Wholesale price rise leaves much untold

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN

WASHINGTON (AP) - Wholesale prices rose five-tenths of a per cent in January but did not fully reflect the impact of the severe winter weather on food and fuel costs, the government said today.

The Labor Department said the increase, largely the result of higher prices for farm products, textiles and machinery, was based on prices in effect as of Jan. 11, before the cold weather damaged citrus and vegetable crops in Florida and sent natural gas and heating oil prices

Temperature to drop tonight

Permian Basin residents awoke this morning to find evidence of fog or rain, and in some areas rain was still falling lightly.

National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal reported nearly a half-inch rainfall in Midland, but up to an inch of rain reportedly fell in some parts of the Tonight's temperature in Midland should drop to the mid-30s, and Saturday's high is expected to reach the low 60s, the weatherman said.

Fog was reported in Andrews, Lamesa, and Crane, with rain also reported in Lamesa, Crane, Big Spring, Big Lake, Stanton, Rankin and Odessa.

Soaking downpours posed flood threats in parts of Texas and bristling wet weather wrapped most of the

At the same time dense fog cloaked many localities. Visibility as low oneeighth to one-quarter mile prompted a special travel advisory for the Abilene vicinity, several counties around San Antonio and near Del Rio on the Mexican border. It was foggy also around College Station and in the Panhandle-Plains sector around Amarillo and Lubbock, where the rainfall tapered into light showers.

The rain was expected to end in most areas tonight.

Although the mercury dipped to 32 degrees at El Paso and Marfa in far West Texas, mild temperatures ranged through the upper 40s to 60s increases each month since October But the government indicated the effects of the cold wave will cause February's prices to spurt higher.

Wholesale price trends eventually show up at the retail level, though the relationship isn't always precise and there are time lags. While it is difficult to tell just how much consumer prices will rise as a result of the cold weather, some economists estimate prices could be five-tenths of a per cent higher this year than they would have been otherwise.

Farm and food prices began rising even before the weather affected rops, marking a reversal from recent months when it was industrial commodities that were mostly responsible for rising wholesale prices.

In January, farm products increased 1.1 per cent, less than half December's 2.6 per cent jump but a sharp rise nonetheless. Vegetable and grain prices were up sharply.

Industrial prices rose five-tenths of a per cent last month following a three-tenths of a per cent rise in December. Fuels and other energy products declined four-tenths of a per cent in January. However, the government said energy prices lagged by one or two months.

The index for processed foods and feeds declined two-tenths of a per cent after rising 1.8 per cent in December.

The wholesale price index stood at 188.0, meaning that goods purchased for $100 in 1967 now cost $188. Over the past year wholesale prices have risen

Today's report included the Labor Department's annual revision in seasonal adjustment factors to reflect developments during 1976.

Upton grand jury no-bills hunter

By JIM STEINBERG

RANKIN - After deliberating only 15 minutes, an Upton County grand jury unanimously decided not to in-dict the San Angelo deer hunter who shot and killed Larry Darnell Ewers in an attempt to save the life of a state trooper.

The hunter saw Ewers, a Waco cook, shoot Department of Public Safety patrolman Sammy Long of McCamey Nov. 21 along U.S. 67 three miles east of Rankin, according to police accounts of the incident.

Missing from all accounts was the name of the hunter. At first, officials withheld the name to protect the dentity of the hunter as they identified the gunman who shot Long five times with his own .32 caliber pistol and then six times with Long's .357 magnum service revolver. Later, the name was withheld at the request of

Thursday, further steps were taken to see that the identity of the hunter is kept from disclosure. All transcripts relating to the case were ordered sealed by 112th District Judge Charles Sherrill of Fort Stockton, Reagan District Attorney Aubrey Edwards of Big Lake said. It was Edwards who presented the case to the grand jury.

"This will keep people from snooping around, trying to find out who the hunter is," Edwards said.

"I called every witness that I would have if the case had gone to trial. The hunter did take the stand and tell his story. As far as I'm concerned the story. As far as I'm concerned the case is closed," Edwards said.

By JUDY JOHNSTON

Imagine for a moment sitting in a beautified downtown Midland, gazing at a botanical garden and aviary encased in a geodesic dome and surrounded by flowing waterways. Impossible? It is possible, claim four Texas Tech University architecture students, who undertook the revitalization of the city's core as their thesis project.

The four young men presented the project, complete with maps, blueprints, exterior sketches and an architectural model to the Midland Chamber of Commerce Thursday in a meeting at the Midland Hilton

The plan included four sections which the students believed were necessary to the city's core area: cultural-civic, retail-wholesale, recreational and housing. Each section was connected visually by means of the waterways and tangibly by spanning walkways. Interspersed throughout the plan were beautified open spaces for pedestrian enjoyment.

The men involved in the project

were Richard Martinez, Steve Dickerson, Stan Love and Andrew

In preparing for the project, the men said they brought a class of 40 persons to Midland to conduct an extensive socio-economic and historical study of Midland. They also took into account the city's existing structures, the "Tall City" image and the wishes of the citizens whom they surveyed.

ders wanted more parking, removal or remodeling of old buildings downtown, more entertainment facilities and supportive facilities like restaurants and public transportation which was clean and efficient.

They also found that many residents wanted to retain a sense of ares and believed the area's old buildings should be restored. Another feature they found in the survey was that many young people leave Midland after finishing school and that few return, they said.

"It was just like burying a baby," said Stephen Hoback.

More recently, the Hobacks laid to rest a Great Dane named Devil. His owner-breeder was en route from California to Dallas to enter the big fella in a canine show

But Devil became deathly ill at Pecos and died in Odessa.

"It was just like burying a human," said Stephen Hoback. But the fee wasn't as steep, nor was the ceremony as elaborate. (The basic burial fee, including an endowment care fund, ranges from $45 to $167.60, and depends on the size of the coffin.) Big Devil was "the prettiest dog I've ever seen in my whole life," said H. E. Hoback.

Ingram, who is head coach of the COM Swim Team, reviewed the various programs conducted at the COM facility — adult conditioning, learn-to-swim and competitive — and cited the benefits to be derived from

He also mentioned the club's background and told of its operation and overall purpose. Staff members also were listed.

"In working with youths," Ingram said, "our goal is to have each child rise to the level of his highest potential. When a child achieves this, he truly is a winner."

of the data they gathered, he said, indicated that Midland was divided into different interest groups.

By bringing all these facilities into a central area, the students hoped to unite the city The design concept of the plan emphasized integration, he The retail section would be free-

span with non-bearing walls within, so that the interior could be rearranged to suit the tenants, Hammer said. The housing section would be composed of prefabricated units arranged to form two adjacent triangles in a way that each unit would have a view, Dickerson said. Designed to serve the whole region, the recreational facility would offer handball and squash courts, a pool, tennis courts, a playground and a volley ball court. The facility's design featured a semi-circular structure for the indoor activities, complemented by a semi-circular ring of graduated tiers containing the various outdoor courts.

In designing the civic and social area, Martinez said he considered the planned exhibit hall approved in the city's recent bond election.

The exhibit hall would be tied into a civic center and a concert hall as well as to the retail section by means of spanning walkways, Included in this section would be a day care center for mothers living and-or working in the core area and a teen center.

The plan's waterways integrated the four sections.

The flowing water also created a scenic focal point for the area, as did the two domes - one for the botanical gardens and aviary and one for a planetarium. The water would be recycled in a mechanism beneath the botanical gardens, Martinez-said.

Supplementing the structures for the four divisions were several high-rise parking facilities. The cost for this revitalization? Some $50 million, to be funded theoretically by private enterprise or by some governmental body.

Martinez said the plan would be implemented theoretically in three phases. He said the students had theorized that the first phase would cost $28 million and would generate $8.3 million per year. The second phase would cost $14 million and would generate $2.8 million per year. The third phase would cost $13 million and would generate no new revenue but would benefit from the cumulative revenue of $11 million from the other two phases.

The model and plans will be on display and rotated among the banks, Chamber of Commerce executive director Fred Tyler said. "This is a plan, an idea the students came up with. Parts of it probably will be implemented in the future," in one form or another, Tyler said. The Midland Reporter-Telegram

Gonzalez tries to fire counsel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House assassinations committee's precarious hold on life may be further threatened by a rift between the panel's chairman, Rep. Henry Gonzalez, and chief counsel Richard

A. Sprague. Gonzalez called Sprague a "prima donna" Thursday and tried to fire him for allegedly trying to "undermine my chairmanship." But Sprague, armed with a letter of support from the committee's 11 other members, said he would stay on the job because Gonzalez lacked the power to oust him. He ignored an order from Gonzalez to vacate his office "and clear the building" by 5 p.m. Thursday. The situation may remain at that stage for a while. The House is on a week's recess, with most members out of town, and the assassinations panel is not scheduled to meet until next Wednesday.

Gonzalez, a Democrat, left on Thursday to return to his San Antonio. Tex., district until Sunday evening.

The donnybrook was touched off earlier this week when Gonzalez called for a temporary cutback in the special committee's 73-member staff.

Sprague, who aroused opposition in Congress last fall by asking for a $6.5 million annual budget to investigate the slayings of John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King Jr., reportedly opposed the move.

Controversy over the committee's budget request and investigative techniques led the House to delay reviving the panel when the new Congress convened last month. Last week the House voted to revive the committee on a temporary basis until March 31 on a budget of only $84,000 a month. Gonzalez hopes to convince the House to extend the panel for a full two years after the trial period.

Gonzalez issued a press release saying the trouble started Tuesday when he and Sprague met to review the committee's budget. Gonzalez said that when Sprague asked if he still had the chairman's confidence. he replied that Sprague did not.

"He left my office obviously displeased by my response," Gonzalez said, "and since that time he has been making a consistent attempt to undermine my chairmanship and malign me personally with the members of the committee staff."

Whose jurisdiction?

Strange, indeed, is the fact that the state legislature, in its present session, is meddling in telephone rate-making.

It is strange because the legislature, at its previous session, created a Public Utility Commission to handle ratemaking and rate-making procedures of utility companies.

The case at hand is the effort by the legislature and certain state officials to outlaw directory assistance charging instituted last year by Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.

Thus, it appears that the legislature is encroaching on the authority and responsibility of the commission which it established by law to regulate telephone companies in Texas.

It is said that the legality of the legislature's proposed move was questioned at a Senate committee hearing, but that the matter was not resolved.

This has nothing to do with the right or wrong element of directory assistance charging. It boils down, rather, to which state agency now has the jurisdiction over utility rate-making. Rate-making was removed from the political arena by action of the previous legislature. Proposed legislation now would put it right back in the votegetting field.

It should be pointed out, however, that the purpose of directory assistance charging, according to the telephone company, is to reduce costs by reducing call volumes and pass costs on to those who use the service the most. Thus, directory assistance charging helps keep basic rates down, thereby benefitting a majority of the company's customers.

Opposition to DA charging is said to come largely from special interest groups and large directory assistance users.

It is noteworthy also that 95 per cent of the company's customers place less than three DA calls per month, while the customer is permitted 10 free calls.

It is reported that Garrett Morris, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, said, in testifying before the Senate Committee on Human Resources, that banning of the charge would force an increase in basic telephone rates of up to $1.50 per

But the basic question right now is whether or not the legislature should be meddling with utility rate making. We think this is something which should be left to the Public Utility Commission.

President Carter will welcome the offer by Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo to be a "vehicle for harmony" to assist the United States in resolving its lingering disputes with Mexico's Latin "brothers."

And the friction between Washington and Cuba and Panama probably will creep into the conversations when Lopez Portillo visits Mr. Carter in the capital this month.

Unlike his predecessor, former President Luis Echeverria Alvarez, Lopez Portillo, who took office Dec. 1, seems determined to restore good will between the United States and Mexico as well.

Lopez Portillo understands that decisions made in Washington often have an impact on his own nation and the countries of Central and South America. Mr. Carter similarly is aware that

The United States needs all the Mexico is attuned to the problems can get in improving and goals of Latin America.

A CHANGING WORLD Realistic approach to chemical warfare

By JOHN PINKERMAN

Recent reports that the Soviet Union is using human beings as guinea pigs to test mustard gas and other extremely toxic chemical warfare agents - with thousands of fatalities - directs new focus on an Army-Congress battle over U.S. retaliatory capabilities in gas war-

The Soviet tests and other U.S. military intelligence indicate the Russians will depend on gas - nerve gas included — as a vital weapon in

Despite this threat, Congress so far has behaved more philosophically

It has appropriated funds generously for defense against chemical agents but has balked time and time again on giving U.S. forces

Congress' attitude has been understandable - up to a point that falls short of reality. But, the Pentagon has presented a research and development program and a proved "binary system" that properly answers all fears of domestic chemical agent accidents. Even this foolproof weapons system has been rejected by some congressmen who every day become more responsive to left-wing congressional direction on chemical warfare have been swayed from time to time on what effect these weapons have on domestic environmental considerations. Lots of military gases have been stored at the Rocky Mountain Arsenal and at the Army's Dugway Chemical Warfare Proving Grounds in Utah.

In 1968 about 6,000 sheep grazing in the vicinity of Dugway died under suspicious circumstances. Nerve gas poisoning are claimed, and the Army paid indemnities even though there never was conclusive proof that this was the direct cause of the sheep

The use of defoliation and riot control disabling gas in the Vietnam War brought worldwide and U.S. leftist criticism to American military leaders.

There also have been occasional chemical agent leaks discovered at Army storage depots. There has been near panic on some occasions, always fanned by leftist propaganda, when the Army has moved tanks of chemical agents cross-country for burial and destruction at sea destruction in a manner that has done no harm to the aquatic environment.

Thus, some segments of public opinion have stressed the horrors of gas warfare and a nervous Congress has responded negatively to Pentagon requests for funds needed to keep up with the Russians in this unpleasant but vital aspect of warfare. But, is chemical warfare worse than nuclear warfare? Is it worse to kill a soldier with gas than with a flame-throwing tank? Is there something humane and acceptable about fire-bombing entire cities? Is death by shrapnel or a simple .30-caliber bullet the 'preferred' way to die? No way of war is pleasant.

Congress, if interested in U.S. survival in an increasingly hostile world, must come to grips with reality. This is particularly so in view of the development by Army scientists of the "binary system

This sophisticated weapon provides for two nontoxic materials being combined to form nerve gas - but not combined until just before the artillery shell or aerial bomb that contains them is detonated over an enemy. One component is not even loaded until just before firing. These two components could be moved separately all over the nation with no risk whatsoever. And, all of th chemical warfare ammunition that presently disturbs Congress and certain elements of the public could be destroyed.

U.S. intelligence obtained terrifying Soviet chemical warfare weapons from captured Egyptian stockpiles during the 1973 Arab-Israeli Yom Kippur War. The Soviets also have persisted with post-World War II development of the dreaded Nazi highly toxic agents tobun and sarin. The United States is doing nothing.

As unpleasant as the prospect is, Congress should be more realistic in its approach to U.S. survival Chemical warfare retaliatory capability is needed.

The binary weapons developed by the Army should get a production goahead. They provide a safe and effective way out of a national quan-

Odor of competition frightening

By JACK ANDERSON and LES

WASHINGTON - The corporate giants who dominate the billiondollar-a-year perfume industry couldn't stand the smell of a little

They quietly put the squeeze on a small businessman who succeeded in duplicating their expensive perfumes and selling them at cut-rate prices. The cosmetics tycoons pressured suppliers not to provide him with perfume and urged newspapers not to run his ads. The conspiracy against Murray Poznak can be documented directly from conversations which he secretly recorded. We have listsned to the tape recordings. The enterprising Poznak thought he had a million-dollar idea. He would duplicate the fragrances of famous perfumes and offer them to lowbudget customers.

It was all quite legal. It would also have been quite profitable if the big perfume companies had left him alone. Poznak began to advertize brazenly: "We want Chanel No 5 Customers." Then he bottled a delicate fragrance similar to Chanel No. 5 and labeled the substitute "Copy

An ounce of Chanel No. 5 costs $40, but Poznak offered the same aroma for $16. Moreover, Poznak perfumes were as fragrant and lasted as long as the famous brands. As sales began to escalate, Poznak suddenly had trouble getting supplies. Commitments were abruptly cancelled. A salesman for one large perfume maker, the Givaudan Corporation, told Poznak bluntly: "I'm sorry, but the pressure is too great, and the company does not want to supply you. Frustrated, Poznak arranged a meeting with Givaudan's president, Norman Grief, who reiterated the new policy. "I am afraid," said Grief, "that if it became known that we were supplying fragrances to your company ... it could hurt us. I have talked to two people, both presidents of large fragrances and cosmetics companies and both of them told me that it would probably hurt the relationship that we have. "Which companies were they?"

demanded Poznak. "Revion and Chanel," replied Grief. "They both were extremely concerned about the obvious impact that your business will have on He said other perfume companies, whose business was worth millions to him, had also pressured him not to supply Poznak's company. Sherrell Perfumers The aggressive Poznak, posing as a perfume supplier, called the perfumers' trade association, Fragrance Foundation. A hidden tape recorder picked up his conversation with Annette Green, a foundation official The undercover Poznak asked her whether he should fill an order for Sherrell Perfumers Green advised against it. "You're just one of a number that have called," she said, "and the general feeling is, no, we shouldn't cooperate with them." But she added cautiously: "Legally we have to be very careful. She explained how the leading perfumers felt about the sudden appearance of Copy Cat on the market. "You start selling famous fragrances for $5 or $6, copies of them I mean it's just the law of diminishing returns." Copy Cat was also frozen out of some of the nation's top newspapers and magazines. Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D.-Wis., who has been investigating the anticompetitive practices of the perfume industry, has turned the case over to the Federal Trade Commission. Meanwhile, Poznak has been put out of business, and the big companies are continuing to charge top dollar for their perfumes. The threat of Poznak's cheaper imitations has been eliminated

Yet the FTC, we have learned, has dropped the investigation. A confidential FTC memo cites an explanation from Norman Grief that he 'had not wished to be so blunt with Mr. Poznak and, therefore, had responded with the story of competitor pressure.

In other words, the FTC accepted Grief's attempt to explain away the damaging, taped statements. The FTC didn't even ask him why, if he was under no pressure, he had refused to supply Poznak. One investigator told our associate. Howie Kurtz, that he had seen "antitrust cases brought on one fraction of the evidence we have here.

So far, the Veterans Administration is building only a pilot project. But our sources say there is a good chance that the entire system will be killed The General Accounting Office found so many flaws with Target that officials quietly warned congressional aides that the project was a mess.

Will Jimmy Carter meet with novelist Solzhenitsyn?

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON - President Carter's conflicting desires to promote both detente with and dissent within the Soviet Union collide again on this question: will he fulfill his unannounced promise to meet personally with Russian exile Alexander Solzhenitsyn? To the Kremlin, novelist

Solzhenitsyn, the anti-Soviet critic now living in the U.S., is more obnoxious than scientist Andrei Sakharov, whose spirited defense by the Carter administration angered Moscow. Rather than damage detente, Mr. Carter toned down his ardor for defending Soviet dissidents. That might point the President as far away as possible from Solzhenitsyn at the moment he wants a quick arms agreement with the Kremlin. But Mr. Carter went on record favoring such a meeting in an exchange of letters with an obscure, Deep South Republican politician. Rep. Malcolm Mabry of Dublin.

