SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 20, 1869.

NO. 20.

AUSTIN CORRESPONDENCE.

AUSTIN, January 19th, 1869.

Since my last letter, the fight in the Convention upon the division of the State, has thickened. The debate upon the condition of the State was closed on the 12th. Mr. Morgan Hamilton making the closing speech, which was full of good sense and patriotism.

Yesterday, the charter of the New Orleans, Mobile and Chattanooga railroad, came up and was passed to its third reading. The Central railroad, like a dog in a manger, got up an opposition to this rail line company, which proposes to extend its road to San Antonio in one direction, and through Central Texas in the direction of Hardin county. The Central was very active; its agent Jas. H. Bell, like Mephistopheles, was a hand; while McCormick, like Faust, spoke the promptings of his uncle. But the Central was for the first time put "horse de combat," and the prospect is that Texas is to have a real line railroad company to operate within its borders, one that will be able to run a railroad at fares low enough for the independent people of Texas to patronize it. Governor Flanders represents this enterprise and has done much by his suavity and frankness of manners in placing his measure before the Convention, and in overcoming the machinations of the Central railroad.

Last night the Convention went into the "Committee of the Whole," to consider the report upon the condition of the State. The anti divisionists talked very boldly, but as soon as the question was called, they begged for quarter—after a little sparring the question was put upon Davis' division substitute, resulting in a vote of twenty-four against to thirty-six in favor of it.

An amendment was then proposed and adopted to the effect that four delegates, chosen from the North, East, Middle and West, with two from the State at large, be sent to Washington to represent the condition of the State.

The committee then rose and reported its action to the Convention and asked to be discharged, which was done immediately, the question recurring upon the substitute adopted in the Committee of the Whole.

Thomas of Collins, introduced a substitute, in effect, a revised copy of the Constitution of '45—voted out of order.

Bryant of Grayson, introduced a substitute proposing lines, previous question moved cutting off all amendments. A call of the House made by Jack Hamilton, in which he was sustained by fifteen, the requisite number, and thus the House was kept under call until about midnight, when, in consequence of the old and infirm, the Convention took a recess until 10 o'clock, this morning.

Many amusing incidents occurred. Immediately after the vote in the committee of the Whole Austin seemed to get dismal again, as if the manner of a bed of ants, and they began to pour into the lobby. The night wore on, the lobby lights disappeared, and still the convention remained in the throes of division. Motions to adjourn were repeatedly made by the great Statesmen from Texas but always voted down; motions to adjourn to Galveston and other points voted down. At last about one o'clock we adjourned, and in the midst of darkness as black as a black cat and a driving rain, the sages of the reconstruction convention departed to their homes to again renew the fight today. The call was kept up by Jack Hamilton and his fifteen until 12 o'clock, when Mr. Morgan Hamilton moved to adjourn until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock remarking that it was evident that the "fifteen" could under the rules keep the convention in session until Christmas, and as the day was cold and damp he proposed to adjourn until tomorrow. Then the fight will again be renewed.

Southern Society.

In making up our social estimate of the South we find the following classes: 1. Those who have always been loyal, including the majority of the freedmen; 2. Those who, like Gen. Longstreet, admit that Secession is not hereafter to be thought of, and that obedience to the laws is the best policy; and, 3. The rangers and ruffians who, in spite of pre-emptive defeat, would go to war again tomorrow. But these creatures were had citizens before the insurrection, just as they are had citizens now. They are an uncomfortable element of society; but if the North does not once more fall into the error of appealing to them, more political importance than properly belongs to them, does once more permit legislation to be directed by mere speculations, does not, for the sake of peace, lapse into lamentable cowardice, but, on the contrary, does maintain a proper degree of self-respecting persistence the Union has now at the South, in honestly reconstructed Rebel like Gen. Longstreet, and in the new voters, allies and supporters such as it never had before, and upon whom it can confidently rely. The fires of faction must soon go out for want of fuel. Every day will diminish the number of savage memories and of rampant recollections. The question of Secession has had a sanguinary adjudication, and every hour will lessen this brood of howling dissenters from the verdict of war. They will be killed in duels. They will be slaughtered in bar-room. They will be locked up in penitentiaries. They will talk till nobody hears, and prophesy until nobody heeds them. They will fade gradually as a class, simply because as a class the regenerated society of the South has no use for them, and will care no more for their opinion of the war than for their opinion of Mary Queen of Scots. And with them, may we not hope, will depart forever those foolish jealousies and hatreds, those causeless but mischievous animosities, which have already borne such bitter fruit! If we at the North have had our share of these, as some assert, may God send us speedy repentance and reformation! If there does exist in the States lately in rebellion, as we have some reason to believe, a good, solid substratum of common sense, may it be the crowning glory of the incoming Administration to make that most valuable quality predominant in the public affairs of the South.—N. Y. Tribune.

