JUST A WORD WITH OUR SUBSCRIBERS

The Courier's list of subscription renewals is growing this week. We have a larger list this week than last, and we had a good list last week. The Courier desires to express its appreciation for the very liberal support accorded it by its patrons, both subscribers and advertisers.

Callers at this office during the last week report that many people are turning their cattle into their cotton fields in order to destroy the late crop of boll weevils. The cattle eat the green foliage from the stalks and in this way a large crop of weevils is destroyed. Many are of the belief that if all farmers would turn their cattle into their cotton fields after the bolls are picked, the boll weevil crop for next year would be greatly reduced. We hear of some farmers preparing to plow under all dead vegetation this fall with the view of improving their land.

Among the number calling to renew or subscribe or sending in their renewals and subscriptions since last issue are the following:

- R. O. Brown, Creek Rt. 1.

R. A. Clark Dead.

Mr. R. A. Clark, a former citizen of Crockett, died of appendicitis in a Houston sanitarium, where he had gone for an operation, late Wednesday afternoon of last week. The remains were shipped to Crockett for interment, and funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock from the residence of the deceased's brother-in-law, Mr. R. H. Lacy.

Mr. Clark had been living in Huntsville for the last several years. He was born near Birmingham, Ala., April 14, 1885.

Early in life he mastered the art of sidewalk construction and came to Crockett at the time that cement sidewalks were beginning to be built, accepting a number of contracts. While a resident of Crockett he married Miss Mary Lacy, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Lacy. Later Mr. and Mrs. Clark moved to Huntsville, where they have since resided. The deceased was a member of the Christian church at Huntsville, and the pastor of that church conducted the funeral services in Crockett. He was also a member of the Huntsville K. of P. Lodge, and a number of his lodge brethren were present at the ceremonies.

While the funeral ceremony was in progress members of the Ku Klux Klan appeared at the grave and, in their robes of white, performed the burial rites of this mysterious order, after which they withdrew as silently as they had come.

The deceased leaves the wife and a young daughter. He was a good citizen, husband and father, and had many friends in Crockett as well as in Huntsville, where he had spent the last years of his life.

Noted Murder Case.

Davis Crow, formerly with the coal company in Crockett, but now a resident of Houston, was a visitor in Crockett from Friday until Sunday. Davis is a brother of Douglass Crow, who formerly bought cotton and sold automobiles in Crockett, but who was shot and killed by his brother-in-law in Houston last year or before. Rice Russell was tried at Houston, convicted and given the death sentence for the crime. Getting a new trial, the case was transferred to Crockett and Russell is now in the Houston county jail. His case will come up for trial at the October term of the Houston county district court and will bring many witnesses from Harris and Rusk counties to Crockett. The defense will be represented by Attorneys John Mathis and Cam Kay of Houston and Will Futch of Henderson. The other side has employed Hon. N. B. Morris of Houston and Messrs. Adams & Adams and Moore & Ellis to assist District Attorney Dent in the prosecution.

SOME NEWS OF THE CROCKETT OIL FIELD

Mr. George L. Porter, operator of the Austin No. 2 well of the Porter Oil Company, has returned from an extended business trip north and east and announced that he is ready to resume operations in the well at Crockett. Active drilling will not be started until some time next week, as the time intervening will be needed to get the drilling crew ready and the machinery lined up. Mr. Porter will have to make another trip to Houston before he can get the drill started again. He says he has no doubt but what he will open up an oil field at Crockett yet and that his business associates are no less confident than he is.

Col. Otis says the Driskell well is down to 2500 feet and that indications continue to be of the most encouraging kind. He is hopeful of the best results.

The Porter Springs well has not resumed drilling, we have no report from the Weldon well and the Grapeland well remains closed down.

STATEWIDE WAR ON BOLL WEEVIL TO BE OUTLINED

Texas C. of C. Plans Concerted Drive on Cotton Pest.

Dallas, Texas, Sept. 17—Statewide war upon the boll weevil will begin at a conference of business and farm organizations which has been called by the Texas chamber of commerce to meet in this city September 30. The purpose of the conference is to unify all efforts toward the destruction of the boll weevil and to secure a great concerted effort toward stamping out the pest, in the place of the sporadic attempts that have been made by various individuals and organizations in the past.