Miss., a Ronald Reagan delegate at the national convention, began the correspondence shortly after the election. Still smarting over President Ford's snub of Solzhenitsyn (at the advice of the State Department), Mabry asked whether the President-elect would meet the Russian. Most politicians might have finessed this question with a form letter saying nothing - or no letter at all. But Jimmy Carter sent this handwritten note to "Cong. Malcolm Mabry" from Plains on Nov. 26: "I do intend to meet with Mr. Solzhenitsyn (no time set). Thank you. Jimmy. In the two months since then. Solzhenitsyn has not heard from Mr. Carter. Carter aides, a bit cautious after the Sakharov affair, are saying

A footnote: Ford agents worried late in the campaign that Solzhenitsyn would appear in Plains before the election to praise Mr. Carter. They were particularly nervous about contact in New York City between Solzhenitsyn and Zbigniew Brzezinski, then a Carter foreign policy adviser and now director of the National Security Council

LABOR AND TRADE The last hope of big labor for a top Carter administration official of their own choosing has hit a snag with business and farm opposition to former Rep. William Green of Pennsylvania as Special Trade Representative — the nation's top international trade negotiator.

The AFL-CIO hierarchy, disappointed on so many Carter selections, pushed hard for Oreen, who was defeated for the Senate last November. But free-trade lobbyists counter-attacked, claiming Green would too closely reflect the AFL-CIO's protectionist views.

In particular, agri-business interests who want open channels of trade were worried about Green and started a campaign for former Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman, now the head of a firm providing services for multinationals. He has the quiet support of a fellow Minnesotan — Vice President Mon-

Some signs at the White House point to a Carter finesse of the conflict, bypassing Green and Freeman for some little-known compromise. "That wouldn't surprise me a bit," one labor operative remarked. "We haven't gotten anybody else we wanted."

A footnote: The free-trade campaign against Green was intensified when the House Ways and Means Committee elected Rep. Charles Vanik of Ohio chairman of its Foreign Trade Subcommittee. Vanik was strongly backed by the AFL-CIO against a free-trader, Rep. Sam Gibbons of Florida. A TIP FOR TIP

The embarrasment of House Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill in learning from the press that President Carter's first major Massachusetts appointment was Republican Elliot Richardson will not soon be repeated

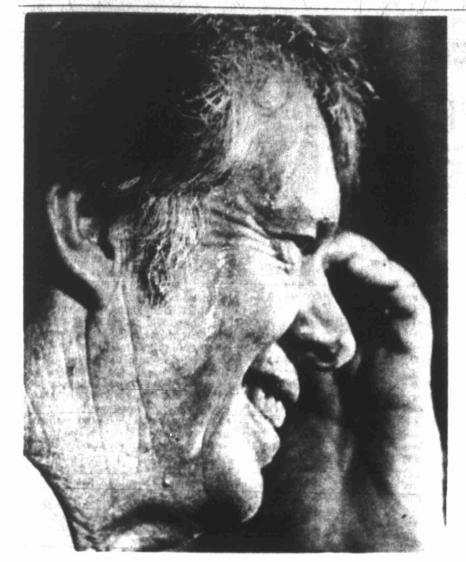

With O'Neill understandably making no effort to conceal his humiliation, two of Mr. Carter's top White House aides - Hamilton Jordan and chiefs congressional lobbyist Frank Moore - have instituted what is supposed to be an airtight fail-safe system. That system requires a four-stage series of initialed sign-offs before any major appointment can be announced: by Jordan, Moore, White House press secretary Jody Powell and the agency preparing the final nomination papers. No public announcement can be made until all four have initialed the nomination, supposedly blocking premature announcements.

In the case of Richardson (named ambassador for Law of the Sea negotiations), Secretary of State Cyrus Vance personally cleared the nomination with Mr. Carter, then announced it. With not one White House aide informed, there was no one to tip off the Speaker, or even ask his consent, before the news was published.

Tax talk trips President again

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - President Carter, who stubbed his toe twice during the election campaign with injudicious comments on tax reform, Thursday tripped on the same rock again and set aides falling over each other to clarify his remarks.

When the dust settled, it appeared the President favors converting the current $750-per-person individual tax exemption and temporary $35-perperson general tax credit into a personal tax credit of $240 or $250 a head.

By itself this proposal would mean substantial tax reductions for households with annual income below $20,000 and significant increases hundreds of dollars a year in extreme cases - for higher income families.

But a Carter tax adviser emphasized that the proposal is not intended to stand by itself and will be combined with tax rate reductions or other devices to ease the impact on upper and upper-middle income taxpayers when the President unveils his comprehensive tax overhaul plan this fall.

"This is not a Robin Hood proposal," the tax specialist, Emil M. Sunley, said. He meant the total package would not be designed to benefit the poor by soaking the rich.

The confusion started Thursday afternoon near the end of a getacquainted session Carter held with employes of the Department of Housing and Urban Development. There, a HUD civil servant asked

Carter a question about Carter's position on deductions for mortgage interest and state and local tax payments. Evidently mishearing the question, the President launched into a discussion of plans for converting the standard deduction, a device used by people who do not itemize their deductions, into a tax credit.

"Would I favor withdrawing the tax deduction and substitute tax credits?" Carter said. "Yes, I favor that move....Before the end of this year we will be ready to recommend to the Congress a comprehensive, overall tax reform proposal. Surely one of those proposals will be to give a standard credit on the income tax to be paid, and not the standard deduction.

The idea behind the change, Carter said, would be to aid lower-income people, since tax credits generally concentrate their benefits on the lower-bracket households while deductions produce a larger tax reduction in upper brackets than lower ones.

The trouble with the President's statement was that very few highincome people use the standard deduction, preferring to itemize their deductions. thus, many of Carter's listeners were confused.

That was just the beginning. A few Coasta hours later, White House Press dard deduction had been a mistake. The President had meant to talk sought about converting the individual, or 'personal," exemption into a new

But Powell did not refer to any additional proposals that would be designed to mitigate the impact of such a change on higher-income households.

"He did not make that point," Rex Granum, Powell's deputy, later explained, "simply because the kind of thing we were attempting to do today was to straighten out" the confusion over deductions for mortgage interest, the standard deduction, and the personal exemption.

As a result, Powell left the impression that Carter had in mind a plan that would boost taxes on the upper half of the nation's income distribution while reducing them on the lower half.

That suggestion, conveyed by reporters seeking more information on the plan, touched off gasps at Carter's Treasury Department, the government's main repository for tax expertise. Officials there maintained that this was not the intention at all, and scurried around to find out just what it was the President had said.

Under Carter's plan, a family of four earning $10,000 a year would get a tax reduction of about $300. Higher income families would get smaller tax cuts, until a gross income level of $20,000 to $25,000 (depending on family size and the amount of deductible expenses) was reached. After that, the tax bite would in-

A family of four earning $80,000 annually, for example, could have its taxes raised more than $600 before the offsetting tax reductions for upper income households mentioned by tax specialist Sunley.

Sunley, a former Treasury Department official, is expected to be named a deputy assistant Treasury secretary for tax policy by Carter. He is now a consultant to the Treasury.

Sunley said Carter considered proposing a combination of the personal tax credit and lowered tax rates as part of his $31.2 billion package of tax rebates, tax reductions, and spending programs to stimulate the economy. But he said it was decided that the idea would cost the Treasury too much revenue - $3 billion to $5 billion a year — to be included in the initial legislative plan.

NEW YORK (AP) - Stock prices dropped back today with two big-name issues— Eastman Kodak and International Paper-leading the retreat.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was off 6.40 at 931.52, erasing Thursday's 4.08 gain

That extended the Dow's decline since the start of the year to more than 73 points. Losers outnumbered gainers by about a 3-2 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues

Kodak shares led the active list and fell 1% to 71% on some disappointment over the size of the fourth quarter earnings gain reported by the company late Thursday. International Paper gave up 1% to 52% on published reports that analysts were lowering their appraisals of the company's prospects.

Both stocks are included in the Dow.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks was down .27 at 54.62. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index lost .33 to 112.32. Volume on the Big Board came to 9.10 million shares over the first two hours, against 9.63 million in the comparable period on Thursday. In the economic news, the government reported that wholesale prices rose 0.5 per cent and retail sales fell 2 per cent last month The decline in the retailsales figure was expected

DR. NEIL SOLOMON Belly lift formidable

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine who had a lot of skin hanging over her belly told me of an operation she had in Mexico during which they literally raised her to the ceiling. Is this possible? The reason I want to know is that I have a small pouch, but it bothers me tremendously. Do people's pouches vary that

Dear Rita: Abdomens vary from small pouches to big aprons. The apron hanging down over the genitals can be uncomfortable and make it hard to keep yourself clean. The major belly lift is the most formidable of obese operations. It may involve pulleys on the ceiling with wires lifting up the apron during surgery. The apron might weigh from 30 to 40 pounds. The patient may lose a tremendous amount of blood and may require hypotensive anesthesia. One Mexican surgeon has developed a spit he turns patients on, cutting and sewing as the patient rotates. A big apron operation lasts from two to six hours, and the patient is out of commission for about four weeks. For the first ten days after surgery, the patient will experience pain on movement and bending. By the end of the first month, though, the pain generally subsides.

The benefits range from cosmetic—looking good in a bathing suit—to doing away with a moist, smelly, discolored area under the abdominal crease. It also corrects excessive wrinkling of the belly. Hospitalization: one to two weeks. Cost: $1,000 to

Dear Dr. Solomon: For years, I've been troubled with cold sores and sores around my private parts. I've been to see many doctors and they've prescribed all kinds of medication, but nothing seems to help.

Can you offer any suggestions?—Rita K. Dear Rita: At the moment, all I can offer is hope. From your description, what you are suffering from is herpes simplex, which is a virus responsible for stubborn sores like yours, and which also causes a common type of eye infection.

There is no cure yet, but one may be in sight: Dr. E. Frank Deig and Douglas Ehresmann of the University of California found that extract of red seaweed, of all things, can stop the multiplication of this virus and reduce its spread in human cells already infected with it. They have extracted the active Substance from the seaweed, and tests on animals are now being run to determine its safety.

There is no guarantee that it will be safe for human use, and the answer to that question may be another couple of years away. But the chances are good that one day fairly soon, we'll have something to offer people with your very trying condition. (If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If

SUPERIOR, Wyo. (AP) - The "Ghost Town Gazette" doesn't pretend to be an up-to-the-minute newspaper, editor Sandra Zbegner says. But it is an ambitious undertaking in a community that hasn't had its own newspaper for the past 35 "It's something to read in the morning instead of a cereal box," Mrs. Zbegner said of the monthly newspaper she began publishing last June.

She said Superior's rebirth during the 1970s helped inspire her to launch the paper. She said Bob Marsky, mayor of this community of 550, suggested that she key the paper on his column about town govern-

Now, Mrs. Zbegner writes stories on such things as childbirth techniques and solar radiation.

The name of the newspaper comes straight from the late 1950s and 1960s when the bottom fell out of the community's coal mining economy. Union Pacific Coal Co. operated mines here to supply coal for its locomotives until the late 1940s. But when the railroad turned to diesel power for its engines, the town's only source of income evaporated. Without jobs, residents found little reason to continue living in the arid community that lies 7,100 feet above sea level in a hollow on the western edge of the Red Desert. The nearest town of any size is Rock Springs, and it is 30 miles away. So most of the residents left, seeking jobs elsewhere. Only a handful, mostly retired miners, stayed on through the 1960s. The present decade brought construction of the

Jim Bridger Power Plant, a 2,000-megawatt, coalfired facility owned by Pacific Power & Light Co. and Idaho Power Co. Construction of the mammoth power plant required a work force that numbered in the thousands. Superior, only 10 miles from the plant site, proved to be a convenient place for construction workers to live, and it had dozens of empty houses to accommodate the new residents. Mrs. Zbegner's husband is a laboratory technician for Pacific Power, and she said she was eager to try something new after finding very little to do during her first year in the rustic community. She describes the newspaper as a "hand-tomouth" operation. But she said the operation is meeting expenses, despite the lack of financial backers. Mrs. Zbegner said most of those who buy the newspaper are out-of-state subscribers who used to live here. The rest of the papers go to subscribers in Superior, Green River, Rock Springs, Casper and

She said that for 15 cents an issue subscribers get eight pages of in-depth articles, human interest stories, recipes, outdoor living tips and, of course, news about Superior.

"I want it to be more than just a Superior newspaper," she said. She said she had enlisted the aid of about five parttime reporters to help her gather news and human in-

Now, she has set her sights on publishing the paper twice a month, and she believes an expected influx of new residents will support such a move.

"Things are starting to happen in Superior now," Mrs. Zbegner said.

WASHINGTON - Atty. Gen. Griffin B. Bell Thursday proposed vastly expanding the powers of U.S. magistrates, turning them into a kind of mini-district judges to head off an impending "breakdown" in the overloaded federal court system.

"We're going to have to reconstitute the federal court system," Bell told a press conference. "The whole federal court system is heading for a

"I know something about that," added Bell, who stepped down last March as a federal appellate judge after nearly 15 years service.

Under Bell's proposal, magistrates who presently are restricted largely to signing search and arrest warrants and conducting bail hearings, ar-raignments, and other low-level pro-ceedings in criminal cases, would be upgraded into "a separate tier" of the judicial system with "greatly expand-

The number of federal magistrates would have to be increased well beyond the 150 full time and 306 part-time magistrates currently serving.

Bell, holding his first question-and-answer session with reporters who regularly cover his department, set a 60-day limit for a decision on the longpending investigation of FBI breakins, wiretaps and mail openings

He said he had been looking into that probe by the department's civil rights division, adding that he thought "it has gone on too long already."

"I'm pressing to bring it to a conclusion," he said. "If we haven't heard something in 50 days. I'm going to be subject to Senate confirmation, magistrates are appointed by federal district judges and subject to no confirmation process. Bell said he foresaw no change in the selection process through their powers would be much broader.

"I've never been able to sell this through the judiciary," he said, refer-ring to earlier efforts he made to expand powers of magistrates. "But I'm not in the judicial branch anymore.'

Under Bell's magistrate proposal, which he is expected to elaborate on in a speech Tuesday in San Francisco, a magistrate's decision could be appealed only to a district court. In order to challenge the decision beyond the district court, a party would have to persuade a federal appeals court to hear the case - similar to most cases that win review by the Supreme Court. Bell noted this is currently the system for bankruptcy

The 150 full time magistrates currently on duty each earn $39,600 a year. The salaries of the nation's 306 part-time magistrates range from $696 a year to $19,800 annually, depending on their workload. Some 18 additional magistrates double as bankruptcy judges or court clerks and have combination salaries not exceeding $39,000, according to the Justice Department.

Bell said he had instructed Peter Bensinger, administrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration, to consider the attorney general's earlier suggestion that DEA's major functions be merged into the FBI. "I want him to tell me why we shouldn't do this," Bell said.

He said DEA is "just a government agency. No government agency has a vested right" to exist.

WASHINGTON — General Services Administrator Jack M. Eckerd, a Republican who has been asked to remain in the administration by President Carter, is considering resigning because of a dispute with the White House over filling the No. 2 job in the agency, sources said Thursday night.

Eckerd is resisting pressure from the White House to name Robert T. Griffin, a long-time friend of House Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill (D-Mass.). to the post of deputy administrator.

Griffin, a veteran GSA employe, is currently special assistant for coordination of the John F. Kennedy Library.

A source familiar with the dispute said Eckerd apparently views it as a test of a pledge he received from the President last Friday that he would be free to choose his own top deputies.

Eckerd's choice for the job reportedly is the GSA's acting deputy director, Wallace H. Robinson Jr., a former Marine Corps general who headed the Defense Supply Agency.

'Network,' 'Rocky' lead in Oscar nominations

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sylvester Stallone once had a script that no one would buy as long as he was part of the deal. Now "Rocky" — with Stallone very much in it — has been nominated for 10 Academy Awards, including best picture, best screenplay and best actor.

The Motion Picture Academy put sleeper "Rocky" and "Network, the slashing saga of the television industry, atop the heap of 1976 movies Thursday, with 10 nominations each.

"Rocky," the story of a down-andout boxer's grab for the top, also won nominations for best supporting actress, directing, editing, best original song, best sound work and two nominations for best supporting

"Network's" Peter Finch, who died Jan. 14 of a heart attack, was nominated for an Oscar as best actor for his portrayal as a mad newscaster

Obasanjo says U.S. role needed for peace

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Nigeria's strongman, Lt. Gen. Obusegan Obasanjo, says heavy pressure by the United States on the white Rhodesian regime is the only way to bring a peaceful transition to black rule.

Obasanjo made the statement at a news conference Thursday following a three-hour meeting with touring Ambassador Andrew Young. Young leaves for London today.

winding up a 10-day visit to Tanzania, Kenya and Nigeria, where he talked with leaders from 16 African nations.

Obasanjo pointed out that Britain and the African states had been unable to wrest a commitment to majority rule from Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith until Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger intervened last summer.

"So it stands to reason that if we are to achieve any success in negotiating and solving our problems in Zimbabwe (Rhodesia), the United States must be heavily involved," Obasanjo

Obasanjo said that if the United States joined in a massive economic and diplomatic offensive against Rhodesia, "there is no doubt that with African leaders and African governments giving backing and support to Zimbabwe, we can jointly achieve our objectives." He also expressed concern that Rhodesia and South-West Africa, or Namibia, might be destroyed by civil war unless black nationalists achieve peaceful settlements there. South-West Africa is governed by South Africa under an old League of Nations mandate in defiance of U.N. resolutions calling for independence. The Carter administration opened a drive in Congress Thursday to repeal the 1971 Byrd Amendment, which allows American companies to import Rhodesian chrome in violation of United Nations sanctions. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance told the Senate subcommittee on African affairs the amendment should be repealed "as rapidly as possible" to signal America'e commitment to majority rule in southern Africa.

Young, the first black American ambassador to the United Nations, said he and Obasanjo also discussed "appropriate pressures" on South Africa to give independence to South-West Africa and relax its apartheid policy of racial segregation.

However, Young said the Nigerian leader was realistic about measures the United States could be expected to take against South Africa.

Son of 'Roots' author army teacher

FT. DIX, N.J. (AP) - S. Sgt. William Alexnder Haley teaches young soldiers the history of minority groups, but he refuses to use his father's famous book.

"Roots' leaves me with personal feelings that deal with my family. I wouldn't want to convey these feelings in class," the son of Alex Haley said in an interview Thursday. Still, for William Haley there's no escaping the impact of "Roots," which as the nation's best-selling book and history's most-watched television program traced the Haley family tree back to pre-slavery days in Africa.

"I walk down the hall and I hear people saying, 'That's the son of Roots.' and I just laugh," Haley said.

"They just can't believe that the author of 'Roots' has a son who has chosen the Army as a career," said Haley, 31, whose classes are conducted at the military base here.

He said he has received over 200 phone calls and a dozen letters from people reacting to the book. Some expressed concern that it might be inflammatory, he said. But "Dad's intention was not to document the history of America's blacks because they have been an oppressed minority." Haley said. "He was writing an American story about our family roots. "It wasn't just for black people. Whites can look at it and say 'Yeah, I can identify," young Haley said.