General Thayer on Universal Amnesty and the Removal of all Political Disabilities.

At the late New England dinner in Washington a letter was read from the poet, Whittier, in which he expressed a sentiment in favor of universal amnesty to all in the late rebellion and the removal of all political disabilities.

General Thayer, Senator from Nebraska, in responding to a toast, among other things, said: "The pure-minded, the noble Whittier, sends us a sentiment to-night in favor of universal amnesty and the removal of all political disabilities. With me no more amnesty or removal of disabilities till the life of the humblest individual who walks on God's footstool, be he white or black, is as sacred in Camilla, Georgia, or in New Orleans, in Louisiana, as it is in the peaceful village of Amesburg, in Massachusetts."

These bold, fearless sentiments were received with great applause.

William Greely is to be Grand Postmaster General, at least Col. Badeau, General Grant's confidential aid-de-camp had a private interview with H. G.

"EDITORIAL CONVENTION."—The papers are talking about an Editorial Convention to meet at Houston on February 1st. As the reconstruction laws of Congress do not admit of disloyal assemblages, we call attention of the commanding General to this proposed assemblage of murderers' apologists.

The Convention.

We give an unusually interesting communication in to-day's issue from our Austin correspondent, detailing the thrilling scenes of the 15th in the Capitol, attending the defeat of the minority in their efforts to prevent Reconstruction.

The firmness of the majority, together with the brilliant course of the President in his management of the House, afforded one episode, at least, which will link the names of Divisionists for all time with the great achievement which they are about to consummate.

"OATH CONTROL IT."—The Lavois Commercial prints an extract from a letter written by a member of a first family, Col. Claiborne of Louisiana, which contains this sentence:

"The parish in which Live (Point Coupee) has a large negro majority, and for some time we will not be able to control it. This increases my embarrassment, and negro domination is a sad fact."

Now we venture to suggest to Col. C. with all his Confederacy record, until he learns to attend to his own business, and learns to leave the "control" of the negro to more loyal hands; he will find his embarrassment increasing in more ways than one. Mr. Tanton has been described by some of his verdict is, that you, and your kind, have thousands of noble southerners may go to—-but we don't want them in Texas until they come down off of their high horses.

Their Tactics.

The Austin Republican, the Convention Bulletin—papers pretending loyalty—and the San Antonio Herald, in articles emanating from the Pease Ring at Austin, are engaged in the very unprofitable pastime of calling General E. J. Davis and the divisionists of the convention, secessionists.

Now, with the exception of Judge L. D. Evans and a few Democrats who really have the good of the State at heart, General Davis and his co-workers are Radicals of the extreme sort—like General Grant, members in good standing in the Union League, and in favor of disfranchising rebels until they consent to acknowledge the liberty and rights of all people.

The object of these articles is to make capital at Washington for the Ring at Austin, and save the present state of the "Texas Central and Houston Railroad."

What are the instruments used? The Herald gleamed over the assassination of Mr. Lincoln, an evidence of beastiality that even the Confederacy furnished but two or three samples of. The men who owned and conducted the paper then are the owners and conductors of the paper to-day. It is scarcely necessary to argue the question whether this sheet is actuated by love for the Stars and Stripes in its misrepresentations.

Flake, the owner of the Galveston Bulletin, at the outset of the war became chief Quartermaster of a Confederate force organized to protect the coast against Federal invasion, at a time when conscription was not in force. In 1864 Flake entered into a written contract with Magruder to publish a secession paper in the English language at Galveston; the failure to comply only arose when the Confederate commander found his funds too limited. If Mr. Flake denies this he will do so at the risk of his veracity.

The Austin Republican our readers already know. We have never seen money paid to the conductors, but from the first twenty-five thousand dollars said to have made its appearance in the lobby of the convention from the Texas office of that Road, down to the day Governor Pease surreptitiously deposited the so-called bonds which proposed to swindle the minors of the State out of the princely School Fund and turn it, amounting to three-quarters of a million, into the capacious pockets of that concern—the Governor's acknowledged official organ—the said Republican has stood steadfastly by the proposed, and against the State.