Men who have spent years studying the boll weevil declare that autumn is the best season for the attack upon the cotton pest. It is found that before the hibernating period sets in the weevil will starve to death within five or six days, if deprived of green cotton foliage.
This has been proved by entomologists throughout the South, many of whom believe that the weevil could be practically destroyed if the concerted efforts of the farmers of the South

Queer Feelings

"Some time ago, I was very irregular," writes Mrs. Cora Robie, of Pikeville, Ky. "I suffered a great deal, and knew I must do something for this condition. I suffered mostly with my back and a weakness in my limbs. I would have dreadful headaches. I had hot flashes and very queer feelings, and oh, how my head hurt! I read of and of others, who seemed to have the same troubles I had,

being benefited, so I began to use it. I found it most beneficial. I took several bottles
... and was made so much better. I didn't have any more trouble of this kind. It regulated me."

Cardui has been found very helpful in the correction of many cases of painful female disorders, such as Mrs. Robie mentions above. If you suffer could be placed behind such a campaign.

This plan of attack does not involve burning the stalks, but merely turning them under with the plow, so that the small late squares, upon which the weevil feeds, will be killed. The destruction of the cotton root also kills the germs of the root—root fungus and other pests which are annually cutting down the South's production.

One reason for the weevil's rapid spread throughout the South has been the failure of the farmer to attack the pest at the season when his vitality is lowest, according to specialists. The fight on the weevil is pressed hardest during the cotton-growing season when the weevil's vitality is high and when there is no opportunity to deprive the insect of its food;
but with the arrival of autumn
the fight lulls and the pest is allowed to pass safely through its stage of weakest vitality,
just preceding hibernation.

The weevil infestation in spring starts from the few weevils that pass through the winter. The weevils that pass through the winter are usually those which develop the preceding fall, feeding upon the small late squares of the cotton stalks, just preceding frost. With the coming of the first frost the weevil hibernates, going into the ground, Spanish moss, dead grass, along fences, ditches and other places. If the green cotton stalks, specialists point out, are entirely killed at a time preceding the first frost, by a week more, the weevil will starve.

This method has been tried experimentally and it is found to be very effective against the boll weevil, but a great drawback lies in the fact that it is difficult to secure co-operation of the farmers over any great area, in plowing their cotton stalks under, since there is little interest in the boll weevil during the late season.

A tremendous economic saving to Texas will be effected if all agricultural and business forces of the State can be united in carrying out a systematic warfare against the boll weevil throughout the year," says James George, vice-president and general manager of the Texas Chamber of commerce. "The people of the South have been waiting for years for some wizard to invent a machine for ex-terminating the weevil 'by a twist of the wrist,' as it were.
Such a thing will never come to pass; wholehearted co-operation of every business and agricultural force in the State in fighting the weevil every step of the way, is the only solution of a problem that is costing the State millions of dollars annually."

What the Former A. & M. President Writes in the Rusk County News.

The Republicans lost a good candidate for Senator when Wilnot refused to run. Wilnot is a man of a great deal of self-respect, and is regarded about Austin as a gentleman of a very high order. The Republicans can accomplish more in the end by nominating men and staying with them than it can by running a renegade Democrat.

McAdoo declares he will not be a candidate for President in 1924. Cox would like to run the party is done with him. We would not intentionally discourage any of the boys who have any idea of hauling down the Republican flag two years from now, but before the Democrats can hope to turn the rascals out they must get rid of the fools going around loose in their own party.

It is only a question of time until there will be a people's strike if matters do not change. Our taxes are now so high, and goods are so high, and living expenses generally are so high that altogether they are confiscating the homes of the farmers all over the South. The last drop of blood will be taken unless there is a halt. Let us still hope that the American people may come to their senses in time to save the old ship of state from utter destruction.

A LABOR DAY SPEECH.

We clip from the Congressional Record a Labor Day speech by Hon. A. F. Lever, of South Carolina. Mr. Lever that they accorded him a respectful hearing was formerly a Congressman, but holds no office now. The speech is taken from the South Carolina Columbia State, and was published in the Record by request of Senator Dial. The speech follows a few preliminary remarks by the reporter, as follows:

Not in many months has a more courageous address been made in South Carolina than that delivered yesterday at Victory Park during a Labor Day celebration by A. F. Lever, former Congressman from South Carolina. Other features of the celebration are reported elsewhere in the State today.

Probably 90 per cent of the male portion of the audience addressed by Mr. Lever was made up of members of labor unions and a large part of the balance of the audience was composed of sympathizers. Many of the men in the crowd were on strike, yet Mr. Lever gave what might be termed "the average non-union individual's view of the strike." Be it said to the credit of the hundreds of labor union men who heard Mr. Lever that they accorded him a respectful hearing and gave him that attention due an invited guest.