"If 'Roots' had been out in the 60s and early '70s, when we were having a lot of trouble, it might have fanned the fires," he said, adding that he thinks Americans since have grown more tolerant. Haley, who has been in the Army snce he was 18, said it was not until he was sent to Vietnam in 1969-70 that he really got to know his father, who himself spent 20 years in the Coast

"I think we became closer than ever before. He shared my anxieties and wrote long, detailed letters which made me fully aware that he was working steadily on 'Roots,' the

Eskimo couple beat drinking problem

NOME, Alaska (AP) — Lincoln and Emily Milligrock are in their mid-40s, own a two-bedroom home and a late-model pickup truck, have reasonably good health and take a two-week annual

Statistically, they come close to being average Except that they are Eskimos who beat the bottle after 2 years of alcoholism.

They kicked the habit in a town where more than 40 per cent of their relatives, friends and neighbors have serious drinking problems, where there is no drug or alcoholism treatment center, and where drinking forms the basis of the only social activity outside the churches and the television set.

Along the way they lost one of their six children to crib death. Another son was found dead at the age of 22 floating in Fairbanks' Chena River for reasons which still have not been determined.

A daughter is mentally retarded and lives with foster parents in Anchorage, and the Milligrocks spend their vacation visiting her.

During those two fuzzy decades when they lived from one bottle to the next they hocked several households' worth of furniture, a piece at a time, to pay for liquor. Often Emily's mother kept them alive by spoon-feeding them soup as they lay abed too hung-over and sick to fend for themselves. Lincoln spent days in jail sleeping it off.

'And then I woke up one day after a two-week bout where I couldn't remember anything, and I found that everything in the house was gone — the new washing machine, all the kitchen appliances, the ivory-carving tools we needed to earn a living, everything we had," Mrs. Milligrock remembers.

"I started drinking to keep Lincoln company. That day we stopped together, and now we stay sober to help each other. It has been the hardest thing we have ever had to do, and the thing we are proudest Fluent in English, the Milligrocks speak their Yupik Eskimo language at home and prefer walrus and seal meat to beefsteak and bacon.

They married in their teens like most of their contemporaries and find themselves in the generation caught between the old village ways of their ancestors and the new ways of the white men who founded this ramshackle town during the turn of the century gold rush.

Their children cannot speak Eskimo and do not know how to carve or sail the walrus-hide skinboats which dominate Lincoln's life.

Most of their friends still founder in the crosscurrents of the changing culture which almost drowned the Milligrocks. Because they have been on the wagon for seven years, they are viewed with contempt by many companions of their youth who came from the same roots and now find themselves strangled by them.

The Milligrock home is warm and comfortable in this treeless land trapped seven months a year in winter's dark, subzero grip. A modern couch and color television set share places of honor with a living room workbench stacked with prized tusks and an intricate array of carving tools.

A handsome handmade table and the bounty spread atop it is testimony to the family's subsistence lifestyle in a town where milk is $2.35 a halfgallon and grapefruit $1 apiece.

An ever-present dish of homemade cranberry jam is a small part of the results of Emily's summer of berrypicking along the tundra hills ringing Nome. Home-baked bread is served daily. Wild game is a staple, although dwindling herds and tougher government restrictions are making caribou and reindeer more of a treat than an everyday meal.

Although they do not have indoor plumbing, the Milligrocks have electricity and a large freezer is stocked with chunks of muktuk and blubber. Every summer Lincoln and his skinboat crew of nine harvest seal and walrus among the Bering Sea iceflows, sometimes as far as 50 miles west of the safety of Nome's windswept shore.

Kissinger sued by journalists

WASHINGTON (AP) —
The Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press has filed a federal suit to try to force former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to make available transcripts of telephone conversations with foreign officials, reporters and others.

Joining the committee were the American Historical Association, the American Political Science Association and eight individual historians, political scientists and journalists. The suit was filed in U.S. District Court earlier this week.

Kissinger, maintaining the transcripts are his personal property, intends to turn them over to the Library of Congress under a stipulation that he will control access to the documents for 25 years.

Involved are eight year's of verbatim telephone transcripts of conversations he had from his offices while secretary of State and director of the National Security Council.

The suit maintains the transcripts are State Department property and should be available under the Freedom of Information Act to historians, journalists and others seeking to report on and analyze actions of the Nixon and Ford administrations.

FPC says nation in peril of running out of gas

By ROBERT GILLETTE The Los Angeles Times

In December, 1974, as the nation's fourth consecutive winter gas shortage was starting to pinch industries in the East and Midwest, the Federal Power Commission issued a staff report with a gloomy message: The United States might literally be running out of natural gas.

The report, entitled "A Realistic View of U.S. Natural Gas Supplies," suggested that the underlying pro-blem was not a failure by industry to search hard enough for new supplies.
Rather, it said, the nation may be reaching the physicial limits of its recoverable natural gas resources.

"Energy policy makers would be ell advised," the FPC's Bureau of Natural Gas said in its 21-page analysis, "to develop plans and policies keyed to the possibility that the nation may indeed be experiencing the early effects of a resource being pushed toward exhaustion."

Not only were gas shortages worsening with little hope of quick relief, but the nation's ability to cope with shortages was being undermined by rapidly rising prices for oil and other alternative fuels. And for the first time, U.S. natural gas production had declined from the previous year.

"Now." said the report, "an unavoidable and rather rapid decrease in natural gas production will intensify an already serious situa-tion in the decade ahead."

Like so many other somber warnings about dwindling gas supplies, this one went largely unnoticed. Two years later, in the throes of a bitter winter that has amplified a perennial gas shortage to disastrous proportions, the search is on again for explanations.

While some consumer critics still suspect the gas industry is hoarding reserves until the federal government lifts price controls on interstate natural gas, industry spokesmen contend that vast amounts of natural gas remain to be discovered - but that higher prices are needed to pay for deeper and more expensive drilling. Some experts, however, are convinced that more drilling (financed by higher prices) is not in fact likely to produce enough new gas to keep up

Among skeptics is Gordon K. Zareski, chief of planning and development at the FPC's Bureau of Natural Gas. A principal author of the 1974 report, Zareski said in a telephone interview that he believes its main conclusion - that U.S. gas production may have begun an irreversible decline - is as valid today as it was two years ago.

"The producers are making a simplified argument — just raise the prices and everything will be all right. It's nonsense," Zareski said-

"Anybody who says price increasea s are going to find new reserves has to go through a little logical sequence. Price increases will increase the drilling. But that's already been done and reserves have not increased commensurately. We're not finding large fields as frequently as in the past. And production is still declining.

Zareski notes that the price of natural gas has risen steadily in recent years, both for intrastate supplies and for the interstate gas that the Federal Power Commission

As prices have risen, successful exploratory drilling has soared, almost doubling in a five-year period from 22.6 million feet in 1971 to 41.9 million For all of this drilling, however, the resulting new reserves reported each year by the American Gas Assn. have remained consistently below annual U.S. consumption, and actually declined from 10 trillion cubic feet of gas found in 1971 to 9.2 trillion in 1975. In part, these figures reflect the fact that petroleum companies must drill deeper and deeper each year to find the same amount of new gas. Wells three miles deep and more are increasingly common in older producing basins in Texas and Oklahoma.

Having to drill deeper does not necessarily mean the nation is drawing on the dregs of its natural gas supplies. But Zareski and a number of resource geoscientists point to a second trend that suggests the volume of gas left to be found is not as vast as many producers assume.

According to the American Assn. of Petroleum Geologists, the number of 'significant" new gas fields found in the United States each year reached a peak in 1957 at 99, declined to a low of 40 in 1968 anand by 1969 had made only a small recovery to 44. Significantly, this dropoff took place during a period of rapid technological advancement in oil and gas exploration.

(The association defines a significant field as one with more than 6 billion cubic feet of gas. Because six years of development history is needed to take the measure of a new field, data beyond 1969 is not yet available.)

The association's figures also show that the number of large new fields has been dropping as a percentage of all newly discovered fields. As the FPC's 1974 report noted, 'Presumably the oil companies are drilling their best prospects but are finding fewer gas deposits of significant size."

This is important, Zareski said, because the gas industry is built on large fields. Out of 6,000 producing gas fields in the United States, the 100 largest contain half the nation's reserves and account for half its annual production.

Most of these large fields were opened in the 1940s, '50s, and early '60s. As they have aged, U.S. gas production peaked at 23 trillion cubic feet in 1974 and is down now to about 19 trillion cubic feet. A similar pattern of increased drilling and declining production has occurred in the oil in-

In its 1974 report, the FPC Bureau of Natural Gas said all of this pointed to the possibility that the U.S. Geological Survey (USGS), the government's chief mapper and

Energy policy planned by Louisiana governor

DALLAS (AP) - Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards says he will outline his plan for a national energy policy to national energy administrator James Schlesinger today in Washington.

Edwards addressed a meeting of oil and gas operators and lawyers in Dallas Thursday and called for total deregulation of both industries. He said he wished the current energy crunch were contrived. "If it were, it would be a hell of a lot easier to solve," Edwards said. The governor said the fuel crisis belan in 1954 when the Supreme Court gave the Federal Power Commission authority to regulate the price of natural gas at the wellhead. "All the things were predicted would happen in fact did happen."

Edwards said. Besides total deregulation, Edwards called for:

-A nationally organized and enforced energy conservation program.

—Removel of all environmental restrictions on the production,

Gas pricing under fire

WASHINGTON — Rep. Clifford Allen, D-Tenn., proposed Wednesday to end the price difference to consumers between natural gas in interstate commerce and that which is used in the same state it is produced. Allen said his bill would end discrimination against states that rely on natural gas from other states. Under the present system, intrastate prices are unregulated by the federal government and generally are higher than the federally regulated interstate natural gas. The result is that nonproducing states have lower prices and shorter supplies. We cannot permit this vital resource to remain half regulated and half unregulated," he told a news

He said the bill was prompted by the serious shortages of natural gas in some parts of the country this winter.

Allen's bill also would establish penalties of up to $500,000 and five years imprisonment for those found guilty of arbitrary withholding of natural gas from the market. It also would give the President power to seize such natural gas.

Injunctions are sought

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Court injunctions have been sought against 13 small, out-ofstate oil and gas firms for allegedly selling their securities in California without qualifying them under the state corporations code.

In a suit was filed Wednesday by Deputy Atty. Gen. Raymond B. Jue, the state asked that salesof the securities be ordered halted until the firms comply with California law. Jue said five similar court actions were filed in San Francisco. Named in the suits were Midtex Petroleum Inc., Investors Drilling Ventures Inc., Daltex Petroleum Corp., Columbia Petroleum Corp and Earth Energies Inc.

Also, Triton Petroleum Inc., Olympic Petroleum Corp., Shelter Funds Inc., U.S. Energy Inc., Ohio Industrial Energy Inc., Mid-West Energy Inc., Noble Petroleum Corp., and John E. Loughran.

Jue said the securities were certificates of interest or participation in oil, gas or mining titles or leases.

Lo-Vaca gas curtailed

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - LoVaca Gathering Co. clamped a natural gas curtailment on the City of Austin and the Lower Colorado River Authority late Wednesday as pressure began dropping in Lo-Vaca's pipelines.

A company spokesman denied it was because Lo-Vaca was making emergency gas sales to the Northeast.

Austin electric utility director R. L. Hancock said the cutbacks were 'suspicious" and pledged that he would find the exact cause if possible

Hancock said Lo-Vaca began a 30 per cent curtailment of gas to Austin's electric generators at 5 p.m. Wednesday, blaming it on "loss of spot gas and declining line pressure." The LCRA was placed under a 15 per cent curtailment. Lo-Vaca is transporting 130 million cubic feet of gas daily for a gas pipeline serving the Philadelphia area but the company maintains the gas is not fuel that would normally be recommended old to Texas consumere.

The curtailments Wednesday were the first by Lo-Vaca for reasons other than extreme cold or hot weather when consumers' consumption increased because of heating or air

Despite a promise of immunity from prosecution, Kiritsis, 44, was seized Thursday night after he freed mortgage company executive Richard O. Hall from a third-story apartment he had fooled police into thinking was rigged with dynamite.

Kiritsis, enraged because he felt Hall's company swindled him in a property deal, was held on $250,000 bond awaiting arraignment on state kidnaping charges.

Hall, 42-year-old father of four, was taken out by stretcher, checked briefly at a hospital and returned to his family. Authorities said his only physical scars from the three-day, twonight ordeal were minor abrasions on his neck and wrists.

Police, who had waited frustrated outside the building since the siege began Tuesday, entered Kiritsis' apartment to discover that what he had claimed was 100 pounds of dynamite wired to explode was nothing more than a maze of string. weighted to break two glass wine jugs - possibly filled with gasoline placed near a single burning candle.

Heating oil controls expected

By TOMAS O'TOOLE The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The Carter Administration plans to put kerosene and home heating oil back under the price controls removed from those fuels by former President Ford last

The Federal Energy Administration will put kerosene and heating oil under price controls as soon as both fuels break through what the FEA calls the "trigger price," which they are close to doing now in the Northeast and in the North Central states of Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota.

"My predecessor, Frank Zarb, committed this energy to a return of price controls if heating oil went back through the trigger price," Federal Energy Administrator John F. O'Leary said Thursday in a telephone interview. "Zarb made that committment as price for getting decontrol through Congress and I plan to honor that committment.'

About 210 million gallons of heating oil and 8.4 million gallons of kerosene - more than one-fourth the oil burned in the United States this winter — are sold every day for heating purposes.

the "trigger price" varies from region to region. It is 40 cents a gallon in the North Central states and 43.5 cents a gallon in the Northeast. Heating oil this week is selling for 39.9 cents a gallon in the North Central states and 43.2 cents a gallon in the Northeast.

Kerosene and heating oil prices have risen sharply in both regions the last four weeks, spurred by the relentless cold weather and the shortage of natural gas heat. Heating oil prices have been raised by distributors three-tenths of a penny a gallon every week in the last four weeks in ail northeastern states and in the three North Central states.

The "trigger price" was agreed on by the FEA last July when Congress removed controls from heating oil and kerosene. At that time, prices of both products were about 2 cents a gallon below the agreed trigger price, which was set as an index for the FEA to keep a watch on prices.

In an action related to price controls, the FEA Thursday ruled that fuel oil deadlers east of the Rocky Mountains could apply for "entitlements" worth 5 cents a gallon for imported kerosene and heating oil. The entitlements allow fuel oil dealers a 5-cent a gallon discount on imported oil that now costs about 5 cents a gallon more than domestic heating

The discount comes n the form of a rebate paid out of a money pool set up by all major oil companies in the United States. The pool is paid for by companies that own domestic oil supplies and is drawn on by those with little or no domestic oil.

The action taken Thursday by the FEA covers only states east of the Rockies, where the weahter has been coldest and demand for heating oil the highest. January's cold snap drained domestic heating oil stocks by more than 15 per cent below what they were last January. The last week of January saw heating oil stocks srop 420 million gallons.

There is no shortage of foreign heating oil, especially in the Caribbean where four huge refineries make products from oil they import from all over the world. Venezuela also operates a huge refinery that has produced a surplus of heating oil.

Thursday's entitlements move was an "emergency" action by the FEA that will last only through the end of March, the remainder of the heating season. It was taken primarily to rebuild oil stocks and avoid any winter shortages, but it was also an effort to put a brake on heating oil prices, an FEA source said.

Industry sources say the entitlements action will put some curb on prices but not enough to freeze them. They say the natural gas shortage has triggered such a demand for heating oil that the price is bound to rise through the rest of the winter.

The FEA reported Thursday that the cold weather and higher fuel prices may add almost $100 to the average homeowner's heating bill, boosting it to $290. If the cold weather comes back, the FEA said, Americans heating with gas, oil and electricity will pay $6 billion more than the $13.2 billion they paid for heat last winter.

At the White House, Press Secretary Jody Powell strongly suggested that President Carter will propose measures to soften the impact of higher heating bills on low-income families. Powell said that Health. Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano is studying how best to provide relief to those who

"It is not a simple matter," Powell said, to devise "an equitable and efficient manner to get the money to people who need it that avoids portions of it going to people who are not in

On Capitol Hill, a private, nonprofit organization to promote energy conservation was announced by Sens. Charles H. Percy (R-Ill.) and Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn.). The organization is called "Alliance to Save Energy" with former President Ford and Vice President Mondale as honorary co-chairmen.

Percy said the organization hopes to operae on a $2 million-a-year budget, funded by contributions. The money will be spent to promote con-

'Open doors' in D·C· mostly just symbolic

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter and his attorney general threw open the front doors at the Justice Department Jan. 26. Both called the act symbolic. But it triggered a small public embarrassment.

Carter said it showed the openness of his new administration - its responsiveness to average, everyday citizens denied access to government since those doors were locked during antiwar demonstrations in the early 1970s.

But the next day, Thursday, Jan. 27 Frank Warner, an average, everyday citizen of Washington, tried to act on Carter's words "I symbolcally walked through those doors," he wrote in a letter published by The Washington Post, and was symbolically thrown out."

Therein lies the r sk of government by gesture. Carter, like John Kennedy,

Ford gives Bob Hope TV award

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Former President Gerald R. Ford presented Bob Hope with the award for favorite male television entertainer Thursday night in the nationally televised "People's Choice" show.

The third annual awards, which the CBS network said are based partly on polls and votes by 10,000 viewers, also selected Carol Burnett as favorite female entertainer. Ford, who recently moved to the desert resort of Palm Springs where he is playing in Hope's golf tournament, flew in for the two-hour show.

Also nominated for the male favorite were singer John Denver and Johnny Carson, but the star of the NBC "Tonight" show refused to take part, furnish clips or accept an award. Carson said in rejecting the show last week, "We in the entertainment industry honor ourselves too frequently. He added, "Commercially sponsored popularity contests among performers are designed primarily as entertainment for the television audience and to gather ratings. John Wayne and Barbra Streisand were named favorite actor and actress, "Happy Days" was cited as favorite television comedy show, "Starsky and Hutch" as the favorite television drama and "The Carol Burnett Show" was picked as the favorite

CHICAGO (AP) - Marijuana was found in four hand-rolled cigarettes allegedly found in the bag of a motorman whose elevated tran crashed last week and killed 11 persons, police say. First Deputy Police Supt. Michael Spiotto said Thursday that laboratory tests proved the cigarettes contained marijuana, but added it would be "very tricky" to proge in court that the cigarettes belonged to the motorman because police lost track of them

Spiotto said the department had no plans to charge the motorman, Stephen Martin, with possession of Earlier, tests showed that a residue found in the bag was marijuana. The residue was tested after the cigarettes were reported missing on Monday. They were found on Thursday, and police said they had been placed mistakenly in an attache case taken from the debris of the wreck in which some 200 persons were injured last Friday.

JERUSALEM - Leaders of Arab countries on Israel's borders will now recognize Israel's right to exist — a major concession and a move toward peace in the Middle East, United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim told Israeli officials

Waldheim said Arab heads of state with whom he spoke on his current 10-day, six-nation Middle East tour said they are now willing to offer de facto acceptance of the state of Israel as part of a modified plan for a Palestinian "entity."

