children who can't care for themselves and others. WELFARE SYSTEM NOT WORKING -- But in recent years there has been widespread agreement that our present welfare system is not working. And a search is underway for a new system, that would care for the needy, but encourage those who can provide for themselves to get off the welfare lists.

Social services have been part of this search. The services include child care centers; places where needy parents can leave their children in safety while they go to their jobs. Yet, the regulations proposed by H.E.W. would severely limit the income individuals can earn and still be eligible for this service.

In Texas today, families earning up to $6,000 a year can leave their children at these centers during working hours. But the proposed regulations would limit that income to $4,200 for a family of four. The results would be tragic.

I am familiar with one case in which a woman in Texas has six children, ages 1 through 8. Her husband is emotionally ill and not able to help. She has found work as a barber and earns $6,000 a year. Before she got this job she was on welfare, and if these rules force her to quit work to care for her children the family would be forced back on welfare.

Another Texas couple has three children, ages 2, 4 and 5. The mother is hospitalized with muscular dystrophy and cancer. The father earns $5,500 a year, but until day care could be arranged he had to lay off work to stay with his children.

This family has never been on welfare, but it is not eligible for child care services under the proposed regulations and would have no alternative.

TEXAS TREATED UNFAIRLY -- But, while a Texas family of four can earn only $4,200 and remain eligible for child care services, the maximum income is appreciably higher in some states.

In New York, for example, the new rules would permit an income of more than $9,400 and a family of four in Michigan would be allowed to earn over $10,000.

This is discriminatory, and other social services would be similarly affected. These include training for the mentally retarded, rehabilitation of drug addicts and aid to children in foster care.

Social services are intended to encourage the poor to find work if they are able, and to reduce their dependence on welfare assistance by offering them training, rehabilitation and care for their children during working hours.

But the H.E.W. regulations, as explained during Finance Committee hearings, would do the reverse. The severe limitations on income would force many Texas families, struggling to make their own way, back on welfare. And they would add many Texans to the welfare rolls who have never been there before.

This is a mockery. And I have put H.E.W. on notice of my strong opposition.

CALL FOR ACTION RENEWED Last month I urged President Nixon to use his authority under the Economic Stabilization Act and return to mandatory wage-price controls, similar to those of Phase II.

I am renewing that call. I do not agree with those who maintain that wage-price controls are here to stay. In the long run it is essential to all Americans, businessmen and wage earners alike, that we preserve our free enterprise system.

But, because of our nation's current economic instability I believe the Administration acted prematurely when it moved to the voluntary controls of Phase III last January.

This action was followed almost immediately by a general increase in prices and a chain reaction set in. The situation fed on itself. Some businessmen began raising prices to protect themselves against possible future controls. And wage earners, too, became committed to demands for large pay increases.

During the first quarter of this year inflation was almost twice as high as the President's Council of Economic Advisers had estimated it would be back in January.

And wholesale price increases during the past three months indicate there will be even greater consumer price hikes during the months ahead.

In 1969 and 1970, the Administration rejected all thought of wage and price controls and relied on a tight monetary policy as the weapon against inflation.

The idea was to reduce the supply of money, make it more costly to borrow, reduce spending and thereby drive down prices.

The result of that policy was a recession during which the U.S. suffered 6% unemployment for 18 straight months. And, even though we also recorded some of the highest interest rates since 1896, inflation was not slowed appreciably.

FAILURE OF PHASE III This year, the failure of Phase III has again shifted the burden of controlling inflation to the tight monetary policy which proved so unsatisfactory in 1969 and '70.

And the effect is already being felt, although the rising interest rates have gone largely unnoticed -- except on Wall Street and in the banking community -- because of other price increases. But we will all take heed, if the interest rates continue to climb. If they reach the peak of 1970 they will have a heavy impact on every factory worker, every businessman and every housewife in the nation.

