Food Stamps Improve Low Income Diets

Surveys conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture indicate that the food stamp program is an effective means for using America's agricultural abundance and providing better nutrition for low-income households.

Findings in certain test areas indicate that: There was a significant increase in the amount and value of food consumed by households under the food stamp program. About 80 percent of this increased consumption was of fruits and vegetables, meats, poultry, fresh milk and eggs. All these foods bring farmers their best returns.

There was no major shift to luxury foods. For example, recipients ate more meat but not the higher-priced cuts.

Low-income households that receive food stamps had better diets than low-income households that did not receive food stamps. But even with food stamps, these participants ate less than the non-needy.

In the test areas, food stamps represented about 10 percent of the retail food sales, and farmers' profits increased from $1.04 to $1.17.

The statewide food stamp program is administered by the State Department of Public Welfare and the program's administrative costs are furnished by the State of Texas.

USDA furnished and redeems the food stamps and bonus stamps.

New standards which went into effect in January take into account the increase in the cost of living. Individuals who had slightly too much income to qualify in 1973 may be able to do so with the new standards.

Under current regulations, medical expenses, mandatory education expenses, and certain other expenses are deducted

Tax Assistance Sometimes Helpful

Why can't taxes be simpler? This thought, undoubtedly, is in the minds of millions of taxpayers, frustrated from figuring their 1973 income-tax returns, with just days remaining before the April 15, deadline. "Taxes - in order to be fair - must be complex," asserts Doris Wedel manager of H & R Block in Muleshoe. Some people favor a tax system which would be based on a flat percentage of income, however, this would be an extremely oppressive tax. A fair tax is more important than a simple tax. Doris Wedel explained that our present system of taxation is based on the ability to pay. "It would be quite unfair for a man with a wife and three children earning $5,000 a year to pay $1,000 in tax, while a man with the same family, making $100,000 paid only $20,000 in tax." Why, then, does it seem the "Rich guys" get all the tax breaks?

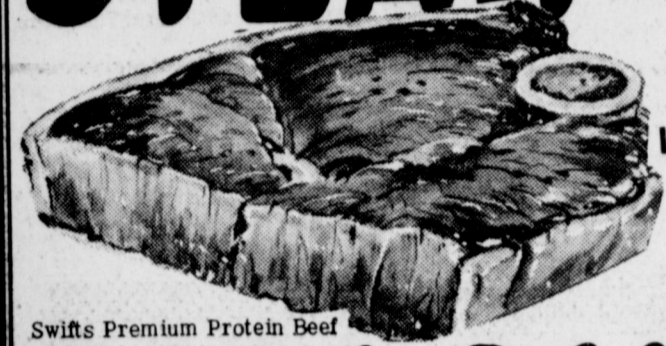

There is only one reason. It is because the upper-income person plans his tax affairs to take advantage of all the breaks the law allows and seeks qualified assistance in both planning and preparing his taxes. There are many breaks which, incidentally favor the ordinary taxpayers. The idea that exemptions, deductions, adjustments, etc. were designed for the wealthy is just not true. These provisions are for everyone.

"But, again, it is the wealthy who take the time, effort and expense to be sure they are getting full advantage of every tax provision, while the average person is mostly unaware that these provisions even exist," Doris Wedel said. And Mr. Average Taxpayer, when it comes to preparing his own tax return often fancies himself as a once-a-year expert. He often ends up paying far more than he legally has to.

Farmers on Roller Coaster... Red Meat Processing Down... Anti-Screwworms Plans Progress... Lack of Rain Reports Heard

THERE'S NO DOUBT that Texas farmers are better off than they used to be -- if you pick the right periods of time; and there's no doubt that they are worse off than they used to be at other times.

The Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service says that the "All Farm Products Index of Prices Received" last March 15 was 543 per cent of the January, 1910-December, 1914 base. That is 34 points below the previous month of this year but 100 points (23 per cent) above a year ago.

On the other hand, the livestock products index was about eight per cent below February 1974 and 10 per cent below the same period last year, as any cattleman will testify. Beef cattle were down $3.40 a hundred from February and $5.60 below a year ago at $40.40 per hundred. Hogs at $33.20 a hundred were down $5.20 from February and $4 from a year ago.

PROCESSING OF RED MEAT was down during February 1974 in Texas. Slaughtering plants produced 160.9 million pounds during that month, which is 20 per cent lower than the 201.0 million pounds produced in January 1974 and four per cent below February 1973. February 1974 slaughter of cattle totaled 252,000 head, 65,000 head fewer than the previous month and 17,000 below February a year ago.