His address elicited no enthusiastic applause, but it was a thoughtful crowd which dispersed after Mr. Lever had spoken. Mr. Lever outlined clearly labor issues as he saw them and spoke with that compelling earnestness which in former years made him a power on the stump.

"I quit politics some years ago," he said in the outset of his address, after which he spoke briefly of the honors which the people of his district had conferred upon him. "We are living in extremely troublesome times," he said. "We are getting the results of the upheaval which a few months ago overthrew civilization."

"In certain sections of Europe civilization is standing on the brink of a vast chasm which threatens it with destruction," and then he spoke of conditions in Russia.

"Civilization," he said with appealing earnestness, "can not live without government. Without government, the strong will overrun the weak, and the weak will be at the mercy of the strong and the criminal." "Government," he continued, "comes from God."

"There is a great deal of strange thinking and strange acting in this country today."

"I do not fear for the future of America. The elements which founded it came to America that they might have freedom to worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience."

"If there is any potential danger ahead of us, it lies in the fact that we have come to thinking in terms of the group rather than in terms of the individual."

"There are some things that are fundamental. Among them is right of the individual to work or not to work. That right can not be taken from him nor can he bargain it away—it is an inalienable right."

"Now the corollary to that right, the right of the individual to work carries with it the right of the individual to quit work when he gets ready to do so."

"Then the right to work carries with it the right of the other fellow to work if he wants to."

"Union labor has the right to strike for more wages and for better working conditions."

"But neither I, as an individual, nor you, as a group, have the right to say that because I don't want to work under such conditions, I refuse the right of some other fellow to work under those conditions." Here there were some calls of "Good night," but Mr. Lever never shifting his eyes, continued his address and spoke of collective bargaining.

"The outside public has an intimate concern with what you do," he said, in continuing his address to the union men.

"The the railroad men of the State and Nation is given the task of moving to market the products of the farms of America. Eighty per cent of the people of South Carolina are engaged in production. They produce two of the necessities of life."

"Deny the people clothing or food or fuel and civilization freezes—starves—collapses. Our people, 80 per cent of them, produce either food or clothing."

"If the farmers should refuse to produce for you, you would starve in four months. The great cities of the land are within about three weeks of starvation—that is, they have food supplies to last that long without replenishment."

"No cause can live unless it appeals to the great mass of the people. If public sentiment is not with you, you fail."

"I say to you frankly, the public feels that it is time that labor and capital should come to some agreement and get to work."

"When the farmer sees his crops rotting in the field because of lack of transportation, he concludes that some element of our population is not living up to its job. I want to see organized labor so conduct itself as to have the support of the public, as it once had."

"The salvation or agriculture in South Carolina is the salvation of every other group."

"Labor has got to win its fight within the bounds of the law. The public will not support any group which refuses to conform its acting and thinking to the law of the land."

If this government is going to regulate the domestic affairs of the country, such as looking after mothers and babies, why should it not stop the practice which is bringing millions of mothers and babies to poverty and degradation? Why not go to the root of the trouble and stop usury and profiteering? If these good people who go to Washington and secure socialistic legislation, like the Sheppard-Towner law, want to really benefit the whole country they should work for economy in the government, the lopping off of thousands of useless jobs and a tariff bill that would equalize taxation. It is not wise to permit the machinery of the government to reduce families to poverty, and then for the government to use the same machinery to restore those families back to life. That kind of statesmanship is not the kind that was contemplated by the founders of this Republic. We tax the poor to the last drop of blood so that the government may provide a doctor and a nurse when the baby is born.

SOLDIER BONUS BILL VETOED BY HARDING
AS HURTFUL TO U. S.

Peace Bestowal Upon Ex-Service Men Would Be "Perversion of Public Funds."

Washington, Sept. 19.—President Harding vetoed the soldiers' bonus bill today, informing congress in a written message that while he was in accord with "the avowed purposes" of the measure he did not subscribe to its provisions.

The executive's action was regarded generally in Washington as making impossible a bonus for the world war veterans, at least for some time to come, as it appeared to be almost certain that the veto would be sustained by the senate. A vote in the house was planned for Wednesday with senate action later in the day or on Thursday.

Mr. Harding sets forth a number of reasons for returning the bill to the house without his approval. These included:

Failure of congress to provide a means of financing.

That inevitably the bonus would mean increased taxation.

That the legislation would wipe out everything thus far accomplished to reduce government expenditures wherever possible.