Let me illustrate what the impact might be on the homeowner. In 1967, the rate of interest on a 30-year FHA loan was 6% and the monthly payments were $150. By 1970, though -- three years later -- interest had risen to 8-3/4% making the payments $192 a month on that size loan.

The increase in interest alone caused a difference in house payments of $42 a month. And that doesn't take into account the fact that, by 1970, $25,000 would buy a lot less house than it would have in 1967.

And we have no reason to believe that a tight monetary policy, and the resulting rise in interest will do any better job in 1973 than it did in 1969-70. NEW APPROACH NECESSARY

What is needed are tough, mandatory controls like those of Phase II. They were by no means perfect, but they were doing the job of getting our economy on the right track, until they were lifted prematurely this past January.

Our economy was experiencing a healthy expansion. Prices were beginning to level off, though not as much as we wanted. And unemployment had been reduced from 6% to 5%.

But Phase III is not doing the job. Even Pierre Rinfret, a former economic spokesman for the President, calls it "a continuation of a do-nothing policy reminiscent of 1969." And many others are voicing similar sentiments.

I have great faith in our free enterprise system. There is no doubt that in the not too distant future our nation's economy will return to full health, as it always has following troubled times in the past.

Women Pilots

At Pensacola the Navy recently graduated its first female pilot. The Navy, which has in recent years inaugurated many allegedly morale-building innovations with much fanfare and publicity, all attributed to the foresight of its Secretary, hails this as a forward step toward equal treatment of the sexes.

The truth is it's an impractical and unsound policy. Females are not allowed to fly in combat, shouldn't be. Neither the majority of male or female Americans desire that. Yet since this is the end purpose of military flight training, it's obviously morally unjustifiable, both to the taxpayers and military aviators for any service, to push impractical programs to win public favor or popular acclaim.

In war, males and females should not be treated alike, in the opinion of the vast majority of Americans. The military flight training of females, who cannot be used in an emergency, is, in effect, discrimination against males, unsound from a military viewpoint and repugnant, in that it's obviously a political stunt.

There were approximately 1,638 meters in service at March 31, 1973. In 1971 there were only 1,564 meters in service. The decrease in water consumption can be attributed primarily to the extremely rainy season we had starting in September of 1972.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Right to Spank

"The right of parents to chastise their children is so necessary to the government of families and to the good order of society that no moralist or lawyer has ever thought of interfering with its existence."

So said the Supreme Court of Tennessee a century ago. And it is still true today that parents have the basic legal right to spank their children.

But if the right itself is still recognized, the extent of the right has been steadily narrowed. For example, it used to be said that parents could be as brutal as they pleased, so long as their motive was "for the child's own good." But no longer.

Thus, a father was found guilty of assault and battery for beating his 10-year-old daughter with a cane, hard enough to leave permanent scars. The court said it was no excuse that he was trying to teach the child good manners. One parent's harsh views about discipline, said the court, could not outweigh the humanitarian standards of the community.

Not only may an offending parent be punished by the criminal law, but in a growing number of states he may even have to pay damages to the child.

In one case a woman pummeled her small stepson so viciously that he suffered internal injuries. When a damage suit was filed on the boy's behalf (by a guardian), she said it would be "bad for family harmony" to allow lawsuits within the family circle.

But the court held her liable anyhow.

"While it may seem repugnant," said the court, "to allow a (child) to sue his parent, we think it more repugnant to leave a child without redress for the damage he has suffered by reason of his parent's malicious misconduct."

"A child, like every other individual, has a right to freedom from such injury."

STATE Capital NEWS

By BILL BOYKIN

AUSTIN, TEX. --The 63rd Legislature wound down at midnight Monday (May 28) with opinions sharply divided as to how much or how little it accomplished.

While new reform rules slowed down consideration of bills, much major legislation was passed, some of which had failed previously.

Both houses completed work on a record $9.7 billion, tax-free budget four days before adjournment, then with money left over, began to fashion an emergency aid bill for "poor" school districts.