He said Yasser Arafat, head of the Palestinian Liberation Organization, had told him he would agree to an "independent" Palestinian state and, no longer demand the destruction of

Bits and pieces of the Arab peace offer had surfaced earlier. But this is the first time that such proposals have been offered top Israeli leaders by Arab heads of state through a highlevel mediary such as Waldheim.

"There is nothing here we haven't heard before," an Israeli foreign office spokesman said. But, he said, the level on which the offers were passed was something new. So, he said, was the fact that "the Arab positions are more coordinated now than in the past."

It was believed Waldheim told Israeli officials that Arab leaders feel they have made concessions which should open the door to a renewal of peace negotiations — and that their peace offers have "put the ball in the Israeli court.

But an Israeli spokesman said any Arab offers were irrelevant because the PLO covenant calls for Israel's destruction, and that position has not been changed.

Despite Israeli protests that Waldheim had offered nothing new, the effect apparently was another score in favor of the Arab peace of-fensive — with the Arabs offering concessions and the Israelis

Foreign Minister Yigal Allon said earlier this week that "Israel has no intention of giving the United Nations any role in peace negotiations in this area." One paper here said Waldheim "must not assume that his present exertions will be considered by Israel as anything but harmful," and another suggested that top officials snub him. Waldheim arrived at Jerusalem Airport Thursday morning in a U.N. executive jet from Jordan for a brief but proper greeting by Allon. The tall, slim Austrian lost no time in telling waiting newsmen he came not as a mediator but "as secretary general of the United Nations."

He later repeated the same thing to top Israeli officials, including Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, briefing them on impressions received in talks with Arab leaders in Jordan, Syria, Lebanon, Saudi Arabia and Egypt. Waldheim told the Israelis:

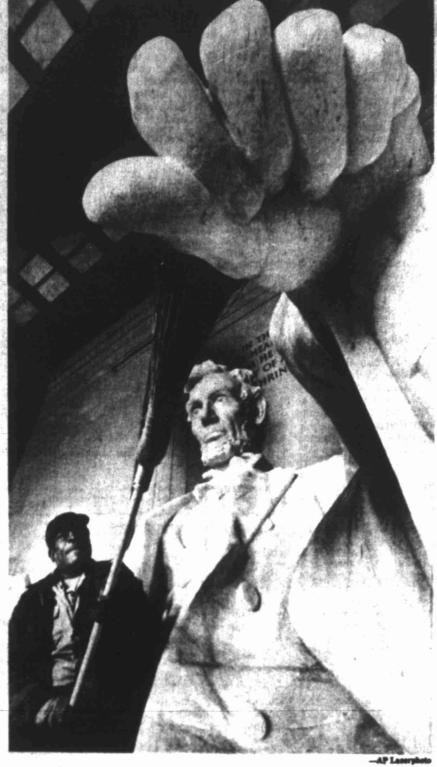

-All the Arab leaders agree that the PLO is the spokesman for the

—The leaders no longer demand a "secular" Palestinian state which would require the end of Israel as a nation. Instead they now accept the idea of a "small Palestinian entity" with links with Jordan. It presumably would be the West Bank of the Jordan River, taken from Jordan by Israel in 1967, and the previously Egyptian Gaza Strip.

-And, because of their new "flexibility," the Arab leaders feel this is an excellent time to press for Waldheim spoke to Arafat three hours Saturday night in Damascus. What Waldheim told the Israelis suggests that even Arafat now speaks of an "independent" Palestinian state, existing not over the ruins of Israel but adjacent to it.

Waldheim leaves Friday for Cairo, where he said he would acquaint Sadat with the Israel response.

Mrs. Romeike said during the first few years the FBI was very diligent. "They came to our house regularly. They went to my daughter's office. Then the visits stopped and the agents would only telephone us now and then asking if we had heard from Sidney. Of course, we said we hadn't."

Mrs. Romeike, a piano teacher, said she was not criticized nor harassed by those who supported the war although "There were many persons, including some I work with, who never knew Sidney had evaded the draft. I didn't talk to them about it." It is doubtful, she said, if her son

Progress cited in cleaning water

WASHINGTON (AP) — It probably will take 15 years and $96 billion to clean up waste from municipal water treatment plants, the government says, but much progress has been made.

"We have made very genuine progress toward clean water in this country," said John R. Quarles Jr., deputy administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. "Fish are returning to streams. The steach of water has been abated. Rivers and beaches that were closed to swimming have been reopened. Progress is being made in the fight against water pollution."

Quarles made public Thursday a report his agency sent to Congress revising substantially downward an estimate made in 1974 that it would cost $151 billion to achieve reasonably clean water.

He said the new estimate is based on more sophisticated estimates than the ones available earlier when the nation was just becoming conscious of the water pollution problem.

In the meantime, the agency says, about $28 billion has been committed to construction by federal, state and local sources, meaning the total bill will be about

South Dakota has fewest doctors

EDITOR'S NOTE — Many American doctors have stopped mak-ing house calls, the better to serve their large practices. But in rural America doctors have to make "town calls" if the sick are to be treated.

By PHYLLIS MENSING

MURDO, S.D. (AP) — South Dakotans are generally healthy, and some folks might say that's because they can't afford to get sick. Doctors are few and far between.

Tom Ingalls remembers years ago when his toe was chopped off by a spade. He was rescued by an old lady with a sewing basket.

"We didn't have a doctor in town," Ingalls says, "so she just sewed it

Ingalls is now a newspaper editor in Murdo. The closest doctor is 35 miles away. Many of the town's medical problems go to Marilyn Seymour, a Physician's Assistant or PA who lives in Murdo. Patients seriously ill are taken to a doctor by road or air, or they just wait for Dr. Robert Hayes, the PA supervisor who visits Murdo once a week

Murdo reflects the state of rural medicine in many areas across the country. A nearby family doctor just doesn't exist for thousands who are spread across the prairies and mountains in isolated towns.

South Dakota has fewer doctors per population than any other state — 620 for its 68,000 people. More than 70 per cent of the 500 in private practice are located in the state's 10 largest cities. So South Dakotans are used to doing for themselves.

Some towns are just too small to support a doctor.

"We've had doctors come from back east and they were interested."
Ingalls said. "The problem is with wives not wanting to live in the area." People in towns like Murdo, with a population of 900, depend on am-bulance services manned by trained local volunteers, citizens band radios or airplanes piloted by local ranchers. "My boy wrecked his motorcycle," Ingalls said. "The Physicians' Assistant cleaned him up, put a bandage on and said, 'take him to Kadoka' (40 miles away)." But when it came to getting his wisdom teeth pulled, Ingalls had the dentist in Mitchell, about 150 miles away, show him how to take out the stitches so he wouldn't have to make another long trip.

For Madalyn Winner, the trip to the doctor was too long.

Mrs. Winner, a pharmacist in Buffalo, a town of about 500 in the northwest corner of the state, delivered her second child in the car before her husband could complete the 70- mile drive to Belle Fourche.

"When the next child came along, he said, 'not again.' So I went to Belle Fourche a month early and stayed there until the baby was born," she

For many rural areas, physician extenders are the main hope for regular health care. About 40 extenders, including PAs and nurse-practitioners, work in South Dakota with routine or minor health problems and refer cases to supervising documents. and refer cases to supervising doc-

"I don't think it's a reasonable expectation to get a resident physician in Buffalo," said Werner Studar, the PA there. "There's just not the pa-tient load here. I think these satellite clinics are the answer."

Studar works out of a private clinic in Sturgis, about 100 miles away. The clinic has used a federal grant to send PAs to rural areas under doctors'

Dr. Hayes pioneered the same type of program using state money. He says he got 56 applications from all over the country for eight extender positions.

The extenders go through a year of training at one of 50 training stations in the country. The American Medical Association says they are working out well in most areas. But they aren't viewed as the total answer to doctor shortages.

"When they're out there alone, it doesn't look like it's going to be economically feasible," said Dr. Robert Eelkema of the University of North Dakota's Department of Community Medicine. "But a doctor is more likely to come if he's got some help, and a doctor's more likely to stay if he's got some help," he added.

"And not many PAs have the funds and the patience to stay in a small town. You're really out there alone."

"I think what we have to emphasize is groups of doctors practicing in small towns that can support a doctor. If they're willing to support satellite clinics and send out doctors periodically, at least they're pro-viding services that weren't provided

The dean of South Dakota's threeyear-old medical school, Karl Wegner, hopes the school eventually will bring more medical resources to the state and that its emphasis on family practice medicine will encourage them to stay.

Dr. Hayes said that if the money is available to pay for them, there are doctors who want the challenge and freedom South Dakota offers.

Purple-tag cowbirds peck hard

HOUSTON (AP) - Apparently there are two kinds of cowbirds - the kind that get along with humans and the kind that have been tabbed Purple People Peckers.

The Rice University biology department, as part of its continuing research on the winter colony of campus cowbirds, has banded a number of the black birds with purple or white streamers.

Aggressive birds - judged by how hard they peck the hands of banders - are given purple streamers. Docile birds get whitestreamers.

The birds were tagged to test a theory, according to Hedi Good, a graduate biology student. The theory is that the aggressive birds range out to rural fields daily to feed while the docile ones may dine at bird feeders around urban homes.

Tax talk trips President again

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — President Carter, who stubbed his toe twice during the election campaign with injudicious comments on tax reform, Thursday tripped on the same rock again and set aides falling over each other to clarify his remarks.

when the dust settled, it appeared the President favors converting the current $750-per-person individual tax exemption and temporary $35-per-person general tax credit into a personal tax credit of $240 or $250 a head.

By itself this proposal would mean substantial tax reductions for households with annual income below $20,000 and significant increases — hundreds of dollars a year in extreme cases - for higher income families.

But a Carter tax adviser emphasized that the proposal is not intended to stand by itself and will be combined with tax rate reductions or other devices to ease the impact on upper and upper-middle income taxpayers when the President unveils his comprehensive tax overhaul plan this fall.

"This is not a Robin Hood proposal," the tax specialist, Emil M. Sunley, said. He meant the total package would not be designed to benefit the poor by soaking the rich. The confusion started Thursday afternoon near the end of a get-acquainted session Carter held with employes of the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

There, a HUD civil servant asked

Carter a question about Carter's position on deductions for mortgage interest and state and local tax payments. Evidently mishearing the question, the President launched into a discussion of plans for converting the standard deduction, a device used by people who do not itemize their deductions, into a tax credit. "Would I favor withdrawing the tax deduction and substitute tax credits?" Carter said. "Yes, I favor that move....Before the end of this year we will be ready to recommend to the Congress a comprehensive, overall tax reform proposal. Surely one of those proposals will be to give a standard credit on the income tax to be paid, and not the standard deduction."

The idea behind the change, Carter said, would be to aid lower-income people, since tax credits generally concentrate their benefits on the lower-bracket households while deductions produce a larger tax reduction in upper brackets than lower ones.

The trouble with the President's statement was that very few high-income people use the standard deduction, preferring to itemize their deductions, thus, many of Carter's listeners were confused.

That was just the beginning. A few hours later, White House Press Secretary Jody Powell told reporters that Carter's reference to the standard deduction had been a mistake. The President had meant to talk sought about converting the individual, or 'personal," exemption into a new form of tax credit.

But Powell did not refer to any additional proposals that would be designed to mitigate the impact of such a change on higher-income "He did not make that point," Rex

Granum, Powell's deputy, later explained, "simply because the kind of thing we were attempting to do today was to straighten out" the confusion over deductions for mortgage interest, the standard deduction, and the personal exemption.

As a result, Powell left the im-pression that Carter had in mind a plan that would boost taxes on the upper half of the nation's income distribution while reducing them on the lower half.

That suggestion, conveyed by reporters seeking more information on the plan, touched off gasps at Carter's Treasury Department, the government's main repository for tax expertise. Officials there maintained that this was not the intention at all, and scurried around to find out just what it was the President had said.

Under Carter's plan, a family of four earning $10,000 a year would get a tax reduction of about $300. Higher income families would get smaller tax cuts, until a gross income level of $20,000 to $25,000 (depending on family size and the amount of deductible expenses) was reached. After that, the tax bite would increase

A family of four earning $80,000 annually, for example, could have its taxes raised more than $600 before the offsetting tax reductions for upper income households mentioned by tax specialist Sunley.

Sunley, a former Treasury Department official, is expected to be named a deputy assistant Treasury secretary for tax policy by Carter. He is now a consultant to the Treasury.

Sunley said Carter considered proposing a combination of the personal tax credit and lowered tax rates as part of his $31.2 billion package of tax rebates, tax reductions, and spending programs to stimulate the economy. But he said it was decided that the idea would cost the Treasury too much revenue - $3 billion to $5 billion a year - to be included in the initial legislative plan.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine who had a lot of skin hanging over her belly told me of an operation she had in Mexico during which they literally raised her to the ceiling. Is this possible? The reason I want to know is that I have a small pouch, but it bothers me tremendously. Do people's pouches vary that

Dear Rita: Abdomens vary from small pouches to big aprons. The apron hanging down over the genitals can be uncomfortable and make it hard to genitals can be uncomfortable and make it hard to keep yourself clean. The major belly lift is the most formidable of obese operations. It may involve pulleys on the ceiling with wires lifting up the apron during surgery. The apron might weigh from 30 to 40 pounds. The patient may lose a tremendous amount of blood and may require hypotensive anesthesia. One Mexican surgeon has developed a spit he turns patients on, cutting and sewing as the patient rotates. A big apron operation lasts from two to six rotates. A big apron operation lasts from two to six hours, and the patient is out of commission for about four weeks. For the first ten days after surgery, the patient will experience pain on movement and bending. By the end of the first month, though, the pain generally subsides. The benefits range from cosmetic-looking good in a bathing suit—to doing away with a moist, smelly, discolored area under the abdominal crease. It also corrects excessive wrinkling of the belly. Hospitalization: one to two weeks. Cost: $1,000 to

Dear Dr. Solomon: For years, I've been troubled with cold sores and sores around my private parts. I've been to see many doctors and they've prescribed all kinds of medication, but nothing seems to help.

Can you offer any suggestions?—Rita K. Dear Rita: At the moment, all I can offer is hope. From your description, what you are suffering from is herpes simplex, which is a virus responsible for stubborn sores like yours, and which also causes a common type of eye infection. There is no cure yet, but one may be in sight: Dr. E. Frank Deig and Douglas Ehresmann of the University of California found that extract of red seaweed, of all things, can stop the multiplication of this virus and reduce its spread in human cells already infected with it. They have extracted the active Substance from the seaweed, and tests on animals are now being run to determine its safety.

There is no guarantee that it will be safe for human use, and the answer to that question may be another couple of years away. But the chances are good that one day fairly soon, we'll have something to offer people with your very trying condition. (If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Maryland

Reborn town's paper beats cereal boxes

SUPERIOR, Wyo. (AP) - The "Ghost Town Gazette" doesn't pretend to be an up-to-the-minute newspaper, editor Sandra Zbegner says. But it is an ambitious undertaking in a community that hasn't had its own newspaper for the past 35 "It's something to read in the morning instead of a cereal box," Mrs. Zbegner said of the monthly newspaper she began publishing last June. She said Superior's rebirth during the 1970s helped inspire her to launch the paper. She said Bob Marsky, mayor of this community of 550, suggested that she key the paper on his column about town government.

Now, Mrs. Zbegner writes stories on such things as childbirth techniques and solar radiation. The name of the newspaper comes straight from the late 1950s and 1960s when the bottom fell out of the community's coal mining economy. Union Pacific Coal Co. operated mines here to supply coal for its locomotives until the late 1940s. But when the railroad turned to diesel power for its engines, the town's only source of income evaporated.

Without jobs, residents found little reason to continue living in the arid community that lies 7,100 feet above sea level in a hollow on the western edge of the Red Desert. The nearest town of any size is Rock Springs, and it is 30 miles away.

So most of the residents left, seeking jobs elsewhere. Only a handful, mostly retired miners, stayed on through the 1960s. The present decade brought construction of the

Jim Bridger Power Plant, a 2,000-megawatt, coalfired facility owned by Pacific Power & Light Co. and Idaho Power Co. Construction of the mammoth power plant required a work force that numbered in the thousands.

Superior, only 10 miles from the plant site, proved to be a convenient place for construction workers to live, and it had dozens of empty houses to accommodate the new residents. Mrs. Zbegner's husband is a laboratory technician for Pacific Power, and she said she was eager to try something new after finding very little to do during her first year in the rustic community. She describes the newspaper as a "hand-to-mouth" operation. But she said the operation is meeting expenses, despite the lack of financial backers. Mrs. Zbegner said most of those who buy the newspaper are out-of-state subscribers who used to live here. The rest of the papers go to subscribers in Superior, Green River, Rock Springs, Casper and Laramie.

She said that for 15 cents an issue subscribers get eight pages of in-depth articles, human interest stories, recipes, outdoor living tips and, of course, news about Superior.

"I want it to be more than just a Superior newspaper," she said. She said she had enlisted the aid of about five part-time reporters to help her gather news and human in-

Now, she has set her sights on publishing the paper twice a month, and she believes an expected influx of new residents will support such a move.

"Things are starting to happen in Superior now,"

Mrs. Zbegner said. COMMERCIAL

Wholesale price rise doesn't reflect crisis

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices rose five-tenths of a per cent in January but did not fully reflect the impact of the severe winter weather on food and fuel costs, the government said today.

The Labor Department said the

increase, largely the result of higher prices for farm products, textiles and machinery, was based on prices in effect as of Jan. 11, before the cold weather damaged citrus and vegetable crops in Florida and sent natural gas and heating oil prices

January's wholesale price increase

Basin receives needed moisture

Permian Basin residents awoke this morning to find evidence of fog or rain, and in some areas rain was still falling lightly. National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal reported nearly a half-inch rainfall in Midland, but up to an inch of rain reportedly fell in some parts of the city.

Tonight's temperature in Midland should drop to the mid-30s, and Saturday's high is expected to reach the low 60s, the weatherman said.

Fog was reported in Andrews, Lamesa, and Crane, with rain also reported in Lamesa, Crane, Big Spring, Big Lake, Stanton, Rankin

Soaking downpours posed flood threats in parts of Texas and bristling thunderstorms belabored others as wet weather wrapped most of the state in a springlike blanket today.

A flash flood watch covered the east part of South Texas, generally east of a line linking Austin and Victoria. As much as 2.03 inches of rain at College Station left parts of that section

Scattered and often heavy thunderstorms mixed with light rain in the central into the west part of the state, booming through such areas as Dallas-Fort Worth, Austin and San

At the same time dense fog cloaked many localities. Visibility as low oneeighth to one-quarter mile prompted a special travel advisory for the Abilene vicinity, several counties around San Antonio and near Del Rio on the Mexican border. It was foggy also around College Station and in the Panhandle-Plains sector around Amarillo and Lubbock, where the rainfall tapered into light showers. The rain was expected to end in most areas tonight.

Although the mercury dipped to 32 degrees at El Paso and Marfa in far West Texas, mild temperatures ranged through the upper 40s to 60s increases each month since October. But the government indicated the effects of the cold wave will cause February's prices to spurt higher.

