And, come, that is the last bell." and he hurried away lest they should be late. The dress was pinching h r fearfully and she could with difficulty breathe; but she knew it looked "genteel," an I Mrs. Jones was just behind her, so she was happy At the church door somebody st pped on her trail-for the dress trailed a little-and there was an ominious sound of something ripping. What woman does not know and shudder at that sound? But Brown would not stop for investigation, and poor Mrs. Brown went into the church And then, when they rose in prayer time, old Mrs. Kenny, just before her, shook out her hanlkerchief, which was scented with musk, and musk invariably made Mrs. Brown sneeze. She felt the catastrophe impending and tried her best to avoid it, but her efforts were vain. She sneezed, and the strain upon that wretched dress waist was too much The fine thread with which the seams were sewed gave way with a loud, splitting report, and poor alrs. Brown fell down in her seat on the point of swooning, and drew the flimsy sack she wore closer aroun I her And then the miserable woman through that interminable service expecting every moment that dress_would give entirely away, and melt off from her-afraid to br athe, afraid to stir, and devoutly wishing she could creep into a knot-hole some where. But knot-holes are never lying around loose on such occasions. At last the services were over, and poor Mrs. Brown 'took her husband's arm for support. And Mrs. Jones came up behind her, and whispered in her ear: "My dear Almira', your dress is al burst out behind. And somebody has stepped on the skirt and torn it. Those cheap cashmeres do tear so easily. Draw your sack back a little, dear, and if you walk carefully no body will see it unless the wind blows. I am so sorry." Mrs. Brown had to bear the had to realize, too, that it won be just the thing to knock Mrs. Jo down, as she would like to have do Half-way home Mr. Brown step on a piece of orange peel and slip In recovering himself, he caught at his wife's dress. The act was fatal. The whole thing gave way, and about twenty yards of ruffling and fluting lay fluttering along on the sidewalk Somebody's puppy, following after, $16.00 in a playful mood seized on the ruf fling, and in spite of Mr. Brown's vigorous assault with the cane, he made off with it. And that odious Mrs. Jones was on'y a little way behind, and saw it all Mr. Brown did not say a word to his wife by way of preaching to her or her lack of judgment-which proves that he was that rare thing, a maseuline angel-but Mrs. Brown took the lesson she had received to heart, and bought no more cheap dresses, and hired no more cheap dress-makers. As Mr. Jones failed in about a month after her unfortunate dress collapsed. Mrs. Brown managed to live through her troubles, and now she has the privilege of informing Mrs. Jones that cheap things don't pay. She wonders low anybody can buy them.

Now the Best Man Earns a Fee and Doesn't Cot It.

The best man had performed his multifarious duties up to a certain point to his own satisfaction and that of the bridegroom. He had spent the forenoon with that bewildered personage, had given the ushers their anal instructions, had presented a picture of calm and unflinching stoisism to the bridal party as it moved the aisle, had quelled the bridegroom's momentary mad impulse to fight from the altar steps by a glance, had produced the ring at exactly the right instant, and had led the maid A honor away with distinguished which he had managed, when one of As ushers approached him.

Eureka Chemical and M'f'g Co., La Crosse, Wis .: Dear Sirs: I have been a tobacco fiend for many years, and during the past two years have smoked from fifteen to twenty cigars regularly every day. My whole hervous system became affected, until my physician told me I must give up the use of tobacco, for the time being at least. I tried the so-called "Keely Cure," "No-To-Bac," and various other rem-edies, but without success, until I accidentally learned of your "1 aco-Curo." Three weeks ago to-day I commenced using your preparation. and, to-day I consider myself completely cured; I am in perfect health, and horrible traving for tobacco, which every invatorate smoker fully appreciates, has completely left me. I consider your "Baco-Curo" Dear Sirs: I have been a tobacco flend for many years, and during the past two years inveterate smoker fully approciates, has completey left me. 1 consider your simply wonderful, and can fully recommend it C. -teople err through ignorance of fical science, while the physician errs wilfully, and uses the invsteries of his science to deceive the patient.

Now the writer will speak plair ly, and learned doctors will ridicule him for his presumption, and will very learnedly ask, "What does he know about the profound mysteries of medical science?" But they will not call upon him to prove his assertions, nor to give a reason for his faith. Now bear in mind that inexperienced physicians, quacks and frauds are not alluded to; that only experienced and reputable physicians are considered. This is our indictment:

There are well known remedi which every physician knows to b dangerous to some patients, 'fatal to a smaller number, and, perhaps comparatively harmless to others. but our best physicians prescribe these substances in full doses, regardless of the idiopathy of the patient, and without inquiry in that direction.

They will precribe medicines whether symptoms indicate its use or not. This is proven by the fact that bey prescribe medicines in practihay all cases, when they have been ught, and know, that a large majuity of really sick people need no dicine.

sy experiment with new rems, for the benefit of science, and he imminent risk of the patient's , and even life.

ey will refuse to prescribe rem s they know to be best for the atient because they do not "know ts mode of operation," required a foolish code of ethics.

They persistently refuse to prescribe a remedy which they believe to be best for the patient, because some enterprising indivual has patented it. And these things are habitually done regardless of the interests of the patient, who pays is physician to cure him, and does not care whether it is done ethically or otherwise.

Familiarity with suffering and death renders many physicians careless, and often serious damage and fatal results are hidden behind a code that justifies the physician, and a mystery which hides the facts from the public.
