It is therefore necessary that Hancock should endeavor to insignate, himself into that the departurists are so weak and pury the good graces of the Germans, and as that they couldn't draw "Watt's hymn's fo the emergency is great, he not only deof some of his Demogratic San Antonio friends to testify in his behalf in the organ of the party, the State Gazette, at Kilatin. His witnesses are Messrs. J. P. Simpson, T. T. Teel, G. Y. Dashiell and W. B. Knox, all of whom are opposed to Republicanism on general principles, and are certainly no very devoted friends of the Germans. Now what does the evidence of Mr. Haucook's friends amount to?

That they did not hear that he said annthing opiteful against the Germans in his speech.

That-reminds us of the Irishman who to the judge's remark that ten witnesses had sworn that they had seen him commit the offence, said, "If that's all, yer honor, that's just nothing at all, for I can being a hundred witnesses who will swear they didn't so me at all at that very time."

December 20, 1870.

In the campaign of 1806, when Throck-morton was rauning for Governor of the State, being the same campuign in which Mr. Behrends was defeated in the Congressiousl race, on the 23d day of June, 1866. Mr. John, Hancock, made a speech in the place of the city of San Antonio. He was neting theu na the mouthpiece of the rebel party, for the support of whose cause he had been requested to come over from Austin. On that occasion he took the opportusity to praise to the skies Andy Johnson, who at that time disgraced the Presidential chair, and declared him to be the sayfor of the South; and following the example of his lord and master, he abused in the most vulgar manner the dissenting majority of Congressional members, and he showed in the most conclusive names his political status by begging pardon for his Union proclivities during the war in tyraupy of the people.

"When I have made up my mind to give mules the right togette, their I'll give it to the negroes too."

Therefore, when Mr. Hancock places the German's little above the negro, and assigns to the negro the place of the mula in the scale of unimal progression, we know assactly where we stand. Perhaps we might be conveniently used as horses, in running the political race; and this is in accordance with the generally expressed view of the Democratic politicians when referring to the "German voting cattle, and is preliably the only reason why a vote is allowed them at all."

The foregoing contains a confession of the political faith or John Hancock and the Democratic perty, and new they both call upon the German voters, and expect them to assessed his representing their in-terests in Congress instead of Mr. Dege-

PLEASANT-SURPRISH party, Accompanied by a full-Band, called at the residence of Gan. Ekin and was most hospitably entertained by his son Wm. M. Ekin Esq , with a bountious repast of all the delecacies of the season, after which dancing was introduced, and continued until the "Wee sma" hours. All enjoyed themselves to a re-markable degree.

In other parts of the United States cities of as large a population as Sau Antonio, have public parks and gardens open to all, where the overworked body and mind can be recuperated by strofling or loung-ing in pleasant shade, made musical with the song of birds, and gratifying the eye by refreshing green grass. While in San Antonio we have no public institution of this kind, we are not much better off is places of amneement and recreation be longing to private individuals, where re ments can be obtained for pecuniary consideration. The only place worth men tioning, that San Antonio can boast of, is the really artistically arranged and well managed establishment at the head of the Sau Pedro. The refreshments in the way of coffee liquors, soda water, &c., are alman provided for, but shade trees, running brooks, and the many naturable beauties of the place, make it a delightful retreat to the dusty citizens of the city of the Alamo.

In the larger cities of the north, gardens similar to Mr. Duerler's can be found by the dozen, filled on Samlay afternoon with crowds of quiet, well dressed men, wemen, movis 1868. daws and children, enjoying the few hours of relief from hard work, by taking the fresh air, in promenading or discussing their glass of beer or cap of coffee, enlived by excellent music and the pleasure of familiar table talk.

There is, however, one institution con-nected with these places of recreation that we have failed to observe in the United we have failed to observe in the United. All persons having claims against the States, and that is what is known as the late W. A. Menger, are requested to presummer theatres. There is frequently at another the same at their earliest convenience, at the office of the "Menger Rotel." All tached to the beer gardens in Germany, a rude kind of theatre, the stage is small, scarcely raised above the ground, and the audience sit at the tables under the trees, and the condenses their bear and cluese, and the condenses their bear and cluese. "intellectual trent" at the same time. . The actors are smalling players, and the scene sy is as great a burlesque as the acking but the absence of all restraint and Kumme, Shise etiquette usual at the regular theatres, make them very popular with all those "who don't put on airs."

The antience, as we said hefore, is gen-scally mixed, consisting of Lieutenants, soldiers, sevant girls and their bears stud-ents and approutices.

On one memorable occasion there was to be a moonlight scene with lovers, but by some oversight the moon was forgetten, and although it as sufficiently lighted up, some one in the sudience insisted on having the moon until the whole crowd joined in. The roice of the manager was heard behind the stenes in a whispered howl, Hans, you block-head, where is the moon. Hans, who had, overlooked the teminary, appeared holding it by a string, (it was not full moon that night,) and- advancing across the stage, hung it en the proper nail, just behind the brow of a lofty mountain, from whence it shed refulgent beams on the happy couple. To show the utter absence of all the play call the Freihntze or the Magic The hero is supposed to have seven bullets that never miss, and he is represented as gazing in the etherial blue and perceiving an eagle almost lost in the clouds, he takes aim, fires, and down comes the eagle, as rather an old cavalry ot was flung down as soon as the here fired. On this occasion the dead shot fired and an instantaneous how! startled the audience, while the "Eagle" came down with such force and aim as to stretch the unfortunate buntaman his full length on the floor.

It turned out that the digression was caused by the hunteman, loading his gun with a heavy wad, took advantage of the exposed position of the man sitting grassways, on the beam about ten feet above him, who was holding the bird of Jove, and shot him with the wad. It is supposed he had some mean spite to gratify and had either overlanded the gun or hit some particularly sensitive part.

We do not advocate the introduction of ummer theatres but on think a little fore harmless recreation on the part of all hard workers would be of benefit.

The c'erk of the weather has got into the habit of deceiving the people every day regularly. Heavy clouds loom up, and we have every assurance of a fine shower, thereby causing everybody to progress ticate continued wet weather, but before evening, the prospect is as dry as ever. The joke was carried so far yesterday as to have a sprinkle.

A PERSON'S OCCUPATION FOR LADIES. The liberal percentage offered by Mesers. Butler, Chadwick & Gary to those engaged in the sale of tickets in the great Land and Immigration Scheme, should be a rare inducement to the ladies to undertake the work of disposing of them; especially those generous, unselfish and noble women who represent charitable institutions and desire to raise funds for their support. No gentleman count to dee an appeal from such a quarter and for such a purpose. It may be safely assumed that not one man in ten throughout the State, to say nothing of the softer sex, will fall to take his risk in securing a fortune from the 2404 prizes to be drawn in October next. Hence, the ladies should be eminently successful in thesale of tickets, and in sarning the legitimate profits which attach thereto.