Wholesale price trends eventually show up at the retail level, though the relationship isn't always precise and there are time lags. While it is dif-ficult to tell just how much consumer prices will rise as a result of the cold weather, some economists estimate prices could be five-tenths of a percent higher this year than they would have been otherwise.

Farm and food prices began rising even before the weather affected crops, marking a reversal from recent months when it was industrial commodities that were mostly responsible for rising wholesale

In January, farm products in-creased 1.1 per cent, less than half December's 2.6 per cent jump but a sharp rise nonetheless. Vegetable and grain prices were up sharply.

Industrial prices rose five-tenths of a per cent last month following a three-tenths of a per cent rise in December. Fuels and other energy products declined four-tenths of a per cent in January. However, the government said energy prices lagged by one or two months.

The index for processed foods and feeds declined two-tenths of a per cent after rising 1.8 per cent in December.

The wholesale price index stood at 188.0, meaning that goods purchased for $100 in 1967 now cost $188. Over the past year wholesale prices have risen ### wire holding a shotgun to his neck. Gunman An-Upton grand jury no-bills 'hunter'

By JIM STEINBERG

RANKIN — After deliberating only 15 minutes, an Upton County grand jury unanimously decided not to in-dict the San Angelo deer hunter who shot and killed Larry Darnell Ewers in an attempt to save the life of a state

The hunter saw Ewers, a Waco cook, shoot Department of Public Safety patrolman Sammy Long of McCamey Nov. 21 along U.S. 67 three miles east of Rankin, according to police accounts of the incident.

Missing from all accounts was the name of the hunter. At first, officials withheld the name to protect the identity of the hunter as they identified the gunman who shot Long five times with his own .32 caliber pistol and then six times with Long's .357 magnum service revolver. Later, the name was withheld at the request of

Thursday, further steps were taken to see that the identity of the hunter is kept from disclosure. All transcripts relating to the case were ordered sealed by 112th District Judge Charles Sherrill of Fort Stockton, Reagan District Attorney Aubrey Edwards of Big Lake said. It was Edwards who presented the case to the grand jury.
"This will keep people from snooping around, trying to find out who the hunter is," Edwards said.

"I called every witness that I would have if the case had gone to trial. The hunter did take the stand and tell his story. As far as I'm concerned the case is closed," Edwards said.

Revitalized Midland Tech students' thesis

By JUDY JOHNSTON

Imagine for a moment sitting in a beautified downtown Midland, gazing at a botanical garden and aviary encased in a geodesic dome and surrounded by flowing waterways. Impossible? It is possible, claim four Texas Tech University architecture students, who undertook the revitalization of the city's core as their thesis project.

The four young men presented the project, complete with maps, blueprints, exterior sketches and an architectural model to the Midland Chamber of Commerce Thursday in a meeting at the Midland Hilton Ballroom.

The plan included four sections which the students believed were necessary to the city's core area: cultural-civic, retail-wholesale, recreational and housing. Each section was connected visually by means of the waterways and tangibly by spanning walkways. Interspersed throughout the plan were beautified open spaces for pedestrian en-

The men involved in the project

were Richard Martinez, Steve Dickerson, Stan Love and Andrew Hammer.

In preparing for the project, the men said they brought a class of 40 persons to Midland to conduct an extensive socio-economic and historical study of Midland. They also took into account the city's existing structures, the "Tall City" image and the wishes of the citizens whom they

Survey results indicated Midlanders wanted more parking, removal or remodeling of old buildings downtown, more entertainment facilities and supportive facilities like restaurants and public transportation which was clean and efficient. They also found that many residents wanted to retain a sense of community and historic pride in the area and believed the area's old buildings should be restored. Another feature they found in the survey was that many young people leave Midland after finishing school and that few return, they said. The main aim of their core project was integration, Martinez said. Part (Continued on Page 2A)

Drought cuts electricity supply

By WARREN E. LEARY

WASHINGTON (AP) - Electricity supplies will be tight along the West Coast in coming months because of dry weather, but experts say the rest of the nation should have enough electricity for a few years.

Western utilities say they should get through peak summer electric demands, barring such unusual circumstances as abnormally hot weather or excessive generating equipment breakdowns.

But drought has cut deeply into water supplies used to generate hydroelectric power and some utilities will be at close to maximum generating capacity to meet normal lemand with little or no reserves. Utilities in the far West admit that blems could result in selective blackouts and send them scrambling to buy power elsewhere, if it's available David R. Israel, technical assistant to the administrator of the U.S.

excessive demand or equipment pro-

Energy Research and Development Administration, says the nation's utilities as a whole have a 34 per cent reserve margin in generating capacity. He said this is the extra capacity between the highest demand expected this summer - 350,000 megawatts and the present capacity to generate electricity — 522,000 megawatts.

But Israel said most of this extra capacity is in the eastern half of the country and 'Just because there is acity in the East doesn't mean it will be available to the West."

Israel and other officials said good interconnections among eastern power grids allow them to deliver extra power to areas in trouble to the south and through the midwest. There also are good power connections west of the Rocky Mountains.

But the western system is poorly connected to the eastern one and they can't give each other much help, experts say.

Jack L. Weiss, acting chief of the Federal Power Commission's Bureau of Power, said the western system's reserve generating capacity probably is enough to ease through the summer without major problems.

"Most of the utilities think they can get by and they should be all right, barring any major outages or other

(hydropower) reservoirs, which are already low, and this could hurt next

Officials noted that California had similar problems last year, but was able to get excess hydroelectric power from the northwest.

But this year, Washington and Oregon will be hard-pressed to supply their own needs, authorities say. Because of the drought, mountain snowpacks are less than 25 per cent

Weiss said Southern California utilities should be able to produce enough oil-generated power to get by.

More recently, the Hobacks laid to rest a Great Dane named Devil. His owner-breeder was en route from California to Dallas to enter the big fella in a canine show.

But Devil became deathly ill at Pecos and died in Odessa.

"It was just like burying a human," said Stephen Hoback. But the fee wasn't as steep, nor was the ceremony as elaborate. (The basic burial fee, including an endowment care fund, ranges from $45 to $167.60, and depends on the size of the coffin.) Big Devil was "the prettiest dog I've ever seen in my whole life," said H. E.

Odessa bondsman

files suit

SNYDER - Scurry County Sheriff Keith Collier has been named the defendant in a civil suit filed in district court here by Odessa bail bondsman Truman L. Isaacs.

The complaint alleges that Collier has "arbitrarily and capriciously refused to accept bail bonds from the plaintiff (Isaacs)" since Jan. 31, 1977. The complaint asks the court to issue an order requiring Collier to accept bonds submitted by Isaacs or his representative. Isaacs is an agent for Peerless Insurance Co., a New Hampshire based corporation.

The incident that sparked the suit occurred Jan. 31 when James Clark, a local attorney, attempted to post a $1,500, bond for an inmate being held in the Scurry County Jail on a drunk driving charge. Collier did not accept the bond and the suit was filed. Isaacs reportedly does not own property in Scurry County and the county would have no property to levy on if Isaacs should default on the

Ingram, who is head coach of the COM Swim Team, reviewed the various programs conducted at the COM facility - adult conditioning. learn-to-swim and competitive - and cited the benefits to be derived from

also were listed. "In working with youths," Ingram said, "our goal is to have each child rise to the level of his highest potential. When a child achieves this, he truly is a winner."

Three hurt in accident

ODESSA - A truck accident 12 miles west of Odessa on Interstate 20 shortly after midnight this morning sent three Monahans men to Odessa Medical Center Hospital, two with serious injuries.

The Department of Public Safety said the driver, Elmer W. Henry, 27, apparently lost control of the vehicle while traveling in the westbound lane. The truck crossed the center median, overturned twice and stopped in the eastbound lane.

Henry and passenger Seviano R. Valencia, 32, were both thrown from the vehicle. Henry is in very poor condition in the intensive care unit, and Valencia is also in the hospital, but in less serious condition. The third passenger, Richard Carter, 20, was treated and released.

of the data they gathered, he said, indicated that Midland was divided into different interest groups.

By bringing all these facilities into a central area, the students hoped to unite the city The design concept of the plan emphasized integration, he said. Also in the race are D. A. Wallace The retail section would be free-

span with non-bearing walls within, so that the interior could be rearranged to suit the tenants, Hammer said. The housing section would be composed of prefabricated units arranged to form two adjacent triangles in a way that each unit would have a view, Dickerson said. Designed to serve the whole region, the recreational facility would offer handball and squash courts, a pool, tennis courts, a playground and a voiley ball court. The facility's design featured a semi-circular structure for the indoor activities, complemented by a semi-circular ring of graduated tiers containing the various outdoor

In designing the civic and social area, Martinez said he considered the planned exhibit hall approved in the city's recent bond election.

The exhibit hall would be tied into a civic center and a concert hall as well as to the retail section by means of spanning walkways. Included in this section would be a day care center for mothers living and-or working in the core area and a teen center.

The plan's waterways integrated the four sections.

The flowing water also created a scenic focal point for the area, as did the two domes - one for the botanical gardens and aviary and one for a planetarium. The water would be recycled in a mechanism beneath the botanical gardens, Martinez said.

Supplementing the structures for the four divisions were several high-

rise parking facilities. The cost for this revitalization? Some $50 million, to be funded theoretically by private enterprise or by some governmental body.

Martinez said the plan would be implemented theoretically in three phases. He said the students had theorized that the first phase would cost $28 million and would generate $8.3 million per year. The second phase would cost $14 million and would generate $2.8 million per year. The third phase would cost $13 million and would generate no new revenue but would benefit from the cumulative revenue of $11 million from the other two phases.

The model and plans will be on display and rotated among the banks, Chamber of Commerce executive director Fred Tyler said. "This is a plan, an idea the students came up with. Parts of it probably will be implemented in the future," in one form or another, Tyler said. The Midland Reporter-Telegram

HOFUF, Saudi Arabia - A classic struggle of man against nature is being won here at Saudi Arabia's largest oasis - but slowly.

It is the struggle against the incessant and seemingly inevitable encroachment of sand dunes on settled life, a battle fought wherever man lives on the edge of the desert.

In some places, such as the sub-Saharan region of Africa, the desert appears to be winning. It was winning here too, until a few years ago.

The wind here blows from the north-northwest. The only change is that sometimes, particularly in summer, it blows harder And the wind moves the sand dunes.

at a rate of about 50 feet a year. At this oasis — a fertile, spring-fed area seven of the oasis' 50-odd villages before something was done.

That something was as simple as it was dramatic: Trees were planted on the dunes, and the dunes stopped moving

The idea was first put forward by specialists working for the Arabian American Oil Co. (Arameo). Saudi authorities had worried that the dunes eventually would cover the whole oasis, which has a population of 250,000. The Saudi government liked the tree idea and took over the project in 1963, when the massive planting program was launched.

Hofuf was an ideal place for the experiment because it actually has too much water. Any additional use for it was a welcome alternative to swamps and resultant malaria.

Under a German-trained Saudi forestry expert named Youssef Abdel Wahid, about 5 million trees were planted

"They laughed at the idea of a man from the desert studying forestry," Horst Hinz, a cigar-chomping Ger-man engineer with the project, said.

'But it paid off." The trees are mostly tamarisks and will grow in poor soil. They now form a 13-mile long 1,000-foot-wide fence protecting the oasis.

They have effectively halted the movement of the dunes into the oasis, and given this desert oil kingdom its first national forest.

But the battle against the desert never ends. A new tree fence is now being built farther out in the desert as a protection for the forest that has stabilized the sand dunes. On the outer line, trees are being planted without any irrigation, and 80 per cent to 90 per cent of them survive and grow, Hinz claims.

Thus Hofuf is being saved from the sand. And thanks to another program, the oasis is becoming increasingly

Over the centuries, this prosperous trading center, and one-time slave market had fallen into gradual decline. It had too much water, and water was as much a curse blessing.

The water kept the 2 million date palms alive. But drainage was poor, and the fields gradually turned unproductive since the salts were not washed from the soil.

Bad drainage also meant swamps, and swamps meant malaria. In addition, the snail that carries the bilharzia virus was rife in the muddy, slowly moving canal waters. And the farmers here, as in Egypt, were crippled by the debilitating disease known as schistosomiasis.

The old oasis was a place of narrow lanes through date gardens and the mud-walled villages, wide enough for only two donkeys to pass. It was a place where women drew unclean water and kids swam in the main source, the al Khodud spring.

All this is gone now. "The romance is all gone," as well, said Hinz as he piloted his big American station wagon down a broad, asphalt street running alongside a main irrigation channel.

The irrigation and drainage canals are no longer muddy ditches. They have been replaced by concrete waterways where the flow is swift and the bilharzia snails cannot survive.

Tampa lounge manager blows top

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Lounge manager Joe Redner, whose topless go-go dancers are constantly getting arrested, Thursday said city officials were operating under a "double standard" when they allowed topless dancing at a celebration in a city-owned hall

"These are the people who are pro-secuting us and saying that nude dan-cing is lowering our community stan-dards. But it is all right when the girls dance for them," Redner said of the civic leaders who attended the annual Gasparilla festival Monday night at

of times since last fall. Night Gallery dancers Sharon Thomas and Kenna Hummon said they were hired to perform at the festival, which celebrates the deeds of businessmen and personalities.

Miss Hummon said the crowd urged them to shed their tops, and the man who hired them told them a local judge in the group had assured they wouldn't be arrested if they did. So the tops came off.

Capt. G. Pierce Wood of Ye Mystic Krewe of Gasparilla said in a prepared statement that his organization "acknowledges that such action was certainly in poor taste and hereby apologizes to the city administration and to the citizens.

said Wednesday that arrests were unlikely in connection with the performance - although a topless dancer and the manager of the Night Gallery were jailed Tuesday night for the show there.

Kathleen Sweeny, 21, of Tampa was arrested Tuesday for the fourth time this month and was charged with nude dancing. Her bond was $252.

Club manager Thomas G. Secchiari, 35, was charged for the 37th time since last October for allowing the exhibition. His bond was $502.

Police officials said no officers were in Curtis Hixon Hall when the hired dancers went topless. City Atty. Henry Williams said that in his opinion a city ordinance banning topless dancing was not violated because the ordinance "applies to a commercial establishment."

Monday's performance, on a 10-foot platform with an eightpiece band for accompaniment, lasted about 20 minutes, according to the girls, who said they were promised $30 to $40 apiece.

San Antonio mayor asks repeal of 2-year-old sick leave policy

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Mayor Lila Cockrell and other San Antonio officials urged a Senate committee Thursday to repeal a sick leave policy that the city and all Bexar County legislators supported two years ago.

The policy allows police and firefighters to accumulate unlimited sick leave and take a lump sum payment for that accured time when they retire or quit. Sen. Frank Lombardino, D-San Antonio, read newspaper headlines referring to the measure as the "Lombardino Law." He said city fiscal officers have estimated the new law will cost the city $176 million in 30 years, and he added: "I'm breathlessly waiting the 40-year figures."

Lombardino spent $7,400 of his own money to publish a tabloid newspaper asking his constituents if they favored repealing the law. He said 52 per cent favored repeal and 47 per cent were against repeal, and he had agreed to abide by the majority's wishes.

Noting the standing room crowd in the committee room, Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, quipped, "Has everybody been searched for weapons?"

City finance director Carl White testified that under the unlimited policy for collecting sick leave, the city's liability as of Dec. 31 was $11,935,976. Under the old policy, which had a 90-day limit, the liability would have been $6.9 million. "The rate increase is twice as much" under the new policy, White

Personnel director Clyde Mc-Cullough said the new policy has created dissension because other city employes are asking, "Why not everyone else?

Mrs. Cockrell said in supporting the new policy, "I'm willing to concede through the eye and had received the last rites five times but lived. He also distributed photographs of officers killed on duty. "We're not just another city employe—neither are firefighters," Clancy said. "We're something special, and we're proud of it."

Woman on fifth marriage, husband need counseling

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am 23, and five months ago I got married for the fifth time. All my previous marriages ended in divorce.

My husband is 29, divorced and has four children. He had a vasectomy that he didn't tell me about until after I married him. This was a dirty trick because I've never had children and have always wanted

My biggest problem is the way he treats me. I've gone to the hospital for emergency first aid four times after he's beaten me up. He uses the excuse that he's drunk when he beats me, so he's not responsible for what he does. He's locked me out of our trailer overnight and refused to give me any of my personal belongings. (It's my trailer.)

Should I try to make this marriage work? I really love him because he's so sweet when he's sober and he's awfully good to my dog.-G. IN GAINESVILLE

DEAR G: I think you both need help. Having picked five losers at age 23 should tell you something. And to stick around for the physical abuse he hands out (drunk or sober) is literally asking for it.

Please go to your nearest mental clinic for counseling, unless you don't mind having your bridgework rearranged. (P.S. Take the dog with you. That bully you're living with might get drunk and

During the first eight years of her son Mike's life, Bobbi Cooper spent a lot of time gasping.

That's a natural maternal reaction when a small son climbs up a rough stone wall to the top of a classified hyperactive, or hyperkinetic. Mike also showed other classic signs of the condition - fidgetiness, excitability, a low threshold for failure and frustration, temper tantrums, short attention span, difficulty with school work and poor sleeping habits.

"It was very hard to get him to bed and to sleep," Cooper said. "He destroyed his crib from rocking and head-banging, always woke up at the slightest sound. When he got up in the mornings he was impossible '

Now, when 10-year-old Mike wakes up in the morning he is "a reasonable human being" and even smiles, his mother said. He is doing better in school, gets into fewer fights with siblings and friends, and this year is playing in a team sport.

Cooper attributes this change to what is known as the "Feingold diet," which Mike started Nov. 1, 1975.

"Only a parent who has heard these words can understand the cold fear that numbs the heart. The mind immediately reacts. The cruel words crash down all aspirations for the future; they destroy carefully made dreams for happiness.

"Most parents of retarded children know that their us," Miss Taylor said. special child is not like other children, yet they keep hoping - until the doctor finally confirms their Dorthy Taylor, a family life education specialist, says.

Parents torture themselves with question such as "Whose fault was it?" "Will my family be embarressed with a retarded child?" "Of all children in the whole neighborhood, why ours?" adds the specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Most parents immediately consider running from the issue, such as moving to another neighborhood, or maybe even moving out of town. Their next consideration may be whether to put the child in an institution or to keep the child at home. Then come feelings of guilt because they are trying to remove the child from the family setting — "he belongs to

"Most parents of retarded children know that their special child is not like other children, yet they keep hoping —until the doctor finally confirms their fears.'

"Even 20 years ago, parents of retarded children often were isolated by their misfortunes. But today these parents find tremendous confort in the knowledge that they are not alone, that many other parents must cope with the same problems, and that in many areas they can work with other parents to make a better world for their handicapped youngsters. It is often a relief to be able to talk about one's frustrations, worries and problems with those who have had similar experiences and thoroughly understand one's reaction,' she said.

"It is to say with certainty that no parents need be tortured by feelings of guilt."

"Research has found many causes of retardation over which parents have no control. Parents need not be ashamed of having produced a mentally retarded child-studies indicate that mentally retarded children are the products of families rich and poor, families socially prominent or obscure, families highly educated or with little educated or with little education, families of all races, religion, and color. Inoculation required 400 persons died of measles each COLLEGE STATION -

Measles immunization time is now-for children who have not received the vaccine, Carla Shearer, a health education specialist advises.

