To say that we regard the loss, the wreck we may say, of so brilliant a a your g man, so fine an executive officer, is also no more than justice, for up to the time of his temperizing with the Democrats, we had always looked upon Mr. Evans as one of the staunchest Republicans in the House, not only so by action and by words, but from inherent principles.

The flat that came from the Republican party was the judgment, which in his hour of temptation, he brought upon himself. Unevenly balanced, the coolness and nerve that in other hours of trial had sustained him, forsook him when a trial of his party of pique and passion, he lent himself to notions of arrogance, and assumption of leadership, that wrecked him, and cast the the rest Boating the idle waters of uncer- great State.

While we deplore and regret the affair for his sake, we can but applaud the action of the House in thus showing the vigor, tone and earnestness of their Republican ism. In too many instances, already, has the temporizing policy, as evinced by members of the party, been allowed to pass un prinished, and men have been trusted by the party, who have ultimately proved a burden and a drag to it.

Exemplification of this fact is no where better sustained than in the surroundings of San Antonio and Bexar county. Men who were extravagant in their professions, oping her vast internal resources, that conof Republicanism, get into office and then spire to make her the brightest Star in the bid farewell to all thoughts of either party discipline or organization. The party is left to take care of itself, or else the burden of work and expense is shifted upon other shoulders, while they enjoy all the fat of the offices, and day after day only adds to their arrogance, official and otherwise, un til they begin to believe they own the city, the county, and the Republican party itself.

Injured Innocents?

Some of the top loftical specimens of weak-kneed office holders seem suddenly afflicted with an extra amount of arrogance and elevate their official noses pretty high, considering the uncertain tenure upon which they hold their positions.

The little rubbing up we have given them does not coalesce with their ideas of case and comfort. Gentlemen, we have only this to say: Just so long as we are a Republican journal, devoted to the spread His appointment and confirmation gives placing him upon the Republican ticket of intend to hold up all weaknesses that creep 12-3-71d3m)
