A QUICK READ OF THE NEWS

Slothfulness pays off

People who spend too much time playing video games have new hope for gainful employment since Nintendo of America announced plans to pay 50 people about $100 a day to play computer games all summer long.

For gamers, the program "is sure to be the best summer job ever," said Peter MacDougall, Nintendo's executive vice president.

In July and August, members of the "Nintendo Street Team" will earn their pay by showcasing the Nintendo GameCube and handheld Game Boy systems at concerts, malls and fairs.

Candidates must be at least 18, file an application and create a two-minute video on why they deserve the job.

Applications must be turned in by June 14, and can be found on the company's website.

'Toy Yoda' suit settled

A former waitress has settled her lawsuit against Hooters, the restaurant that gave her a toy Yoda doll instead of the Toyota she thought she'd won.

Jodee Berry, 27, won a beer sales contest last May at the Panama City Beach (Fla.) Hooters. She believed she had won a new Toyota and happily was escorted to the restaurant's parking lot in a blindfold.

But when the blindfold was removed, she found she had won a new toy Yoda — the little green character from the "Star Wars" movies.

David Noll, her attorney, said he could not disclose the settlement but that Berry can now go to a dealership and "pick out whatever type of Toyota she wants."

Atwood brings home two gold medals

By DELTON WILHITE
Journal sportswriter

AUSTIN — Kyle Atwood returned to familiar territory Friday and added two gold medals to an extensive collection of track medals won during his years at Muleshoe High School.

He successfully defended his 800-meter state championship in his first race of the afternoon, then added his second gold of the day in the 1,600. Atwood's experience in big races was evident, as he appeared relaxed on the track before his contests.

The state meet operates on a very tight schedule, and the runners are on the track in their assigned lanes several minutes prior to the race. While other contestants paced and jumped while waiting for the starting sequence, Atwood stood in his lane with his legs crossed and reviewed race strategy in his mind.

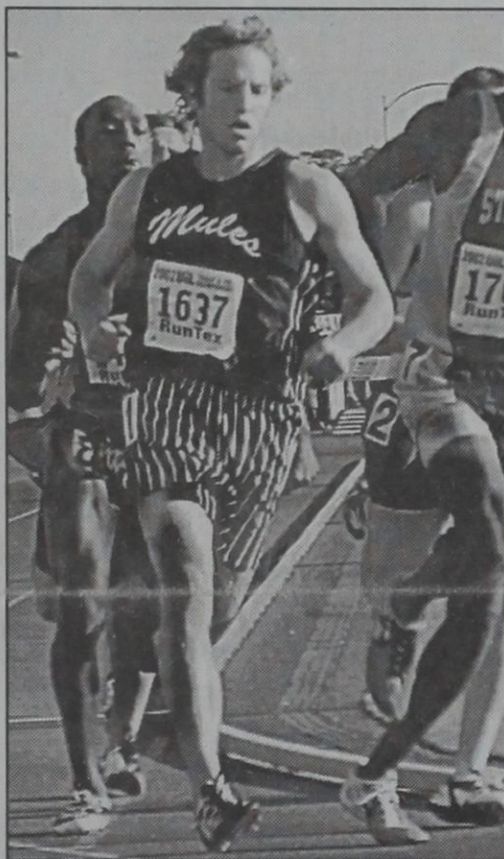

Atwood started the 800 in lane 1 at the back of the stagger. He overtook all but one competitor on the back straightaway, and was content to run in the No. 2 spot through the first lap.

Glancing at the clock, Atwood was disappointed in the first-lap time of 55 seconds because he had recorded a 53-second first lap at state in 2001. As he entered the back straight-

County discusses expanding existing jail

JOURNAL STAFF REPORT

As an alternative to building a new county jail south of town, the Bailey County Commissioners' Court discussed the possibility Monday of expanding the current jail to at least 48 beds.

That project would eliminate at least most of the parking lot to the south of the current jail, so County Judge Marilyn Cox said the county would consider building a parking lot on the vacant lot to the south of the current parking area.