Measles ('10-day' or 'red' measles, or technically, rubeola) is considered the most serious of the common childhood diseases-and it is highly contagious for about four days before, and four days after, the rash appears, she said.

Complications can include ear infections, pneumonia, deafness, blindness, encephalitis or other forms of brain disease—or death.

Before the vaccine became available in 1963, approximately year in the United States. By 1974, the number was cut to 20, she said.

Ms. Shearer is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System. "Actually, with the measles vaccine, there is no need for a child to suffer from measles at all, but outbreaks still occur. Texas reported 266 cases last year," she said.

Often pre-school children account for many cases. Texas law requires certain immunizations for all children entering Texas schools. Because many parents wait until immunization is required, preschoolers are left unprotected.

In many cases birds have been unable to maintain profitable growth rates in relation to feed costs. Also, many more birds than usual have died while being transported to slaughter plants.

Even so, the council reported that "few marketing problems" have occurred and that most deliveries were being made without excessive delays. Some retail stores, however, had to cancel orders because snow had forced them to close.

Although weather and fuel situations have eased somewhat, industry people "report that feed supplies are now beginning to concern them," the council said.

HOUSTON (AP) — Did you ever wonder who a bartender tells his troubles to when he isn't tending bar. Or does a hairdresser let another hairdresser dress her hair?

Or, what does a chef eat when he goes to a dinner party for chefs?

The answer to the last question is some mighty fancy vittles.

Chefs from the South Texas area, about 100 of them along with wives and guests, gathered at a Houston hotel a couple of nights ago for the 16th annual Chef's Ball and dinner.

One chef couldn't attend because he was doing the cooking.

After a few drinks to wet the whistle, the chefs sat down to eat.

The menu was hand-printed on imitation parchment and started with the hors d'oeuvre. There was one tray after another, but the favorite of the chefs appeared to be the shrimp cooked in coconut oil.

As of Feb. 1, the orange harvest is estimated at a record of 248.6 million boxes, 3 per cent more than the previous high last seson of 242.4 million boxes, the department's Crop Reporting Board has reported.

But the new estimate is an 11 per cent drop from USDA's forecast of nearly 278.7 million boxes as of Jan. 1. Officials said they did not know what the impact will be on consumer prices of fresh oranges and frozen juice.

The report said, however, that the orange juice yield now is estimated at 1.17 gallons per box of oranges, down from 1.29 gallons forecast last month before freezing weather struck Florida on Jan. 18-20.

Last season's yield was 1.29 gallons. Officials said the Florida orange crop is estimated

Orval Faubus all but forgotten now

tain man in these parts, he had been doing his chores. He knocked the snow from his ax, rested it against the wall of the house and ambled inside.

The house is no ordinary house. It rambles for 214 feet along the side of a mountain overlooking this Ozarks village. It is a monument to the man who built it, a shrine to his political career, a place people once paid $1.25 a head to see.

But the mansion is seldom visited now, and Orval Faubus, former governor of Arkansas, one-time symbol of resistance to school desegregation, lives there in relative isolation with his second wife, Elizabeth, and her two children he has adopted.

Twenty years ago, Faubus ignited the Little Rock school crisis by ordering the Arkansas National Guard to bar nine black children from Central High School. A year later, he was selected to the Gallup Poll's list of the "Ten men in the world most admired by Americans."

Now, at 67, he is a somewhat forgotten man, writing memoirs of his glory days as a political power, a world figure; his frustrations of attempted comebacks that failed; his sorrows of his son, Farrell, a drug addict who committed suicide last June.

"The times have changed," he says. "Today, nobody as ugly as Abraham Lincoln can win. In my day, people cared about issues. Candidates today are a new breed - the New South - superficial and flashy. I don't know whether it's the New South, or if it's just gone to worms." For Faubus, times have changed. Few come to Governor's Hill to view memorabilia of better days. Few see the dozen Arkansas license plates hanging in the foyer, each bearing the number 1, one for each of his 12 years as governor. Few see the framed photographs of Faubus with the great and neargreat, or the framed newspaper clippings and cartoons, scores of them, from the days when he made headlines around the world. He discourages visitors. Red and black "Keep

Out" signs dot the driveway that winds to Faubus' front door. Townsfolk say when he walks through the streets of Huntsville, he usually is too distracted to

In February, 1969, two years after they left the Governor's Mansion in Little Rock and 37 years after they were married. Alta Faubus gave Orval Faubus a much-publicized divorce. Three weeks later, there was a new Mrs. Faubus, a divorcee with two children, a woman 29 years younger than her husband.

The second marriage, unpopular with Faubus' family, friends and political admirers, "was a factor, a major factor' in his ensuing political losses, Faubus said When Faubus announced he was coming out of retirement to run for governor in 1970, first wife Alta told newsmen: "Oh, it's the same old story. Just a lot of promises. He promised to love, honor and obey me, and he broke all those promises. Faubus lost the election to Dale Bumpers, a littleknown Charleston lawyer who now is the junior U.S.

Senator from Arkansas.

In 1974, Faubus tried again and failed. chance. After Farrell's funeral last June, his father sent friends a letter which read: "I thought you should know that Farrell's life in his later years was as tragic as his death. His last years were likewise a nightmare to the close members of his family." Farrell's parents disagree over how the drug habit began. His mother said he became addicted by using diet pills in his constant battle to keep his weight below 300 pounds. His father said he got hooked while experimenting while a student at the University of Arkansas.

Not long before Farrell died, he said he expected to live in his father's shadow "the rest of my life. People just don't seem to forget.'

But both he and the former governor were wrong, according to George Douthit, a former reporter for the Arkansas Democrat and a Faubus favorite. Faubus thought everyone would treat him like a king after he left," Douthit said. "That's why he built that mansion, so he'd have a place to receive them. But nobody goes to see him now. They've already forgotten.

In the last election, with Faubus' Democratic machine dead, only the Republicans, who in Arkansas rarely find a good candidate, considered him for governor

'Sure, I'm down now," Faubus said. "Things like that change. Truman was even more unpopular than Nixon when he went out of office. Now look at him. Things might change for me, too.

JERUSALEM - Leaders of Arab countries on Israel's borders will now recognize Israel's right to exist — a major concession and a move toward peace in the Middle East, United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim told Israeli officials

Thursday.
Waldheim said Arab heads of state with whom he spoke on his current 10-day, six-nation Middle East tour said they are now willing to offer de facto acceptance of the state of Israel as part of a modified plan for a Palestinian "entity."

He said Yasser Arafat, head of the Palestinian Liberation Organization, had told him he would agree to an "independent" Palestinian state and no longer demand the destruction of

Bits and pieces of the Arab peace offer had surfaced earlier. But this is the first time that such proposals have been offered top Israeli leaders by Arab heads of state through a highlevel mediary such as Waldheim.

"There is nothing here we haven't heard before," an Israeli foreign office spokesman said. But, he said, the level on which the offers were passed was something new. So, he said, was the fact that "the Arab positions are more coordinated now than in the past."

It was believed Waldheim told Israeli officials that Arab leaders feel they have made concessions which should open the door to a renewal of peace negotiations — and that their peace offers have "put the ball in the Israeli court."

But an Israeli spokesman said any Arab offers were irrelevant because the PLO covenant calls for Israel's destruction, and that position has not been changed.

Despite Israeli protests that Waldheim had offered nothing new. the effect apparently was another score in favor of the Arab peace offensive — with the Arabs offering concessions and the Israelis

Foreign Minister Yigal Allon said earlier this week that "Israel has no intention of giving the United Nations any role in peace negotiations in this area." One paper here said Waldheim "must not assume that his present exertions will be considered by Israel as anything but harmful," and another suggested that top officials snub him. Waldheim arrived at Jerusalem Airport Thursday morning in a U.N. executive jet from Jordan for a brief but proper greeting by Allon. The tall, slim Austrian lost no time in telling waiting newsmen he came not as a mediator but "as secretary general of the United Nations."

He later repeated the same thing to top Israeli officials, including Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, briefing them on impressions received in talks with Arab leaders in Jordan, Syria, Lebanon, Saudi Arabia and Egypt. Waldheim told the Israelis:

-All the Arab leaders agree that the PLO is the spokesman for the Palestinians. ...The leaders no longer demand a "secular" Palestinian state which would require the end of Israel as a nation. Instead they now accept the idea of a "small Palestinian entity" with links with Jordan. It presumably would be the West Bank of the Jordan River, taken from Jordan by Israel in 1967, and the previously Egyptian Gaza Strip.

-And, because of their new "flexibility," the Arab leaders feel this is an excellent time to press for Waldheim spoke to Arafat three hours Saturday night in Damascus. What Waldheim told the Israelis suggests that even Arafat now speaks of an "independent" Palestinian state, existing not over the ruins of Israel but adjacent to it.

Waldheim leaves Friday for Cairo, where he said he would acquaint Sadat with the Israel response.

When President Carter issued the pardon for draft evaders, Mrs. Romeike said, "I was so thrilled, so happy, and it was a big, big burden thrown away. I go around now in a jubilant spirit, so jubilant that perhaps I act a little silly."

Mrs. Romeike, in a recent interview, said her son opposed the U.S. foreign policy in Vietnam and was the type of boy "who was nonviolent, who wouldn't hurt someone even if he was

When her son first mentioned "he was going to evade the draft, I sat down with him and discussed other possibilities. He thought I was against him, but I was thinking only of his safety and the horror of having to be jailed," she said.

"He insisted he knew what he wanted and then he left. As the war progressed, I understood more and more why he had gone. His sister and I sent him money to go to Canada, but he never went. He stayed in the United States with an assumed name and a new Social Security card," she

Mrs. Romeike said during the first few years the FBI was very diligent. "They came to our house regularly. They went to my daughter's office. Then the visits stopped and the agents would only telephone us now and then asking if we had heard from Sidney.

Of course, we said we hadn't." Mrs. Romeike, a piano teacher, said she was not criticized nor harassed by those who supported the war although "There were many persons, including some I work with, who never knew Sidney had evaded the draft. I didn't talk to them about it." It is doubtful, she said, if her son returns to Houston to live but "I do expect him to come for a visit soon." The Houston mother said she realized the familes of Vietnam war veterans may be oppossed to the presidential pardon, "but it was difficult for my son. In some ways I think it would have been easier to go into the Army. I think he was very courageous. "Sidney's father died in 1968, but I believe he would have supported his son in this all the way," she said.

South Dakota has fewest doctors

EDITOR'S NOTE — Many American doctors have stopped mak-ing house calls, the better to serve their large practices. But in rural America doctors have to make "town calls" if the sick are to be treated.

By PHYLLIS MENSING

MURDO, S.D. (AP) - South Dakotans are generally healthy, and some folks might say that's because they can't afford to get sick. Doctors are few and far between.

Tom Ingalls remembers years ago when his toe was chopped off by a spade. He was rescued by an old lady with a sewing basket.

"We didn't have a doctor in town," Ingalls says, "so she just sewed it

Ingalls is now a newspaper editor in Murdo. The closest doctor is 35 miles away. Many of the town's medical problems go to Marilyn Seymour, a Physician's Assistant or PA who lives in Murdo. Patients seriously ill are taken to a doctor by road or air, or they just wait for Dr. Robert Hayes, the PA supervisor who visits Murdo

Murdo reflects the state of rural medicine in many areas across the country. A nearby family doctor just doesn't exist for thousands who are spread across the prairies and moun-

South Dakota has fewer doctors per population than any other state — 620 for its 68,000 people. More than 70 per cent of the 500 in private practice are located in the state's 10 largest cities.
So South Dakotans are used to doing for themselves.

Some towns are just too small to support a doctor.
"We've had doctors come from back east and they were interested," Ingalls said. "The problem is with wives not wanting to live in the area." People in towns like Murdo, with a population of 900, depend on am-bulance services manned by trained local volunteers, citizens band radios or airplanes piloted by local ranchers. "My boy wrecked his motorcycle," Ingalls said. "The Physicians' Assistant cleaned him up, put a bandage on and said, 'take him to Kadoka' (40 miles away). But when it came to getting his wisdom teeth pulled, Ingalls had the dentist in Mitchell, about 150 miles away, show him how to take out the stitches so he wouldn't have to make another long trip.

For Madalyn Winner, the trip to the doctor was too long.

Mrs. Winner, a pharmacist in Buffalo, a town of about 500 in the northwest corner of the state, delivered her second child in the car before her husband could complete the 70- mile drive to Belle Fourche.

"When the next child came along he said, 'not again.' So I went to Belle Fourche a month early and stayed there until the baby was born," she

For many rural areas, physician extenders are the main hope for regular health care. About 40 extenders, including PAs and nurse-practitioners, work in South Dakota with routine or minor health problems and refer cases to supervising doc-

"I don't think it's a reasonable expectation to get a resident physician in Buffalo," said Werner Studar, the PA there. "There's just not the pa-tient load here. I think these satellite clinics are the answer."

Studar works out of a private clinic in Sturgis, about 100 miles away. The clinic has used a federal grant to send PAs to rural areas under doctors' supervision.

Dr. Hayes pioneered the same type of program using state money. He says he got 56 applications from all over the country for eight extender positions.

The extenders go through a year of training at one of 50 training stations in the country. The American Medical Association says they are working out well in most areas. But they aren't viewed as the total answer to doctor

"When they're out there alone, it doesn't look like it's going to be economically feasible," said Dr. Robert Eelkema of the University of North Dakota's Department of Community Medicine.

"But a doctor is more likely to come if he's got some help, and a doctor's more likely to stay if he's got some help," he added.

"And not many PAs have the funds and the patience to stay in a small town. You're really out there alone.'

"I think what we have to emphasize groups of doctors practicing in small towns that can support a doctor. If they're willing to support satellite clinics and send out doctors periodically, at least they're pro-viding services that weren't provided

The dean of South Dakota's threeyear-old medical school, Karl Wegner, hopes the school eventually will bring more medical resources to the state and that its emphasis on family practice medicine will encourage them to stay.

Dr. Hayes said that if the money is available to pay for them, there are doctors who want the challenge and freedom South Dakota offers.

HOUSTON (AP) - Apparently there are two kinds of cowbirds - the kind that get along with humans and the kind that have been tabbed Purple People Peckers.

The Rice University biology department, as part of its continuing research on the winter colony of campus cowbirds, has banded a number of the black birds with purple or white streamers.

Aggressive birds - judged by how hard they peck the hands of banders - are given purple streamers. Docile birds get whitestreamers.

The birds were tagged to test a theory, according to Hedi Good, a graduate biology student. The theory is that the aggressive birds range out to rural fields daily to feed while the docile ones may dine at bird feeders around urban homes.

TOMMY PARKS (12) of Midland College soloes in for a layup as 6-8 Jon Moorehead pursues too late to make a play. Action came in Western Junior College Conference game at MC gym Thursday

Western Texas clinches crown; storms past Chaps in second half

BY TED BATTLES

Western Texas College, which started the Western Junior College Conference season with a two-loss thud, stormed to its 12th straight victory with a title-clinching 85-74 conquest of Midland College at MC gym Thursday night. The Westerners left little doubt in the minds of a close to capacity crowd why they reign as champs, coming on strong in the final 20 minutes after a scorehing first half that saw both teams shoot 65 per cent or better from the field. WTC, ranked No. 4 nationally in the junior college ratings, raised its record to 24-2 and 12-2 for conference. The loss left Midland at 17-8 and 8-6.

MIDLAND COLLEGE never led in the first half and trailed by as many as seven, but went into the locker room trailing 45-43 at intermission after hitting 20 of 31 shots from the field. WTC was even more deadly with 19 of 27 shots.

Baskets by Ron Jones and Ricky Hudgins to open the second half pulled the Chaparrals into brief ties at 45 and 47, but a tough-to-penetrate zone employed by Mike Mitchell's rangy, long-armed Snyder bunch began to take its toll, not to mention Lawrence Butler, the 6-3 sharpshooter who wound up with 32 points.

WTC stretched a 53-51 lead with 15:29 to play into a 71-57 stranglehold with 6:00 to go. Midland made one final run with 2:22 to go, cutting the WTC lead to 75-67 on four straight free throws by Hudgins and Tommy Parks and a jumper from the lane by Sim

AFTER A couple of free throws by Doug Worthington, the Chaps whittled some more on a basket by Nickerson and another by Sim after Jackson Pace forced a mid-court turnover. That trimmed it to 77-71 with 1:49 left. but the uncanny Butler took charge with five of the next six points to take it out of reach.

Butler's performance was all the more remarkable in that he managed just two misses in going scoreless in the game's opening nine minutes. After that he raced to a 15-point first half on seven of eight from the field and had 15 of 22 for the night.

Actually, only 6-8 Daryl Smith experienced anything like a bad night, hitting "only" seven of 13 from the field in scoring 18 points.

WESTERN TEXAS' defense which choked the Chaparrals off with 11 of 31 shots in the second half, and Butler's 32 points keyed the rally, but the difference resulted when the Chaps cooled off from outside while the 6-8, 6-8, 6-4, 6-3, 6-3 Westerners never slowed down. After a torrid 19 for 27 first half, they finished with 15 of 25 for an overall 34 of 52 for the night.

Tommy Parks and Ron Jones were the leading scorers with 16 and 14 points, Jones connecting on seven of 12, mostly long range bombs. Parks, after 12 first-half points, four assists and a basket-leading steal, was held to four points in the second half.

By The Associated Press

Arkansas reduced its magic number to one for its first Southwest Conference basketball title since 1958 Thursday night while Texas all but clinched a host role in the postseason tournament along with Houston, Texas Tech and Texas A&M.

The 13th-ranked Razorbacks blew away Baylor 77-57 for their 12th league victory in as many outings for a three game lead over Houston with four games to play.

Minnesota Gophers possess impressive road act

By The Associated Press
The Minnesota Gophers have one of the most successful road shows in college basketball this season. Among their big hits of the year, the Gophers have won by 24 points at Detroit, 19 at Indiana and 17 at Illinois and Marquette. Thursday night, they played another smash performance by beating Ohio State at Columbus 91-65. "We're a much better road team and I don't know why," said Min-nesota Coach Jim Dutcher. "I can only enjoy it."

Gophers have won 17 of 19 games and are challenging for the Big Ten lead. The splendid season has restored some dignity to a school on NCAA probation and shorn of any post-season playoff hopes. "Being a conference contender is enough," said Dutcher. "We've got a chance at our school record of 11 conference victories and 21 over-all. I told our kids they were eighth in the country and there are only a handful of teams with better records. That's incentive enough.'

Elsewhere in college basketball, top-ranked San Francisco defeated Nevada-Reno 92-76, second-ranked UCLA defeated Washington State 65-62, No. 10 Nevada-Las Vegas trimmed Denver 106-84 and No. 13 Arkan-sas blasted Baylor 77-57.

"We were soundly beaten by a fine team," said Ohio State Coach Eldon Miller. "We couldn't handle their zone. We couldn't go inside because of their size. We had to shoot over their zone to win. We just couldn't do that."

Winford Boynes scored 21 points to lead a balanced attack as undefeated San Francisco ran its winning streak nected on 51 per cent of their shots from the field and dominated the boards with a 48-36 advantage.

