FEVERS AND FRUIT.

Let's have a little talk about orchards and gardens as life-preservers. Many a farmer thinks he "can't fuss about a garden" with vegetables and small fruits in ample variety, hardly about an orchard, especially beyond apple trees. So he goes into weightier matters of grain, or stock, or dairy, and eats potatoes, wheat bread, pork and salt beef all summer long; no fine variety of vegetables, no grateful berries, no luscious peaches, or juicy cherries. By October fever comes, or bowel complaints of some kind, or some congestive troubles, most likely. He is laid up; work stops a month, the doctor comes, and he "drags round" all winter, and the doctor's bill drags too. The poor wife, meanwhile, gets dyspeptic, constipated, has fever too, perhaps, and she "just crawls round." What's the matter? They don't know, poor souls. Would they build a hot fire in July and shut the doors? Of course not—in their rooms; but they have done just that in their poor stomachs. How so? They have been eating all summer the heat-producing food fit for a cold season, but not for a warm one.

A Greenlander can eat candles and whale fat, because they create heat. In January we are up toward Greenland—in climate. A Hindoo lives on rice, juicy fruits, and tropic vegetables, cooling and opening the system. In July we move towards Hindostan, in a heat almost tropical. Diet must change too. Have apples, pears, cherries, etc., from the orchard every day, of early and late kinds. Let there be plenty of good vegetables, raspberries, strawberries, etc. It takes a little time and trouble, but it's the cheapest way to pay the doctor's bills. And, bless your dear souls, these things taste good! You study what feed is good for pigs and cattle. All right; but wife and child are of higher consequence; and it's a shame if, with all our great gifts of intellect and intuition, we do not obey the divine laws in our own physical being so well that the doctor shall visit the house less than the horse-doctor goes to the barn. Don't fail of vegetables, berries and fruits. Try it, and you'll say we haven't told half the truth.—Rural New Yorker.

How HENRY WARD BEECHER CAME TO WRITE A NOVEL.—Nearly a year ago Henry Ward Beecher put forth certain views, alienated some who had been his warmest friends, and grieved many more. In a few weeks thereafter the lecture associations issued their respective programmes for the approaching season, when Mr. Beecher's name appeared on but two or three of them, and was soon withdrawn even from these.
"There! you see Beecher has killed himself; he isn't invited to lecture any more," was the sage comment of hundreds. Yet never were men more mistaken. The doctor had more invitations to lecture at high prices than he could find time even to decline, and was threatened with an action for damages by at least one association which claimed to have some sort of engagement with him. Still he did not and would not lecture, simply because Mr. Robert Bonner had said to him, "Name the sum you can make this winter by riding night and day through alternate snowdrifts and mud to fulfill lecture engagements, and I will double it if you will stay in your own comfortable study and devote your spare hours to writing me a story for the New York Ledger."
The bargain was struck; the story written and paid for; and that is the sole and sufficient explanation of Mr. Beecher's failure to address fifty to a hundred associations last winter. He chose to instruct several hundred thousand people at once, thus to earn more money with less fatigue and exposure.

Cincinnati will, in a few years, be known only as a refreshment station for flatboatmen, situated on the Ohio river, so many miles from the Atlantic and Pacific railroad. The Cincinnatians are becoming deeply interested in this threatened result of their local shortsightedness. No man can get through Cincinnati without changing cars. No freight can pass through that city without transshipment. Therefore, the great Pennsylvania Central combination is located to leave Cincinnati out in the cold, and to leave out St. Louis also if its own policy does not change. Beginning to discover this fact, Cincinnati is becoming very much disposed to adopt a new policy, and to grant to railroad companies the privilege of laying connecting tracks through the city. We fancy, however, that it is too late already.

A correspondent states that wheat bread, toasted on both sides, will cure dysentery in a very short time.
Russell gets about $7,000 for his story now published in a London magazine.