That a peace bestowal on the ex-service men was a "perversion of public funds" and suggested "that future defense is to be inspired by compensation rather than consciousness of duty to flag and country."

That one-sixth of the total sum of the public debt for distribution among less than 5,000,000 of 110,000,000 people would undermine confidence on which the nation's credit was built and "establish the precedent of distributing the public funds whenever the proposal and the numbers affected make it seem politically appealing to do so."

That the $10,000,000,000 of maturing public debt in the next six years would be difficult to meet without adding the complication of added borrowings on of a bonus.

The adjusted service certificate plan of payment, with its bank and government loan provisions was little less than a certified inability of the government to pay and invited "a practice of sacrificed barter" by the veterans.

Asserting that this obligation would "cost more millions than I venture to suggest" the president declared that a rational financial policy today is necessary to make the nation ready for the expenditure which is certain to be required in the coming years.

Mr. Harding also called attention to the sums now being expended for the care of the diseased, disabled or dependent and asserted that the total cost of this work, with insurance liability added, probably would exceed $25,000,000,000.

Only once did the president refer to the interest on the foreign debt, out of which proponents of bill contended it could be paid. He told congress that the government was facing a deficit of $650,000,000 during the current year and a further deficit for the year succeeding, "even after counting upon all interest collections on foreign indebtedness, which the government is likely to receive."

Treasury estimates based on what seemed the most likely exercise of the options, he continued, figured the direct cost at $795,000,000 for the first four years and a total cost in excess of $4,000,000,000. He added that no estimate of "the large indirect cost" ever had been made.

The veto message was transmitted to the house by a White House messenger and its reading was begun at 3:10 p. m. There was a full attendance of members.

The reading was given close attention. Chairman Fordney of the ways and means committee, chief sponsor of the bonus in the house, sat in front of the reading clerk with his hands cupped to his ears at times, listening intently. There was a scattering applause, mostly from the republican side when the reading ended.

PLAN TO PASS
BONUS BILL OVER
HARDING'S VETO

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—Information that President Harding had made up his mind definitely to veto the soldiers' bonus bill reached senate leaders today from some of his closest advisers.

After receiving this word, the majority leaders made an informal preliminary canvass of the senate, which was said to have shown 34 votes against overriding a veto, or two more than the number necessary to prevent final enactment of the bonus legislation.

This majority was understood by some friends of the president as too narrow and they expected Mr. Harding to call several senators to the White House before Tuesday for a discussion of the situation. With many senators absent from Washington, it was asserted by some that it was difficult to assess senate sentiment at this time.

Should the bonus bill be returned to the house, managers of it there planned to move promptly to pass it over the veto. The general belief at the capitol was that far more than the necessary two-thirds majority could be obtained there to override the veto.

BETTER MEN AS WELL AS PLANTS, BURBANK'S IDEAL

Famous Plant Breeders Says Mankind Can Be Improved.

Santa Rosa, Cal.—In fulfillment comes to the hopes and ideals of Luther Burbank, the foremost plant breeder of the world, history also will record his influence in the developing of better men as well as plants, for he regards improvement of mankind as a greater work than improvement of plant species.

"I hope that the same laws, as far as practicable, which I have discovered and demonstrated in plant life, will be applied to the improvement of human life," said the dean of plant scientists in his Santa Rosa home.

"This, in a measure, can, must and will be done," he asserted. Although every possible minute of Burbank's day is given to his plant experiments, he is glad to give time to civic affairs, especially to the Boy Scouts, playground activities and the school doings, for in these he sees the beginning of the application to mankind of his principles of plant breeding.

"My time is all too short to do all I wish and hope yet to do," he says.

The improvement of plants, according to Burbank, is in its earliest infancy, but "the possibilities are limitless," he declares.

"In mechanics and electricity great progress already has been made, but, as every scientist knows, it is hardly a begin-

ARMY DIRIGIBLE COMPLETES TRIP TO SAN ANTONIO

Error in Altitude Comes Near Causing Disaster In Ozarks.

San Antonio, Texas, Sept. 17.—Completing the longest leg of its trans-continental flight and successfully combatting the roughest weather encountered since leaving Langley field September 14, the United States army dirigible C-2, landed at Brooks Field here at 1:45 o'clock this afternoon, having covered 50 miles from St. Louis in 16 hours and 20 minutes. An error of altitude on the map used for the flight in respect to one of the peaks of the Ozark mountains came near causing disaster Saturday night, according to Major H. A. Strauss, commander of the C-2. The peak was higher than indicated and the C-2, speeding through the darkness, was almost upon it before it was sighted. A sharp tilt of the dirigible cleared the peak.

