

The Science of Medicine.

GREAT ADVANCES MADE IN THE LAST FEW YEARS.

The Story of a Man Who Has Lately Been Cured of Tubercular Disease, Locomotor Ataxia.

(From the Philadelphia Record.)

Very little is heard by the general public of the progress of the science of medicine, and the countless scores of lives that are saved by the advancing knowledge of medical science.

It is not a matter of course, however, that it might be the means of bringing relief to others who were suffering as he had suffered.

If it had not been for one of the recent discoveries of medical science, I believe I would be lying helpless in bed.

It was not until I had been in bed for several months that I received from a young man, but I suffered no great inconvenience until 1885.

At that time I was in bed for several months, and I was unable to walk.

At that time I was in bed for several months, and I was unable to walk.

The Household.

Morning Meditations.

Let Taylor preside, upon a morning breezy, How well to rise while nights and larke are flying.

For my part, getting up seems not to be easy By half as lying.

What if the lark does carol in the sky, Soaring beyond the sight to find him out— Let them enjoy, say I, as horses ought.

I'm not a trout. Talk not to me of bees and such like hums, The smallest of sweet larks at the morning prime.

Only he long, and not as he becomes A bed of time.

To me Dan Phobus and his car are naught, He stands that paw impatiently about— Let them enjoy, say I, as horses ought.

Right beautiful the dewy meads appear Besprinkled by the rosy-fingered girl; What then, if I prefer my pillow-ber?

To early rise! My stomach is not ruled by other men's, And, grumbling for a reason, quickly begs

Wherefore should master rise before the dawn? Have I laid their eggs!

Why from a comfortable pillow start To see faint flushes in the east awaken! A sign, say I, for any straggle part.

Excusing him.

An early riser Mr. Gray has drawn, Who used to taste the dewy grass among.

To meet the sun upon the upland lawn, Who died young.

With charwomen such early hours agree, And, grumbling for a reason, quickly begs

Wherefore should master rise before the dawn? Have I laid their eggs!

A ROMAN AT EIGHTY.

ALLEN G. THURMAN IS TAKING LIFE EASY.

His Mental Vigor Said to Be Undiminished—One with a Reporter About the Unsuccessful Campaign of 1888—Reading French Novels.

THE OLD ROMAN, as Ohio democrats delight to designate Allen G. Thurman, has recently reached the extreme limit of life prescribed by prophet.

That he is not in public life is not so much because of infirmity, as from the inclination to let the sands of life sift themselves in the quiet retirement of his library.

He is sensitive about being considered old, and the impression may carry with it the idea that physical weakness has gone hand in hand with mental decay.

THE ONLY ONE.

Great Britain has long had the unique distinction of being the only nation which does not display the national flag over the house of parliament.

Protest and appeals from various patriots have been without avail, the government at last taking refuge behind the plea that no money was appropriated for the purpose.

A member of parliament offered to furnish the funds, whereupon the government gave in, and a few days ago it was announced in the house of commons that in future the national flag (the union jack, not the royal standard) will be hoisted on the Victoria standard of the house of parliament during the sessions of parliament.

It was Old Fashion. A cargo of mutton was sold in Liverpool the other day which had been killed nearly a year before. A sailing ship named the Wellington sailed from New Zealand on May 12, 1883, with a cargo of 1,000 frozen muttons.

A QUESTION OF HERESY.

Religious controversy is always unprofitable, and sometimes very dangerous. The other evening after prayer meeting, at Vanceburg, Ky., Deacon Dills stopped to compliment Deacon Lawhorn on the fine prayer he had offered, but gently suggested that some of the opinions that he contained were not strictly orthodox.

Deacon Lawhorn felt obliged to defend his prayer from the imputation, and maintained that his opinions were sound. Deacon Dills reiterated his assertion, and Deacon Lawhorn was moved to say that he was a "dollar." Deacon Dills was of the opinion that he was a "dollar," whereupon Deacon Lawhorn backed his opinion by hitting Deacon Dills in the neck with a stone.

Deacon Dills clinched Deacon Lawhorn about off his thumb. Deacon Lawhorn pulled out a slung-shot, caved in Deacon Dills' head, and would have finished him then and there but that the pastor, thinking that his opinions were sound, intervened. It appears that the controversy decided nothing, for Deacon Lawhorn still persists in maintaining his orthodoxy, and Deacon Dills still insists that the other is a heretic.

To Change the Day. Efforts are making in France to substitute the birthday of Joan of Arc as the national fest day in place of the 14th of July, the anniversary of the taking of the Bastille. The Bastille episode anniversary no longer excites the same enthusiasm it did at the beginning of the present regime. And then it is being pointed out that the honor of having demolished the Bastille belongs to the Germans and not Frenchmen. History is quoted to the effect that the siege and capture of the famous prison was more especially the work of foreigners, of whom the majority were Germans, and that France has been unjustly celebrating the shedding of French blood by Germans.

Not Too Close. Hundreds of mirrors have been ruined by lamps being placed close to them to assist in toilet purposes, and the average glass seems to be exceptionally weak in respect to temperature. Of late years lamp glasses have been made by a secret process which makes them so tough that even if touched with a red-hot iron they will not break. Now an inventor has come a step farther and has produced a glass which will stand a greater heat, without bending or breaking. It is called "heat-resisting glass," and is now on the market on a commercial basis. It will promptly revolutionize our ideas of building and enable much larger panes of glass to be used than is practicable now.

About Sparrows. It is illegal to feed and shelter English sparrows in New York, and the most reckless violator of the law is the venerable and benevolent Dr. Houghton of the corner. He maintains in defiance of the law, thirty or forty bird boxes that are two small for any birds but the sparrows, and the wren, and whenever a sparrow is in the heart of New York.

It is curious how pleased a man who bet on the races feels when he comes out even. In England the successful lawyer makes from $75,000 to $100,000 a year, and successful physicians $50,000; the average barrister and medical man, however, does not make more than $12,000 a year.

What Next? An agricultural writer figures that the loss to the farmers of the country by the loss of narrow trees, through fire, is about $2,000,000 a year.

The man who makes the most noise in a quarrel is usually believed to be in the right.