We cannot more forcibly illustrate the state of affairs at this time than by an extract from the letters of the incomparable and unquenchable Nabby.

"The politick sky is crecast with fristful clouds. Darkness is on the face of the waters. The waves is a rollin mounthin high, the littenin flashes, ominous thro the gloom, and the deep-mouthed thunder mutters angrily in the distants. Ez a sentinel on the watchtower I look out, and what do I see? I see the old ship uv Stats loaded down with a valuable cargo uv Post-offices, Collectorships, and such, a laborin in the trough uv the sea; her bow-sprit cove is, her top-gallant lanyards bustid, her jib-boom a flutterin in the gale, her captain spliced, and her sheet anker torn to ribbons. [Not hevin bin a sailor, only ez a driver on the Wabash Canal, it is possible my nautikle terms may not be altogether correct. But it makes no difference in the interior uv Kestack.] She is strivin to make her harbor, and is workin manfully. Close behind her is the long, low, rakish schooner Dimocroisy, with all sail set, a tryin her best to overtake her and board her. For a time it seemed ez tho she woud be successful, but alas she is fallin astern, and every minit the distant between em is a widenin, widenin, widenin, and at present writin there ain't the remotest prospect uv their gettin within ballin distants uv each other.

To drop metaphors; by the way, I kin jerk when I feel so disposed, the prospect isn't ez it wuz, and I fear, in fact I feel certain, that the short cut to offis wich the Democracy thought it had found through Androo Johnson's vote, is reely the longest way round. I cannot understand what incoost the Democratic leaders, our choisin standard-bearers, to make sich egregias asses uv themselves ez to place enny dependence on Johnson at all. What cood they hev bin thinkin uv? Wuz not our experience in 1864 sufficient to deter em from makin enny experiment which involved an abandonment uv any uv our principles? Didn't we, in the hope uv ketchin' Abolition war votes, nominate Mick Lellan, and didn't the war men jere us, and flout us, and say, "Behold, we hev better war men uv our own; why shoed we leave home to find that uv which we hev a plenty!" When Androo Johnson, in a temporary fit uv indignashun split on Sumner, why did our people, like idiots, pick him up, and endorse him without givin the matter matoor considerashun without waitin for the fact?"

The Worcester (Massachusetts) Gazette is critical. It says there is a sign swinging in that town on which the word "formerly" is spelled "formally," and asks, "Has Webster's spelling-book fell into disrepute among us?" How about Lindley Murry's grammar? Has that went out of use in Worcester too?

The Japanese Government and damies have bought no less than eighty steam vessels in the last few years. Commercial statistics show that, while the demand for her staple exports has increased the prices of tea and silk having doubled, there has been no increase in the supply of those commodities. There is a want of labor in the land.

REPUBLICAN VICTORY IN OHIO.

The telegraph dejectedly tells us that corrected returns add a few more hundred to the majority claimed for Hays, the Republican candidate for Governor. It is enough to satisfy us that the rebels are doomed to a bitter disappointment; they had already become arrogant over the first reports from Ohio, but now they must hunt their holes again. The wires are reticent about Pennsylvania. Well, we can afford to wait.

ROLL OF HONOR.

We have received from the government printing office, at Washington, a neatly printed and bound book, issued as General Order, No. 96, December 11th, 1866, containing the names of soldiers who died in defense of the American Union, interred in the National Cemeteries at Chattanooga, Stone's River, and Knoxville, Tennessee.

In the United States Cemetery, at Chattanooga, Tennessee, have been gathered the dead from lower East Tennessee, from Northern Georgia, and Alabama, and from all stations and posts within a circle of from 80 to 100 miles radius. This cemetery contains the bodies of 7,268 United States soldiers, known, and of 2,360 United States soldiers unknown; of which 8,850 are white, and 778 colored.