The big job of revising school finance formulas, as anticipated, was left for a future session following additional studies and careful weighing of property values.

Legislative redistricting was another job left for the future--possibly under court direction. Lawmakers did manage to agree on a competitive auto insurance rate bill -- something they couldn't do in a special session devoted to that purpose alone last September-October.

They also came to terms on far-reaching revision of the penal code--first in 17 years--although the House bogged down on a court reform constitutional amendment.

House Speaker Price Daniel Jr. managed to get some of his reform measures, including open meeting law strengthening and better access to public records, finally passed. Agreement on a tough code of ethics was difficult.

While they were at it, legislators asked again for a pay raise -- to $15,000 a year -- and a constitutional amendment permitting them to meet in annual sessions to better handle an ever-increasing work load.

Whether or not they are called into special session this year, they will be back next January -- to have a try at revising the state constitution.

NEWSMEN'S MEASURE DIES IN CONFERENCE -- The "free flow of information" measure -- called the newsmen's privilege bill -- died in a conference committee. Compromise language that might have been acceptable to both the House and Senate would have made it a "qualified" privilege for newsmen -- and it looked for a time that the conference committee was going to vote it out.

Publishers, editors and broadcasters told their legislators that they preferred "no privilege at all" if it could not be "unqualified" -- and the conference committee members let it "R.I.P."

Representatives of the Texas Joint Media Committee -- members of professional press groups -- expressed disappointment that the Senate would not accept the original House bill -- which included no qualification except in cases of "libel or right of privacy" law suits.

Some felt the Watergate case had taken the "heat off the press" and fewer subpoenas would be issued in the future to obtain information from newsmen.

Unless Texas newsmen have problems with grand juries and the courts in future years, it will be difficult to get press support for a "newsmen's privilege" measure in this state, said Don Coppedge, president of the Texas Press Association.

GAS RATE SUIT FILED -- Atty. Gen. John Hill filed the first big test case -- against Exxon Corporation -- to recover full market value of royalty gas produced on state lands for the school fund and University of Texas.

The suit alleges the state's price is not limited to amounts agreed to in contracts, nor to the two ceiling price set by Federal Power Commission.

Hill has estimated many millions of dollars rest on outcome of the litigation. Current FPC ceiling price is in some cases less than 20 cents per 1,000 cubic feet of gas, while actual market value is estimated at 45 cents per 1,000 cubic feet in recent sales.

The suit seeks to compel Exxon to pay the current market value or, alternatively, to allow the state to take its royalty gas "in kind" for use or resale. The state claims it is due not less than $500,000 from Exxon, and many other producers are expected to be made defendants soon.

LAND PROGRAM EXTENSION ASKED -- One of the proposed constitutional amendments to be voted on November 6 would extend the veterans land loan program, pumping another $100 million (for a total of $500 million) into it.

Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong applauded submission of the new amendment to continue the low-interest, long-term loans for veterans to buy land.

About 43,000 veterans have acquired more than three million acres of land under the program since 1946 when it was launched.

COURTS SPEAK -- A state law providing damage penalties for corporations that make illegal campaign contributions is constitutional, the State Supreme Court held.

The High Court agreed to rehear a controversy between the City of Austin and the local Humane Society over division of an estate over land left for a park.

Two Mineral Wells men were granted new trials in drug cases by the Court of Criminal Appeals because they were not permitted to testify on beatings by narcotics agents.

AG OPINIONS -- Attorney General held a compulsory oil and gas unitization bill was constitutional, but the measure (HB 311) was killed in the Senate.

Hill found some questionable provisions in the senate's version of ethics legislation, but urged leaders to correct them and pass a constitutional bill.

In other recent opinions, Hill concluded: Legislation to restrict distribution and sale of a brand of beer to exclusive territories and distributors is unconstitutional.

Drug control legislation does not unconstitutionally delegate legislative authority to the commissioner of health to designate additional controlled substances.

