An Eccentric Abolitionist.

Col. Forney, since his retirement from the conduct of The Daily Chronicle, in Washington, has begun a series of exceedingly interesting papers, entitled "Anecdotes of Public Men," in the Sunday Chronicle, of which he still retains the control. No man in the country is better prepared, by long and intimate intercourse with public men of all parties, for the last and most interesting quarter of a century, to furnish material for the future historian. In his last week's paper he gives this account of a meeting between an old Abolitionist of those days (and a leading Protectionist of these), Dr. William Elder of Philadelphia, and Messrs. Stedell, Breckinridge, and Douglas, with some fifteen other leading Democrats, at his table, in Washington, in 1856:

When the restraint of the first course or two was thawed by a generous draft of champagne, those who sat at my board were quickly attracted by the agreeable manners and dazzling wit of my abolition friend. He gradually monopolized their whole attention by his comments on books and men, and his full knowledge of the resources of their own section. At last one of them said: "Pray, Dr. Elder, how is it that one of your tastes and learning should be so opposed to Southern rights and institutions?" That opened the ball, and, nothing loth, he answered with a story I can never forget—a story which I believe has never been forgotten by any one who heard it: "When I lived in Pittsburgh, gentlemen, said the Doctor, "where I had the honor to vote for James G. Birney for President in 1844, being one of a very, very small party, which will soon control Pennsylvania by an Andrew Jackson majority, we had a strange character among us who occasionally made speeches against Slavery, and whose peculiarities were that when he became excited he gave way to uncontrollable tears and oaths. I always went to hear him, for there was an odd fascination about him. One night he was advertised to speak against the fugitive slave law—a measure which roused him almost to madness—and I was among the audience. He closed his harangue with a passage something like this: "Let us apply this law to ourselves—brethren and sisters. I live about a mile out of town, and rarely get back to my quiet home till evening; and the first to welcome me at the garden gate are my little girl Mary and my bright-eyed son Willie—the joy of my heart, the stars of my life. Suppose, when I get home to-morrow, I meet my wife, instead of my children, at the door, and on asking for my darlings, she tells me that a man called John C. Calhoun of South Carolina, and another man called Henry Clay, of Kentucky had come, in my absence, and carried them down South into Slavery! How would you feel in such a case? How do you think I would feel? What would I do? you ask. Well, I will tell you. I would follow the fore-said John C. Calhoun, and Henry Clay; follow them to the South; follow them to the gates of death and hell; yes, into hell, and there cram the red hot coals down their damned, infernal throats! "And this outburst," added Dr. Elder, "was punctuated with alternate sobs and swearing. I have given you one of the many causes, gentlemen, that have confirmed me in my abolitionism."

It is impossible to convey an idea of the manner in which Dr. Elder told this incident, or the effect produced upon the Southern men around him. They listened with profound and breathless interest, and more than one with a pale cheek and moistened eye; and though they did not say they agreed with the eloquent Doctor, I saw that they respected him for the candor and warmth with which he had replied to their equally candid question.

A Railroad Incident.

We have just been placed in possession of the facts of a case a little out of the run, which we hasten to give to our readers. Conductor Drury, of the Pacific express train on the Pan-Handle railroad, which left Columbus at 8 o'clock on Friday evening last, when between Steubenville and Denton, was notified that a lady passenger desired to speak with him. Upon arriving at her side he found her evidently in some trouble and embarrassment. To his affirmative response to the query whether he was a married man, the lady stated that she was on her way from Cincinnati to meet her husband in New York, and that a crisis was impending involving the appearance of an additional passenger. This startled the conductor, of course, but, with a heart as big as an elephant, he set to work to make the lady comfortable. All the passengers were hastily shuffled, into another car, and such female assistance as could be procured on the train was brought into requisition. In a brief time the little stranger—a fine, bonning girl is the phrase—put in an appearance, and the conductor congratulated himself on his happy escape from a dilemma. With a heart overflowing with sympathy he arranged an impromptu wardrobe for the very young lady from his own under-clothing. It was not exactly in the style of those "infant outfits" advertised in the New York papers, yet it served good purpose.

But here the history of the unusual case does not end. The train left Steubenville on time, and was soon thundering through and around the hills of West Virginia, when the conductor received another shock. This time it was a fine, bouncing boy. Where would all this end! The perspiration started upon the conductor's brow. Two already—one a Buckeye and the other a Pan-Handle! The remainder of Drury's line of course went to start the little fellow on his journey through the world, and arrangements were about being made with some of the passengers for a further supply, when the pleasant announcement reached him that "the mother felt very well, considering." The engineer was then "rung" to put on steam, and in due course of time the train reached Pittsburg, and the lady and the two unticketed passengers were tenderly conveyed to comfortable quarters at the Union Depot Hotel, when a telegram was forwarded to the husband in New York. The latter's history we are unable to tell, but it may be imagined that the husband was lifted out of his boots at the announcement, and hurried to the side of his greatly increased family.—Cincinnati Chronicle.