Leaving St. Louis at 9:30 o'clock Saturday night, the C-2 fought its way through a rain storm for an hour. Four hours of fair sailing followed, but more bad weather was encountered in the Arkansas Ozarks, where the narrow escape from collision occurred. After leaving Arkansas, the weather improved and no more difficulty was found until within 60 miles of San Antonio the C-2 ran into another rainstorm which continued almost to the time of its landing.

As the six officers and men who comprise the C-2 crew climbed out of its car at Brooks Field this afternoon their faces somewhat drawn and haggard, showed the effects of a 16-hour vigil. They expressed a feeling of relief that the longest stretch of their transcontinental journey had been finished without accident.

The C-2 will remain here at least 24 hours for thorough inspection in the Brooks Field hangar, second largest of its kind in the country. Some difficult aerial navigation is expected by Major Strauss, west of San Antonio, should direct route be followed as this would throw the course over the Davis mountains, which reach altitudes of nearly 8000 feet. The maximum sailing altitude of the C-2 is said to be 7000 feet, necessitating a course which will skirt the highest peaks.

Early this morning the C-2 diverted from its direct course long enough to visit Dallas and Fort Worth. West of San Antonio it is expected that the line of the Southern Pacific railroad will be taken as a guide.

SCHOOL LUNCHES FOR THE CHILD

In a few days school will begin and the lunch problem will confront you. Let me insist that you think a little more about what your child will have in his lunch basket. Let it be one big aim of your work this year to plan something for their lunches that will be beneficial to their health.

A well prepared and well balanced lunch is generally appreciated by the child. As much as one-fourth of the day's diet depends upon the contents of lunch box.

Poorly prepared lunches will retard the progress of the child often times and for this reason the lunches should be carefully planned and prepared.

Study the foods which should be used in the lunch. Use plenty of lettuce in the lunch as this food is necessary to give bulk to the diet.

A child, when digestion is good, should drink from one to two pints of milk daily. A pint of milk in the lunch is essential food from the standpoint of food value. If it is slightly heated it is far better, since cold milk will slightly retard the process of digestion.

Not only is the lunch important, but the packing is very necessary. A good lunch may be spoiled by careless packing. Never use an old newspaper or paper bag to wrap bread. A good substantial basket is the best container, and in addition have the following articles: a pint jar with tight-fitting lid for milk, a spoon, a jelly glass with lid for such foods as preserves and stewed fruits, paper napkins or neatly hemmed napkins and oil paper to wrap sandwiches or cake. Paper from cake or cracker boxes may be secured for such purposes.

The foods should be packed in order to be eaten; that is, those to be eaten first should be on top.

The following lunch suggestions, supplemented by a pint of milk, will form a wholesome lunch for children from 7 to 12 year:

- One—3 eggs sandwiches, 1 baked apple, 3 plain cookies.
- Two—2 bread and butter

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY'S CANDIDATE.

The republican State executive committee has named as the republican candidate for United States senator Mr. George E. B. Peddy of Houston, upon the advice of a small body of men and women who call themselves democrats, but most of whom participated in the democratic primaries and pledged to support the primary nominees. Presumably, Mr. Peddy himself was one of these.

Because the democrats of Texas, for reasons of overwhelming force, could not gain the consent of their consciences to nominate James E. Ferguson, these so-called independent democrats violate their pledges and enter into a covenant with the republican party.

Looking at the proceedings of the Dallas meeting, we find Mr. Eagle declaring it is necessary to defeat the democratic nominee for United States senator in Texas in order to strengthen the chances of the national democracy to win the presidency in 1924. And are we to suppose that the republican chairman, Mr. Creager, is co-operating in that enterprise because of his solicitude for the democratic ticket in 1924?

We find the party-jumpers and bitter-enders predicating their action upon the refusal of the San Antonio convention to hear them, but they cannot claim that the San Antonio convention had anything to do with the nomination of Mr. Mayfield for United States senator. The 600,000 men and women who participated in the primary election did the nominating, and they gave the bitter-enders a patient and complete hearing. There has been no bolt from the convention, but these people who assembled at Dallas as "independents" have bolted the nominating primary in which all of them, with one or two exceptions, participated and solemnly pledged themselves to support its nominees.