There were 569,000 head of cattle slaughtered during the first two months of this year; 214,500 sheep and lambs were killed during the same two months. Sheep and lambs killed totaled 98,500 during February, which is 17,500 fewer than the month earlier and 2,000 more than in February 1973.

SCREWORMS are showing up more frequently now in Mexico, it is reported. Slow help is on the way, however. Mexican and U.S. officials are reported by USDA to be negotiating with contractors for construction of the main facility in southern Mexico in which to produce more than 300 million sterile screwworm flies each week.

The production plant is supposed to be completed in 1975. The plan is to eradicate screwworms north of Tuxtla Gutierrez, Mexico, then to keep a permanent barrier of sterile flies across Mexico's narrow Isthmus of Tehuantepec to keep the pest from moving northward.

LACK OF RAIN is a drawback to farming in many parts of Texas, but progress is reported in planting in 1974 crops. Oats are reported doing well in the southern and eastern half of the State where moisture has been adequate.

Wheat is heading out from the Cross Timbers to South Texas and is in the boot stage on the Low Plains. Irrigated wheat is making good growth on the High Plains, and rains a couple of weeks ago helped some dryland wheat, but most dryland wheat has poor prospects.

Rice seeding is reported more than half completed, and cotton planting is about seven per cent complete over the State, all of it in South Texas. Peanut planting is underway in South Texas.

IF PECAN buds herald true spring weather, then such weather is here; because pecans are leafing in most South Texas areas and budding in other areas of the State.

It was pointed out that this hospital has paid off $250,000 in five years, $200 per day is paid just for principal and interest, and $72,000 is being paid per year for payments. None of the above includes any salaries. State requirements provide that this hospital have 5.2 registered nurses. Minimum salary for an R.N. is $9,000 per year.

from gross income to determine the family's net income. The net income then determines the purchase price for food stamps.

For example: A family of two with a net income of $260.00 per month after deducting medical and certain other expenses would pay $58.00 for $78.00 worth of food stamps.

The same family with a net income of $149.00 per month would pay $35.00 for $78.00 worth of food stamps.

All families of a given size receive the same dollar value of food stamps. The price paid for the food stamps varies directly with the family's net income. The maximum amount of net income a family can have and be eligible depends on the size of the family. A one-member family may have a maximum net income of $183.00 a family of three may have $373.00 and a family of five may have $560.00. The amount increases as family size increases.

Any family having expense so great they have difficulty should contact the food stamp caseworker in the Bailey County Courthouse on Tuesdays, or Thursdays.

If you can't get PIONEER Brand 8311

here are some excellent alternative hybrids for High Plains farmers.

Pioneer Brand 8311, the "Golden Bronze Yield Leader," has been our most popular hybrid this year — so popular, in fact, that it may be in short supply in some areas. One reason is that the demand has been so great downstate where 8311's disease tolerance is so important. Fortunately, there are several other Pioneer Brand hybrids that are proven top performers on the High Plains. If you can't get 8311, ask your dealer about these.

PIONEER Brand 8417
 This versatile yellow endosperm sorghum is a champion yielder in the medium-late maturity class, for irrigated or non-irrigated land. It has large open heads, uniform head height, strong stalks for easy threshing, good tolerance to smut and antracnose.

PIONEER Brand 820
 This top-notch full-season hybrid, is a consistently high yielder. Excellent drought resistance and standability plus good roots and stalks make it a good choice for irrigated or non-irrigated farming on the plains.

PIONEER Brand 828
 One of the highest yielding sorghums you can plant, this full-season hybrid responds well to good management on good land with plenty of water. Plains growers like it because it holds its quality and threshes well even after an early freeze. It produces sturdy stalks with semi-compact heads of dark red grain.

PIONEER Brand 846
 Famous for its versatility and adaptability, this medium maturity hybrid yields along with the full-season varieties. Resistant to smut, rust and MDM, its outstanding hybrid vigor and excellent drought resistance help it turn in consistently high yields even under stress.

Market Report

COLLEGE STATION---Beef prices are "more pleasing" than they have been for some time, according to one observer.

Mrs. Gwendolyn Clyatt, consumer marketing information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, listed round steaks and roasts, ground beef, arm and blade pot roasts and steaks as showing best values currently.

"Pork values include shoulder roasts and steaks, end-cut loin roasts and chops. Some brands of bacon are down in price, too."