Continental Unification.

The constantly agitated state of European powers, and the more immediate disasters to which the French nation has been compelled to submit, have forced home upon the minds of the thinking portion of our people, and of our neighbors in the British American colonies, the necessity of continental unification. Like causes produce like results. A plurality of powers in Europe demands immense standing armies, and causes frequent wars. A unity of interests under one continental government will dispense with armies and guarantee perpetual peace. We know this. Our Northern neighbors feel it. Shall we improve the lesson? The indications on both sides of the boundary are strangely in the affirmative. Even in England the belief prevails that the inhabitants of the North American colonies and the United States will soon make their fortunes under one Government. So the Hon. John Bright expressed himself when he said:

I see one vast confederation, stretching from the frozen North in one unbroken line to the glowing South, and from the wild billows of the Atlantic, westward, to the calmer waters of the Pacific, and I see one people, and one law, and one language, and one faith, and over all that vast continent the home of freedom and refuge for the oppressed of every race and every clime. A prominent gentleman in New Brunswick writing, January 12, to a friend in Washington says: "I have read the President's message with more than usual interest; and am noting carefully the passage of events connected with ourselves in North America. Everything goes to confirm my former convictions that we are one people, with one political and social destiny; and that the sooner we enter upon our one future the sooner will North America enter upon its career of national supremacy. This may be too lofty a conception to entertain, but I certainly see enough, and know enough, to induce me to cherish it. The political consolidation of these two adjoining countries is an absolute necessity to the prosperity of both. I shall be glad to see any reasonable policy adopted by the United States towards the Provinces that will hasten the union of both countries."

To be successful, this grand idea of unification must not be left to any one government to be developed. The labor, and the honors too, must be shared by the Governments and the people on both sides of the boundary. Let there be union in the effort, as well as in the object.—Washington Chronicle.

A GREENHORN sat a long time, very attentive, musing, upon a cane bottom chair. At length he said: "I wonder what fellow took the trouble to find all them air holes, and put straws around 'em."

The late George Tickner had a decided aversion to radicalism and radicals. It is related that Thackeray once asked him if he knew Theodore Parker, and that he replied in the negative with a look of disdain; whereupon Thackeray said, "Then I am afraid you don't move in the best society."

The Brownville (Tex.) Bee says: "All that the Southern people can see, or are likely to see while this generation lives, is to raise cotton at thirty cents a pound and sell it at twelve and a half cents."

The Mysterious Valise.

A STORY OF A TRAVELER'S TROUBLES AS RELATED BY HIMSELF.

This morning there came to us a legal gentleman of the city, who, contrary to his usual practice, had lost his temper. Indeed, he seemed so very much out of humor that we thought something out of the usual course—very far out—had transpired to trouble him.

The gentleman surprised us; we attempted to explain to him that baggage men were, on the whole, a pretty good set of fellows—that they had their trials and grievances like the rest of mankind, and that if they occasionally lost their temper it was not entirely their fault.

A few days ago I had my valise packed and went off to Madison to attend a case. Upon returning, my valise was given me by the baggage master—the infernal scoundrel—and I went home.

An empty whisky bottle, Two packs of cards, Photographs of four young ladies that ought to be ashamed of themselves.

A lady's shawl, A whole apothecary's shop on a small scale, Three dime novels, Two blood and thunder papers, A dice box, Another pack of cards, Two taro chips.

And I don't know how much more of just such trash. I do know that the valise—my valise—was full of just such traps, and my wife had seen them all—handled them all, and then gone off into hysterics.

I tried to bring her back to her senses, but if she came back far enough to open her eyes, she pointed out sort of spasmodically at the valise and then with a double yell went off again. I tell you I was mad. I just walked up and down that apartment and I cursed a blue streak.

I think if I had met that baggage man then, I should have fully impressed upon his mind the belief that he had been visited by a collision. The maid put my wife to bed, and I went down street swearing.

When I came back the room was locked and I was locked out. The maids looked at me as if I had been doing something wicked, and the children slunk away as if I wanted to eat them—confound that baggage man.

I finally got the door of the room open, and asked my wife what this all meant. She burst into tears and pointed at the valise. And do you know that it took me all day to make her believe that it was all the fault of that confounded baggage man, who had gone and changed hand trunks for me. I could not do it until I had gone to the depot and spent hours in hunting up my own baggage, and even then it took a new bonnet and a velvet cloak to entirely dispel the cloud which that baggage man had brought into my house.

And what do you think he said? Why, when I told him all the misery his carelessness had caused me, the fellow laughed—fairly laughed, and said they looked so much alike!