The day after a great struggle, the three-quarters of a million, which was the divisionist's completed, will have numbered the dangerous Ring at Austin. The Austin Gazette, and Republican, the San Antonio Herald, and Flake's Bulletin are left standing together fighting the battles of the Ring. We hope they have not lost money by it.

UNIVERSAL AMNESTY.—The poet Whittier wrote during the holidays, urging universal amnesty. As much as the oppressed loyalists of the South love his noble name they would rather his loyal right arm were at once palsied for all time.

Horace Greeley recommends amnesty to the disfranchised in the South, no living insurance equals the talismanic name of Greeley in loyal Southern cabins. Rather than accept his theory—which to them means degradation worse than death—loyal men in the South would rather his tongue would never utter another syllable. Mr. Greeley proposes to sacrifice the living for the unborn. Is it necessary?

THE TERT OATH.—Our telegrams intimate that we shall soon have some commotion among Texas officials. We are of the belief that orders will soon emanate from District Headquarters, that will revolutionize the Civil service in this State; they will not be left to the non-omission of the Provisional Governor, either.

AUSTIN CORRESPONDENCE.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, January 16, 1869.
 Editor of the San Antonio Express.

This has been the stormiest day in the history of the convention. Your readers are aware that for over five weeks a minority under the lead of Jack Hamilton has called the House upon the question of division. The call of the House is a demand that all the members be brought in who have no excuse to be absent. Four members who have not reported this session are away without excuse. Messrs. Foster and Coleman have left the State; Mr. Yarborough on account of age and ill health has not reported, and has signified he would never attend again; Mills, of El Paso, left the convention during the last session in high disgust, without asking to be excused, because Montezuma Territory failed.

At the morning session yesterday a resolution was adopted appointing a special committee to inquire into the absence of Messrs. Foster, Yarborough, Coleman and Mills. Last night the committee reported the facts and suggested that the rules in relation to a "call of the House" be changed so that members who have not answered for five days previous to a call of the House shall not be counted. This morning at about 11 o'clock the President announced the business to be the report of the Special Committee. This was the signal for Jack Hamilton and his party to raise a row; they broke for the lobby and attempted to break a quorum. The yeas and nays were called. When Bellinger's name was called he refused to vote; the President called upon him to vote or be subject to punishment for contempt; he voted. Bryant of Grayson came next; he refused to vote; the Sergeant-at-Arms was required to arrest him and bring him within the bar; he then sent up his resignation. Several members of the divisionist side, including the President, begged Mr. Bryant to reconsider his resignation, when he deliberately got up and stated that his reasons for resigning were because the convention had become odious to his constituents and his self-respect demanded the step; his resignation was accepted. Cole then refused to vote, and a motion to expel him was made. A debate sprung up, in which Jack Hamilton threatened the convention with destruction when it came his turn. The motion to expel Cole was withdrawn and he was put under arrest. Jack Hamilton's name was called; he refused to vote, giving as his excuse that he did not propose to become a party to the matter; the President told him he had the privilege of recording his vote in the negative; he still refused, and was ordered to be put under arrest for contempt. The firm and manly bearing of General Davis and the good humor and steadiness of the friends of division began to tell upon the obstructionists, and Jack Hamilton wilted and signified his readiness to vote, particularly when the President ordered the Sergeant-at-Arms to take the refractory members out of the House and keep them in custody. One after another the ANTIERS refused to vote, and when ordered under arrest knocked under. The vote was finally completed, and the result was a victory for Division and LAW AND ORDER. The question then reported on the resolution reported by the "Committee of the Whole," including Davis' Division Substitute and a resolution sending a delegation to Congress. The House was kept under call. The lobby was cleaned of stragglers. Sumner, an anti-divisionist, tried to escape through the door, but was arrested by the Sergeant-at-Arms, when he threatened to kill that officer; Mr. Evans of Titus interfered and called the attention of the President to Mr. Sumner's actions. The vote was called, resulting in another victory to the division men and to the cause of law and order—the resolutions passing to a third reading, to come again in their order.

The President then called the attention of the House to the assault of Mr. Sumner on the Sergeant-at-Arms. Mr. Sumner apologized. Mr. Varnell moved a reconsideration of the vote accepting Bryant's resignation, he having signified his repentance over his action. It was reconsidered and he was allowed to withdraw his resignation. So ended the hottest contest ever witnessed in the Hall of the Texas Capitol.