Citing turkey and turkey parts among the most economical, high-quality protein foods available, Mrs. Clyatt suggested roasting a larger turkey and using leftover cooked meat for later meals.

Turning to fruit counters, the specialist noted that ample quantities of apples, grapefruit and oranges are available in the moderate price range.

"Reasonable Temple oranges are still around at attractive retail prices. "Murcotts (honey tangerines) are slightly higher priced than Temple oranges, but they're very good, and pineapples from Mexico are plentiful."

Strawberries, bananas, cantaloupe, honeydew and watermelon are available at various price levels, and soft-shell squash prices are trending downward.

Fresh vegetables in good supply at the most economical prices include cabbage, carrots, mustard, collards, turnip and greens, broccoli, radishes and green onions, the specialist said.

CONSUMER WATCHWORDS: There's no saving in buying a less expensive cut of meat if most of it is bone and fat. In roasting beef, slow cooking keeps meat from drying out and shrinking--and that saves money.

Levelland Vocational Nursing Program

LEVELLAND---The patient lay limp under white sheets in a hospital bed. A young woman in white tunic and cap felt the patient's wrist for a sign of a pulse and pressed a stethoscope against his chest to listen for a heart beat.

The patient is, in reality, a mannequin in a simulated hospital ward at South Plains College. The lifelike object is a learning tool for the students enrolled in SPC's vocational nursing program.

The vocational nursing program is now in its third year as a pilot project established by the Texas Education Agency and the Texas Vocational Board of Nurses, said Mrs. Helen Brown, program director at SPC. Mrs. Barbara Bennett is assistant director.

The only program of its kind in Texas, the vocational nursing project offers 27 weeks of classroom and laboratory instruction at South Plains College and 23 weeks of clinical experience in area hospitals. Classroom and laboratory work in the program is divided into three phases, with one week of observation in an affiliated hospital following each phase.

The 27 weeks spent the classroom and school lab is classified as pre-clinical. Mrs. Brown said. Courses in this phase include anatomy and physiology, mental health and mental illness, disease control and prevention, vocational nursing skills, pharmacology, personal and vocational adjustment, nutrition, normal growth

These students recently received their caps and are now working in area hospitals as part of the clinical phase of their training.

Each Club member present drew the name of a boy at Boy's Ranch at Pettit to send a birthday card to.

The white elephant was won by Mrs. Tommy Galt.

An interesting discussion on the 12 chapter of Hebrews was held.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting. Those present were Mrs. Bobby Kindel, Mrs. Pete Tarlton, Mrs. Tommy Galt, Mrs. W.C. McCelvey and the hostess, Mrs. Dean Waltrip.

The next meeting will be April 23.

Children May Find Sharing Difficult

COLLEGE STATION --- Even with a full toy box, some children balk at sharing, one specialist says.

Dorothy Taylor, family life education specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, discussed how a child learns to share--and how parents influence this learning process.

"A child learns what he lives. If he lives with greed, a child learns to be greedy and not to share.

"Children aren't born with built-in sharing," she continued. "Nor do they acquire it automatically at a certain age.

"Sharing actually requires daily practice--in judgment and in making choices about matters--in line, of course, with the child's age and understanding of things."

To help a child start learning to share, consider his point of view, the specialist advised. She said that toys and other favorite objects offer security to some children.

"When a parent asks a child to share all his possessions, the child loses some security. That's why parents should be sensitive to the child's feelings--concerning toys or anything else.

"Sensitive parents listen when a child expresses his thoughts--to show him they value his ideas.

"Also they act with fairness and consideration, so the child knows he's important.

"When parents create a sympathetic atmosphere, a child draws nearer to them. As he sees them share feelings--and things, he wants to share, too."

Despite the simplicity--and sensibility--of these procedures, problems can arise, Miss Taylor added.

"For example, some children refuse to share anything because of a power-play with their parents. A child doing this is seeking limits or a framework in which to operate.

"In this situation, parents should exert parental power until such time when the child can make independent decisions," she said.

"Since using parental power to control children works only under special conditions, it must equal parental reward to bring about change."

Sharing isn't limited to a child's possessions--it also includes such things as chores, Miss Taylor pointed out.

"Parents 'battling it out' with children over chores and responsibilities should realize this war can't be won. Children have more time and energy to resist than parents have to force them.

"With chores--and other conflicts in sharing--parents must win the child over.

"They do this by using fairness and sympathy mentioned earlier. In addition, parents should state feelings and thoughts without attacking the child's personality and dignity," the specialist emphasized.