The assistant executive director of a state agency may also serve as a river authority member.

The Taylor County constable's salary minimum is set at the figure of Jan. 1, 1972, and county commissioners can't cut it below that.

APPOINTMENTS -- Gov. Dolph Briscoe appointed Mario Yzaguirre of Brownsville to Texas Industrial Commission.

Among other recent Briscoe appointments were: C. T. Matthew of Yoakum to Texas Aeronautic Commission.

Dr. Geddes McLaughlin of Dallas and Sister Regis Mailian of Austin to the State Board of Nurse Examiners.

Frank E. Medina (reappointed) to the Texas Board of Athletic Trainers.

Lloyd Gregory of Houston, Joseph B. Hutchison of Tyler and Ralph F. Block of Houston to the Battleship Texas Commission.

Joe Connally of Odessa to the Texas Board of Private Investigators and Private Security Agencies.

Editor's note: The Sandhill Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm thinks he has learned something from the Watergate hearings, his letter this week indicates.

Dear editor: I happened to be watching on television when one of the most fascinating events in the Watergate hearings came out, namely, how to bug a telephone.

As was plainly shown, you remove some screws and take the cover off the phone to get to where all the wires and gadgets are, then wire in the bug, which actually is a miniature broadcasting unit, and put the cover back on. You then set up a receiving unit across the street or some other place handy, and you can hear everything that's said on that phone.

Naturally, it wouldn't occur to you or me or any of the rest of the general public to suspect there's a bug in our phone, but nowadays you can't be sure and in this wildly suspicious age steps ought to be taken to head this off, so I've been thinking up some counter-measures.

At first I thought, get Congress to pass a law requiring the telephone company to equip every phone with a screwdriver.

Then I decided that wasn't it, by the time some people who're all thumbs got those screws loose and the cover off to see if there was a bug inside, the person calling would get tired and hang up.

No. The law should require the telephone company to put hinges on all phone covers.

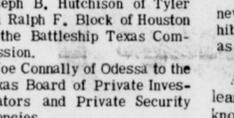

The phone rings, you flip it open, check for a bug, rip it out if it's there, and then go ahead and run your neighbors down or whatever it was you wanted to talk about.

Of course I'm just going on. What I'm pointing out is that there is a wave of lawlessness, immorality and unethical activity throughout the land today in high and low places and many politicians in Washington and around the rest of the country are saying we need a new code of ethics.

They're absolutely right. The one we've got is too hard to live up to.

Yours faithfully, J.A.

REDFISH DECLINING -- Parks and Wildlife Department marine biologist fear the redfish population may be declining along the Texas coast.

First sign is said to be reduction in the number of large redfish.

PWD officials say that if further evidence gathered by staff biologists confirms a decline, remedial measures may be ordered that could affect activities both sport and commercial fishermen.

SHORT SHORTS
Thirteen new district courts were created by the Legislature to be located in Fort Worth, Dallas, El Paso, Houston, Galveston, Denton, Corpus Christi, Hidalgo County and Comal, Hays and Caldwell counties (combined).

Compulsory oil and gas unitization legislation failed in the Senate, although proponents predicted it will pass in a future session due to the energy crisis.

Bilingual education and state-supported adult education programs were finally approved and funded by the Legislature.

Governor Briscoe has urged all state offices to cooperate with local officials to curtail use of electric power.

A $43,708 regional planning assistance grant has been approved for the South Plains Association of Governments.

A $336,800 development project for the City of Terrell has been approved under the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation land and water conservation fund.

Parks and Wildlife Commission scheduled a May 31 meeting here to consider a policy for naming parks and other matters.

Governor Briscoe signed into law major consumer protection legislation.

The Governor also signed a new state securities act to prohibit fraud in buying as well as selling of stocks and bonds.

A man matures as he learns what other people know and learns to laugh at himself.