Stone River Cemetery, near Murfreesboro', Tennessee, contains the dead collected from the battle-field and surrounding country. It contains the remains of 23,272 United States soldiers, known, and of 1,374 unknown, of which 4,561 are white, and 85 colored.

The Knoxville Cemetery, which was laid out originally under the direction of Gen. Burnside, contains 1,894 bodies, comprising those who fell at the siege of Knoxville, and all who died during the sad and fatal winter that succeeded, and subsequently during the military occupation of that city. This cemetery was laid out and commenced in a country subject to all the vicissitudes of actual warfare, and at a most gloomy and disturbed period of military affairs in East Tennessee, and the system under which it was managed reflects credit upon the officers in charge.

The last on the list of these Tennessee cemeteries, is the burial ground of Hazen's Brigade, located on Stone River battle-field, near the National Cemetery. The graves are grouped around a monument of brown limestone appropriately inscribed. It contains the graves of fifty-five soldiers.

The list show the name of the deceased soldier, his rank, company, regiment and arm of service, the date of his death, the original place of interment, the section and number of the grave in the national cemetery. The names are divided off in States. When the name could not be ascertained the grave is designated "Unknown," of which there are tens of thousands in the different national cemeteries, speaking in eloquent silence against the enormity of that treason which crushed out the life of so many thousands of men and made so many nameless graves.

It is not claimed by Major E. B. Whitman, who has charge of the mortuary records and reports the facts, that this is a complete or correct record of the Union dead, but it is the best that can be had at present.

The inexperience manifested in all departments during the late war, is very apparent in the careless manner the records of the dead were kept. Major Whitman, in making his report says:

"Doubtless, in many instances, the mortuary records were neglected or left incomplete, from the influence of circumstances beyond the control of the officer in charge; but often from inexperience and want of forethought, and sometimes, unquestionably, from culpable and inexcusable neglect."

"In several cases a large number of interments were made by contractors, and the records and grave-marks were the work of illiterate or careless employes. Frequently the lists kept by hospital stewards and quartermasters' clerks, intended to be correct, have been rendered of comparatively little value from barbaous spelling and heed or careless penmanship.

"Many burials have been made by troops on detached service or on the march. The regimental returns alone will show any official record of these; and the only source of information within reach is to be found in the inscriptions or marks at the grave itself—sometimes a half-obliterated penciling upon a rough board, or a rude carving upon a neighboring tree.

"In preparing a list of all Union soldiers who have died or been buried within the limits of the Department, I shall avail myself, as far as possible, of hospital and surgeons' records; of quartermasters', contractors', and undertakers' lists; of private memoranda kept by chaplains of regiments and by agents of Sanitary and Christian Commissions; and those of gleanings in the woods and by the wayside, in the quiet country churchyard, on the battle-field, and wherever the soldier has fallen and found a thoughtful comrade or the friendly hand of a stranger to make the rude record; and, as a final and sometimes sole resort, in the process of disinterring the bodies for removal to National Cemeteries, of the evidences of identity deposited in the grave itself."

This is but the record of the blood spilled on the soil of but one rebellious State. Truly Tennessee has received a baptism which should consecrate it forever to the cause of republicanism and liberty.

It is a new era in the history of the world, when the most humble soldier who falls in defense of liberty and human rights, in defense of his country against its domestic traitors, has his name preserved imperishably in the records of the nation. And like a cloud of witnesses these dead heroes stand about us to-day to bid us stand firm in the cause for which they poured out their life's blood.

"They rose in dark and evil days,
To right their native land;
They kindled here a living blaze
That nothing shall withstand.
Then here's their memory—may it be
For us a guiding light
To cheer our strife for liberty,
And teach us to unite."

BREVET MAJOR SOLON H. LATHROP.