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color, with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness in this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous, and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich, glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Through struggle and suffering, at the cost of multitudes of lives, bereavements, devastations, the American Idea embodied in the preamble to our fathers' Declaration of Independence approaches its complete realization. The noble, inspiring assertion that "all men are created equal, and endowed by their Creator with inalienable rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, is no longer a glittering generality, a poet's fancy, a philosopher's speculation, but the recognized base of our political fabric. The benign Revolution, which dates from the Boston Massacre of 1770, finds its logical completion, just one century later, in the XXth Amendment, which gives to the equal political and civil rights of every man, born or naturalized in our Republic the shield and defense of the Federal Constitution. The billows of Caste and Privilege may roar and rage around that rock, and may harshly seem on the point of washing it away; but its foundations are deep laid and steadfast, and the breakers of Reaction and Slavery are hurled against and dash their spray over it in vain.

We do not underrate the forces of Prejudice and Avarice. We do not forget that a very large minority of the American People still hold in their inmost hearts that Blacks have no rights which Whites are bound to respect. We fully appreciate the despatch with which all the warring elements of hatred to Republican achievement will be combined and hurled against the battlements of Republican ascendancy in the Presidential Election of 1872. We do not doubt that local successes, facilitated by Republican feuds and dissensions, will inspire the charging host with a sanguine hope of victory, such as never led to put forth its utmost strength in the earlier pages of the contest of 1860 and 1864.

Yet our faith is clear and strong that the American People, still blessed that, on the red battle fields of our late Civil War, the lion was upheld and Slavery destroyed, and will never consciously decide that the precious blood there poured out was lavished in vain.

THE TRIBUNE believes in the prosecution of the great struggle by legitimate means to beneficent ends. To State Sovereignty, it opposes indissoluble National Integrity; to Slavery for Blacks, Liberty for All; to Prescription, Enfranchisement; to Popular Ignorance, Universal Education; to Intensity and extremity of wrath, to Hate, misdeed, and unrequited Wrong. Will it would fain do its utmost to hasten the glad day when the South shall vie with the North in exultation and gratitude over the disappearance of the last trace or taint of that spirit which impelled Man to exult in the ownership and chattelhood of his fellow Man.

Profoundly do we realize that the contest is not yet ended—that Millions mourn, more or less publicly, the down fall of the slaveholders' Confederacy, and rear their children to hate those by whose valor and constancy its overthrow was achieved. If we ever seem to differ essentially from other Republicans, our conviction that unanimity is never weakness, that vengeance is never pollution, and that devils are not cast out by Beelzebub, must serve to explain alleged eccentricities whose perfect vindication we leave to Time and Reflection.

THE TRIBUNE has been, is, and must be a zealous advocate of Protection to Home Industry. Regarding habitual idleness as the greatest foe to human progress, the bane of human happiness, we seek to win our countrymen in masses from the ensnaring lures of Speculation, of Traffic, and of always over-crowded Professions, to the arduous paths of Productive Industry. We would gladly deplore our over-crowded cities, where thousands vainly toiled and crowd in misguided quest of "Something to do," to cover prairies and plains with colonies absorbed in Agriculture, Mechanics and Manufactures, and constantly projecting into the blank, void wilderness the homes and the works of civilized Man. Holding the Protection of Home Industry by disseminating duties on imported Wares and Fabrics essential to the rapid, beneficent diffusion of Production in all its phases and departments, and so to the instruction of our people in all the gainful arts of Peace, we urge our countrymen to adhere to an upright, that is, in unshakable faith that the true interest, not of a class or a section and every useful class, is thereby observed and promoted.

THE TRIBUNE aims to be pre-eminently a Newspaper. Its correspondents traverse every State, are present on every important battle-field, are early advised of every notable Cabinet decision, observe the proceedings of Congress, of Legislatures, and of Conventions, and report to us by telegraph all that seems of general interest. We have paid for one day's momentous advices from Europe by Cable far more than those articles reached our readers. If fax-hail outlay, unsleeping vigilance, and unbounded faith in the liberality and discernment of the reading public, will enable us to make a journal which has no superior in the accuracy, variety, and freshness of its contents. THE TRIBUNE shall be such a Journal.

To Agriculture and the subservient arts, we have devoted, and shall persistently devote, more means and space than any of our rivals. We aim to make THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE such a paper as no farmer can afford to do without, however widely his politics may differ from ours. Our reports of "The Cattle, Horse, Poultry, and General Markets," are full and accurate, and essays in elucidation of the farmer's calling, and our regular reports of the Farmers' Club and kindred gatherings are so interesting, that the poorest farmer will find therein a mine of suggestion and counsel, of which he cannot remain ignorant without positive and serious loss. We sell THE WEEKLY TO Clubs for less than its value in dwellings for waste-paper; and, though its subscription is already very large, we believe that a Half Million more farmers will take it whenever it shall be commended to their attention. We ask our friends everywhere to aid us in so commending it.