I can only hope that after all these years the Congress will face up to the issue of an energy crisis and take action on the legislation I have sponsored. I am encouraged that President Nixon has recently proposed actions similar to the legislation I have introduced to deal with the Nation's energy needs. Failure to act by the Congress can only have the most serious consequences for us all.

CONGRESSMAN

Bob Price

18th Congressional District

Ever since first being elected to the Congress nearly eight years ago, I have warned of an impending energy crisis. In speeches delivered on the House of Representatives floor, in news releases, and in legislation which I have introduced and reintroduced, I have pointed to the need for new incentives and a comprehensive plan of action to avert the fuel shortage that is now upon us. Enactment of my bills would:

*provide for tax credits and incentives for expenditures made in the exploration and development of new reserves of oil and gas,

*deregulate the price of natural gas at the well head currently controlled by the Federal Power Commission, and *establish a Council on Energy needs of the Nation.

At the present time I am also giving serious consideration to co-sponsoring legislation to complete the construction of the trans-Alaskan pipeline, as I believe the development of this fuel reserve is of vital importance to the Nation.

Very recently, my office has begun to receive numerous inquiries from farmers, businessmen, and independent petroleum suppliers in rural areas about a lack of fuel supplies. Of course I can again emphasize my efforts of the past several years to avert such an unfortunate dilemma, but that is small comfort to the farmer who cannot plow his fields because of a lack of gasoline to run his tractor.

For this reason, I have personally contacted the Office of Oil and Gas in the Department of Interior to ask that immediate action be taken to give a top priority in the distribution of available fuel resources to those who produce our Nation's supplies of basic foods and fiber. A shortage of fuel products is extremely serious, but a shortage of food would be disastrous.

I can only hope that after all these years the Congress will face up to the issue of an energy crisis and take action on the legislation I have sponsored. I am encouraged that President Nixon has recently proposed actions similar to the legislation I have introduced to deal with the Nation's energy needs. Failure to act by the Congress can only have the most serious consequences for us all.

Low Quality--A Problem In Cotton Planting Seed

LUBBOCK -- Producers will again be faced with the possibility of using low quality seed in planting their 1973 crop.

Weather conditions in 1972 that resulted in low micronaire lint, says Dr. Robert B. Metzger, also contributed to the production of immature seed, Metzger is area agronomist-cotton with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"The result," he says, "was a heavy cleanout at delimiting plants to obtain acceptable seed for planting.

"These seed are often low in vigor even though they show satisfactory germination. Even heavily, fully developed seed frequently deteriorated in the field due to unfavorable weather. Early harvest produced exceptionally high quality seed in these fields, but seed quality is basic to getting a cotton crop off to a rapid start, every effort should be made to secure the best quality seed possible. The cost of planting seed represents only five percent or less of total production cost. So, trying to cut cost here by purchasing so-called bargain seed can be more costly in terms of poor stands, replanting and finally low yields. High quality seed will contribute to more rapid seedling emergence, uniform stands which can better tolerate cold, wet conditions associated with seedling decay organisms.

"In many instances, producers have no choice but to plant lower than desired quality seed," Metzger adds.

"In this case, he should plant his best quality seed first when weather conditions during early spring are more unfavorable for seedling emergence. As the planting season advances and soil becomes warmer, the grower can use lower quality seed after the other seed has been exhausted."

A good rule of thumb, he says, is to allow the soil temperature at the eight-inch depth to average 60 degrees Fahrenheit for 10 days before planting. A significantly higher percentage and more rapid emergence of seedlings will be obtained if this soil temperature is reached at planting. This is even more critical if lower quality seed are planted. In using low quality seed, the planting rate may be increased by five to ten percent depending on the level of seed quality. The Extension specialist warns that excessive increase in planting rate can worsen matters by causing a buildup of seed decay organisms in the drill row. In order to adjust planting rates properly, a grower must know the germination percent and quality of seed he is about to plant. He should make sure that seed are treated with a recommended fungicide.