Brevet Major Lathrop, of the 35th U. S. Infantry, who died at his post in Victoria of yellow fever, on the 7th of October instant, in the 45th year of his age, was a native of New Hampshire and a man who served his country well during the late rebellion. Many years before the war Major Lathrop was editor of the Buffalo Advertiser, and during Fillmore's administration was offered the appointment of Paymaster with rank of Major, but declined. For two years before the war Major Lathrop was engaged in mining operations in Arizona in connection with General Heintzleman, and traveled over most of this western country. At the breaking out of the war he returned home and received the appointment of Captain of Volunteers from his native State, New Hampshire. In 1862 he was made Brevet Lieutenant Colonel and Inspector-General and assigned to duty at Washington, on General Heintzleman's staff. He served with General Heintzleman until near the close of the war, when he was transferred to General Hooker, where he served until the close of the war. In April, 1866, he was stationed in Houston in command of the post, and was also temporarily in charge of the Freedmen's Bureau. In August he was temporarily commanded at Galveston during the absence of General Kiddoo. In January, 1867, Major Lathrop was ordered to this city, where he remained until July 7th, when he was ordered to the command of the post at Victoria.

Major Lathrop leaves a wife and daughter to mourn his death, and many friends who have known him during his eventful life, and especially during the late war. He is spoken of by those who knew him best as being a man of fine ability and warm, generous impulses. New Hampshire will mourn him as one of her favored sons, and, though he died of a pestilence in a State not yet fully acknowledging the Government he served, his memory will be kept green in that long roll of honor of men who have served their country well and faithfully and died at their post.

FRANKLIN PIERCE RE-DIVIVUS.—Our despatches yesterday brought us a fulmination from Democratic fossil Franklin Pierce. He has made a speech in which he declares that the recent triumphs are significant of a great uprising of the people in favor of the white race. Pierce is contesting the eminent position which is held by Buchanan and Johnson in the public contempt. They constitute the meanest trio of Presidents the United States was ever cursed with. Pierce made his speech to suit a Copperhead victory, and of course it is all out of tune since the Cops have failed.

The editor of the Martinsville (Indiana) Gazette says: "The woman who called the attention of another woman to the fact that we wore no vest, whereas they both laughed heartily, is informed that we intend purchasing a vest when her husband pays his subscription bill."

The Acting Secretary of War has approved the sentence of a court-martial which dismisses Captain Charles Brown, of the Thirty-seventh colored troops, with loss of all pay and allowances; forever disqualifies him from holding office under Government; fines him five thousand dollars; imprisons him until the fine is paid; and publishes same and place of abode and the sentence in the newspapers of Massachusetts and North Carolina, all for appropriating the proceeds of the sales of Government property to his own use.

Miss Virginia Penny, of Louisville, Ky., lately whipped a pupil severely, for which the child's father sued her. He recovered one penny and costs—but whether it was the offending Virginia Penny, or lawful currency of the United States, the accounts do not say.

Dickens' tour in the United States will occupy about seven months. His avowed object in coming here is not for curiosity, nor to add to his reputation, but to make money. The charge of admission to his reading will be high—more than is usually charged in this country for a similar entertainment. At his readings in London the price of tickets vary from two shillings to five shillings. The highest priced tickets are in front, and require of their occupants the formality of a dress coat and white gloves, a style of dress that the reader also adopts.

The American Organ makes home attractive, refines and elevates the minds of all,
beautiful in appearance and effects.

SIBERIA OTT,
788 Broadway, New York,
WHOLESALE AGENT.

The immense popularity of these Organs,
and their superior musical powers, is fast bringing them before the public, as the instrument so long desired in American homes.
And although the cost price is but a trifle
over the Melodian, yet the musical advantages, beauty of tone and quickness of touch and action are so far superior, that they are fast superseding the Melodian, and the call is now almost exclusively for the American Organs.

It is adapted to any music from the quietest and most lively, to the heavy tone of the Church Organ. And almost universally they are preferred to the Piano, by persons who have them, yet costing less than half, and only taking a small amount of room.

Send for descriptive circulars giving full particulars and price.