"They should avoid words, comments or name calling--such as 'stingy,' 'greedy' or 'hog.' Such terms create hate and resentment--complicating matters."

Although these changes don't occur overnight, the efforts do have their rewards, she added.

LOUISA'S LETTER

Dear Louisa,

My husband died when I was rather young and left me with four small children to support. I was a college graduate so I got a job and hired a housekeeper and got along very well for four years when I married the superintendent of my school. All of the children were married ten years later when he was offered a better job and we moved to another city. I have made many friends here and like it very much.

Now my problem is this. My husband died several months ago and all of my children, who live in the place where they grew up, want me to move back to this former town, so that I will be close to the family. All four of my children have young children of their own and are very social minded so I am afraid I would end my days as a baby sitter if I went back. I love my grand children but I am also interested in many projects and I like concerts and plays. I would love to be near the children but I would have to give up my good friends, the church and clubs here that I love. What am I to do about this?

Mother--Ind.

Answer:

Delay making a decision for a while. It may be that after a time you will find life very different where you are, lacking a husband. And bear in mind, that if you get sick or need help of any kind it is wonderful to have the family to call on. If you do decide to go back to your first home, let your children know that you will baby-sit in an emergency but will not be on call.

Louisa.

The new minimum wage bill signed into law April 8, by President Richard Nixon can only be called "planned inflation" according to PCG President Don Marble of South Plains, "as is any forced wage increase which is unrelated to increased productivity."

The law, enacted over PCG objections, increases minimum wages for various groups of workers from 19 percent to 38 percent beginning May 1, of this year. By 1978 the percentage increase over 1973 minimums grows to from a low of 54 percent to a high of 77 percent under the statute.

Farm labor, Marble points out, will register the biggest increases, going from a current $1.30 an hour to $1.60 on May 1, to $1.80 for all of 1975, to $2.00 in 1976, $2.20 in 1977 and to $2.30 in 1978. Farm workers covered, as under previous law include those employed on farms using 500 or more man days in any calendar quarter of the previous year.

A "man day" is defined in the law as any day on which an employee performs as much as one hour of agricultural labor.

The minimum for all non-agricultural workers covered by minimum wage laws prior to 1966 will jump from $1.60 an hour to $1.90 beginning May 1, go to $2.10 in 1975 and to $2.30 in 1976.

Cotton ginners, whose workers were first covered by the minimum wage law of 1966, will be hit by both an increased minimum and a reduced overtime exemption. The minimum wage for gin workers on May 1 will be raised from $1.60 to $1.90, then to $2.00, $2.20 and $2.30 in the next three years. Last year ginners could choose 14 weeks of the peak ginning season during which they were exempt from the law's overtime requirements on members of the active gin crew. Gin employees not on the active ginning crew could work up to ten hours a day and 50 hours a week during the same 14 week period without falling under overtime provisions.

Beginning in 1974 those overtime exemptions will be steadily whittled away. Ginners in 1974 will have a six week period during which they can offer employment of 72 hours per week without paying overtime, a four week period with up to 64 hours exempt, two weeks of a 54-hour exemption, and a 48-hour exemption for the remainder of the work weeks in the year. For 1975 the corresponding figures will be six weeks and 66 hours, four weeks and 60 hours, two weeks and 50 hours, an additional two weeks with a 46-hour exemption and a 44 hour exemption the remainder of the year. By 1976 the exemption will be cut to six weeks with 60 hours, four weeks with 56 hours, two weeks with 48 hours, and no exemption at all for the remaining work weeks of the year.

Gin employees who are not a part of the active gin crew must be paid overtime compensation in 1974 for all hours in excess of 10 hours per day and 48 hours per week for a period or periods not to exceed 14 work weeks in the calendar year.

Traditional overtime exemptions for cottonseed oil mills will be completely phased out in four steps, ending Dec. 31, 1976. Compress and warehouse exemptions will be in effect 14 weeks in which workers can work a maximum of 48 hours per week, 10 hours per day. In 1973 this was 50 hours per week, 10 hours per day.

Preliminary calculations of PCG indicate that the cost of producing cotton under the new wage minimum will go up about $2.00 a bale, and that inflated ginning and other processing costs will bring the total increase to the neighborhood of $3.00 per bale.

In drawing the measure, we were careful to keep in mind that, in this age of instant communications and nuclear umbrellas, multi-warhead missiles and laser weapons, it is essential that the President have the power to act in an emergency. He must be empowered to respond instantly to a surprise attack or to defend our country and its citizens in any situation of urgency.