It is said that the anti-divisionists still hope to win—how cannot be easily imagined. Argument has failed them; bullying has failed them; allbustering has failed them; and their extremist measure has failed them; and I don't believe that they can effect anything by bribery or trickery. They are fairly beaten, with all the vantage ground in their favor, and like true men they ought to yield.

I learn that early in the morning these anti-divisionists held a caucus and concocted the conspiracy which they signally failed to carry out. In the language of the old hero of San Jacinto—"Glory enough for one day."

The Western Delegates Indicted for Treason against Austin.

The following copy of an indictment found against the western delegates has been sent us, with the promise of sundry affidavits by numerous citizens of Austin, in fact the whole place, "ring" thrown in.

COPY OF INDICTMENT FOUND.

STATE OF AUSTIN, } S. S.
 County of Austin, }
 In the name and by the authority of the State of Austin:

The Grand Jurors of said county and State, tried, empannelled and sworn to enquire into and present offences committed against said State of Austin on their oath do present. That heretofore to wit: on the day and date when such things are usually done, and within said county and State, certain individuals to wit: W. M. Varnell, E. Degener, J. P. Newcomb, M. C. Hamilton, A. P. Jordan, J. Keuchler and E. J. Davis, by trade and profession constitution makers, but otherwise known and designated by their friends and admirers as the "seven wise men of the West," not leaving the fear of Austin before their eyes, but moved and instigated by the evil spirit called Division, did perversely, combine and confederate for the purpose of kidnapping and separating from the said State of Austin, all chance of governing and controlling the loyal subjects thereof, and of dividing the Public Pap among said "loyal subjects" thereof a prerogative heretofore Peacefully enjoyed by the same. Wherefore, the Jurors, aforesaid, upon their oaths aforesaid, do say that the said Wm. M. Varnell, and his other said confederates in manner and form aforesaid are guilty of high treason, against said State of Austin, contrary to the form of the statutes in such case made and provided, and against the peace and dignity of the Austin ring.

(Signed) M. W. GINS,
 Foreman of Grand Jury.

More Indians.
 SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 15th, 1869.
 Editor San Antonio Express:

I have just received a letter from my father-in-law, Mr. Schuessler, from Cherry Springs, 16 miles above Fredericksburg, informing me that the Indians had paid the settlers at that place, a visit on the 3rd and 4th inst, and have carried off many horses and mules, two of them he owned himself. They took these animals from the stables at night, and returned the next night to steal some more. The same Indians visited also my brother in law's place on the same night and took his ware and went into his yard and took off all the clothes which were hanging on the clothes line, and carried off one of his bee hives; he, himself is here in the Government employ as saddler, and is astonished that the Indians did not commit more depredations, as there were no other person in his house but his wife and his four little children.

General Canby should be earnestly requested to punish these red-skins, and make a different disposition of the United States troops stationed in Texas, and keep out continual cavalry scouts, as was done here before the war by the several Department Commanders in Texas.

Yours truly, &c.,
 G. FRASCH.

Washington, Jan. 18.—Senate offered a petition for revision of amendment to the naturalization laws, alleging gross frauds.

Sherman, on Finance committee, reported a bill legalising coin contracts, and reserving one hundred and forty millions annually, from customs, for payment of interest and reduction of the principal of the public debt, and authorizing exchange of lawful money for new ten, forty, and five per cent Gold bonds, to be issued for the purpose. Also, the issue of Government demand Gold notes, not exceeding an amount of coin in the Treasury, to be used for the purchase in New York, when in market, of six per cent securities, but the amount expended for this purpose not to exceed the amount of legal tenders surrendered for new bonds. The bill authorizes National Banks to issue Gold notes to the extent of sixty-five per cent of amount of Bonds which they may deposit as security, regardless of present restrictions of total circulation to their hundred millions.

HOUSE.—Butler introduced a bill regarding negro Church property in lately rebellious States. It provides that property used for Churches, religious education and other like purpose, bought or given for the use of congregations or Associations of colored men, heretofore held by Trustees for the benefit of such Associations, shall hereafter rest in Deacons, Elders or Trustees chosen by such Associations, who are made a corporate body.

Word introduced a bill preventing loaning of money and United States legal tenders and forbidding National Banks paying interest on deposits, enabling Louisiana to receive public lands donated by the United States for Agricultural Colleges.