James Parkey, representing Corplan Corrections of Allen, Texas, met with the commissioners about the change of direction. He said he would study the plan of the current jail and bring back a proposal for a future meeting with commissioners.

Parkey said a 48-bed on a new site could be expected to cost $2.9 million, while remodeling the current structure might take $1.8 million to $2 million, depending on how many things need to be upgraded to meet current jail standards.

If half of those beds (or 24) could be kept leased for prisoners from some other entity, Parkey said, the facility would pay its own way.

Bailey County now houses an average of about 10 prisoners for the U.S. Marshal's Office in Lubbock, Sheriff Richard Wills said, and has been offered more.

Parkey urged county officials to look into the possibility of a 96-bed facility, planning to rent 60 of them.

"Your mission is to get someone else to pay for this — that would be the U.S. marshal," Parkey said.

By leasing enough beds to make the payments on the facility, "In 10 years, you've paid for your facility, and you haven't spent a dime of (local) taxpayers' money."

Parkey recommends funding such a facility with municipal revenue bonds, but backing them with certificates of obligation in order to reduce the interest rate.

What he means, he explained, is a project that would be paid off by the revenue generated (municipal revenue bonds) but backed by the county's promise to use tax

Gradee Adrian makes history in art

JOURNAL STAFF REPORT

Muleshoe's Gradee Adrian apparently made a little art history at the recent state University Interscholastic League art competition.

Adrian had two artworks that qualified for state, a ring and an Andy Warhol-style print, and both earned superior ratings in the competition.

High school Principal David Jenkins said Monday that this was not only the first time a Muleshoe student had earned a superior rating in art at the state level, but also the first time a student from this region had been awarded such an honor.

Adrian's ring, "Trinity," had a religious theme while her block print used several copies of the same image in different colors, a style made famous by the late Warhol.

Richard Powell of Muleshoe also reached the state competition with his computer animation project, "God Bless America."

Parker allegation presented to county grand jury

JOURNAL STAFF REPORT

One facet of last year's arrest of Chad Parker went before a Bailey County grand jury last week but no action was taken, District Attorney Johnny Actkinson says.

This involved a statement made by Larry Parker, the suspect's father, that if marijuana was found in Chad Parker's house on the occasion of his arrest, the drug must have been left there by a police informant who had visited the house minutes earlier.

"As district attorney, I take any allegations of violation of law very seriously," Actkinson said in a statement issued Monday. "Planting evidence, as alleged, would be a violation of the law. Therefore, this matter was taken to the Bailey County grand jury that met on May 8, 2002.

"After an investigation . . . it was determined that there was no substance to the allegations made by Larry Parker, that he was not present at the time of the arrest and, therefore, had no personal knowledge of the incident," the statement continued.

Actkinson said Tuesday that jurors were not asked to vote since Parker had no firsthand knowledge about the incident.

money if the project doesn't pay its own way.

This would mean the county would "assess" the certificates of obligation but not "levy" them, Parkey said.

Corplan would build the facility under a lease-purchase agreement that would be paid off in 10 years, unless some other time period is agreed upon.

Parkey expressed optimism that a new jail could be up and running in a year without affecting the sheriff's operations.

He assured commissioners that the company would quote a guaranteed maximum price and there would be no cost overruns.

"You only have one behind to kick, and that's mine," he said.

The possible change of plan on the jail comes as the county's hopes for securing a prison project remain on hold.

The state has been taking prisoners out of private facilities, and as long as a 30 percent parole rate is maintained, there will be extra space, officials said.

Commissioners also heard in detail about the latest health-insurance proposal being offered to the county.

A track season for the record book

away for the second time, he overtook the leader and dashed to the gold medal with a time of 1 minute, 55.43 seconds.

With two hours' rest Atwood was back on the track for the 1,600-meter run and was assigned the fifth position.

More strategy and concentration is required for the 1,600, and during the race Atwood made a decision that scared his fans and coaches but proved a winner.

Only a few steps into the race, Atwood had claimed the lead and owned the inside position. On the back straight, Marc Farris of Goliad and Bo Price of Atlanta passed him. Farris completed the first lap in 65 seconds and Atwood made the decision to stay in third behind Price, allowing Farris to run himself out.