"I WAS a little concerned in the first half, early on, after they made their first six or seven in a row, but I told the guys to stay loose and play our own game," said San Francisco Coach Bob Gaillard. "And that's what we did. We came back in the second half, stuck to our game plan and won it the way we planned.

Reserve center Brett Vroman scored eight of his 10 points in the second half, leading UCLA back from a four-point deficit to victory over Washington State. Vroman entered the game after starter David Greenwood picked up three first-half MIAMI (AP) -Mexico's Raul Ramirez, top-seeded in the $50,000 Miami tournament of the Grand Prix Tennis tour, has served notice that his best is yet to come.

"I feel that I am just starting to reach my peak in singles play," the defending tour champ said late Thursday. "And I think that I have just as good a chance to win the Grand Prix as anybody on the tour.

"Although it's not easy to repeat as singles champion, I feel that I have a good shot at it."

Ramirez demonstrated the way he hopes to go about it by blasting unranked Steve Turner of New York City 6-1, 6-4 in second-round action Thursday. He said he was bothered a bit by chilly wind sweeping through the host California Club in the second set.

"The wind and cold is not a suitable condition for a good match," he "I couldn't hit a deep backhand in these conditions.'

Keep plugging. That's what he said. and that's what I've been doing. Irate phone calls, letters of indignation and threats have been as common to me as hunger pains, but I've never let it bother me, and more than likely, I never will. Why? Because a 22-year old kid from Pennsylvania doesn't need a stack of ulcers so early in life.

What does bother me is being misunderstood. If someone needs attacking, you can bet I'm going to be the first one in line to throw the punches. That's my job. But it Several years ago, when I decided disturbs me when people take offense to pursue a career in sports jour-when injury was never my intention. I'm speaking of the game story I wrote a few days back on the Lee-Big Spring basketball clash. In that article. I referred to the fourth quarter of the game as "garbage time," and several people took it as a personal attack on the Rebel substitutes, who played most of that final period.

Before you pass sentence

What kind of person do you think I am? It hurts me deeply to think that there are people around who would believe I'd belittle 16 and 17-year old

"Garbage time" is a very common basketball term which refers to that part of a game, when the outcome is well in hand and the teams more or less go through the motions in the final minutes. Ordinarily it's run and gun basketball and ordinarily the subs are the game because of the lop-sided

I had taken it for granted that any basketball fan would be familiar with such common terminology as "garbage time," but I guess I was wrong in that respect. I expected too much from you. Forgive me.

But that still doesn't heal my own wound. If people disagree with what I write, then more power to them. Everybody has an opinion and they'll always be welcome to it. But to accuse me of attacking kids; that plain hurts. It hurts very badly.

Players like Roy Johnson, David Pitts, Barry Blake, Brett Smith, Eddie Runyan, Dick Lynch, and Steve Dellenback, who make up the Rebel bench behind the five starters and sixth man Brad Wright, are all capable performers. And as one Lee fan noted in a recent letter: "...they would be playing close to all the time at other schools in the district." I heartily agree.

Paul Gallico once wrote that an irresponsible reporter is even more dangerous than a drunken surgeon with a knife, and he's right. The pen and typewriter can do irrepairable harm in the wrong hands. I realized that a long time ago, and if I ever forget it. I'll know it's time to step down and quit calling myself a newspaperman.

Please believe this, and understand that I would never injure anyone in ink blatently. Some people deserve it, true, but the majority of others don't.

The Lee substitutes surely don't. Friends again?

Little wonder. The Cowboys are a hot item. In the business world it's called "being highly visible."

"You take the team picture, for example," says Brobst. "We don't have $70,000 to promote a team picture that a lot of kids will want to put on a wall in their room. So, we work out a deal that defrays the cost.

"Our highlight film would cost a bunch. We have a sponsor to defray the cost. The window stickers worked out so well for the fried chicken chain last year (they printed 500,000) they want to double it this year.'

THAT'S A lot of automobiles wheeling about with the readily identifiable Cowboy helmet with a star plastered

What would it cost the Cowboys to advertise the way they have it now "Probably in excess of $500,000 assuming we would want to promote the team the way we do it with all our sponsors," says Brobst. "The key is to tiein with well-managed companies who do a good job of promotion. We will go into this season with about 15 companies as tie-ins. It will increase their sales and help us sell tickets.

IOC must toughen stand

By GEOFFREY MILLER AP Sports Writer

LONDON (AP) - The octopus of politics winds its tentacles more and more menacingly around the Olympic Games.

The International Olympic Committee (IOC), which used to pride itself on being above politics and independent of government interference, will clearly have to take a strong line in the next few years to keep politicians' fingers out of its

The stormy events at Montreal last summer — Taiwanese athletes shut out by the Canadian government, and the walkout by African countries in protest against New Zealand's ties with South Africa — only were a start. Now politicians are trying to get their hands on the running of the Games themselves.

President Urho Kekkonen of Finland, in an interview with the London Times, said UNESCO (United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization) should take over the administration of the Olympics.

Dennis Howell, the British Government's Minister of Sport, declared publicly that the IOC "is totally ill-equipped to cope with the growing size, cost and political involvement in the Olympic Games."

Speaking as chairman of the working group of European ministers responsible for sport, Howell said the IOC should work more closely with the host government and organizations like the Council of Europe. He claimed the issues at Montreal last year—Taiwan and the Africans—"could have been solved far more quickly with our in-

ANALYSIS

The 78-strong IOC, which is due to meet next in Prague in June, will certainly disagree

The self-electing, self-perpetuating body, groomed by its scrappy late President Avery Brundage to defend the ideals of amateur sport as a symbol of world friendship, will fight tooth and nail to keep politicians' hands out of the stadiums and Olympic council

LORD KILLANIN, Brundage's successor, dealt with the matter in his usual quiet and diplomatic way. "The IOC, together with the international sports federations and the national Ólympic committees, are looking very closely at the whole position of costs and the politicization of the Games," he said in an interview.

"But one of the reasons for the rise in the cost of the games is the desire of governments — federal, provincial and city - to do things bigger and bet-

"And the political problems which face sport are the result of discord among governments themselves."

Howell said Killanin had agreed to address the next meeting of European ministers in Lisbon next October, and added: "That may be the start of closer ties."

"Not quite," said Killanin. "I didn't even know the meeting was on in October. I will speak at it if they want me to. I have written to Mr. Howell asking for clarification."

HOWELL'S SUGGESTION that the IOC work more closely with the host government is likely to get a cold reception. The IOC always has insisted that the host government of 1976 — the Canadian federal administration of Pierre Trudeau caused all the trouble by breaking a promise and denying admission to Taiwan's athletes at short notice.

And it will take a lot of argument to convince the IOC that last year's confrontations — between Canada and laiwan, and between Africa and New Zealand — had anything to do with the Council of Europe

The IOC has not yet taken any action against the 26 African countries which boycotted the Montreal Games. Straight talking is likely when the IOC executive board meets with the national Olympic committees at Abidjan, Ivory Coast, next month.

Meanwhile, the Supreme Council for Sport in Africa, which organized the boycott, has spoken recently of en-ding its ban on African athletes competing against New Zealanders. The ban, if continued, would threaten the 1978 Commonwealth Games at Edmonton, Alberta.

Massengale leads Hope Classic

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — The 66 that staked him to a four-shot lead wasn't the tough part of the day, said Rik Massengale.

"Actually, I'm hitting my irons so good, it was a pretty easy 66." The tough part came after the round. He had to rush from the course to buy a birthday present for his wife,

"It's her birthday and I always put off things to the last minute," Massengale said. "Ah, but I hate shopping for a woman. That's a lot tougher than shooting 66. I didn't know what to get her. Ended up with a watch. Hope that's okay." The six-under-par 66 was considerably more than okay on the tough Tamarisk course in Thursday's second round of the five-day, 90-hole Bob Hope Desert Golf Classic. It went with an opening 64 for a 130 total, 14 under par and the best two-round effort on the tour since late in the 1975

IN THOSE two rounds, he's had 15 birdies and a single bogey, missed only two fairways and two greens. He's had a total of seven birdie putts of 20 feet or more, two of them from 40 feet

'Absolutely fabulous golf," said Bruce Lietzke, the only man able to keep Massengale in sight. "He is definitely the man to beat."

Lietzke is a two-time winner this season and suddenly the hottest man on the tour. He extended to 23 the number of consecutive rounds at par or better with a 67 that put him in second place at 134.

Wally Armstrong, with another 67, was another two strokes back at 136. Tied at 137 were former Hope winner Hubert Green, with a second-round 68, and Alan Tapie, 70.

TAPIE PLAYED at La Quinta, the host course and site of the pros-only final round Sunday. The rest of the leaders were at Tamarisk, where former President Gerald Ford drew another enormous gallery to watch his round with PGA champ Dave Stockton, Flip Wilson and tournament director Saul Kamin.

With all those people out there-it was a huge, huge, huge gallery—it was pretty difficult for the President," Stockton said. "He played pretty well, made three pars, but he was kind of nervous. It wasn't easy for him." The three-man amateur team was eight under par, including their handicaps, but no scores are compiled on individual amateurs

STOCKTON'S SCORE ballooned to a 77 after a front side 35. "The golf course just kind of went out from under me," he said.

KOs highlight Gloves tourney

By PAUL DOMOWITCH R-T Sports Writer

ODESSA - A host of close battles and a pair of knockouts highlighted second night action here Thursday in the Odessa Regional Golden Gloves Boxing Tournament being held at the Ector County Coliseum.

The more than 2,000 fight fans in attendance were treated to 24 bouts, including two junior exhibition matches, nine Junior High Football Division battles, nine Senior High grid division clashes, and four fights in the High School Division. There were no Open Divison bouts Tuesday night. .

After the opening night of com-petition failed to produce a single knockout victory, Thursday's Coliseum crowd witnessed not one, but two, and they came back to back.

In the final Junior High School Division bout, David Garza, a hardpunching 165 pounder from Crockett floored Hood's Steve Wyatt as the bell rang to end the second round of their clash. Wyatt wasn't able to get up.

Then, Bobby Slaughter of Wink opened the Football Division action by putting Pecos' Rudy Jurado away with a thundering right 26 seconds into the third round.

While Wyatt was eliminated by Garza, five other of his Hood teammates did advance in the Junior High bracket, including one by default. Crockett moved up two fighters, as 147-pound Raul Yzaguirre won in addition to Garza. Nimitz, Fort Stockton, and Rankin all advanced one fighter. Wink had eight fighters compete in the Football Division Thursday, and four advanced, led by Slaughter. Odessa, Pecos and Permian all had two winners in that division, while Andrews and Marfa won one bout

Garza and Slaughter, the two knockout winners were both fighting their second bouts of the competition, but neither one showed any noticeable signs of strain Garza had dominated his fight for most of the first two rounds before putting Wyatt away with a flurry of combinations in the third, but

Slaughter's KO punch came out of Jurado had gotten to Slaughter in the final seconds of the first round with a left-right combination, and was scoring early in round two, before Slaughter slammed a devastating right to Jurado's head and ended it.

While those were the only two knockout wins, there were several other exciting battles on the threehour program.

Van Horn's 163-pound Chon Mendez seemed to have gotten the best of Russell Wilson of Permian in their three round Football Divisiom battle. Wilson a unanimous decision.

but the three judges at ringside gave Mendez connected with quite a few punches in the first two rounds as Vilson tried to keep him at bay with a left jab that wasn't scoring. Wilson became a bit more aggressive in the bout's final 45 seconds, but Mendez still seemed to be scoring the key blows. There were only four bouts in the High School Division, but two of them were packed with action from beginning to end. Kenneth Fulton, a

Ali retirement nearing end

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) - Nothing is official yet, but is appears that the suspect retirement of Muhammad Ali is about to end.

erbert Muhammad, Ali's long-time manager, had given promoter Don King permission to set up a May title bout for the heaveywieght boxing champ in Seoul, South Korea

The 35-year-old Ali hasn't fought since scoring a disputed decision over Ken Norton last September, but the Korean venture is viewed as Ali's tune up for lucrative return match with George Foreman-who lost the title to Ali in 1974.

"I'm convinced that Ali wants to fight again," King said Thursday, reiterating that in a Dec. 19 letter from Ali, he was given 90 days to arrange a rematch with Foreman.

KING STILL is trying to put together a money package worthy of an Ali-Foreman bout, but his efforts should gain fresh impetus with the positive signs from the Ali camp. In Korea, King said, Ali would fight "someone of repute," and mentioned such possible opponents as the upcoming young Americans Johnny Boudeaux and Larry Holmes, or South African champion Mike

Two other productions promoted by King will be staged this weekend, even as he works to tie up loose ends on two more bouts scheduled for March 17.

King spent two days in Annapolis, promoting the second of four quarter-final cards of his U.S. Boxing Championships. They will be held Sunday at the U.S. Naval Academy.

On Thursday night, King hustled off to Puerto Rico for the lightweight title bout he promoted between World Boxing Council champion Esteban de Jesus and Buzzsaw Yamabe of Japan.

WHILE IN San Juan for the fight Saturday, it's possible that King will reach a decision on whether that will be the sight of a March 17 bout between Foreman and Jimmy Young.

The Capital Centre in Landover, Md., originally was thought to have the inside track for the heavyweight match, but King said Foreman had objected to fighting at the arena.

According to King, Foreman feared that Maryland officials would bend over backwards for Young, who claimed he was robbed of a decision over Ali at the Capital Centre last April. 'He's afraid that the people of Maryland will repent and that he'll be the victim of their contrition,' King said. King also is trying to arrange a bout between de Jesus and Roberto Duran of Panama, who is recognized as lightweight champion by the World

Boxing Association. They have split two previous en-Accoring to present plans, King would promote the Foreman-Young and Duran-de Jesus bouts for home television on March 17, while also drawing big gates at two different sights

Boxer resumes

life sentence

PATERSON, N.J. (AP) - Rubin "Hurricane" Carter, a former middleweight boxing title contender, and John Artis resumed serving life prison terms Thursday while their attorneys prepared an appeal of the defendants' second conviction of murdering three persons in a tavern here in 1966.

The defendents were transferred Thursday to the Prison Reception Center at Yardville, where they were expected to spend two weeks before being transferred to a state prison.

Warriors return to sharp form

By The Associated Press

The Golden State Warriors, seeking to regain the pot of gold at the end of the National Basketball Association rainbow, finally are panning out ... most recently against the Denver Nuggets.

The Warriors, NBA champions in the 1974-75 season but dethroned in 1975-76 by the Boston Celtics. "probably are playing our best basketball of the year," according to Coach Al Attles.

The affable Attles made his observation Thursday night after Golden State scored a glittering 114-101 triumph over the Nuggets, the team with the best winning percentage in the league. It was the Warriors' fourth consecutive victory.

"What I'm most happy about is our consistency," said Attles, whose Warriors have boosted their record to 30-23 and moved within four games of the Los Angeles Lakers and Portland Trail Blazers, who are in a virtual tie for the Pacific Division lead. "I don't want to see 135 points one night and 85 the next.

Washington Bullets rallied for a 109-103 victory over the Phoenix Suns. the Milwaukee Bucks overcame the Kansas City Kings 112-102 and the Cleveland Cavaliers beat the Indiana Pacers 116-101.

Phil Smith paced the Warriors with 21 points while Rick Barry and reserves Jamaal Wilkes and Charles Johnson each scored 18. Denver's David Thompson collected 27, but only two in the first half when Golden State took a commanding 60-48 lead. Bullets 109, Suns 103

Washington, trailing 101-93 with 4:23 remaining, overtook Phoenix with the help of Phil Chenier's three field goals in the last 1:25 for its seventh victory in the last nine road games.

The Bullets, leaders by one game in the Central Division, were led by Elvin Hayes and rookie Mitch Kupchak with 22 points apiece. Chenier finished with 21. Paul Westphal scored 29 for Phoenix.

Coach Dick Motta of Washington said his team had not come from that far back this season. "I called a timeout when we closed it to eight points and plotted a basket-aminute attack." Motta said after watching his team outdo even his best-laid plans.

Bucks 112, Kings 102 Aggressive play by reserves Rowland Garrett and Lloyd Walton helped the Bucks rally from a 30-10 first-quarter deficit against Kansas

'The turning point was when little Lloyd got us running, and Rowland did a lot of things, not just offensively, but helping out, creating confusion on the floor, mixing it up," said Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson.

Swen Nater topped the Bucks with 28 points and Bob Dandridge scored 21, 17 in the second half. Ron Boone topped Kansas City with 22.

Cavaliers 116, Pacers 101 Elmore Smith, making his first start for Cleveland since being acquired from Milwaukee last month, had 13 points, 13 rebounds and six blocked shots against Indiana. "He hasn't even scratched the surface of his ability, I think," Cavs Coach Bill Fitch said about Smith.

Eskimo couple beat drinking problem

NOME, Alaska (AP) — Lincoln and Emily Milligrock are in their mid-40s, own a two-bedroom home and a late-model pickup truck, have reasonably good health and take a two-week annual

Statistically, they come close to being average

Except that they are Eskimos who beat the bottle after 2 years of alcoholism.

They kicked the habit in a town where more than 40 per cent of their relatives, friends and neighbors have serious drinking problems, where there is no drug or alcoholism treatment center, and where drinking forms the basis of the only social activity outside the churches and the television set.

Along the way they lost one of their six children to crib death. Another son was found dead at the age of 22 floating in Fairbanks' Chena River for reasons which still have not been determined.

A daughter is mentally retarded and lives with foster parents in Anchorage, and the Milligrocks spend their vacation visiting her.

During those two fuzzy decades when they lived from one bottle to the next they hocked several households' worth of furniture, a piece at a time, to pay for liquor. Often Emily's mother kept them alive by spoon-feeding them soup as they lay abed too hung-over and sick to fend for themselves. Lincoln spent days in jail sleeping it off. "And then I woke up one day after a two-week bout

"And then I woke up one day after a two-week bout where I couldn't remember anything, and I found that everything in the house was gone — the new washing machine, all the kitchen appliances, the ivory-carving tools we needed to earn a living, everything we had," Mrs. Milligrock remembers.

"I started drinking to keep Lincoln company. That day we stopped together, and now we stay sober to help each other. It has been the hardest thing we have ever had to do, and the thing we are proudest

Fluent in English, the Milligrocks speak their Yupik Eskimo language at home and prefer walrus and seal meat to beefsteak and bacon.

They married in their teens like most of their contemporaries and find themselves in the generation caught between the old village ways of their ancestors and the new ways of the white men who founded this ramshackle town during the turn of the century gold rush.

Their children cannot speak Eskimo and do not know how to carve or sail the walrus-hide skinboats which dominate Lincoln's life.

Most of their friends still founder in the crosscurrents of the changing culture which almost drowned the Milligrocks. Because they have been on the wagon for seven years, they are viewed with contempt by many companions of their youth who came from the same roots and now find themselves strangled by them.

The Milligrock home is warm and comfortable in this treeless land trapped seven months a year in winter's dark, subzero grip. A modern couch and color television set share places of honor with a living room workbench stacked with prized tusks and an intricate array of carving tools.

A handsome handmade table and the bounty spread atop it is testimony to the family's subsistence lifestyle in a town where milk is $2.35 a half-gallon and grapefruit $1 apiece.