If producers have to plant low quality seed Metzger concludes, they should delay planting until the soil warms up, increase seeding rates slightly and prepare a good seed bed preferably on a bed.

COMMITTEE ON ARMED SERVICES

The American people are being deprived by the mass hysteria which now pervades Washington in connection with the Watergate case--deprived of the golden opportunities to build a new era of peace and prosperity.

At the same time, the enemies of America are taking full advantage of the resultant opportunity to attack not only the Presidency, but our entire political system. It is high time for us to stop the tail from overshadowing the dog--and to put things back in a sane and proper perspective.

We are suffering from a self-imposed paralysis. Instead of spending our time trying to solve the great problems now confronting our state and nation, we have become practically immobilized by the fanatical furor over an absurd and senseless crime. The fact that it apparently was conceived by high-ranking political novices--who then followed the natural instinct for self-preservation and tried to cover it up--should not be allowed to let it consume all our waking hours.

There appears to be a great danger that we have become so engrossed in the so-called scandal that we may lose all sense of distinction between scandal and government. After all, those charged with running our government must be in a position to sustain the national security. Is the government to have no secrets at all? Is there no recourse against those who attend sensitive meetings where strategy is planned and outlined, and then telephone reporters to tell them what went on?

The hysteria that seems to have gripped so many--especially in this area where politics dominates the majority--has been brought on partially by the news media. There has been a disgusting display of pursuit of new revelation in the Watergate case, often at the expense of factual reporting. The slightest rumor has been played in screaming headlines as if it were an eyewitness account. Various elements of the news media have quoted each other when they could dig up nothing new. But despite some very bad cases of reporting, the entire Watergate affair has proved that a free press is essential in a truly free society.

As I have said repeatedly, we must see that those involved are apprehended and punished--but this certainly can be accomplished without having everyone in Washington make a full-time career of it.

The people of America want to see justice done in this matter but they want prosecution, not persecution. And as a member of the United States Senate, I certainly intend to do my duty on any matter which comes before that body; but right now, I think the people of America want us to devote much of our time and energy to solving such problems as inflation, the energy crisis, pollution, natural disasters and the ever-increasing demands of the most affluent society the world has ever known.

Unfortunately, there are those who would be happy to see us fall in our efforts to cope with these problems--if the failure could be attributed either to the President of the United States or to some of those in whom he placed excessive trust. These are the people who would cut off their noses to spite their faces.

Regrettably, political espionage is indeed as old as politics itself. Some say it has become an accepted practice in American politics, but I reject this. There is neither reason nor excuse for illegal activities becoming a part of a political campaign. This is not to say that a candidate for public office should not try to keep up with what the opposition is doing--he would be a foolish candidate to do otherwise. But he certainly would be even more foolish to violate the law in his zeal to pursue information of any sort.

Let us fervently hope that the hearings already underway by the Senate Select Committee on Watergate avoid the show business atmosphere of some of the notorious congressional investigations of recent history. There is no reason to anticipate that they will, for it is very easy for such tactics to prejudice the judicial and prosecutive process. We can recall in recent history when the excesses of some investigators violated the civil rights of both the innocent and guilty. Let us hope that some important lessons of the past will not be forgotten or overlooked.

In the meantime, the wires have now been snipped on Watergate; we should now turn the matter over to the courts and get on with important legislative business. One might point out that the Pulitzer Prize won recently by the Washington Post was not the first ever awarded for disclosures of political chicanery. The Chicago Tribune won a Pulitzer Prize for exposing vote frauds in Cook County, Illinois, during the 1960 Presidential elections.

It is most important to insure that the critical functions of our government do not come to a screeching halt because of continued walls of indignation about a crime in which the perpetrators have emerged as the main victims.