At one point, Farris had a 20-meter lead on Price and Atwood, but during the third lap Price and Atwood began to run Farris down. Atwood passed Price as they began the back straight on the final lap, and Atwood and Price passed Farris before entering the final curve.

Price applied pressure in the final curve, forcing Atwood to begin his kick earlier in the race than normal.

But Atwood's finishing speed at the end proved to be too much for Price, and Farris faded to a distant third. Atwood took his second gold of the day in a time of 4:20.65, Price took silver and Farris bronze in times of 4:21.13 and 4:22.97.

"He is a gamer," Mule track coach Joe Pat Wright said. "He worried me a little bit when the kid from Goliad got out in front of him in the 1,600. I thought he was in pretty good position most of the time, and with his kick at the end I was not too worried. You cannot argue with two gold medals; that is impressive."

"Today was my last athletic event in high school, and I was thinking on the last lap 'it's now or never.' I did not want to be wondering when I'm 45 years old what I could have done."

Stated a tired but jubilant Atwood: "I am probably more tired now than normal -- but I'm not as tired as I would have been had I lost today."

"Ever since I started playing sports in T-ball I have always been a team player. Individual stuff just does not mean as much to me as team stuff. — but two gold medals today are sort of icing on the cake for me."

Sandwiched between Atwood's two events was the Lady Mules' Annie Cox in the 300-meter hurdles. She was battling a leg injury sustained in the finals of the Region I 100-meter hurdles.

Cox used a leg wrap but could not match her performance in Odessa, finishing seventh with a time of 47.80.

This was the sophomore's first time to compete at the state level, and it was in front of more than 15,000 spectators.

It's possible to fight pests without chemical insecticides

By RONN SMITH
Editor

In case anyone is wondering about organic insect control but unsure what to look for, the available insecticides are mainly of two groups — pyrethrum products and neem.

Generally, you will have to search for them. Even when they're on the shelf, they're aren't always easy to find among all the other pest-control products.

Pyrethrum comes from certain Asian chrysanthemums and is good for controlling pests such as aphids, mites and whiteflies, though it affects some species of bigger bugs as well.

The products are often labeled "contains pyrethrins" rather than using the word pyrethrum.

And yes, pyrethrum is the same plant that used to be popular in flower gardens, sometimes still sold as "painted daisy."

The other natural insecticide that's commercially available is neem, a more recent addition to garden centers and not as well-known.

This is more of an insect repellent than killer, but in my limited experience with it, I've found it to be very effective against some things. It seems to work erratically with squash bugs, but ANY help with squash bugs is welcome when the population is high!

It's made from parts of an Indian tree (Aradirachta indica, if you're into that stuff) and is reportedly non-toxic to mammals. Strangely enough, it is also supposed to be beneficial to bees (strange because bees are, after all, insects).

One effective means of pest control that's often overlooked is to release beneficial insects on your property and let nature take its course.

Ladybugs and praying mantises are the most commonly used, and are easily available via mail-order.

Ladybugs are sold by container, from half-pints up to quarts (and probably in bigger quantities, if you know where to find them).

Half a pint provides enough ladybugs for up to 2,500 square feet, so the average yard shouldn't need more than four or five times that amount.

Aphids tend to disappear rapidly after a release of ladybugs!

Praying mantises are sold in their own egg cases, and you just place the cases around the yard. The following winter, you'll find another generation of egg cases in some of the most unexpected spots!

Since I agreed to begin providing sources, let me say that these and other insect helpers are available at Gurney's Seed and Nursery (P.O. Box 778, Yankton, S.D. 57079-0778, or www.gurneys.com).

For the time being, I'm not recommending the ordering of live plants from Gurney's. Even though my family has ordered from the company for 40 years or more, it is under new ownership and the plants this spring were not satisfactory.

The bugs are fine, though, and the catalog lists a great many supplies (even gopher traps), seeds and bulbs.

In light of the flies we've experienced in recent years, there is another beneficial insect available at Gurney's that would seem worth trying.