Whether Mr. Peddy's nomination by the republican executive committee be legal is a matter for the future to determine. But, assuming that it is, it is a spectacle more pitiful than inspiring. He is an earnest, serious minded young man of ability, and, up to Saturday, we might have said of much promise. Possibly, of course, hereafter, the democratic party may overlook his present offense of party rebellion—not to say treachery—on the ground of his impetuosity and youth, and forgive him because of the circumstance that the wily politicians with whom he consorted took advantage of his zeal and inexperience and made him the victim of a political badger-pulling in the republican camp.

What the campaign is to be will depend upon two important considerations. First, the legality of the nomination as a republican candidate of a democrat who participated in the democratic primary; second, if the nomination be legal, will there be a slush fund of sufficient dimensions to bring out the elements that might naturally be drawn into the proposed alliance. Without the money, the maneuver will amount to nothing, and will not enlist the activity of some of the most potent factors that operated to bring about the Dallas combination.

Mr. Peddy being an ardent prohibitionist, his candidacy means very little to the old line wets who want the Volstead law modified so as to permit the sale of wine and beer. Only money, and money till it hurts the contributors, will suffice for the old saloon element, in the absence of an opportunity to send a friend of booze to the senate.

Generally speaking, it can be said that the bulk of those who voted in the democratic primary will support the nominee. As for the rest, the people are weary of politics and have returned to their private pursuits. In any contingency, the democratic candidate for United States senator will get practically the customary majority. The present movement is in reality a matter of little importance.—Houston Post.

BUSINESS MAN'S WAGE.

Statistics show that 95 per cent of the men who engage in business are forced into failure at one time or another in their business career. Some fail soon after they start; others for a time prosper, but being unable to keep up with the changes and shifts of their business they later succumb to these changes and have to quit. Still others start out well, then fail, and then start all over; and fail or succeed on the second attempt as the case may be.

At any rate, if the government is to guarantee to every man who works for wages that he is to always get what he may choose to call a "saving wage," then logically the government should guarantee to every man who starts a business an income sufficient to keep him out of the hands of his creditors for all time.

Such a guarantee is on its face an absurdity.

No government can relieve the individual of his responsibility for energy, thrift and foresight in taking care of himself and his family whether that individual be a wage earner or a business man.

The communistic government of Russia tried to take out of the hands of its people all their individual initiative—and oh, what a tragic mess they made of it!—Bloomington Pantagraph.

Salt Branch Dots.

Editor Courier:

This is to announce the closing of an 18-day pentecostal meeting conducted by Sister Brigman of Russellville, Ark., and Brother Wells of Livingston, both being pentecostal ministers. They closed the meeting with joy in their hearts to know that it continued throughout with success. Many souls were born into the kingdom of God, and the other attendants have come to realize the danger that their souls are in and have promised to up-build the community with good, Christian work hereafter. Large numbers from Crockett and the surrounding communities helped to enlarge our congregation and we thank them for their attendance and good behaviour. Their regular appearance at service proved that they, too, heartily enjoyed the good preaching and splendid singing as much as we did. Many were present at the baptizing Sunday morning, and at the sacrament, footwashing and Sunday school organization Sunday afternoon. Everybody is heartily invited to our Sunday school and prayer meetings.

Sister Brigman returned Monday afternoon to her home at Russellville, Ark., after a stay of five weeks with relatives and friends.

Miss Gladys Denton returned to Crockett Sunday night to enjoy the companionship of and faithful study with her old friends and classmates another nine months of school.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Albright of Crockett visited their mother and father and other relatives of Salt Branch community Sunday.

After a short visit with home folks and friends, Miss Viola Bryant returned to Marshall Monday, where she will continue her work at high school.

Inn Beloved of Dickens Now Offered for Sale.

London.—The Leather Bottle, known to Dickens lovers the world over, is for sale. It is the "clean and commodious alehouse," in the little Kent village of Cobham. It was thither Mr. Pickwick, accompanied by the faithful Snodgrass and Winkle, followed Mr. Tupman on receipt of the plaintive letter from Mr. Tupman which announced that he had been "deserted by a lovely and fascinating creature." He wrote to Pickwick: "Any letter addressed to me at 'The Leather Bottle,' Cobham, Kent, will be forwarded—supposing I still exist. I hasten from the right of the world which has become odious to me."

Dickens loved the Cobham neighborhood so much that he returned to it for his honeymoon. Later he took up his residence at Gad's Hill, close by.

The old inn contains many Dickens relics. The hanging sign bears a picture of Pickwick addressing the club.