The pressing concerns which confront our Nation will not patiently await the day of the writing of the final Watergate story. Thus, to focus our attention, her in the Congress, on our critical domestic and international problems is not to condone the commission of whatever crimes might have been committed. I, for one, say let's get on with the job at hand, and let the courts prosecute the wrongdoers.

VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION -- Congress and the President have been in a stalemate for nearly a year over a renewal program for vocational rehabilitation. The basic difference is over the federal budget. President Nixon has vowed to hold down public spending, and as a result, has announced his intentions to veto any legislation which calls for spending at a rate he considers excessive.

Because of this policy, the President now has twice vetoed an extension of the national vocational rehabilitation program -- once last year after Congress went out of session, and again in late March of this year. In each case, the President branded the bills passed by the Congress as fiscally irresponsible, and I found ample grounds to support him in each case.

I voted to sustain the President's veto of this year's Vocational Rehabilitation Act even though my decision caused me some anguish. I firmly believe in the worth of the vocational rehabilitation program, and have been one of its strong supporters in the Congress. After much thought earlier this year, I found that I agreed with the President -- bad legislation cannot help but corrupt good programs. As a result, I was active in helping sustain the President's veto in the Senate. Thus, the vocational rehabilitation program remained in a state of limbo, operating under the authority of a continuing resolution.

It is my feeling at this time, however, that the future of vocational rehabilitation will soon be resolved. I am convinced that the work of these past few weeks will be to the ultimate best interest of the program and the thousands of handicapped Americans it helps each year to return to a productive and fruitful life.

After weeks of negotiations, the Senate Subcommittee on the Handicapped and the Administration have now resolved their differences and a new bill has been introduced in the Senate. I am co-sponsoring this new legislation, and will ardently work for its early passage.

The history of the veto and the resulting compromise illustrate the need for responsible legislation.

The vocational rehabilitation program is over 50 years old. During that time, it has assisted thousands of individuals to regain their self-respect by providing them with the training necessary to overcome a handicap and return to gainful employment. In addition to its humanitarian goals, it is one of the wisest investments the federal government has made. Without the training, a handicapped person becomes a dependent -- often a burden to his family and to his government which frequently provides monthly support payments. With vocational rehabilitation, a handicapped person often is able to support himself, and many times, even his family.

Some studies have shown that for each tax dollar spent in training a handicapped person under the vocational rehabilitation program, that individual will pay the government over 25 dollars in increased tax revenues.

The program is an excellent example of state and federal cooperation. Although the federal government provides the majority of the funding, the control of the program has remained on the state level, closest to the needs of the citizens of the state. It also is a very good example of non-partisan action since everyone -- regardless of political philosophy -- recognizes the value of the program.

When the vocational rehabilitation program's enabling legislation expired last year, Congress drafted a new bill to extend and expand the program. Unfortunately, many of the provisions were contrary to the best interests of the program, and contrary to the best interest of the nation.

Rather than giving the states the widest latitude in handling the funds to meet the needs of its citizens, the new legislation of the past would have created many narrow categorical programs. In effect, rather than being permissive, it was narrowly restrictive.

Another serious point of contention in the previous acts was the level of fund authorizations. The amount of federal monies provided in the bills far exceeded the President's request. Excessive government spending results in spiraling inflation which must be brought under control. This is one of the major sources of out-inflationary problems today.

Although it is most difficult to say "no" to a worthy program, such as vocational rehabilitation, it is mandatory that we start at some point in controlling out-of-hand spending. This was the President's first veto of the 93rd Congress, and I felt that it was necessary to lay a foundation for fiscal responsibility.

The new compromise legislation represents responsible action -- it is a cooperative effort of the Administration and Congress. The authorization levels are consistent with the President's requests which are based on national priorities. The compromise bill continues those parts of the program which are effective, and strengthens those which have been weak. Finally, it establishes a special project and demonstration program which will enable vocational rehabilitation agencies to initiate programs for victims of spinal cord injuries and kidney disease, the older blind and the low-achieving deaf.