It's a tiny wasp (and I mean tiny) that lays its eggs on fly pupae, and the parasitic "baby" wasp then feeds on the "baby" fly. According to the catalog, the wasps kill up to 95 percent of their targets.

Happy planting!

It's always nice to start with a clean slate and honesty

"Hi my name is Katye. My hobbies include long walks on the beach, eating Jell-O, and playing with my pets. Although I'm only 16, I'm very worried about the world and want to do all I can to change it."

OK, so really, the only one of those statements that is true is that my name is Katye and I'm 16. I do like Jell-O, but I don't ever really eat it.

I've never seen a beach, much less walked on one. I love my dog and I do play with her, but not enough for it to be a hobby.

Although I am worried

KATYE'S KALEIDOSCOPE

about the world and I do want to change it, I know I'm not the only one who can and it will take a lot more than me to do it.

I wonder why there is that natural instinct to assume some kind of mask or disguise when you meet someone who will never see you (or see anyone who knows you) again.

I recently went to a weekend conference/seminar — the Hugh O'Brian Youth Leadership Conference for the Texas Panhandle — and loved every minute of it. I spent three days with 70 complete strangers, but by the third day we were more like family.

Participants were sophomores from all over the Panhandle, South Plains and Big Country, and none of us had ever met before.

It made for an interesting weekend. What I found the most interesting was the fact that there never was that pretense about who I was, never that desire to "make them like me" — and I loved that. Everyone was real and everyone was loved, and as cheesy as that may sound, it's true.

You know that feeling you get when you meet someone and they've heard a little about you — maybe the truth was exaggerated a bit, but they love that little bit that's not quite true, so you let it slide.

Then out of nowhere, BAM! something that will uncover the truth pops up, OH, NO! What do you do? You tell the truth, and beg for forgiveness (it's always worked for me).

I have found, though, that it is much easier to start with the truth, correct the confusion from the beginning and never have to beg, grovel or any other kind of degrading thing.

It all has to do with dignity in the first place.

Last time I checked (and I have plenty of experience) neither begging nor groveling are remotely close to a formula: lying + uncovering the truth = begging and groveling, OR truth = happiness.

So weigh the consequences, humiliation or dignity, and decide which one you prefer.

GOOD OLD DAYS

40 Years Ago

May 1962 — Gizzards sold at White's Cashway for 29 cents per 8-ounce package. Maryland Club coffee, drip or regular, was for 65 cents for a 1-pound can and Scot paper towels were 35 cents per economy-size roll.

35 Years Ago

May 1967-68 — According to a history of Mother's Day that ran in the Journal, the tradition began with a Miss Ann Jarvis of Philadelphia. In 1908, Jarvis wore a white flower as a token of her love and devotion for her mother.

30 Years Ago

May 1972 — At 7:13

p.m. May 9, a small twister tore the roof from Heathington Lumber and twisted several power poles, leaving the city without lights for most of the night.

On Cinco de Mayo, Mary Pérez, 15-year-old daughter of Mrs. Mike Pérez Sr., was crowned "Reyna de la Fiesta del Cinco de Mayo."

25 Years Ago

May 1977 — On May 13, citizens discovered that the Mule was missing from its pedestal; it was later found on the high school property. Other incidents also were reported at the school that morning.

Online health data can be trap for seniors

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

HOUSTON — "Take an aspirin, go to bed and e-mail me in the morning."

Thanks to the Internet, many people go no further than their home computers to get a wealth of medical advice on almost any topic.

However, this greater accessibility to information has come with an increased need to determine the accuracy of sources, said an expert at Baylor College of Medicine's Huffington Center on Aging.

In a recent survey by the Pew Foundation, 30 percent of senior citizens said the Web has improved their access to health information, but 86 percent said they were concerned about unreliable sources on the Internet.

The same survey revealed that 70 percent of adults are influenced by Web-based information when deciding to seek treatment.

"Just because a Web site looks great and reads well doesn't mean the information is good," said Dr. Robert E. Roush, director of the Texas Consortium of Geriatric Education Centers and associate professor at Baylor's Huffington Center on Aging.