But, by the same token, we were convinced that the decision to send our sons to war is too awesome to be delegated to any one man, no matter who that

WASHINGTON REPORT BY
Lloyd Bentsen,
United States Senator

By its overwhelming approval of the War Powers Act last Fall, Congress at last gave notice that it intends to reassert some of its constitutional responsibilities.

Article I, Section 8 of our Constitution clearly specifies that "The Congress shall have the power to declare war." But in recent years, Congress has been reluctant to accept that duty.

We are all aware of the erosion of the balance of powers within our Government. This has been the subject of considerable discussion of late, and indeed of recrimination.

I must point out, though, that it is not entirely the fault of the executive branch of government. Congress, to a large degree, has not only stood silently by and watched its power and authority erode; it has also actually given its authority away and acquiesced in various executive action which usurp congressional prerogatives.

The Gulf of Tonkin Resolution and our nation's long, costly, divisive involvement in Vietnam are examples which leap immediately and tragically to mind.

By voting to approve the War Powers bill over the President's veto, Congress has begun to repair the erosion of the delicate balance between the executive and legislative branches.

I was one of the original cosponsors of this legislation, back in 1971, with Senator John Stennis, Chairman of the Armed Services Committee, and many of our colleagues in the Senate.

When Congress exercises its rightful powers and meets its full responsibilities; when it insists on sharing the momentous decisions-- when it requires that the proper Constitutional procedures be followed, the democratic process is strengthened.

We must not allow a growing lack of confidence in the institutions of democratic government to call into question the viability of those institutions. We have a fundamental obligation to keep our government strong and to make our nation whole again.

individual might be. Democratic government "derives its just powers from the consent of the governed," and the momentous decision of war and peace must be made by the elected representatives of the people.

The legislation we proposed, which has now become the law of the land, does not challenge the President's authority as Commander-in-Chief. Nor does it infringe on his constitutional duty to conduct war in the way he sees fit.

It does not tie the President's hands or prevent him from responding to a challenge from abroad, for we realize that there are circumstances under which a President may have to respond in defense without the explicit approval of Congress.

Under the War Powers bill, the President may commit U.S. troops to a conflict for up to 60 days without the approval of Congress. That commitment may be extended for an additional 30 days, once the President notifies Congress in writing of the necessity for this.

But after this time, all U.S. combat activity must cease unless Congress specifically approves its continuation.

In this manner, Congress has restored its constitutional responsibility for declaring war, without tying the hands of the executive branch of government in the event of a national emergency.

There are those who maintain that, if faced with the issue of war or no war in South Vietnam, Congress would have gone along. And, that may have been the case. But the war powers measure will require each Member of Congress to face the issue squarely. It will force each member to decide if he will vote to send America's sons to war.

DEMOCRATIC PROCESS STRENGTHENED

When Congress exercises its rightful powers and meets its full responsibilities; when it insists on sharing the momentous decisions-- when it requires that the proper Constitutional procedures be followed, the democratic process is strengthened.

We must not allow a growing lack of confidence in the institutions of democratic government to call into question the viability of those institutions. We have a fundamental obligation to keep our government strong and to make our nation whole again.

The BAC selection committee feels that Finley exemplifies that courtesy and general attitude should reflect for the business he represents. Congratulations to Clifton Finley.

John Tower
United States Senate

As most of you know, the Economic Stabilization Act, under which most wages and prices have been controlled during the past two years, goes out of existence in about two weeks. I am in full accord with this because it has been my position for some time now that the wage and price controls legislation has done more harm to the economy than it has done to help it.

Last November at a news conference in Washington, I announced that I would not support the extension of the basic enabling legislation on price controls. Since that time, efforts were made to extend the authority of this act but we were successful in blocking any action in the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs. As a matter of fact, it was my motion that killed the legislation in this committee on a vote of 11 to 4.

Actually, most wage and price controls already have been lifted by the Cost of Living Council. When the act expires on April 30th, the entire economy except the petroleum industry will be freed of all controls. Petroleum and petroleum products are still under controls in a separate act until July, 1975.

Since I was instrumental in ending the wage and price controls law, I feel it is important that I discuss with you the reasoning behind my actions. The Economic Stabilization Program over the past two and one-half years has rifted our entire economy with many serious economic distortions. We saw severe spot shortages of products, disincentives to produce and excessive exportation of critical commodities.