Bingham introduced a resolution to admit Mississippi to representation, distributing number and rank of Government employes among several States and Territories.

Joint resolution introduced, against granting money and lands to railroads. Divided, part against granting money, passed; against granting lands, tabled.

Joint resolution passed that persons now holding office in the States not reconstructed, except where disabilities have been removed, and cannot take the test oath of July 29, 1862, be removed from office within thirty days from the passage of this resolution, and that District Commanders fill their places with men who can take the test oath; this passed without division.

The President nominated John Gandelin Secretary of Legation to Mexico.

OFFICIAL LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES

Passed at the Second Session of the Fortieth Congress.

ARTICLE XI.

For the better security of commerce between the citizens of the United States and the citizens of Nicaragua, it is agreed, that if at any time any interruption of friendly intercourse, or any rupture, should unfortunately take place between the two high contracting parties, the citizens of either, who may be within the territories of the other, shall, if residing on the coast, be allowed six months, and if in the interior, a whole year, to wind up their accounts, and dispose of their property; and a safe conduct shall be given them to embark at any port they themselves may select. Even in case of rupture, all such citizens of either of the high contracting parties, who are established in any of the territories of the other in trade or other employment, shall have the privilege of remaining, and of continuing such trade or employment, without any manner of interruption, in the full enjoyment of liberty and property, so long as they behave peacefully, and commit no offense against the laws; and their goods and effects, of whatever description they may be, whether in their own custody, or intrusted to individuals or to the State, shall not be liable to seizure or confiscation, nor to any other charges or demands than those which may be made upon the like effects or property belonging to the native citizens of the country in which such citizens may be. In the case of debts between individuals, property in public funds, and shares of companies, shall never be confiscated, nor detained, nor sequestered.

ARTICLE XII.
The citizens of the United States and the citizens of the republic of Nicaragua, respectively, residing in any of the territories of the other party, shall enjoy in their houses, persons, and property, the protection of the government, and shall continue in possession of the guarantees which they now enjoy. They shall not be disturbed, molested, or annoyed in any manner on account of their religious belief, nor in the proper exercise of their religion, according to the tenets of their respective churches, provided they respect the religion of the nation in which they reside, as well as the constitution, laws, and customs of the country.

Liberty shall also be granted to bury the citizens of either of the two high contracting parties, who may die in the territories aforesaid, in burial places of their own, which in the same manner may be freely established and maintained; nor shall the funerals or sepulchres of the dead be disturbed in any way or upon any account.

ARTICLE XIII.
Whenever a citizen of either of the high contracting parties shall be forced to seek refuge or asylum in the rivers, bays, ports, or harbors of the other, whether as a merchant, whether merchant or war, public or private, through stress of weather, pursuit of pirates or enemies, or for any other cause, he shall be received and treated with humanity, and given all favor and protection for repairing his vessels, procuring provisions, and placing themselves in all respects in a condition to resume their voyage without obstacle of any kind.

ARTICLE XIV.
The republic of Nicaragua hereby grants to the United States, and to their citizens and property, the right of transit between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans through the territory of that republic, on any route of communication, natural or artificial, whether by land or by water, which may now or hereafter exist, or be constructed under the authority of the United States, and enjoyed in the same manner and upon equal terms by both republics and their respective citizens, the republic of Nicaragua hereby reserving its rights of sovereignty over the same.

ARTICLE XV.
The United States hereby agree to extend their protection to all such routes of communication, as aforesaid, and to guarantee the neutrality and financial use of the same. They also agree to employ their influence with other nations to induce them to guarantee such routes, and to employ their influence with the United States to employ their influence with other nations to induce them to guarantee such routes, and to employ their influence with the United States to employ their influence with other nations to induce them to guarantee such routes.

ARTICLE XVI.
The United States hereby agree to extend their protection to all such routes of communication, as aforesaid, and to guarantee the neutrality and financial use of the same. They also agree to employ their influence with other nations to induce them to guarantee such routes, and to employ their influence with the United States to employ their influence with other nations to induce them to guarantee such routes.

ARTICLE XVII.
The United States hereby agree to extend their protection to all such routes of communication, as aforesaid, and to guarantee the neutrality and financial use of the same. They also agree to employ their influence with other nations to induce them to guarantee such routes, and to employ their influence with the United States to employ their influence with other nations to induce them to guarantee such routes.