Adding to the problem is that there are about 17,000 health websites, he said.

Roush suggests health professionals recommend websites to older patients.

The Huffington Center on Aging website, www.hcoa.org, features a list of health-related sites reviewed for accuracy by Baylor specialists.

The Huffington Center advises applying four points to health-related websites:

• Authorship — Is the author of the article or source of the information clearly stated? Make sure they have the credentials to weigh in on the topic.

• Attribution — Does the author attribute data to a reputable expert? Sources should be cited clearly.

• Disclosure — Is it clear who funded the site and its content? Knowing whether the information came from an academic health center or a drug company, for example, can help uncover any bias or agenda.

• Timeliness — How recent is the information? Science and health-related issues change constantly. Information should be as current as possible.

All four of these elements may not exist on a website, but a combination can point in the right direction.

"It's really a 'reader beware' type of situation on the Internet," Roush said.

T-ball may be the greatest game in building young athletes

By DELTON WILHITE
Journal sportswriter

As a sports fan, I have been in the stands for more memorable events than I would try to name at any one time.

I began my training as a fan watching my own children as they were introduced to organized sports through T-ball, baseball and Little Dribbler basketball.

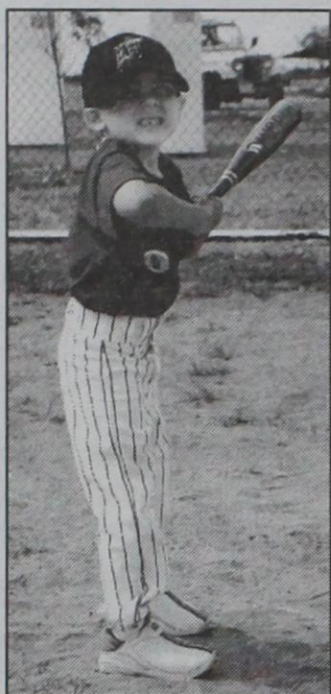

My three children are grown now, but I still enjoy watching young athletes learn to love sports. The progress I have been privileged to enjoy in Muleshoe athletics has been nothing short of phenomenal.

Some of my more memorable moments in the stands involved:

- An overtime win in the final football game of the 1997 season that set the stage for great things to come for Muleshoe.
- Watching my daughter

FROM THE STANDS

By Delton Wilhite

Colby Wilhite, future all-star, takes his stance.

steal an inbound pass against the Friona Squaws with only four seconds in the game, then pass the ball to Britni Gartin, a freshman at the time, for a game-winning shot that clinched the district runner-up spot and put the Lady Mules in the playoffs for the first time in seven years.

• The 2000 Mule football team going 10-0 to stake its claim as the best Muleshoe football team ever and bettering the 9-0 1938 team. The 2000 team went on to play in December and carried us all to Cowboy Stadium for a semi-final game.

• With media credentials, I was near the start-finish line at the state track meet when Kyle Atwood became the state champion in the 800-meter run in 2001.

Those are just a few of the special moments I have witnessed as a fan. However, I would have to say that one of my best moments was a recent weekend when my grandson, Colby Wilhite, played his first T-ball game.

Before his team took the field for the first time in organized sports, the members huddled around their coach along the first-base line. With one hand on top of another and a shout of "Go Marlins," the team ran on to the field.

With 10 players on each team his position would best be described as left center field, just two or three steps farther out than the infielders. Colby plays right-handed but bats left-handed, and his dad hopes he will be a switch hitter.

I was too busy videotaping the first inning — and most certainly his first at-bat — to watch his dad.

But during the second inning, I stole a glance at my son to see how he was reacting. What I saw left me awash in memories of how I might have appeared when he was the player and I was the dad.

His pride and boundless joy were obvious. The hope that Colby's first taste of baseball would be so good that he would love the game and have the desire to hone his skills was evident as my son watched his son.

It was a great day for me and reinforced my belief that T-ball may be the greatest game of all: Everyone gets to play, everyone gets to bat, and everyone is a winner.