An ever-present dish of homemade cranberry jam is a small part of the results of Emily's summer of berrypicking along the tundra hills ringing Nome. Home-baked bread is served daily. Wild game is a staple, although dwindling herds and tougher government restrictions are making caribou and reindeer more of a treat than an everyday meal.

Although they do not have indoor plumbing, the Milligrocks have electricity and a large freezer is stocked with chunks of muktuk and blubber. Every summer Lincoln and his skinboat crew of nine harvest seal and walrus among the Bering Sea iceflows, sometimes as far as 50 miles west of the safety of Nome's windswept shore.

In December, 1974, as the nation's fourth consecutive winter gas shor-tage was starting to pinch industries in the East and Midwest, the Federal Power Commission issued a staff report with a gloomy message: The United States might literally be running out of natural gas.

The report, entitled "A Realistic View of U.S. Natural Gas Supplies," suggested that the underlying pro-blem was not a failure by industry to search hard enough for new supplies. Rather, it said, the nation may be reaching the physicial limits of its recoverable natural gas resources.

"Energy policy makers would be well advised," the FPC's Bureau of Natural Gas said in its 21-page analysis, "to develop plans and policies keyed to the possibility that the nation may indeed be experiencing the early effects of a resource being pushed toward exhaustion.

Not only were gas shortages worsening with little hope of quick relief, but the nation's ability to cope with shortages was being undermined by rapidly rising prices for oil and other alternative fuels. And for the first time, U.S. natural gas production had declined from the previous year.
"Now," said the report, "an unavoidable and rather rapid decrease in natural gas production will intensify an already serious situation in the decade ahead."

Like so many other somber warnings about dwindling gas supplies, this one went largely unnoticed. Two years later, in the threes of a bitter winter that has amplified a perennial gas shortage to disastrous proportions, the search is on again for ex-

While some consumer critics still suspect the gas industry is hoarding reserves until the federal government lifts price controls on interstate natural gas, industry spokesmen contend that vast amounts of natural gas remain to be discovered - but that higher prices are needed to pay for deeper and more expensive drilling.

Some experts, however, are convinced that more drilling (financed by higher prices) is not in fact likely to produce enough new gas to keep up with domestic consumption.

Among skeptics is Gordon K Zareski, chief of planning and development at the FPC's Bureau of Natural Gas. A principal author of the 1974 report, Zareski said in a telephone interview that he believes its main conclusion - that U.S. gas production may have begun an irreversible decline - is as valid today as it was two years ago.

"The producers are making a simplified argument — just raise the prices and everything will be all right. It's nonsense," Zareski said.

"Anybody who says price increasea s are going to find new reserves has to go through a little logical sequence. Price increases will increase the drilling. But that's already been done and fields as frequently as in the past. And production is still declining.

Zareski notes that the price of natural gas has risen steadily in recent years, both for intrastate supplies and for the interstate gas that Federal Power Commission regulates.

As prices have risen, successful exploratory drilling has soared, almost doubling in a five-year period from 22.6 million feet in 1971 to 41.9 million For all of this drilling, however, the

resulting new reserves reported each year by the American Gas Assn. have remained consistently below annual U.S. consumption, and actually declined from 10 trillion cubic feet of gas found in 1971 to 9.2 trillion in 1975. ese figures reflect the fact that petroleum companies must drill deeper and deeper each year to find the same amount of new gas. Wells three miles deep and more are increasingly common in older producing basins in Texas and Oklahoma.

Having to drill deeper does not necessarily mean the nation is drawing on the dregs of its natural gas supplies. But Zareski and a number of resource geoscientists point to a second trend that suggests the volume of gas left to be found is not as vast as many producers assume.

According to the American Assn. of Petroleum Geologists, the number of "significant" new gas fields found in the United States each year reached a peak in 1957 at 99, declined to a low of 40 in 1968 anand by 1969 had made only a small recovery to 44. Significantly, this dropoff took place during a period of rapid technological advancement in oil and gas exploration.

(The association defines a significant field as one with more than 6 billion cubic feet of gas. Because six years of development history is needed to take the measure of a new field, data beyond 1969 is not yet available.)

The association's figures also show that the number of large new fields has been dropping as a percentage of all newly discovered fields. As the FPC's 1974 report noted. 'Presumably the oil companies are drilling their best prospects but are finding fewer gas deposits of significant size."

This is important, Zareski said, because the gas industry is built on large fields. Out of 6,000 producing gas fields in the United States, the 100 largest contain half the nation's reserves and account for half its annual production.

Most of these large fields were opened in the 1940s, '50s, and early '60s. As they have aged, U.S. gas production peaked at 23 trillion cubic feet in 1974 and is down now to about 19 trillion cubic feet. A similar pattern of increased drilling and declining production has occurred in the oil inmeasurer of natural resources, had greatly overestimated the nation's natural gas resource base.

In its 1974 report, the FPC Bureau of Natural Gas said all of this pointed to the possibility that the U.S. Geological Survey (USGS), the

The USGS at the time estimated that between 720 and 1,450 trillion cubic feet of recoverable gas remained to be found in the lower 48 states alone - the equivalent of two to three times the total amount the nation had consumed since the birth of the industry. These estimates, however, were challenged by several prominent scientists in the oil industry, in universities, and on the Geological Survey's own staff.

The critics' estimates ran between one-third to one-half those of the Geological Survey, and these differences had "drastic" and "crucial" implications for U.S. energy policy, the FPC report said. For, if the lower correct, government efforts to stimulate more exploratory drilling 'are not likely to bring about a significant sustained increase in reserve additions or forestall a decline in production for future years.

(Accelerated drilling could, however, slow the rate at which production was declining, and that was seen as very important.)

The National Academy of Sciences entered the dispute as arbiter but, in February, 1975, concluded that the Geological Survey had indeed erred. The academy said undiscovered, recoverable gas resources remaining in the continental United States and Alaska, both on and offshore, were more on the order of 530 trillion cubic feet, or half the Geological Survey's median estimate.

The Geological Survey has subsequently adopted more sophisticated methods of calculating undiscovered oil and gas and has drastically scaled down its estimates. Currently, the USGS says the United States has 228.2 trillion cubic feet of gas in proved or measured reserves with another 201.6 trillion "inferred" to exist in known fields (including Alaska and offshore Undiscovered, recoverable gas is estimated at 322 to 655 trillion cubic feet - less than half that believed to exist in 1974.

Energy policy planned by Louisiana governor

DALLAS (AP) — Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards says he will outline his plan for a national energy policy to national energy administrator James Schlesinger today in Washington.

Edwards addressed a meeting of oil and gas operators and lawyers in Dallas Thursday and called for total deregulation of both industries.

He said he wished the current energy crunch were contrived. "If it were, it would be a hell of a lot easier to solve," Edwards said. The governor said the fuel crisis

Deep drilling shows hike

DALLAS (AP) - The nation's natural gas operators spent close to a billion dollars last year in deep-well drilling operations, reversing a twoyear decline in such drilling, a survey shows,

Deep wells of more than 15,000 feet are sought to beef up dwindling

Petroleum Engineer International magazine will report in its March issue that the operators drilled 439 of the deep wells, with a suncess rate of 58 per cent success, up from 1975's 46

The new wells averaged a cost of $2 million each, and the average depth of the wells was 17,319 feet.

Operators attributed the high costs to pipe expense and contracting costs, including higher wages for drilling crews.

A wildcat site has been staked in Ward County and a gas extender has been completed in a North Pecos Bill J. Graham, Midland, intends to drill No. 1-L University as a 6,600-foot wildcat in Ward, seven miles northwest of Pvote.

It spots 550 feet from south and 2.173 feet from west lines of section 14. block 18, ULS, % mile southwest of the Block 17, Southeast (Delaware)

PECOS EXTENDER Bill J. Graham also has recompleted No. 1 Geraldine as a gas producer in the Abell (Permian general) field of Pecos, about three miles east of Imperial.

The calculated, absolute open flow was for 160,000 cubic feet of dry gas per day, producing from open hole at 1,341-2,280 feet, natural.

Location is 330 feet from south and east lines of lot 12, section 25, block 9, H&GN survey.

-Development of ol and gas reserves, including those offshore along the Atlantic Coast.

-Acceleration and standardization of power plant design for nuclear power development by eliminating "red tape."

The governor said two-thirds of the remaining natural gas and oil reserves will be found deep underground in Alaska and offshore.

Prospectors slated in Terrell, Runnels

Terrell and Runnels counties drew prospector sites and an Irion field gained an extension. Also, a site was staked in a Pecos field.

L. R. French Jr. of Midland intends to drill a 17,000-foot Ellenburger wildcat in North Terrell County. It is No. 1 Independence.

Drillsite is 1,000 feet from south and 1,320 feet from west lines of section 41, block 2, CCCD&RGNG survey, 24 miles southeast of Bakersfield and 14 mile northwest of a 17,353-foot failure. RUNNELS VENTURE

Tex-Am Drilling, Inc., Abilene, staked site for No. 1 Victor Merfield, a 3,750-foot prospector in Runnels. It spots % mile north of the depleted Tom Chuck (Morris) gas field and 1% mile north of the depleted Morris multipay pool. Drillsite is 11,025 feet from north and 5,660 feet from east lines of Wharton CSL survey 509, eight miles northeast of Winters.

IRION PRODUCER The Mertzon field of Irion gained a fourth Canyon oiler and 2%-mile east and slightly south extension to that pay with completion of Fortune Drilling Corp., San Angelo, No. 2-7

It had a 24-hour flowing potential of 125 barrels of 43.4-gravity oil, with gas-oil ratio measuring 1,840-1. Production is through a 12-64-inch choke and perforations at 6,956-7,068

The pay section had been acidized with 1,000 gallons and fractured with 49,000 gallons of gelled oil and 52,000 pounds of sand.

Wellsite is 1,927 feet from north and 1.991 feet from west lines of San Antonio Ditch Co. survey 7, nine miles south of Mertzon.

PECOS STEPOUT

Four C Oil & Gas Corp., operating from Dallas, intends to drill No. 1 Williams, a 1/2-mile southwest outpost to Clearfork oil production and one location south of the lone middle Clearfork gas well in the Four C field

Location is 1,100 feet from north and 2,550 feet from west lines of section 14, block 2, H&TC survey, 11 miles east of Imperial.

The field has two Clearfork oilers and one middle Clearfork gas well.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Anthony G. Kiritsis, the revengeminded gunman who thought he could walk away free by releasing unharmed a hostage he held for 63 hours, instead faces kidnaping charges after police grabbed him in what he called "a cheap shot."

Despite a promise of immunity from prosecution, Kiritsis, 44, was seized Thursday night after he freed mortgage company executive Richard O. Hall from a third-story apartment he had fooled police into thinking was rigged with dynamite.

Kiritsis, enraged because he felt Hall's company swindled him in a property deal, was held on $250,000 bond awaiting arraignment on state kidnaping charges.

Hall, 42-year-old father of four, was taken out by stretcher, checked briefly at a hospital and returned to

Ford gives Bob Hope V award

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Former President Gerald R. Ford presented Bob Hope with the award for favorite male television entertainer Thursday night in the nationally televised "People's Choice" show. The third annual awards, which the CBS network said are based partly on polls and votes by 10,000 viewers, also selected Carol Burnett as favorite female entertainer Ford, who recently moved to the desert resort of Palm Springs where he is playing in Hope's golf tournament, flew in for the two-hour show.

Also nominated for the male favorite were singer

John Denver and Johnny Carson, but the star of the NBC "Tonight" show refused to take part, furnish clips or accept an award. Carson said in rejecting the show last week, "We in the entertainment industry honor ourselves too

He added, "Commercially sponsored popularity contests among performers are designed primarily as entertainment for the television audience and to gather ratings." John Wayne and Barbra Streisand were named favorite actor and actress, "Happy Days" was cited as favorite television comedy show, "Starsky and Hutch" as the favorite television drama and "The Carol Burnett Show" was picked as the favorite television variety show.

Trainman's bag contained pot

CHICAGO (AP) - Marijuana was found in four hand-rolled cigarettes allegedly found in the bag of a motorman whose elevated tran crashed last week and killed 11 persons, police say. First Deputy Police Supt. Michael Spiotto said Thursday that laboratory tests proved the cigarettes contained marijuana, but added it would be "very tricky" to proge in court that the cigarettes belonged to the motorman because police lost track of them

Spiotto said the department had no plans to charge the motorman, Stephen Martin, with possession of Earlier, tests showed that a residue found in the bag was marijuana.

The residue was tested after the cigarettes were reported missing on Monday. They were found on Thursday, and police said they had been placed mistakenly in an attache case taken from the debris of the wreck in which some 200 persons were injured last Friday.

About 210 million gallons of heating oil and 8.4 million gallons of kerosene - more than one-fourth the oil burned in the United States this winter - are sold every day for heating purposes.

the "trigger price" varies from region to region. It is 40 cents a gallon in the North Central states and 43.5 cents a gallon in the Northeast. Heating oil this week is selling for 39.9 cents a gallon in the North Central states and 43.2 cents a gallon in the

Kerosene and heating oil prices have risen sharply in both regions the last four weeks, spurred by the relentless cold weather and the shortage of natural gas heat. Heating oil prices have been raised by distributors three-tenths of a penny a gallon every week in the last four weeks in all northeastern states and in the three North Central states. The "trigger price" was agreed on by the FEA last July when Congress removed controls from heating oil and kerosene. At that time, prices of both products were about 2 cents a gallon below the agreed trigger price, which was set as an index for the FEA to keep a watch on prices. In an action related to price controls, the FEA Thursday ruled that fuel oil deadlers east of the Rocky Mountains could apply for "entitlements" worth 5 cents a gallon for imported kerosene and heating oil. The entitlements allow fuel oil dealers a 5-cent a gallon discount on imported oil that now costs about 5 cents a gallon more than domestic heating

The discount comes n the form of a rebate paid out of a money pool set up by all major oil companies in the United States. The pool is paid for by companies that own domestic oil supplies and is drawn on by those with little or no domestic oil. The action taken Thursday by the FEA covers only states east of the Rockies, where the weahter has been coldest and demand for heating oil the season. It was taken primarily to highest. January's cold snap drained rebuild oil stocks and avoid any domestic heating oil stocks by more than 15 per cent below what they were last January. The last week of January saw heating oil stocks srop 420 million gallons.

There is no shortage of foreign heating oil, especially in the Caribbean where four huge refineries make products from oil they import from all over the world. Venezuela also operates a huge refinery that has produced a surplus of heating oil. Thursday's entitlements move was an "emergency" action by the FEA that will last only through the end of March, the remainder of the heating winter shortages, but it was also an effort to put a brake on heating oil prices, an FEA source said. Industry sources say the entitlements action will put some curb on prices but not enough to freeze them. They say the natural gas shortage has triggered such a demand for heating oil that the price is bound to rise through the rest of the winter. The FEA reported Thursday that the cold weather and higher fuel prices may add almost $100 to the average homeowner's heating bill, citizen of Washington, tried to act on WASHINGTON (AP) - President Lincoln, by the reckoning of one authority, is a talented practitioner of government by gesture. But, like his predecessors, Carter faces the risk that goes with it, the authority says.

"It's going to be very hard to keep it from ... appearing phony or falling of its own weight. But assuming those risks can be held in bounds, and it'll take an awful lot of assiduous effort, I'm an optimist about it," says the expert, Richard E. Neustadt. professor of government at Harvard University.

Neustadt wrote "Presidential Power," a study of executive authority and how to exercise it. He presidential transition in 1960. when Kennedy moved into the White House, he took Neustadt's book along.

India's Ahmed dies of heart attack

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — President Fakhruddin Ali Ahmed, India's figurehead chief of state, died of a heart attack today, bringing a temporary halt to the heated election campaign threatening Prime Minister Indira Gandhi

The government proclaimed a 13-day period of national mourning but announced that the election of a new lower house of Parliament would be held as scheduled on March 16.

Mrs. Gandhi and her foes united in paying their respects to the 71-year-old Moslem who was elected India's fifth president in 1974.

Vice President B.D. Jatti was sworn in by the chief justice as acting president. A new president will be elected for a full five-year term by the new parliament and the state legislatures, a process the constitution says must be carried out. stitution says must be carried out within six months.

Flags flew at half staff, government offices and some private businesses closed, and thousands went to the presidential palace after Ahmed's death was announced. Many wept as they waited outside to view the body. which will lie in state until burial

Ahmed had had a heart ailment for many years and cut short a state visit to Southeast Asia last week because of illness. He collapsed in his bathroom about 6 a.m. and succumbed later to a massive heart attack at the red sandstone palace where the British viceroys lived before independence in

Mrs. Gandhi, who brought Ahmed into her cabinet when she became prime minister in 366, looked distraught and tired as she emerged from the presidential palace. She was at Ahmed's bedside with his wife, Abida, and the president of the ruling Congress party, D.K. Borooah, when he died.

In a message to the president's family and the nation, Mrs. Gandhi hailed him as "a great Indian, a great gentleman and a great Moslem who represented the best in our tradition, a man of humanity, culture and

The Indian president's functions are largely ceremonial, although he is the titular commander of the armed forces and is empowered by the constitution to appoint the prime minister. But a constitutional amendment passed last year requires him to follow the advice and orders of the prime minister's cabinet. In addition to his wife, Ahmed is survived by two sons and a daughter, and all three were abroad when he died. His elder son, Dr. Parvez Ahmed, is doing medical research in New York City. The younger son, Badar Dureez Ahmed, is a student at Cambridge, in England. The Cambridge, in England. The president's office said the daughter, Samina Khan, was also in the United States on a visit. All were informed of their father's death.

Electric bills shocking

DALLAS (AP) - Electric bills are shocking Texas residents these days as the longrange implications of the current energy crunch begin to hit home.

Figures surfacing in all-electric homes from Dallas to San Antonio emphatically show that Texas, with its energy-production reputation, is not immune to the pro-

In suburban Dallas, the average all-electric home owner is finding this year's bills from $50 to $100 per month higher than those for the same period last year.

The electricity increases are directly related to the natural gas shortage, since gas is normally used in Texas to fire electric generating Garland housewife Liz Plant has called for a public meeting on the issue. There are just too many of us who can't af-ford these kinds of electric bills every month and who want to know what we can do about it," Mrs. Plant said.

The Plant family received a $193 electricity bill last month. A spokesman for a North Central Texas power and light company said use of alternate fuels like oil during the hard winter account for much of the increase. The spokesman said more than half of the electricity for his firm will eventually be produced by lignite coal, which is even cheaper than natural gas. "Our fuel bill has tripled in the last two years," the spokesman said. "We use the cheapest fuels first."

While the words South Texas conjure up images of swaying palms and cool drinks on the patio, residents around San Antonio have lowered their thermostats to 60 in an effort to fight electric bills that have doubled in many cases.

"If we were sitting here all cozy and warm, we might not feel so bad about the bills," said Mrs. Roy Hardy of a rural subdivision north of San Antonio. "But we're dys opened her January electric bill and gasped — the total was $302.26, up from $160 in December.

A spokesman for the electric utility in the subdivision said poor insula-tion and bad weather combined with fuel costs to raise the totals of the