Although for a time we were content to trade off various distortions caused by the controls program in order to smoothen out the inflationary pressures in our economy, the developing energy crisis coupled with ever increasing problems caused by the controls program compelled me to oppose any extension of the legislation.

With some reluctance at the time, I was Senate floor manager of the two bills in 1972 and 1973 extending the Economic Stabilization Act. The inflationary spiral was quickening at the time and the Administration felt it essential to continue the controls program. But the management of the act virtually throughout its lifetime was appalling, particularly so with respect to energy. As time passed, I became more impatient with half-way, half-thought-out measures which were taken with regard to energy-related industries. I still feel strongly that we must unburden the energy producing and energy delivering industries from the grasp of controls in order to allow appropriate and proper incentives to revitalize these industries and thus lead us out of the current energy shortages.

Curtailing inflation is important and I am not belittling the need to continue to fight it with sound budgetary and monetary policies. It is time, in my opinion, to devote the energies and talented minds that have often been wasted in efforts to artificially control wages and prices to more productive uses to encourage increased production in our economy.

Our system for these past 200 years has proved that there simply is no substitute for the free market system of supply and demand.

All of us likely will agree that at the moment, energy-- or should I say the lack of it is our greatest concern. Our battle is no less than that of fighting off shortages and perhaps a recession and saving millions of jobs.

Texas, for example, has vast quantities of discovered yet untapped reserves of oil and gas. One of the problems that materialized last fall was the ironic fact that drillers and producers could not secure the tubular steel with which to drill because of the hedge-podge of price regulations. The shortages of tubular materials was attributed almost entirely to artificially controlled prices.

Another sector of the economy that has suffered under controls is health care. Controls have severely affected the quantity and quality of medical care available to the American people.

Hospitals and nursing homes have been unable to pass along increases in the costs of services and products.

During the controls program, we also saw disruptions in the construction industry. For example, reinforcing bar, necessary in most construction projects, became scarce due to distortions caused by controls.

There are countless examples of harmful effects on the economy because of wage and price controls. We all know what the controls did to the supplies and the prices of beef last year. Serious problems arose in the petrochemical industry and there were shortages of varying degrees of fertilizers, feeds and other products during the just-ending era of controls.

As I said six months ago, we have had our "waltz" with wage and price controls. I am ready to call it quits, ready instead to dedicate our talents and imagination toward increasing supplies and production so that our economy can seek its own level in a free market. I am glad the wage and price control system is ending.

The Sandhills Philosopher

Editor's note: The Sandhill Philosopher on his Journal grass farm on discusses television this week, we believe. Dear editor:

A committee, so I read in newspaper last night because everything on television was a re-run, has spent four months studying morning television programs for children under 5 and has come up with some highly critical things to say. In the first place, the committee said, there are too many commercials, 18 an hour, many of them making outlandish claims about how strong you'll get if you eat this or that breakfast food or that candy bar, and that's bad for the child's future.

In the first place, parents who'll let a 5-year-old dictate what cereal to buy or how much candy to eat because he saw it on television probably have no business raising kids, and in the second place kids, if they haven't learned it by 5 will by the time they're 6 that the T.V. strength-building claims are hoakum. It's only later in life that they forget that attitude and apparently, judging by the grown-up commercials, are taken in by the claim you'll be more popular if you use a different tooth paste.

As to the quality of the children's programs themselves, the committee was even further outraged, saying they're terrible, they're phony, they're too loud too frantic, in fact they're downright awful, despite the fact the folk tunes. These will be accompanied by an instrumental tape.

We sincerely hope that you will take advantage of this opportunity to spend an evening with us, enjoying the best in musical entertainment.

CUBA AND ENERGY MIAMI, FLA.--Cuban Armed Forces Minister Raul Castro has warned his countrymen that the energy crisis may have serious consequences for the island nation.

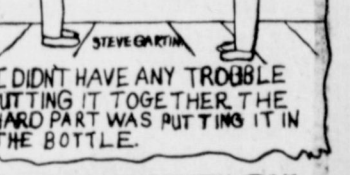

kids sit spell-bound before the set for hours. The committee doesn't understand the human situation. In the first place, a mother with a 4 or 5-year-old kid, not to mention two or three or more will tolerate any kind of T.V. program so long as it keeps the kid out from under foot for a while so she can get some peace of mind.

And in the second place, imagine the frustration this nation would be engulfed in if children grew up accustomed to watching genuinely first-rate programs and then, when they became grown, had nothing to watch but the programs the networks throw at us adults every night. There are times when it's better to leave bad enough alone.