The Family of Max Steinbock would like to express our heartfelt thanks to everyone for your calls, cards, prayers, flowers and food during the illness and loss of our loved one. Your kindness has been a great source of comfort and it shall long be remembered. God Bless You.

TODAY'S RECIPE

SESAME BEAN BREAD

Dry ingredients:

- 1 cup Garfava bean flour
- 1 cup tapioca flour
- 1 cup cornstarch
- 2 1/4 tsp. xanthan gum
- 3/4 tsp. salt

1 1/2 tsp. unflavored gelatin

- 3 Tbsp. brown sugar
- 1 tsp. egg replacer (optional)

1 1/2 Tbsp. toasted sesame seeds

Wet ingredients:

- 1 egg plus 2 egg whites
- 1 tsp. dough enhancer or vinegar
- 4 1/2 Tbsp. margarine or butter
- 1 Tbsp. molasses
- 1 1/2 cups water (approximately)

Grease one 8 1/2" x 4 1/2" loaf pan plus several muffin cups or one 9"x5" loaf pan or use a 1 1/2-pound bread machine.

The water temperature will be different for hand-mixing and for bread machines.

For hand-mixing, it should be about 110 degrees; for the bread machine, refer to manual directions.

For both hand- and machine-mixing, combine the dry ingredients in a medium bowl and set aside.

In another bowl, whisk the eggs slightly and add the dough enhancer, margarine (cut in chunks), molasses and most of the water.

The remaining water should be added, as needed, after the bread has started mixing, both in the heavy-duty mixer or in the pan of the bread machine.

For hand-mixing: Turn mixer to low and add the dry ingredients (including the yeast), a little at a time.

Check to be sure the dough is the right consistency (should be like cake batter). Add more of the reserved water as necessary.

Turn mixer to high and beat for 3 1/2 minutes.

Spoon in the prepared pan (for the smaller pan, fill 2/3 full and put the rest in the muffin tins), cover and let rise in a warm place about 35 minutes for rapid-rising yeast; 60 or more minutes for regular yeast or until the dough reaches the top of the pan.

Bake in a 400-degree oven for 60 minutes, covering after 10 minutes with aluminum foil.

For bread machines: Place wet and dry ingredients in the bread machine in the order suggested by the machine manual. Use the setting for white bread with medium crust.

Introducing

"THE GRAY PAGES" Business Directory

A New Service of the Bailey County Journal

What is "The Gray Pages"?

"The Gray Pages" is a business directory shamelessly named after the "Yellow Pages" and geared toward our readers and this area. The specific purpose of "The Gray Pages" is to create a lasting recognition of local products and services through repetition. In other words, we want our readers to automatically think of you and your business when they're ready to buy!

Why advertise in "The Gray Pages"?

New people are moving into Bailey county every day and existing customers need a constant reminder that you're still here!

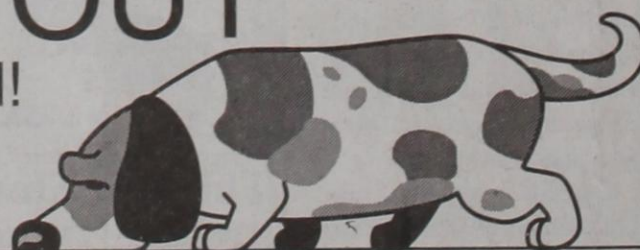

If you're worried that you can't afford to advertise but know that you need to, this is your lucky day! We've LOWERED OUR PRICES DRAMATICALLY for this directory! Your business can get 26 weeks of advertising in "The Gray Pages" for less than $16 a month! Or choose a slightly larger ad for less than $22 a month! Or choose the largest directory ad for just $31 a month!

When and where will "The Gray Pages" run?

"The Gray Pages" will run on a weekly basis (Sunday edition) for 26 weeks. We plan to run this feature near (but separate from) the Classified section. If all goes well, we will be starting the series in April.

For more details, please call our office at 272-4536. Speak to Beatrice or Leah.

Weigh-in results showed White as the best loser.

James and Retha Knowles tied for first runner-up, and second was a tie between Joline Franklin and Polly Otwell.
